Father Osborne's Opinion of the Pastor of Trinity Church

SERVICE BY A UNITARIAN

On the Occasion of Wolcott's Funeral Should Not Have Been Permitted, He Says—Goes on Record as Deploring Celebration of Midnight Masses

Boston, Jan. 1.—Most outspoken was the language on Sunday of Rev. Father Osborne of the Mission Church of St. John the Evangelist, regarding the act of the rector of Trinity church in permitting the pastor of King's chapel, a Unitarian church, to conduct the funeral service of ex-Governor Wolcott in Trinity church. The words of Father Osborne came as a surprise to the congregation, which included a number of strangers. Father Osborne, who represents the high church wing of the Episcopal body, delivered his discourse without notes, and the topic and text comprised a comment upon the diocesan letter of Bishop Lawrence upon the observance of the new century.

Father Osborne said: "The church has fallen upon evil times in Massachusetts. It was with shame and sorrow that catholic Christians heard that on last Monday in the largest church in Boston, dedicated to the worship of the Lord Jesus Christ, one who denies the Lord was permitted to hold a religious service in that church, because the priest who was in charge of it was not faithful to his trust.

"However great the occasion or those present might be, it was an act of profanation. It is of no use shutting our eyes to it. With sorrow, indignation and righteous anger, and with shame that such a thing should be possible, we have to admit it. There is little use in going to the public papers about it, but as Christians we may pray. And the one thing needed most now is that many of the clergy may be converted to the faith, and that those who hold the faith may not fall away.

"People should pray for the church in Massachusetts, and pray with hope. It is God's church, and even if all Massachusetts, or all the eastern states, lost the faith, the church would not be lost; these are not the whole church; in the south and west it would still live and proclaim the faith in Jesus Christ as God."

Father Osborne, in announcing the arrangements for New Year's services, said that there would be no midnight service on New Year's eve, as he and his brother clergy considered such services an unmixed evil. They were founded on mere sentiment, so it was declared, and were a cause of much sensual excitement.

Father Osborne concluded by expressing the hope that none of the young people of the church, of either sex, would attend any midnight services whatever.

Rev. Father Osborne, in an interview yesterday, said:

"My criticism was not of Governor Wolcott, nor was my criticism pointed especially at Dr. Brown, although I think that his good taste should have kept him from accepting the invitation of Dr. Donald to use Trinity church. Dr. Donald had no right to offer the services of his church to a Unitarian divine. He had assumed a trust as rector of a Trinitarian church to uphold its belief in everything. He has transgressed that trust. I do not object to the funeral services of Governor Wolcott having been held in Trinity. One of our faith should have officiated."

Dr. Brown, who officiated at the funeral service of the former governor, seemed somewhat grieved that Father Osborne should have taken this occasion to raise such a question, and seemed to think that it was a narrow doctrine to express at the dawn of the 20th century.

"While the invitation came from Dr. Donald," said Dr. Brown, "those who received it accepted it in the same kind of spirit in which it was given. The letter that came from Dr. Donald was couched in the language of a model Christian gentleman, which he is. I do not think that I care to make any reply to the criticism, and I sincerely hope that this matter will not add to the grievous burden already borne by Mrs. Wolcott. I do not believe that it will. King's chapel could not possibly have held all who wished to attend the service, and the use of Trinity was most acceptable."

Dr. Donald, rector of Trinity church, said: "I do not care to make any reply. I knew what I was doing. I know what I have done, and I am not sorry. Apart from what the public may think, and of that I am pretty sure, I know that the church law has not been transgressed."

DAWN OF NEW CENTURY

Celebrated as It Was Two Hundred Years Ago by the People of Boston

Boston, Jan. 1.—Twelve ringing, clarion blasts, exactly on the hour of midnight, blown by four trumpeters from the front balcony of the state house, at the close of an interesting service, was Boston's adieu to the 19th and welcome to the 20th centuries, and proved a feature of a celebration of much interest in this city.

The observance was a revival of one held on practically the same spot exactly two centuries ago. Rev. Edward Everett Hale found an account of the proceedings in some old records, and the Twentieth Century club, with the approval of the executive council and the assistance of a chorus of 100, led the vast audience in singing the Doxology at the beginning, and Judge Sewall's hymn, to the tune of Duke Street, at the close of the service.

The service began at 15 minutes before midnight. By 11:30 o'clock there were nearly 10,000 people on Beacon street, and half as many more on the common and below on Park street, while the two side streets were fairly jammed with humanity.

Promptly at 11:45 the form of Dr. Hale appeared on the balcony, accompanied by Edwin D. Mead, president of the Twentieth Century club, and followed by the chorus and trumpeters. A preliminary chord was blown, and then the chorus broke forth with the Doxology, which was gradually taken up by the crowd until 15,000 voices were blended in the familiar tune. The singing of the hymn was followed by the reading of the Ninetieth Psalm by Dr. Hale, where it is said: "For a thousand years in thy sight are but as yesterday when it is past." The Psalm was followed by the Lord's Prayer, in which a goodly portion of the audience joined.

Before the assembly broke up they all joined in singing "America," and the vast concourse melted back into the greater crowd that paraded up and down Boston's streets.

Nearly every church in town held a watch meeting, while the feature of the Catholic celebration was a special service at the cathedral, where Archbishop Williams officiated.

Reports from many cities in New England show that watch meetings were generally held.

Cut In Boarding House Fight

Somersworth, N. H., Jan. 1.—A row at Prentiss' boarding house yesterday was brought to an end by James Prentiss, who now is there being locked up to await the result of injuries to Thomas Williamson, a boarder, who was rendered unconscious, and is in a bad way by reason of a cut artery in the head. Williamson is a missionary preacher, but has been working in the Great Falls bleachery. The trouble between the men is said to have been due to Prentiss' belief that Williamson was paying too much attention to Mrs. Prentiss.

Kaesar Breaks a Record

Boston, Jan. 1.—Bobbie Walthour, the 75-hour champion, led the field of 14 riders at the end of the first day of the six-day's racing at Park Square Garden. Right on his heels are seven other men, riding just as he is. The first day's racing was a big success in every respect. One record went down, the 100 miles, Kaeser getting the figures at 4 hours, 27 minutes, 21 3-5 seconds. The track proved to be a little risky, although the falls did not prove serious to the men.

Two Remarkable Old Ladies

Peabody, Mass., Jan. 1.—Mrs. Sally Batchelder of this place has lived in three centuries. She was born Aug. 8, 1794, in Chichester, N. H., and now is in her 107th year. Mrs. Bachelder is in fair health.

Southington, Conn., Jan. 1.—Mrs. Sylvia C. Bannon of this town has lived in three centuries. Mrs. Bannon was born on July 27, 1800, and has completed the 10 decades of the 19th century in the full possession of her faculties.

Socialist-Labor Man In the Rear

Central Falls, R. I., Jan. 1.—The result of the special election to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Mayor Eastwood resulted in the choice of Joseph W. Freeman, who received 1144 votes. Albert H. Hume, the Democratic and good government candidate, received 970 votes, while John J. Pearson, the Socialist-Labor candidate, received 66 votes.

A Welcome Change

Fall River, Mass., Jan. 1.—The work of installing the white flash light, instead of a fixed white light on Borden flats lighthouse, was completed yesterday, and the light was used for the first time last night. The old light was hard to distinguish from the lights of the city, and the change is welcomed by mariners entering the local harbor.

MARCHING SOUTHWARD

Boer Invasion of Cape Colony Appears to Be Unchecked

DANGER IS FULLY REALIZED

Cape Government Calls Upon Loyalists to Form a Defense Force to Repel Invaders—Extra Inducements Are Offered to Volunteers

London, Jan. 1.—The Boers have now reached a point half way between the Orange river and Cape Town, and, in spite of the optimism of the London press, the government announcement at Cape Town shows how seriously the invasion is regarded there.

The only thing that really touches the British public is the loss of a big naval gun. The Times today, however, draws attention to what might prove a serious danger, namely, the possibility of another outbreak of enteric fever among the soldiers worn down by the hardships and privations of a prolonged campaign.

The Cape government has called upon the loyalists in 27 districts, including Cape Town, to assist the military to repel invasion by the formation of a paid defense force. In a preamble to the call, the government announces the situation as follows:

"Owing to the fact that the armed forces of the enemy have penetrated south of Carnarvon in the west and south of Middelburg eastward, it is necessary to repel the invasion promptly, and the government calls upon loyal inhabitants to aid the military in this duty by the formation of a colonial force for the sole and exclusive purpose of repelling invasion, guarding lines of communication and maintaining order in the disturbed districts.

"Volunteers should enroll with the civil commissioners in their respective districts. They will be paid 5 shillings per day, with rations, forage, arms and horses. The term of service is not expected to exceed three months.

"This notice especially applies to the districts named in it, but other districts may assist. Enlisting will begin Thursday."

It is estimated that no fewer than 1500 Cape Dutch have joined the invaders, who have penetrated further south than ever.

Reports are in circulation at Port Elizabeth that a train which was held up near Rosmead was not empty, but had 60 of the Prince Alfred guards on board, who were returning from the front, and about 40 passengers, women and children. The Boers numbered 200, with supports that could be seen in the distance. The soldiers defended themselves until their small quantity of ammunition was exhausted, when all were captured, though subsequently released. The passengers had narrow escapes, as the bullets of the Boers perforated the carriages. An officer and three soldiers were seriously wounded. The railway traffic has been stopped, but the Boers do not have appeared to have injured the permanent way.

Lord Kitchener, in a dispatch to the war office, dated Pretoria, Dec. 31, 9:35 a. m., says:

"A small portion of the enemy's force, which entered the Colony to the east, broke away in a southwesterly direction and crossed the railway at a point between Bangor and Sherborne. They did some damage to the railway. The column under Williams will be in touch with this body today. The force which entered the Colony to the west passed the road from Carnarvon to Victoria West at 7 yesterday morning. They were going south, and were closely followed by Thorneycroft and De Lisle. Very few recruits from the Colony joined the enemy. Hertzog's men are already dropping their worn horses."

We are authorized to state, says The Daily Mail this morning, that Lord Wolseley will take the first opportunity offering in the house of lords to give his views on army reform.

Dutch Ministry Not Agreed

London, Jan. 1.—"Mr. Kruger is again importuning Queen Wilhelmina," says the correspondent of The Daily Mail at The Hague, "to write a personal letter to Emperor Nicholas, President Loubet and Emperor William, with a view of stopping the war. It is reported that the queen is not unwilling, but that The Netherlands' ministry is divided."

NOTICE TO PARENTS.

CITY OF QUINCY.

CITY CLERK'S Office, Dec. 31, 1900.

THE Record of birth in any city or town is always more or less unsatisfactory, owing to the fact that the canvasser finds difficulty in getting the necessary information. Names and dates are frequently given incorrectly. The importance of accuracy is shown in many cases where there is a question of descent, or inheritance of property, or collection of life insurance or pensions. The City Clerk's copy of the record is accepted as conclusive evidence in a court of law. While great pains are taken by this office to have the record correct experience shows that it is necessary that parents themselves should lend their assistance. In fact, the law requires that parents shall give notice to the City Clerk of the birth of their children, and provides a penalty for neglect to give such notice for the space of 40 days.

It often happens that only children or servants are at home when the canvasser makes his call, and the answers to his questions are open to doubt. I therefore request all parents in whose household a birth has occurred in the year 1900, to place upon a paper or card the required information, and keep it in a convenient place until the canvasser appears.

The canvasser will begin on Jan. 1, 1901.

Good Afternoon.

Several requests have been received by the publishers for a copy of the Daily Ledger of Jan. 1, 1901. Copies of newspapers of that date from all parts of the country are to be preserved, being the first issues of the new century. Is your "ad" or your name in today's paper?

The New Year's present of the Brockton Street Railway Co. to its patrons is in the line of progress and cheaper fares, and many will hear with pleasure the special notice in the Ledger today. The company is certainly begining the new century right. The city of Quincy was granted free transfers a few months ago, and now congratulates Braintree, Weymouth and the other towns on their good luck. There are new favors for Quincy in the special notice, which should be carefully read.

It is customary for a newspaper when it begins a new volume to herald the news all over the country. Today marks an important epoch in the history of the Quincy Daily Ledger, which begins Vol. 13. Rapid strides maybe expected in the next few years as Quincy developes into a metropolitan city, for it is the intention to keep the Ledger in the advance line of progress, and work always for the advancement of the city.

Drift of Opinion.

☞ Nobody ought to have the blues, girls least of all. And yet girls do suffer from depression, and are miserable because they are misunderstood or their lives are vague and indefinite, or because they are hedged in by circumstances, and cannot see their way out. When we are young we do no realize that we cannot force affairs as we choose; this is a lesson which we learn as we grow older. There is great peace in living for a single day as it comes. — January Ladies' Home Journal.

Prepared for Cold Snap.

A telephone message received at City Hall, Monday afternoon, informed Commissioner Knowlton that his presence was wanted immediately at the Water department shop on Hancock street. The Commissioner lost no time in responding and upon his arrival found all the employes of the department engaged in an animated conversation. Upon his inquiry as to the cause of the discussion William H. Warner stepped forward and after briefly speaking of the good feeling that existed between the Commissioner and the employes said, that while the weather was not yet severe, the indications were that there would be some snapping cold weather before spring. On such days it was advisable to keep the hands and ears warm and he therefore took great pleasure in presenting a little remembrance to show the good feeling. The remembrance proved to be a pair of heavy fur gloves and a fur cap.

Commissioner Knowlton was taken completely by surprise, and after expressing his thanks he said, he trusted the good feeling of the past would continue in the future. He also briefly referred to the fidelity of the employes of the department.

SALUTE TO CENTURY

All Quincy Was Up to Welcome 1901.

Fire Alarm, Bells and Guns Sounded.

Masses at Catholic Churches and Watch Meetings at Others.

Precisely twelve o'clock last night
The eighteenth century took its flight,
Full many a calculating head
Has racked its brains, its ink has shed,
To prove by metaphysics fine,
A hundred means but ninety-nine,
While at their wisdom others wondered,
But took one more to make a hundred.
Strange at the eighteenth century's close
While light in beams effulgent glows,
When bright illuminated ray
Has chased the darkness far away,
Heads filled with mathematic lore,
Dispute if two and two make four.
Go on, ye scientific sages,
Collect your light a few more ages,
Perhaps as swells the vast amount,
A century hence you'll learn to count.
—Connecticut Courrant, Jan. 2, 1801.

Quincy's program to greet the birth of the new century was carried out at midnight and the novelty will long be remembered. Several watch meetings and parties were held, as noted below, and mass was celebrated at midnight at the Catholic churches.

At 11.45 it was the intention to have the church bells toll for fifteen minutes, and some were tolled, but as many were rung. At midnight, 12-1 was struck three rounds on the fire alarm, and then the church bells rang for fifteen minutes or more, while guns, revolvers, cannon crackers and rockets were discharged, and people saluted the century and wished each other a Happy New Year.

Over 100 assembled at Bethany Congregational church at 9 P. M. and for an hour there were games, then an entertainment, then a social hour, and from 11.45 to midnight silent prayer. At midnight Coronation was sung and the benediction pronounced.

At the watch night service held in the Atlantic Methodist chuvch the pastor was assisted by Mr. L. B. Bradford of Neponset and Rev. C. B. Cramer of Boston. A collation was served at ten o'clock. About forty remained through to welcome the advent of the new century.

The Wollaston people entered heartily into the celebration. Many watched the year out from their own homes while still more attended meetings at the various churches. At the Methodist church the watch meeting was attended largely and was full of deep significance to all. Rev. Mr. Waterhouse preached a helpful sermon, and songs were sung. The young people of the Baptist church assembled at the vestry. A program was carried out, consisting of readings of appropriate selections concerning the past history of Quincy and what the new century brings. At 11.45 all went out of doors where hymns were sung and the bell tolled. Mr. Critcheley played the trumpet welcoming in the new year, [illegible] while all sang "America."

Watch meeting services were held at the Methodist Episcopal church West Quincy. They were very largely attended. Rev. C. W. Wilder, the pastor, had charge and other clergymen present were Rev. James Todd, D. D., Rev. W. W. Dornan and Rev. David Kerr of Quincy and Rev. A. H. Mulnix of East Milton. Brief addresses were made by all the visiting clergymen. At five minutes before the hour of midnight all engaged in silent prayer. At the stroke of midnight, Rev. David Kerr sang a solo, and the meeting closed by all uniting in singing the Doxology. During the services there was singing by the choir and by a trio.

Solemn high mass was celebrated at St. John's church at midnight by Rev. Francis A. Friguglietti assisted by Rev. John P. Cuffe, Rev. Julian E. Johnstone and Rev. John J. Casey. There was a very large attendance, being limited only by the capacity of the church.

Rev. Ambrose F. Roche celebrated high mass at St. Mary's church at midnight. The services were largely attended and were very impressive. The church choir rendered the Sacred Heart Mass.

More Free Transfers.

The new system of free transfers on the street railway in Weymouth and Braintree went into effect today. It is now possible for a passenger to take a car at the Quincy Point bridge and ride to any part of Weymouth and to the Rockland line for five cents, or ten cents from any part of Quincy. An Hyde Park item in the Herald says: The Consolidated street railway, of which Hyde Park's road is a part, will begin issuing transfers this week, so that it will cost but 10 cents to go to Quincy by the way of Milton, and 10 cents to Needham by the way of Forest Hills.

THEIR HOG-MAN-NAY

Annual Entertainment and Ball of Clan McGregor.

Scotchmen and their bonnie lassies celebrated, under the auspices of Clan McGregor, No. 5, their Hog-man-nay and greeted the coming of the 20th century in Music hall.

The affair was a concert and ball and was patronized by a large audience. The program consisted of songs, recitations and comedy sketches, which were wholly made up of local talent, including such well known names in the roll of Quincy's singers as Mr. George Bowman, who stirred the blood of every Scotchman present with such patrotic songs as "The standard on the braes o' mar," "Scotch wha hae," etc.; and Mrs. L. C. Stoddard, who was sweet and touching in her rendering of "Bonnie Loch Lomond" and "The land o' th' leal." Mr. Cassey's account of how he landed the kitchen stove down several flights of stairs into the street was provocation of much laughter and gained for Mr. William J. Foy, who recited it, the approbation of the entire house and several encores.

Mr. Lewis Griffiths, though suffering from a severe cold, proved himself an important card on the list of singers. It was very much regreted that he was unable to go on with the singing of "The Holy City." Miss Bessie Todd is new to Quincy audiences but she nevertheless is a fine exponent of Scotish song, as was evidenced by her fine rendering of "Cam ye by Athol" and "Jeannie's black ee." She will surely be called on again. It is well known that no Scotch concert is complete without Mr. William Elrick, and he sang in fine style "The Highland man's toast," "Jannie Deans," etc. In humorous and sentimental readings, Miss Nellie McCarthy was immensely enjoyed by every one in the hall as was well attested by frequent and hearty applause she received.

The singing of "Gae bring to me a pint o' wine," and "The weary pound o' tow" by Mr. Gordon Munroe, reminded Scotchmen of by gane days when the wee drappie o't was drank as a parting toast to the Bonnie lassie. "The Boston Comedy Duo" by Messrs. Butler and Robertson was comical and clever. The ball punching showed how expert these gentleman are with their hands, and the audience were not slow or stinted in their applause.

At 10.30 o'clock the hall was cleared for dancing, Mr. D. T. Drummond and his assistants, Messrs. William A. Beattie and Alexander Birnie very soon had about two hundred pairs of lads and lasses gayly tripping through the varying forms of the grand march, and the new century was four hours old before the merry dancers treaded the last measure for the night.

The list of aids in the ball room included: John A. Sutherland, Robert Craig, Leslie Smith, Alexander Hall, William Kelly, Alexander Smith, Thomas Robertson, Alexander McDonald, and Peter McLeod.

The committee of arrangements were Thomas Johnstone, David T. Drummond, Alexander Birnie, William Ross, William A. Beattie, Alexander Russell and Robert Findlay.

Chief William Soudan was on hand and gave general directions to all the proceedings. With him Mr. Robert Findlay acted as reception c[illegible] Dixon was secretary committee. Albion I. [illegible] ary of committee.

IT IS SAID

That Not a Half Dozen in Quincy Will See Another Century.

That some people were surprised when the bells were rung at midnight.

That they are people of the old century. That they do not read the Quincy daily paper.

That they knew nothing of the program.

That they would have attended some of the watch meetings, but they did not know cars would be run to convey them home.

That they did not read the papers.

That 20th century people will read the Ledger daily.

That they will be up to the times.

That the parallel columns in Monday's Ledger were instructive and interesting.

That wonderful progress was made in the century in Quincy.

That now hogreeves are unknown in the city.

That a majority of Quincy people could not tell what they were.

That they are elected now in some towns.

That the newly married men are selected for this berth.

That there are no soreheads if they were not elected.

That toll bridges are a thing of the past.

That at least one tax has been removed.

That people still say that everything in sight is taxed.

That it is a freer country that many are willing to admit.

That some objected to the bell ringing at midnight.

That there were worse noises in some cities.

That some physicians protested.

That one mayor said, to stop the noise on the birth of a new century would be absolutely impossible.

That nobody is the worse for the salute to the new century.

That now we are surely living in the 20th century.

That some still claim the new century came in a year ago.

That not more than 75 of the 75,000,000 people in the country will behold the dawn of the 21st century.

That the average life of man is being prolonged.

That babies born this year may live to be 125 or 150 years old.

From Presidents Hill.

The new century from Presidents Hill showed a vastly different scene from that of one hundred years ago. A fast growing city is replacing the old land marks. Only occasionally can one find a resting place with nature undisturbed by busy life. As midnight drew near last night, the musical bells from several churches vibrated through the clear air, the tones from the Wollaston bells, enough softer to make a pleasant music. Above, a brilliant sky showed the stars in the constellations while a bright moon lent a brilliancy to the midnight sky. Orion, the majestic, stretched nearly to the zenith, the stars in his shoulder and belt standing out clearly, while the moon's light eclipsed the lesser stars. Sirius stood sentinel, with the rest of the sisterhood of brillant stars. The air was soft and there was no harsh wintry air astir.

As some late theatre goers returned to their homes, they paused and stood silently awaiting the new century. Some citizens assembled upon their front porches. Many houses showed the lights from within. One enthusiastic youthful voter fired off his revolver several times, but as 12 o'clock arrived a stillness was over all the beautiful city hill. Another century full of sorrow and of joy; of wars and of discensions; of growing efforts for the good of human kind and of more systematic, business like work in trying to lift the yoke that presses heavily upon the lowly, had gone and a new one had taken its place.

Just before the hour of midnight, when the beautiful still night air was clear and cool, and was only disturbed by the the tolling of the bells throughout the city, there came from the direction of Wollaston the music of a bugle sounding taps. Every note was clear and distinct and it made a beautiful and solemn closing of the nineteenth century.

20th CENTURY TOWN

The Braintree Celebration Ahead of Times.

Panorama of Time in Tableaux, Costumes.

By Pupils of the Public Schools at Town Hall.

The program which Braintree presented this morning for the opening of the New Century, and the very creditable manner in which it was presented, stamp Braintree as a 20th century town, and its public schools as 20th century schools.

There was a large audience at the Town Hall who were surprised and pleased at the success of the committee —Rev. C. F. Hill Crathern and Mr. William C. Harding. The singing by the school children was a feature, under the direction of Mr. Joseph A. Ewart, with Miss Bertha Poole Chase as accompanist, but it was the panorama of Time in tableaux and costume scenes, which interested the young people. This part of the program was as follows:

NEW MACHINERY.

Braintree Electric Light Plant Has a Harrisburg Engine.

The new engine built by the Harrisburg Foundry & Machine Works which has been installed in the Braintree Electric Light station has been recently started and is operating very successfully.

It is one of their new four valve type tandem compound, with high pressure cylinder 16-inch diameter, low pressure cylinder 28-inch diameter, stroke 20-inch operation at a speed of 200 revolutions per minute and is capable of developing 400 horse power.

The engine is self-lubricating throughout, the well known ideal system of lubrication being used, which is effected in the following manner. A small quantity of oil is enclosed in a case directly under the crank shaft. This oil is thrown by centrifugal force into a trough which is on the inside of a hood or cover over the crank case. This oil flows by gravity through pipes to the several bearings, giving them thorough lubrication.

The makers claim great advantages for this engine over the long stroke, slow speed type such as we have been in the habit of seeing throughout our section of the country. These advantages are:

First: A larger amount of power can be generated in a much smaller space owing to the higher speed at which the engine can be run and that with about the same amount of fuel consumption of the Corliss engine.

Second: The engine is more economical in the consumption of oil and owing to the superior method of lubrication the friction is reduced to a minimum.

Third: That the cost of installation is considerably less than on engines of the same power, but running at a much slower speed and that the expense of operation is less for the reason above given.

The engine is a fine looking machine, well designed and built, and is a very excellent addition to the electric station.

It is remarkable for its smoothness of operation at the high speed of 200 revolutions per minute and is without any of the noises attendant upon the operation of dash pots and similar devices such as are used on the long stroke, slow speed Corliss engines.

The main moving parts of the engine are enclosed in such a manner as to prevent oil being thrown upon the floor, making the engine very clean in operation.

It is governed by means of the centrally balanced centrifugal inertia governor, with which all the Harrisburg engines are equipped.

This governor is placed in the fly wheel and insures regulation which is very superior to any that has ever been obtained on engines with governor of the old fly ball type.

The engine is directly connected with a 250 kilowatt generator of the Westinghouse make, no belts at all being used, the power being communicated to the dynamo directly through the engine shaft.

This enables the unit, consisting of the engine and dynamo to be placed in a remarkably small space and insures compactness of the whole apparatus and at the same time does away entirely with the noises and inevitable annoyances consequent upon the use of belt driven apparatus.

"The Devil's Turnip Patch."

On the top of Bald Eagle mountain, just where the old turnpike breaks over the brow down into Black Hole valley, is a queer field of rock, which years ago was christened "The Devil's Turnip Patch." The rocks, which are of a reddish sandstone, have a striking peculiarity of all standing on end, thus forming a jagged, irregular surface, that won for it its queer name from the early settlers.

In bygone days, when the stages wheeled their way up from Northumberland to Williamsport, the four in hands traversed the old pike that skirts the turnip patch, and the strange garden of rocks was a constant source of wonderment to the traveler. Added to its interest as a natural curiosity is a hidden stream of water somewhere beneath the standing stones, the noisy flowing of which forms a romantic song beneath one's feet. Nobody knows where the source of this stream is, nor can anybody find where it empties itself into Black Hole valley.

The rock field covers an area of two or three acres, with its widest part to the north, then narrowing down V shaped to the south, where the angle is lost in a fringe of stunted hemlocks and elders. Theorists have figured on the cause of this mountain freak, but the theory obtaining most credence is that it is a legacy of the glacial age, the rocks being a collection pushed into their present vertical position by the moving ice.—Philadelphia Record.

Trying a Donkey.

A newcomer in Africa has many surprises. A. B. Lloyd, the author of "Dwarf Land and Cannibal Country," narrates an amusing little experience of his own in purchasing a donkey in Zanzibar:

We had to procure donkeys, by no means an easy task. Of course each one had to be tried, as we were to use them for riding purposes, and in the course of the work we had various experiences. I had set my mind upon a fine female donkey and took her out for an afternoon's ride. I shall not forget it. At first when I mounted her she would not move, in spite of all my most tender persuasions, and finally she began to back.

Now, the streets of Zanzibar are very narrow, and coming up behind me was a large bullock wagon. My sweet tempered donkey backed right on to the horns of the bullocks. Then it was no longer a case of making her go, but of making her stop.

Away she flew, right along the Naza Moja road, and nothing I could do would check her headlong career. In fact, I soon tired of trying and let her go. On she went, right in among the cocoanut trees, regardless of everything until she came to a steep bank. Here she stopped. This showed that she had good sense, and I decided to keep her.

Queer Oaths.

The Isle of Man, like the soldier in Jacque's familiar speech, is "full of strange oaths." Mr. Shee, Q. C., before beginning his judicial duties as special commissioner in connection with the Dunbell case was required to swear that he would administer justice as impartially "as the herring's backbone doth lie in the middle of the fish." The Isle of Man is not the only place in the world in which the animal kingdom plays a part in the making of oaths. One of the many modes in which Chinese witnesses are impressed with the importance of telling the truth is slicing off the head of a fowl, a ceremony which is supposed to represent the unhappy fate of the perjurer. Many Indian witnesses were sworn on tigers' skins, in the belief that if they defile their lips with lies their bodies will become food for tigers, while others stand on lizards' skins and ask that their bodies shall be covered with the scales of the reptiles if they fail to tell the truth. A Norwegian witness asks that his meadows and cattle shall be cursed if he swears falsely. "Cursed be my cattle," he exclaims, "my beasts, my sheep, so that after this day they may never thrive or benefit me; yea, cursed may I be and everything I possess."—London Globe.

Knew He Loved Her.

Mrs. Duncan Stewart described Lady Beaconsfield as originally a factory girl. Mr. Lewis first saw her going to her factory, beautiful and with bare feet. He educated her and married her, died and left her very rich, and then she married Disraeli. When asked why she married her second husband, she would say, as if it was a feather in her cap, "My dear, he made love to me while my first husband was alive, and therefore I knew that he really loved me."—Augustus J. C. Hare's Recollections.

A Short, Funny Tale.

"What is an anecdote, Johnny?" asked the teacher.

"A short, funny tale," answered the little fellow.

Johnny hesitated a moment and then wrote this:

"A rabbit has four legs and one anecdote."

INDORSED BY DEPEW.

SAYS THE "PAN-AM." WILL SURPASS THE PARIS FAIR.

Tells Chairman J. N. Scatcherd the Half Has Not Been Told of the Grandeur and Beauty of the Exposition at Buffalo.

"Scatcherd, you did not praise it half enough."

So spoke the distinguished statesman and famous after dinner orator, Senator Chauncey M. Depew, as he stood in the center of the grounds of the Pan-American Exposition at Buffalo and gazed upon the beautiful structures surrounding him on every side and now approaching completion.

Senator Depew had come to Buffalo to deliver an address. His first desire on arrival in the city was to be driven to the grounds of the Exposition. The remark quoted above was addressed to Chairman John N. Scatcherd of the executive committee of the Exposition, who had told Senator Depew of the progress made in the building of the Exposition when they had met in Europe last summer. Mr. Scatcherd had dwelt long and eloquently upon the success which had attended the organization and construction of the Exposition, and "Our Chauncey's" expectations were high. Nevertheless anticipations are not equal to realization.

Looking upon the scene before him from the sight of the grand Triumphal Bridge, he saw to his right the stately proportions of the United States Government buildings, to the left, across the spacious Esplanade, the charming architectural effects of the Graphic Arts, Horticultural and Mines buildings, while the vast Machinery and Transportation building, now almost complete, was seen in the background to the left. Opposite it, across the Court of Fountains, was the Manufactures and Liberal Arts building, and the Electric Tower could be seen rising skyward in the distance at the far end of the vast court, with the towers and minarets of other buildings outlined against the horizon. As Mr. Depew took in this impressive scene the exclamation burst from his lips that the half had not been told.

Later in the day the popular orator addressed an audience which filled to overflowing Buffalo's great Convention hall. In the opening lines of his speech the speaker declared: "Six weeks a I was at the Universal Exposition at Paris. Today I went through the grounds where your Pan-American Exposition is to be held. I felt that Buffalo is going to do at least twice as well as Paris."

Latin-American and Pan-American.

The press of the various countries of Latin-America show a cordial interest in the Pan-American Exposition. It is recognized that their co-operation is essential to the end that the Exposition may adequately represent the progress of all the states and countries of this hemisphere. As a rule the editors of newspapers and other publications in the countries to the south of the United States display a very favorable attitude toward the enterprise. B. B. Lopez, editor and proprietor of La Correspondencia de Porto Rico, has become so enthusiastic over the Exposition that he writes to the Press Department that he is about to come to Buffalo to see for himself the progress made in the development of the Exposition. He will be accompanied by his family. Many other editors of the Latin-American press have also announced their intention to attend the Exposition, and inquiries are pouring in from these countries regarding steamboat and railroad routes. Many editors and correspondents from Central and South American countries have already visited the Exposition grounds.

Wisconsin's Building.

Commissioners from Wisconsin, who have charge of the exhibits from that state at the Pan-American Exposition, have selected a site for the State building. About 20 acres have been set apart on the eastern side of the Exposition grounds for state and foreign buildings. The site chosen for the Wisconsin building is nearly opposite the large buildings of the National governments just south of one of the mirror lakes and south of the Ohio building. It will overlook the Esplanade, with its wonderful fountains and gardens, and a number of the large buildings will be in full view. The Wisconsin commission are Willard A. Van Dyke of Janesville, Burt and George B. Burrows of Madison, B. E. Edwards of Lacrosse, Charles Reynolds of Sturgeon Bay and George H. Yule of Kenosha. Wisconsin will spend $25,000 on her building and exhibits at Buffalo.

A $6,000 A. O. U. W. Building.

The Ancient Order of United Workmen are planning elaborately to welcome the members of the order to Buffalo next year. The Supreme Lodge has appropriated $3,000 and the State Lodge $3,000 more to be used for the erection and furnishing of a fine headquarters building at the Pan-American Exposition. The Supreme Lodge will meet in Buffalo next year. The building is a handsome pavilion, with rooms for rest, and the upper floor a great balcony, with easy chairs, for all members of the order who attend the Exposition.

Stain and Cromwell Are Granted Long-Sought Pardon

WERE CONVICTED OF MURDER

While Robbing a Maine Bank In 1878 —Evidence Was Circumstantial and Furnished by Stain's Son, Who Says He Was Actuated by Malice

Augusta, Me., Jan. 1.—The governor and council late yesterday announced that a pardon had been granted David L. Stain and Oliver Cromwell, serving a life sentence in the state prison at Thomaston.

Governor Powers said last night: "The council have unanimously voted in favor of pardon, and, notwithstanding I recognize the ability and integrity of the court, and have as much respect for it as anyone, and especially for Chief Justice Peters, who tried the case, yet under all the circumstances, and in view of the new evidence that has been submitted, I feel constrained to act upon the advice of my council, believing that in this or any other case it is better for me to err on the side of mercy than to retain men who may be innocent longer in prison."

Governor Powers signed the pardon this morning. It was at once forwarded to the warden at the state prison, and the men will be set free this evening.

David L. Stain and Oliver Cromwell were convicted after a long trial in the supreme judicial court for Penobscot county, on a charge of murdering John W. Barren, cashier of the Dexter (Me.) Savings bank, and robbing the institution, on Feb. 22, 1878, about 10 years before, and were sentenced to serve the remainder of their days in state prison at Thomaston. For some time after the murder of Cashier Barron there was a diversity of opinion among the people and the bank officials whether the cashier had been murdered or had committed suicide, and, although the case attracted widespread attention throughout the country, no arrests were made until about 10 years later, when Stain and Cromwell were charged with the crime.

The arrests followed a story by David L. Stain's son, Charles—a most sensational narrative, which charged his father and Cromwell with having committed the crime. The appearance of the story occasioned a great sensation and was followed quickly by the arrest of the men. Young Stain claimed that he drove the team in which the men made their trip to Dexter, and that the motive for his confession after all those years was to wreak vengeance on his father and upon Cromwell, who had married his sister, for injuries they had done him.

The men were taken to Dexter, given a hearing, and remanded to jail to await the action of the grand jury. An indictment for murder was found, and in February, 1888, the case was tried, Chief Justice Peters presiding. The case attracted attention throughout the country. The trial lasted several days. The defense was a general denial and attempted to prove an alibi—that the men were in Massachusetts, 200 miles away at the time the crime was committed.

On circumstantial evidence, Stain and Cromwell were convicted of murder in the first degree, the jury having the case under consideration nearly 20 hours. The case was carried to the law court on exceptions, and a new trial asked. This was denied. The men were sentenced to life imprisonment at Thomaston in 1890.

Both have always asserted their innocence. For several years after confinement they never spoke to each other. Although they worked almost side by side in the prison broom shop not a sign of recognition did either make. Both are now old men—past 65 years of age.

Several attempts have been made to secure a pardon for the prisoners, and in 1895 Josiah Crosby of Dexter appeared before the governor and council asking for a pardon. The request was not granted. After the death of Lewis Barker, his son, Lewis A. Barker, directed his attention to the case of the two aged convicts, and after months of study in the case appeared before Governor Powers and the council, Dec. 19 last. One of the pieces of evidence introduced at this hearing was a signed statement made by Charles Stain, in which he branded the story told by him at the time of the trial as an absolute falsehood, and stated that he was actuated by malice toward the prisoners. But the most remarkable thing was when County Attorney Smith of Penobscot county produced a copy of the sworn statement upon the reverse side of which was written a positive denial of the truth of the statement presented by Mr. Barker, and reiterated the truthfulness of his original confession.

The hearing occupied the attention of the council for two days. A large number of witnesses offered testimony, deposition... of others were presented and exhaustive arguments were made by attorneys for both sides. At the conclusion of the hearing it was announced that the decision would be withheld until Dec. 31.

Prisoners Hear Glad News

Thomaston, Me., Jan. 1.—The news of the pardon was conveyed to Stain and Cromwell by Deputy Warden Wyman at 6:30 last night, and both men showed different emotions when told that after 10 years' they were at last free. Stain broke down completely, and cried like a child, but Cromwell, although evidently strongly affected, appeared calm and joyous. Both men were greatly surprised at the action of the council.

SERIOUS MONETARY PROBLEM

Silver In the Philippines Disappearing Toward China and India

Washington, Jan. 1.—The secretary of war has communicated to congress a cablegram from the Philippine commission indicating a grave crisis in the monetary affairs of the archipelago. The message was communicated in connection with a mass of memoranda bearing on the problem which is now to be solved as to the coinage of some kind of silver to take the place of the Mexican dollar in the Philippines. The commission has cabled that the stock of silver in the islands is rapidly diminishing, and they urgently request an answer to the message sent by them of date of Sept. 5, setting out the necessity for prompt action, and asking what remedy shall be applied. It has been found impossible, apparently, to continue the ratio of 2 to 1 established and maintained arbitrarily, and the Mexican money is being drained away very rapidly towards China and India, making it difficult for the army disbursing officers to transact their business.

Relieving Cudahy's Burden

Omaha, Jan. 1.—At a specially called meeting the city council unanimously adopted a concurrent resolution offering a reward for the apprehension and conviction of the desperadoes who abducted Edward Cudahy, Jr. For the arrest and conviction of one the resolution provides a reward of $8000; for two $15,000 will be paid, and $25,000 is offered for the three principals. The object of the city's offer is largely to relieve Mr. Cudahy and his family of the fear of reprisals from the bandits and to remove from the police and detectives the restraint they have felt in trailing the bandits on account of the very trying position in which Mr. Cudahy has been placed.

NOT A TECHNICAL ARMISTICE

Powers Have Agreed to Suspension of Military Excursions In China

Washington, Jan. 1.—Minister Conger has officially notified the state department that the Chinese government has ordered Earl Li and Prince Ching to sign the preliminary terms determined on by the powers as a basis for negotiations, and a dispatch to the Pall Mall Gazette says an armistice has been proclaimed in Pekin. This means that the fighting will cease and the powers will send out no more expeditions.

The officials here are puzzled to account for the announcement of this armistice before the Chinese answer, which asked for it, had been received by the ministers at Pekin, for they assume that that answer was not received until Monday night. However, it is suggested that the rather vigorous expressions of dissatisfaction by some of the powers at the prosecution of these military raids upon Chinese, who are showing no disposition to attack foreigners, may have had some effect at last. The state department has sent a strong instruction to Minister Conger directly in line with the Chinese request for a suspension of military excursions.

It is not an "armistice," technically speaking, that is looked for now, but merely a suspension of military activity. Were the powers formally to consent to any "armistice" they thereby would commit themselves to a recognition of the existence of actual war with China, and there are strong reasons why such a committal should be avoided, if possible.

Senate May Have to Wait

Washington, Jan. 1.—There is likely to be some delay on the part of the executive in complying with the terms of a resolution adopted by the senate, directing the secretary of war to transmit to the senate the report of Abraham L. Laws, the auditor of Cuba, giving in detail the result of his investigations into the receipts and expenditures of the Cuban funds. Secretary Root has transmitted the report to the president, with a statement of his opinion that its publication at this time would be "incompatible with public interests."

"I lingered between life and death."

"I think Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and 'Golden Medical Discovery' the best medicines in the world," writes Mrs. Amelia Dougherty, of Kerrigan, Wayne Co., Mo. "I gave birth to a baby last summer. After confinement I became very ill, had the best physician that could be got, and he diagnosed my case as uterine trouble tending to dropsy. Medicine seemed to do me no good. I lingered between life and death for quite a while, every day growing weaker until I could not walk across the room. My friends were looking for my death every minute. A friend wrote and told me about Dr. R. V. Pierce, and I at once wrote to him for medical advice. He replied immediately, giving me full instructions as to what to do. I at once followed his advice, and when I had taken his medicine about a week I felt a good deal stronger. When I had taken it about one month I felt as strong as I do to-day. I took four bottles of each kind and two vials of 'Pleasant Pellets.' Many thanks for the medicine, It has permanently cured me."

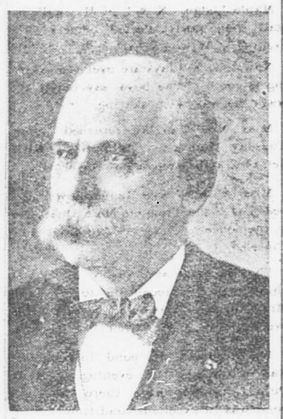
GATHERING OF SOLONS

Legislation For 1901 Has Begun In New England

SOULE IS CHOSEN PRESIDENT

Of the Massachusetts Senate and Joe Manley Is Made Speaker of the Maine House—Nominations by Republicans of New Hampshire

Boston, Jan. 2.—The legislature of 1901 met today and started the legislative wheel of the 20th century. The senate will have for presiding officer Senator Rufus A. Soule of New Bedford, and the house will re-elect Speaker James J. Myers.



HON. RUFUS A. SOULE.

The house was called to order by Representative Samuel W. Twombly of Winchester, he having served in the house of 1871.

The senate was called to order by Senator Charles A. Corser of Holyoke, who served in the senate of 1882. In the house prayer was offered by Rev. F. O. MacCarthy of Rockland, the Socialist-Democrat, who is the only clergyman in this year's house, while the veteran chaplain, Rev. Edmund Dowse, performed like service in the senate.

Republican members of the senate held the usual caucus at the state house and nominated without opposition Hon. Rufus A. Soule of New Bedford as president, Henry D. Coolidge of Concord as clerk, and Rev. Edmund Dowse of Sherborn as chaplain. Major C. G. Davis, the present sergeant-at-arms, through the appointment of the governor, was unanimously nominated.

The personnel of the house is made up of 180 Republicans, 58 Democrats and 2 Socialist-Democrats. This is a loss of 10 to the Democrats, as compared with a year ago. The avocations of the members are as follows: Lawyers, 37; farmers, 21; real estate, 18; merchants, 14; clerks, 14; manufacturers, 13; grocers, 10; salesmen, 8; newspaper publishers, 8; insurance agents, 7; journalists, 6; insurance agents, 7; shoemakers, 5; retired, 5; contractors, 4; civil engineers, 4; carriage business, 3; provision dealers, 3; no occupation, 3; surveyors of lumber, bookkeepers and other trades, 2 each. There are 100 new members.

The governor and other state officers will take the oath of office tomorrow.

Maine Legislature Meets

Augusta, Me., Jan. 2.—At the caucus of the Republican members of the house, J. H. Manley of Augusta was unanimously nominated for speaker. In the senate caucus, Senator Hamlin of Hancock was nominated by acclamation for president. There were contests over several minor officers in the house, but most were by acclamation. In the only senate contest, W. B. Clark beat Purinton of Lewiston for assistant secretary, by a vote of 16 to 12. All the officers nominated were elected today when the two bodies met for organization. The Democratic members nominated Davis of Waterville for speaker.

Senate Democrats Gave It Up

Concord, N. H., Jan. 2.—The New Hampshire legislature met today. In the caucuses for the selection of officers the Republicans of the senate nominated Bertram Ellis of Keene as president. The Republicans of the house nominated Cyrus H. Little for speaker. The senate Democrats made no nominations, while those of the house named W. J. Horne of Dover for speaker.

Time-Honored Customs Observed

Providence, Jan. 2.—Under a revised constitution, which makes Providence the sole capital of the state of Rhode Island, and in a new and elaborate state house, the general assembly of Rhode Island was convened yesterday. The time of the meeting of the assembly of old has been known as "election day, and it always has been one of the memorable holidays of the state, and there was very little departure from time-honored customs.

Quay's Nomination Is Assured

Harrisburg, Jan. 2.—Matthew S. Quay was the unanimous choice of the joint convention of Republican senators and representatives held last night in the house chamber to nominate a candidate for United States senator. The caucus was attended by 123 legislators, or four less than the number necessary to a choice in the joint convention of the senate and house, which will be held Jan. 16. On the balloting Mr. Quay received the votes of 26 senators and 93 members of the house. Before the result was announced, the names of two other candidates were withdrawn, and the nomination of Mr. Quay was made unanimous.

Footpads Caused His Death

New Orleans, Jan. 2.—Dr. James Gibbons, 30, one of the ambulance students of the charity hospital, and a nephew of Cardinal Gibbons, died yesterday of wounds received Monday night. He was on his way home at midnight when two men attempted to rob him. Before he could comply with the demand to hold up his hands, he was shot in the groin. Dr. Gibbons pursued the men, who ran, not knowing he was wounded, but the loss of blood caused him to desist. No trace of the murderers has yet been found, although Dr. Gibbons gave a fair description of them before he died.

The Nova Scotia Miners' Strike

Halifax, Jan. 2.—There are no new developments in the coal strike situation and nothing is expected until Jan. 10, the termination of the truce between the men and the managers at the Cumberland mines. The management of the Pictou collieries has nothing to say about the men going going out. The lack of concerted action among the miners is explained by one of their leaders who states that the strike at Pictou on New Year's day was premature, as the truce of 10 days was supposed to be general.

Big Crowd at White House

Washington, Jan. 2.—Over 5000 people were received at the White House yesterday between 11 and 2 o'clock by President and Mrs. McKinley and the ladies of the cabinet members' families. Practically all the officials in Washington attended. Mrs. McKinley, who is improving in health, endured the trying ordeal with much composure, remaining beside the president throughout. Elegant toilets were worn by the ladies in the receiving party.

Converts to Democracy

Denver, Jan. 2.—All the Populist members of the state senate, eight in number, entered the caucus of the Democratic members yesterday, and announced their intention to join the Democratic party.

NICE BABY

All babies are "nice," to their mothers.

We all love children. Great big men, with hard hands, have soft hearts for helpless new-comers to earth with the smile of heaven fresh on their innocent faces. No man is too high or low, too proud or humble, too busy or idle, too good or bad, too great or small—except a few very small mean men—to throw up their hats at the sight of a plump little cherub; or to pity a thin one.

Plumpness and thinness are accidents. Nature is bountiful; parents want to be. Scott's emulsion of cod-liver oil corrects their mistakes.

We'll send you a little to try if you like.

AN ELEMENT OF DANGER

In Cape Colony Which Did Not Exist a Year Ago

THE CALL FOR VOLUNTEERS

Comes Too Late to Prevent Invaders Obtaining Fresh Horses—But Thirty Percent of Dutch of Western Portion Loyal to the British

London, Jan. 2.—"The aspect of affairs is scarcely less gloomy," says the Cape Town correspondent of The Times, "than at the beginning of 1900. The invading Boers are numerically fewer, but they have penetrated further south, and their presence in such centres of hostile Dutch feeling as Graaf Reinet constitutes an element of danger which did not exist last January.

"The proclamation calling for volunteers comes very late. The invaders have been enabled to obtain fresh horses. All the horses in the Colony ought to have been commandeered or bought at the first sign of invasion."

The correspondent complains of the inertia and reticence of the authorities.

A special meeting of the cabinet was held yesterday at Cape Town, at which it is understood, a decision was reached to make a further extension of martial law.

A telegram from Carnarvon reports that the Boers are looting every farm along their route for supplies.

The Cape Town correspondent of The Daily Mail, who dwells upon the gravity of the position in Cape Colony, says:

"The Boer invaders now number 5000. The western invasion gives the most concern. It has split into two divisions, which are marching like the prongs of a fork, one by way of Sutherland toward Malmesbury, and the other toward Beaufort West.

"The enemy are now ranging over immense tracts of territory, necessitating the employment of an army corps to deal with them. Lord Kitchener has poured troops into the disturbed areas, but the fugitive tactics of the Boers have to a large extent neutralized his precautions.

"It was felt that the only means of excluding the invaders from the rich districts in the western part of the Colony was to call out the farmers. Telegrams promise a splendid response from the eastern portion, but the western is doubtful, not 30 percent of the population being regarded as loyal. Hence the Boer concentration in that direction.

"Letters are arriving here detailing damage and robbery by the invaders, and beseeching military assistance. Any action on the part of the Colony will not abate the urgent need of large reinforcements."

Two hundred and fifty Boers captured 14 men of Nesbitt's horse 50 miles southeast of Colesburg. The enemy, since increased to 800, has appeared near Weltevreden and is driving off stock.

Pat Crowe's Brother In Custody

Omaha, Jan. 2.—The first arrest in the Cudahy kidnapping case has been made. J. J. Crowe, brother of Pat Crowe, whom the police believe to be a principal in the abduction, was taken into custody in Council Bluff yesterday by Omaha detectives and brought to this city. The warrant charges Crowe with the abduction of young Edward Cudahy on Dec. 18. A diligent search has disclosed no trace of Pat Crowe, but the officers came upon the brother asleep in a rear room.

Of Wide Business Experience

Skowhegan, Me., Jan. 2.—General Russell B. Shepard, president of the Skowhegian Pulp company, the Milburn company, Second National bank, Skowhegan Water company, Somerset Traction company, and a trustee of the Maine insane hospital, died here last night. He was born in Fairfield 72 years ago. He served through the Civil war, and was mustered out at Bangor with the rank of brevet brigadier general. A widow survives him.

Americans and Filipinos Mingled

Manila, Jan. 2.—The first official function at which Americans and Filipinos in considerable numbers have mingled socially took place yesterday at the governor general's residence. General MacArthur and Admiral Remey, assisted by the wives of several generals, received thousand of callers. The Filipino women wore elaborate costumes and converse affably in Spanish.

Killed and Robbed In His Store

Peublo, Col., Jan. 2.—Walter C. Casley, a druggist, was shot through the head and instantly killed in his store yesterday by a burglar. The cash register had been rifled and every pocket in the murdered man's clothing had been turned inside out. The murderer escaped.

Bishops Were Dissatisfied

Atlanta, Ga., Jan. 2.—The resignation of Bishop H. M. Turner as president of the college of African Methodist Episcopal bishops is announced. It is stated to be due to dissatisfaction in the college. Certain bishops, it is understood, objected to assignments given them.

Good Afternoon.

Ward Two will have an able representative in Councilman-elect Adams, who is already in the harness. He carried weight in his remarks at the hearing Tuesday evening.

The Councilmen seem to have but a poor idea of the time Tax Collector Baker has given to the city the past year. He is at City Hall every day during regular office hours from 8 to 12 and 1.30 to 4, and also two evenings a week. During registration he even gives more evenings.

The Legislature of 1901 met and organized today, and will tomorrow listen to the inaugural address of Gov. Crane. Quincy was never better represented than this year, having a senator, the first time for many years, besides two representatives. A Happy New Year to Senator Sprague and Representative Sheppard and Badger. We shall expect to hear good reports about you.

Church Debt Quickly Paid.

After a sermon on "Systematic Giving" by Rev. Edward Anderson of Quincy in Berkeley Temple Sunday morning the money needed to defray the expenses of the unplanned work of the last two weeks—the church having no other debt — was raised in this novel way. A blackboard was placed in front of the audience marked off into 156 small squares each representing a specific sum. The top line contained 13 "blocks of five," as one expressed it. Next came 26 squares of $2 each 52 of $1 and 65 of 50 cents. Calls for the $5 row were made first and quickly filled and the others followed in the order named the whole $201.50 being raised in fifteen minutes. The society will thus start the century without a dollar's obligation.—Transcript.

Ruskin---Writer, Man.

Miss Alice Morrison of Braintree gave a reading Monday afternoon at Mrs. John A. Barbour's home, Wollaston. Many of her friends were present including Braintree and Wollaston ladies. Miss Morrison charmingly gowned held attention of her hearers for over an hour as she told of "Ruskin as a writer and as a man." Ruskin's boyhood days when his mother's influence influenced his artistic temperament were pleasingly described and also his later days, during which his influence on the art of England was so strongly felt.

Miss Morrison's hearers were charmed with her pleasant personality and scholarly treatment of her subject.

Was Not Eligible.

While the Fore River Company, practically was assured of a Government contract for building a battleship, when awards were made, it was not eligible to receive the same, not being incoporated. Preliminary steps have all been taken now for incorporation, and within the next three days in all probability the company will be granted a charter. There will be no change in the management of the company.

Liquor Raid.

Chief Ripley and a squad of officers raided the premises of Charles Barberi at 98 Copeland street, Tuesday night, and seized 27 gallons of wine, 50 gallons of cider, 8 gallons of beer, and two quarts of absinthe.

SCHOOL LOT GOES OVER.

Also the Request for Enlargement of the High School.

Many Appear Before City Council at School Lot Hearing.

A Debate of the Salary of Tax Collector---- Increase Proposed for City Solicitor.

Councilmen Callahan, Hogan and Johnson were the absentees.

ENLARGEMENT OF HIGH SCHOOL.

The School Committee requested that plans be made for enlarging the High school. Referred to the next Council.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE.

The Committee on Ordinances reported on the order granting the Telephone Co. a location for one pole on Granite street. Passed.

The Committee on Streets reported ought to pass on order granting the Telephone Co. a location for one pole and guy on Howard street. Rules suspended and order passed.

The joint Committee on Finances and Ordinances reported ought not to pass on order to increase the salary of the City Treasurer from $1200 to $1500.

Councilman Foland moved to amend by having it read ought to pass. He thought the salary of $1200 was not sufficient for the business the treasurer has to handle.

Councilman Freeman said that the Treasurer received $400 from the Woodward fund besides his salary.

Motion to amend lost and report accepted.

The Committee on Finance reported ought to pass on order transferring $60 from Police Station to Special Police. Rules suspended and order passed.

The Committee on Finance reported on order transferring $400 from Edgestones and $200 from Street Lighting to Water Maintainance. Rules suspended and order passed.

SCHOOL LOT HEARING.

Upon motion the order relative to the school lot in Ward Two was taken from the table.

A public hearing was then given on the matter.

Ex-Representative T. H. Newcomb said there had been considerable talk regarding the location. A wrong impression had been given. The Council has been mislead. It has been stated the people of the Point were not united. He wished to prove to the Council that nine-tenths wanted the present lot. When the public hearing was given it was a stormy night and fifty were present and were unanimous for old lot. We were astonished when the Committee reported on a lot not thought of. I do not think the people were consulted. The wishes of the people were ignored. There are associations about the present lot that are dear to everyone at the Point. He would like to know if people of the Point were not possessed of intelligence. Why is it? Is it because it is a better lot? No! It is to dispose of a nearly worthless piece of land. There is a big hole that would have to be filled six or eight feet. Then they want to lay out courts, not streets on each side to open up the land. He could see no other reason. It was a shame, disgrace and insult to the people of Quincy Point. His idea was to take the lots in the rear of present lot and go through to Curtis avenue. It would give a more imposing appearance to the building. He hoped the council would look at it as they should, in the interest of the people. The difference of $2,500 should not stand in the way of having the lot where people want it. It would not be necessary to cut down trees if the lot was extended to Curtis avenue.

George Adams, one of the Council men-elect, said it was impossible for anyone who went to school in the old building to keep from saying a word. Ward Two was deeply in earnest. They have been asleep but are not so now. They have set their minds on the old lot. They will have that or none at all. It may be ungrateful on their part but that is the line they are fighting upon. There was no more earnest an advocate for economy than he; on the other hand if superior advantages could be obtained he would favor spending a little more. The lots between the present lot and Curtis avenue could be purchased for $5,684.03 If it did not cost more than $2,500 to grade the Packard lot, the grading here will not cost $500. But we will call it $1,000. That make it $6,684.03. On the Federhen land is a lot that will sell for $300, and $400 for the old school, makes $700. The stone in the cellar of present building is worth at least $200. These would bring the amount down to $5,784.03. For the Packard lot $6,000 is asked, and grading will cost $2,500, making $8,500, less $400 for the old building, leaving the cost $8,100 as compared with $5,784.03 for the Point lot.

The present lot would not bring more than $2,500. Will you let a hostile committee influence you against the wishes of the people for a few hundred dollars. In ordinary course of life a change is not made unless for the better. The burden of proof is on the committee to show that the Packard lot is better and has more advantages than the present lot. There is a little grain of sentiment in those elm trees. The argument that the Packard lot was more convenient would not hold water. It has no weight. With the increase of people another building will be needed in the near future, and it should be near Main street. It was a slur on the people to say that the people did not know what they want. The committee has doubtless acted in good faith but they are not in accordance with the sentiment of the people.

John R. Graham did not expect that the Council would settle the matter this year. He lived on the easterly side, but was in favor of the old lot. Two years ago he would have favored a lot nearer Quincy. He had raised a large family and all had gone to the old school. He had a little sentiment and would like to see the new building located there. It was a better location than that proposed. The people should have something to say where it should be. We should not stand for $1,000. We are a good ward and will grow. He hoped the building would be located where the people want it.

Capt. Higgins asked is this for the benefit of the children or to fill someone's pocket book. It looked to him as if some one had a good sized axe to grind. It was a good hog breeding place. A malaria field. Why are men outside the ward so interested in the Packard lot. Is it because some one wants to get rid of old land at a good price. The people of Quincy Point will compare morally and in every way with any other ward. It will be the beginning of disease and death to rising generations if the new location is selected.

Charles A. Foster did not think the committee had hit upon the proper lot. What is to hinder anyone building a manufactory adjoining the present lot. Then the present lot with the fire station opposite was an element of danger. He was opposed to both lots, but of the two favored the Packard lot.

Timothy J. Carey favored the Packard lot as it was much nearer the school centre. The sentiment in his locality as far as he had talked with anyone was in favor of the Packard lot.

Henry H. Faxon thought the Packard lot the best. The pond did not amount to anything. If the Packard lot was taken we would have the old building to use while the new school was being built and there would be no liability of accident to the children. Some speculator would want the old building for a hotel. He had no doubt but what $8,000 could be saved by using the Packard lot. He would give $200 for a refusal of the old lot for $3,400.

Frank F. Crane wanted to pay the committee a compliment for acting honestly. If anyone was to blame for the Packard lot, he was, for he offered it. From a business point the Packard lot was the most desirable. He understood that Col. Packard would give the land on either side for a street.

Councilman DeNormandie said the conditions were that there should be 220 feet in front and a reservation of 40 feet on each side for a roadway.

Mr. Crane, continuing said he did not consider the Packard lot unhealthy. The proposed location was above the level of the street.

Charles Hall said it struck him that several had axes to grind, and Mr. Crane has one. He would get no Commission for selling my lot. He gets a commission for selling the Packard lot.

Monday night was a gala one for Atlantic, such excitement and energy has never been heard of before. Lights gleamed brightly in almost every house during the evening, and signs of festivity could be seen through windows over which a curtain scorned to be drawn. At the awe-inspiring hour of 12 the bell rang out loud and clear. Almost immediately pistols were fired off, fire works shot up into the air, flashing bengola lights of red flamed up along Walker street and Botolph street, heavier revolvers cracked out a good bye to the old year and 1901 was ushered in with a glorious moon above and welcome hearts below.

NOTICE TO PARENTS.

CITY OF QUINCY.

CITY CLERK'S Office, Dec. 31, 1900.

THE Record of birth in any city or town is always more or less unsatisfactory, owing to the fact that the canvasser finds difficulty in getting the necessary information. Names and dates are frequently given incorrectly. The importance of accuracy is shown in many cases where there is a question of descent, or inheritance of property, or collection of life insurance or pensions. The City Clerk's copy of the record is accepted as conclusive evidence in a court of law. While great pains are taken by this office to have the record correct experience shows that it is necessary that parents themselves should lend their assistance. In fact, the law requires that parents shall give notice to the City Clerk of the birth of their children, and provides a penalty for neglect to give such notice for the space of 40 days.

It often happens that only children or servants are at home when the canvasser makes his call, and the answers to his questions are open to doubt. I therefore request all parents in whose household a birth has occurred in the year 1900, to place upon a paper or card the required information, and keep it in a convenient place until the canvasser appears.

The canvasser will begin on Jan. 1, 1901.

LOT GOES OVER.

The present lot was the best. The argument that children would have to be in the old building ten months is nonsense, as school only keeps nine months a year. He knew when men stood up here and advocated the Packard lot it was for personal gain.

Hearing closed.

In the Council, Councilman Newcomb's amendment to use the old lot and purchase the Redding lot was lost.

Councilman Newcomb then moved to amend by makng the amount $5,606.18 for purchase of the Federhen, Hall, Baxter and part of the Hersey lot.

Councilmen Newcomb and Badger favored the substitute order.

The substitute order was adopted and took its second reading.

Councilman Poland moved reference to next Council.

Councilmen Newcomb and Walsh opposed.

Motion lost.

The rules were suspended and the question was on passing to be ordained.

Councilman Poland opposed. He thought the notice too short to pass intelligently upon what the people wanted.

The order failed to pass by a vote of 11 in favor and 7 against, as follows:

Yeas — Alden, Badger, Cleverly, Elcock, Gassett, Hill, McLennan, Newcomb, Nichols, Walsh and Wilson—11.

Nays — DeNormandie, Faxon, Freeman, Nicol, Packard, Poland and Smith—7.

Absent—Callahan, Hogan, Johnson.

Councilman De Normandie moved to reconsider the vote rejecting the report of the committee.

Ruled out of order as there was no matter before the Council.

SALARY INCREASE.

Councilman Freeman offered an order defining the duties of the City Solicitor, and an order increasing his salary from $700 to $1,200.

Ordered to a second reading

Upon motion of Councilman Freeman it was voted when the Council adjourn it be until Friday evening.

CALENDAR.

The order granting the Telephone Co. a location for 18 poles on Howard street, and appropriating $500 for the payment of Copeland street claims, were passed under suspension of the rules.

The order increasing he salary of the tax collector for $600 to $1,400, all receipts to go to the city, came up for a second reading.

Councilman Poland moved to amend by making the amount $1,500.

Councilman Freeman opposed and the amendment was lost.

President Bryant called Councilman Packard to the chair and taking the floor said in part:

Everybody knows men who have filled the office of tax collector have abused it. Why should we pay $1,400 when there are many doing more work for $1,000. What does he do that requires brain work? Receipt bills. It was not a position when it required a man to give his whole time. He moveh to make the amount $1,200.

Councilman Poland thought it was getting things down too fine, when we ask a man to collect taxes for the same price we pay a man for driving the Wollaston hose wagon. We can not get a man of any financial ability for $1,200.

Concilman Bryant--It is absurd. You can find plenty of competent men for $1,200.

The amendment of Councilman Bryant was lost by a vote of 9 to 9.

Councilman Bryant then moved to amend by making the salary $1,300.

Councilman Freeman said the committee had a written statement that for eleven months the net receipts were $1,725. The present Collector wanted $1,500, but the committee set it at $1,400, considering he has to pay $120 for his bond.

Councilman Bryant — How much time does he give?

Councilman Freeman—I do not know possibly six months.

President Packard—Hold on! one at a time! This seems like a dialogue!

The amendment failed to pass on yea and nay vote as follows:

Yeas — Badger, Bryant, Cleverly, Elcock, Hill, Smith and Wilson—7.

Nays—Alden, De Normandie, Faxon, Freeman, Gassett, McLennan, Newcomb, Nichols, Nicoll, Poland and Walsh—11.

Councilman McLennan moved to lay on the table. Lost.

The order was then passed to be ordained, Councilmen Bryant, Poland and Wilson voting no.

Upon motion of Councilman Newcomb the vote on the Quincy Point school lot was reconsidered, and the matter upon motion of the same gentlemen was referred to the next Council.

Adjourned at 10.40 until Friday evening.

—The school children of Mississippi have voted in favor of the magnolia as the State's flower. The Legislature is expected to accept their choice as decisive and formally to make the magnolia the State's floral emblem.

The engagement is announced of Miss Lois Eleanor Chute of Quincy Point to Mr. Leon D. Magee of Hyde Park.

The annual banquet of the Quincy Letter Carriers was held Tuesday evening at the Greenleaf. The annual election of officers will take place next Monday.

The Tremont Male Quartette and a reader will appear at the Bethany Congregational church this evening, in the second entertainment of the Brotherhood course.

Part of Tuesday night's session of the City Council was in the nature of a mock session, as the members had considerable fun at the expense of Councilman Packard when he was in the President's chair.

A Boston paper reports Mark L. Read of Quincy to have purchased a three and a half story brick house numbered 162 West Newton street. The lot contains 900 square feet of land, and with the building is assessed for $10,000.

HANLEY DEFENDER.

$26.000 Subscribed and Lawson Said to be Interested.

When the sun went down last night, says the Herald, $26,000 had been subscribed toward building the centreboard boat which Hanley of Quincy has designed. The Early Dawn contingent has raised $10,000 and is promised $10,000 more by a gentleman who does not care just now to have his name made public. As told in The Herald, two days ago, James McCormack of Brookline, will give $10,000, Joseph E. Doherty $3,000, and Messrs. Charles Cole, Andrew J. O'Brien and W. F. Bache $1,000 apiece. Other subscriptions are expected, and those working the matter up feel confident that sufficient money will soon be raised.

Last evening it was reported that the gentleman who did not wish his name known in the matter was T. W. Lawson, who was willing to help out a boat designed as a rival to his own to the generous tune of $10,000. Mr. Lawson could not be found late in the evening, but there is little doubt that he is the man.

Speaking of the cost of building and running 90-footer, it is a fact that the Pilgrim was built and run a whole season, repairs and alterations included, for $45,000.

Mr. Hanley has said that his boat if built, would be of wood. Persons experienced in metal and wood construction are strongly of the opinion that a wooden boat built on Hanley's dimensions would have to be of extraordinary strength to stand the tremendous strain. It would be well for those intending building the yacht to give serious thought to this.

The work of laying down the Lawson boat progresses at a good rate. Nothing can be done on the boat after the moulds are made until the angles and plating arrive.

Capt Nate Watson was in town Tuesday and saw Mr. Lawson. Enough said.

The idea of running lead in keel pockets is an old one. Lawley did it in 1887 in the Volunteer, and again later in the schooner Alcaea, 10 years ago. It was also run this way in the cutter Galatea.

City Council Entertained.

Councilman George H. Wilson entertained the City Council and press at his attractive residence on Revere road at the close of the meeting Tuesday evening. The late adjournment somewhat interfered with the plans. Mr. Wilson spread a sumptuous table and selections by the graphaphone were sandwiched in with the repartee and city business. The Councilmen were so full of business that the debates on the school lot and salary question were continued on this occasion.

THE CITY WINS.

The Property of Wood, Harmon & Co. Not Over Valued.

At Dedham, today, the County Commissioners rendered a decision in favor of the city of Quincy in the matter of Wood, Harmon & Co., who petitioned for an abatement of the tax of 1899. The Commissioners held that the property was not over valued and that the petitioners were entitled to no abatement. The amount involved was about $1,000. City Solicitor Sears looked after the interest of the city in the matter, and put up a good fight and won a victory.

COLLEGE WEDDING.

Amherst Man Takes Quincy Vassar Woman for His Bride.

At the home of Mr. and Mrs. James H. Slade at Quincy Point, on New Year,s night, was solemnized the marriage of their daughter, Helen Mildred, and Mr. Charles Amos Andrews, son of Mr. Amos Andrews of Holyoke, Mass.

The bride was a Vassar graduate of '94, and the groom an Amherst man of the class of '95. Miss Slade made a beautiful bride in her pure white bridal robes of white satin. She carried a bouquet of lilies of the valley.

Rev. Ellery Channing Butler, pastor of First church performed the ceremony at eight o'clock, the simple impressive Unitarian service being used. The bride and groom entered the room together attended by Miss Mabel Louise Hastings, of Brooklyn, N. Y., a classmate of the bride, as maid of honor, and the best man, Mr. Arthur Andrews, brother of the groom. Miss Hastings wore pink crepe de chene and carried pink roses.

An orchestra furnished music for the wedding march and service and during the informal reception that followed the ceremony.

The ushers were: Mr. Charles Parker Slade, Harvard, '98, brother of the bride; Mr. Miner Dunham Crary of Pennsylvania, Mr. Henry M. Moses, and Mr. Frederic L. Bill, all of Amherst, '95, classmates of the groom.

Only the immediate families and a few personal friends were present at the wedding and reception.

The house was trimmed with holly and Christmas greens, appropriate to the season and with the brilliant lights looked most artistic and attractive.

Wilcox---Hodgkinson.

Perhaps the first wedding of the 20th century in Quincy, but surely one of the happiest, was the marriage at 7.30 o'clock on New year's night of Miss Fostina W. Hodgkinson and Mr. George L. Wilcox at No. 3 Silver street, Quincy. The guests included several from Needham, the former residence of the groom. Rev. E. N. Hardy of Bethany Congregational church was the officiating clergyman. A reception followed the marriage ceremony. Mr. Wilcox holds a responsible position at the Fore River Ship Works, and Mr. and Mrs. Wilcox upon their return from a wedding trip will reside on Silver street

Wollaston Glee Clnb.

A young men's Glee Club was begun Tuesday evening at the Wollaston Congregational church vestry, under the auspices of the Boy's Clnb. Mrs. Tenney has been fortunate in securing the services of Mr. Follett who is a musician of ability. The boys entered heartily into the singing, so that the success of the undertaking is assured. The club will meet at least once a month and practice songs and choruses. The opportunity afforded by the club to all young men of Wollaston to obtain practice in the art of singing, gratis, will be much appreciated by the boys, as well as their parents, who are desirous that their boys should cultivate their voices. A regular meeting will be held shortly at which all the Wollaston boys eligible to the club will be enabled to join singing class.

Boys' Club.

At Mr. George F. Pinkham's home last Saturday evening, a social time was enjoyed by the boys. Over half a hundred were present of whom thirty-three signed their names as members of the new Boys' club, which has been formed by the members of Mr. John Barbour's Sunday School. Mr. George Murray showed many stereopticon pictures of scenes visited by him in Mexico. Several short addresses were made by George Lewis and John Manning after which songs were sung. The club, started under the able management of Mrs. Tenney, will fill a long felt want in the hearts of the Wollaston boys.

THE GRANITE LAW.

Not Legal for State to Require Home Work.

A New York dispatch of Jan. 1, reads: In an opinion by the appellate division of the supreme court, the act of 1895, known generally as "the stone cutters' law," is made inoperative. The statute required that all stone used in municipal work in the state, except paving blocks and crushed stone, should be worked, dressed and carved within the boundaries of the state. The opinion was based upon an action brought in the supreme court by R. J. Treat, a contractor, to obtain $3,281 as an instalment on sewer work.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

by local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflamation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars; free.

NEW HOUSES FOR SALE.

Just to remind you that I have another lot of houses nearly completed, I will list these three bargains:

Many were disappointed on the last lot so be on hand early if you would be in it.

First—A six room Single House, bath and set tubs, with hot and cold water, papered to suit purchaser, large lot $2100. $300 down; balance at low rate of interest. Just the place for some street railway employee.

Also, one of eight rooms and bath, Independence avenue; all modern improvements, bounds on two streets, can sell for $500 less than real value. This house is of the popular size to suit any business man, and is very roomy and convenient. I don't like to have other builders know how I am cutting prices, but $3,000 buys this one, look at it and compare with others you see building.

Another, and a money maker for some one with only an ounce of pluck. This is a two-family House, 5 rooms and bath each, and 60 [illegible] lot, $3,000. Pay in $500 on this and I will guarantee you a twenty five per cent. investment for one year; who would dare invest in a twenty-five per cent. GUARANTEED investment.

Remember these houses are built by competent workmen, by the day, of the best material, and are personally superintended by the owner, are but four minutes to station, electrics pass, and everything is most desirable as a residential section. All houses are connected with sewer and cellars are perfectly dry.

Come and look them over and select one that suits you. Can be seen any day.

A TARGET

For 10,000 Eyes.

Of course you do not want to be a target yourself, but not so with your "Ad." You want it seen. An "Ad." in the Ledger will be a daily target for over Ten Thousand Eyes.

If you can attract the eyes of over 5,000 people, day after day; know that you're reaching intelligent, thoughtful people who have money to spend, there is no question but an "Ad" in the Daily Ledger is money well expended and in fact indispensible, especially at the Holiday season.

An "Ad" in Ledger does more than attract, it holds the attention of the shopper.

DANIEL WEBSTER

said the most inspiring words ever spoken to him came from a farmer, after his greatest speech: "You never did your best yet!" This didn't mean that Webster was weak; it meant that he had never used the power that was in him. When we criticize your methods we don't mean that they are weak. We mean that you are not getting the most possible out of your business. Experience has proved that advertising pays. Resolve to be a big advertiser in 1901, and increase your business. Better still; begin now and get the Holiday Trade.

While the Warships Are Building

The Daily Ledger hopes to become the Target for 20,000 Eyes. The publishers have improvements constantly in mind, and with the encouragement of Quincy people will print as large and newsy a daily they are willing to support.

LOST ON MT. WASHINGTON

Small Hope of Safety of a Newspaper Man From Boston

Berlin, N. H., Jan. 2.—William H. Bodwell came to Gorham from Boston last Sunday morning in company with Chester Stiles, for the purpose of obtaining a story and views of Mt. Washington, of which they said a Boston paper was to be the purchaser. Stiles is a photographer.

After engaging Roy Evans as a guide they started at 10 a. m. Sunday, and when they reached the Half Way House, at twilight, Bodwell seemed very much exhausted. It was decided that Stiles and Evans would take one of the cameras and go up the mountain and take pictures, while Bodwell could remain at the Half Way House and write his story. They started off, leaving Bodwell with plenty of wood, provisions, light, etc.

Evans and Stiles got to the Summit House safely, and took some pictures at 5 a. m. Monday. Then they descended to the Half Way House, but before that point was reached a storm burst upon them with great fury.

When they finally reached the Half Way House, the fire was out and Bodwell had disappeared. He had left his pack there, and had taken with him his camera, a tin dipper and a can of condensed milk. The two men began a search for the missing man, but could not find the slightest trace of him, until they got over on the edge of what is called the "Cape of Good Hope." There is a spring at that point, and near it was found Bodwell's tin dipper. After searching, and finding that their own resources were about exhausted, they came to Berlin, reaching here yesterday afternoon.

H. D. Bodwell and Oscar Cole, two hardy mountain climbers, together with A. H. Ely, have gone up the mountain in an effort to find the missing man.

If they are not successful, another searching party will start out tonight. The mercury is 10 degrees below zero, and quite a heavy wind is blowing. All accessible points around the mountain at which Bodwell could have emerged have been communicated with, but no tidings of him have been learned, and it is feared that he has lost his life.

Liberty Once More Enjoyed by Stain and Cromwell

THANKS TO THEIR LAWYER

For His Untiring Efforts In Their Behalf—Remained at Prison Over Night and Left Today to Visit Relatives and Friends

Thomaston, Me., Jan. 2.—Apparently as happy as children, David L. Stain and Oliver Cromwell, who were convicted in 1888 and sentenced to life imprisonment for the murder of J. W. Barron, cashier of the Dexter Savings bank, and who have since been confined in the prison here, left here today, the pardon signed by Governor Powers at Augusta having reached Thomaston yesterday afternoon.

This morning the 8:30 train took them to their relatives and friends. The pardon was brought in person by Lewis A. Barker, counsel for the two men in an attempt to secure their liberty.

Stain was the first to be summoned, and was greeted by Mr. Barker at the entrance to the guard room from the corridor. Attorney Barker grasped his hand, saying: "Well, Mr. Stain, I promised you 10 years ago I would get your pardon, and I have kept my word." Stain replied in a broken voice: "God bless you, Mr. Barker, you surely have."

A moment later Cromwell ascended the steps to the guard room, and was greeted by Mr. Barker. Cromwell, who has evidently attempted to control his emotion since the news of the pardon reached him, in a trembling voice could only say: "God bless you," at the same time giving the pardon courier a cordial hand shake.

They are now free men, but both expressed a desire to remain at the prison last night, to give them a chance to pack up what few belongings they have, rather than to go to a hotel or to Rockland for the night. This morning they took the first train for a visit to their relatives and friends.

Since their arrival at Thomaston, they have been model prisoners in the prison, and have given no occasion for discipline or punishment. In an interview, Mr. Barker said: "I am more than pleased at the outcome, as I have done my best. This is all the reward I ask. I promised Stain I would liberate him, and I have done so. It is surely gratifying to me to have been able to keep my word. I had hopes at first for success. I will go on the same train with Stain and Cromwell as far as Brunswick. Stain will go to Cambridge to see his daughter, while Cromwell will visit Walpole, Mass., and later go to Louisiana, where he was born."

Deputy Wyman of the state prison said: "Both of the men have been quiet during the day, and none of the prisoners have been engaged at work, as it was a holiday. Both Stain and Cromwell are as happy as children."

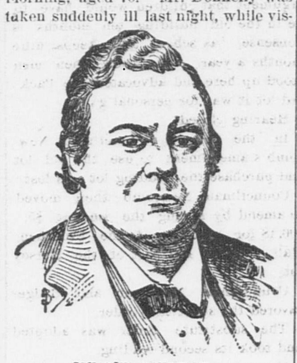
POLITICIAN AND AUTHOR

Ignatius Donnelly Passed Away at Minneapolis This Morning

Minneapolis, Jan. 2.—Ignatius Donnelly, politician and author, died this morning, aged 70. Mr. Donnelly was taken suddenly ill last night, while visiting at the home of his father-in-law, Barton Hanson. From the first Mr. Donnelly sank steadily and soon became unconscious. Dr. Murphy was summoned, and when he arrived the man was still unconscious. The doctor pronounced the trouble heart failure, and stated early in the evening that there was little chance of the patient's recovery. Later Mr. Donnelly passed away, surrounded by a number of his relatives. From the first they had understood that he could not live, as he was well advanced in years. He died without regaining consciousness.



IGNATIUS DONNELLY.

Ignatius Donnelly came to Minneapolis 35 years ago, and since that time had been a member of both houses of the state legislature and had represented his district in congress. He had pronounced ideas, and during his political career had been a member of nearly every political party known in the state.

Mr. Donnelly was an able and deep thinker. Shakespeare formed one of his most absorbing topics, and he was a thorough Shakespearean scholar, always maintaining, however, that Lord Bacon was the real author of the plays.

At the last general election he was a candidate for vice president on the Middle-of-the-Road Populist ticket.

LAW TO BE ENFORCED

Saco Liquor Dealers, Gamblers and Others Are Given Due Notice

Saco, Me., Jan. 2.—The greatest surprise ever experienced by infractors of the law in this vicinity was created last night by the action and threats of the newly elected sheriff of York county, Newell T. Fogg, who, accompanied by Deputy Sheriff Niles, visited every liquor saloon, gambling place, and place of ill-repute in Saco, and notified the proprietors that they must immediately give up their illegal business. He informed them that if they were found doing business in their respective places they would be prosecuted to the fullest extent of the law. The Saco parties were very much taken aback, as the prohibitory law has of late been almost a dead letter in this place, but the sheriff's warning was universally heeded.

In Biddeford, the saloons were closed on account of the holiday, and only for this fact, they, too, would have received a like warning from Sheriff Fogg.

Sheriff Fogg said that he was elected under pledges to no one, but with the sole end in view of securing a strict compliance of the law in York county. Before and since election he had travelled through the county, visiting all the principal cities and towns, and he was convinced that public sentiment demanded the strict enforcement of the law.

Urged by Bay State's Chief Executive —Hill Touches Upon Education and Prohibition—Jordan Pleads For the Preservation of Forests

Boston, Jan. 3.—The inauguration of Governor W. Murray Crane and Lieutenant Governor Bates and the executive council occurred at the state house today, and the men composing the "balance of the state" ticket will be sworn in and take charge of their offices the third Wednesday in January, the 16th.

partments of the public service. "The power to appropriate money for public uses," he said, "is one that should be exercised with care and caution. Taxation is borne always with hardship, and to lessen its exactions should be the constant endeavor of the legislator. The salaries paid by the commonwealth are, in the main, adequate, and increases should not be authorized except in manifestly deserving cases. You cannot be too vigilant in guarding the public treasury. The tendency of the times is to pile up debt without taking sufficient thought as to the means of payment. Simplicity of method and economy in administration should be the watchword of every department of the public service.

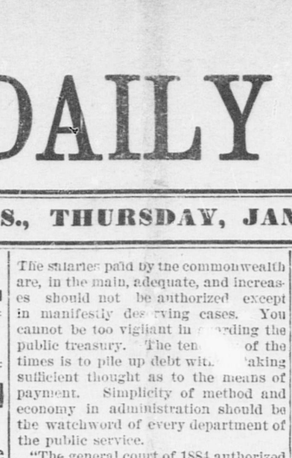
"The general court of 1884 authorized the preparation and completion of a contour topographical survey map of the commonwealth, to be made in co-operation with the United States geological survey, the total cost of the survey to the commonwealth not to exceed $40,000. This was intended to be a temporary work, lasting a few years only; but the commission in charge of it has been in existence now for more than 16 years, and sums aggregating $253,874.59 have been appropriated for its use.

"I do not question the good faith of this commission," said the governor, "nor the sincerity of its belief in the importance of the service performed under its direction, but I do, nevertheless, urge that, before further appropriations are made for topographical purposes you will investigate carefully whether the value of the work justifies the expense entailed."

As to municipal legislation he says: "I renew my recommendation of a year ago, in opposition to legislation which unnecessarily interferes in the affairs of cities and towns. The city of Boston, which has been for years a persistent suitor for legislation at the state house, had its financial resources greatly enlarged by an act of the general court of 1900, and we may confidently hope that the promises of future self-dependence which were advanced by the petitioners for that act may be realized. Except for demands of the most exigent public necessity, the laws restricting expenditures for municipal purposes should not be suspended by the legislature."



HON. JOHN L. BATES.
Lieutenant Governor.

GOVERNOR HILL'S IDEAS

Recommends Active Work In Behalf of Education and Prohibition

Augusta, Me., Jan. 3.—The inauguration of John F. Hill as governor took place today at noon. The announcement of committees was made after the governor's address, after which adjournment was taken until next Tuesday.

In dealing with the educational question, Governor Hill said: "There are 722 school children in 33 unorganized townships, for whom schools are maintained, as provided by the statutes, at a cost, during the past year, of $2,682.13. Of this, $1,280.57 was paid from the state appropriation, $969.56 was interest on land reserved, and $132 the per capita tax.

"The pupils in these schools range from 5 to 21 years of age, and, in several instances, married men and women have taken advantage of the opportunities thus offered to obtain an education.

"The furnishing of such instruction is in harmony with the established policy of the state to provide school privileges for all. As a rule, the people are anxious to have the schools established, the children are prompt and regular in their attendance and apply themselves with great industry to their tasks. The good work which is being done by the schools of this class should be extended and made more efficient if the state is to do its duty to that portion of its citizens dependent upon it for educational advantages."

The governor had this to say of the prohibitory law: "Intemperance is such a fruitful source of misery, pauperism and crime, and its multitude of victims is so great a burden upon the sober and industrious citizen, that it is the duty of a government to [illegible] control and restrict the liquor traffic in every legitimate way. By a provision of its constitution and by statute laws, which with overwhelming majorities its citizens have repeatedly sustained at the polls, the state of Maine stands opposed to the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors. The deliberate adoption of this policy by a people naturally careful and conservative in their judgments was the inevitable result of a moral evolution which recognizes the demoralization and far-reaching evils of intemperance, and sought to eradicate them from the community.

"Fifty years ago, the so-called 'Maine law,' prohibiting the sale of intoxicating liquors, was placed upon our statute books, where it still remains. While it has not accomplished all that its advocates and sporters hoped for, it has been a powerful force in the development and promotion of a healthy temperance sentiment among the people of our state."

PRESERVATION OF FORESTS

And Establishment of Executive Home Recommended by Jordan

Concord, N. H., Jan. 3.—Governor Jordan was inaugurated today, and that completed the important business of the first week of the session. Next week committees will be named in both branches and caucuses for the nomination of candidates for United States senator will be held.

Governor Jordan, in his inaugural address, made a strong plea for the preservation of forestry, saying that his lifelong residence in the north country had filled him with a love for our beautiful hills which the passage of the years has only made the stronger.

"Germany began the work of forest preservation and tree planting 800 years ago. France followed, then came Austria, Switzerland and Italy, so that now nearly all the great countries have forestry schools. The time is ripe for New Hampshire to act. Air, water and forests are the richest of the natural resources of man. We should take good care that the first be not violated, the next polluted, or the last destroyed.

"We are told that more than $7,000,000 are annually paid in New Hampshire by those in quest of pleasure, sightseeing, health and recreation. At least one-half of this is disbursed in and about the White mountain region. We shall not expect these people long to visit treeless hills, barren mountains, springs which fail to sparkle, and brooks without fish or water.

"The better the highways leading to and around these mountain resorts the more visitors will use them, and the greater the amount of money paid to trickle down through the state to help all our people. Liberal appropriations for our mountain roads and seaside resorts, well and honestly expended, will bring good returns. Highways in towns well-to-do and able to maintain their own roads should not receive aid at your hands."

Speaking of railroads, the governor said: "I call your attention to section 7, chapter 155, public statutes. By its provisions the salaries and expenses of the railroad commissioners have to be borne by the railroad corporations. This course seems open to objections. The railroads pay into the state treasury all the taxes assessed against them. There is no reason for paying the commissioners that does not hold as to secretary of state, attorney general, or other state officials.

"This way is not just to the commissioners, who, thus far, under the law creating such a board, have been good men, performing their duties honestly. It affords an opportunity for any one, so minded, to discount the value of the commissioners' services, their investigations and reports in railway cases by saying they are under pay from the railroads. Nor is it a dignified attitude for the state."

A governor's home is recommended. Mr. Jordan's opinion being: "It is about time in our history that we were thinking of providing a home for the governor during his term of office. It has occurred to me that it would be wise and proper to begin to make plans here in the capital city for a modest home, in keeping with modes of living existing among our people, the whole cost somewhere from $10,000 to $20,000, in which the governor can live during his term, or such part of it as he desires, and where the people of the state, the legislators and their families, and others so disposed, can meet the chief executive and his family and get better acquainted. If the suggestion finds lodgment with you perhaps the outcome may be that a committee will be appointed to consider the matter and report to the next session."

Hostilities Are Suspended

Washington, Jan. 3.—Minister Loomis at Caracas has advised the state department that the impending trouble over the conflicting asphalt concessions has been thwarted for the present. It is probable that the arrival of the gunboat Scorpion at Laguayra has been a potent influence in bringing about the present stay of proceedings.

Good Afternoon.

The only argument in favor of the annexation of Quincy to Boston which has had any standing at all, was a boom to Quincy granite. Some manufacturers have argued that upon annexation there would be a law passed requiring that all granite for municipal work shall be worked and cut within the limits of the city, and Boston being a big market, Quincy granite would have a monopoly.

However, Boston firms could not then furnish other cities with granite if the cities have similar laws. But such laws are after the New York "Stone Law," which has just been declared unconstitutional in New York. Quincy has nothing to gain and everything to lose by such laws, as we have an inexhaustible supply of granite, and we desire the country for our market, not a state or a city.

The City Council of 1900 is showing wisdom in its dying days in referring the location of the new schoolhouse and enlargement of the High school to the next Council. The new Council would not be bound to locate a building on any lot which the Council of 1900 might favor. The new Council may decide that a new Coddington is the most urgent need, or that an additional building should first be erected in the vicinity of Union street.

It was unwise of the School Committee to send in its petition for the enlargment of High school building at the last meeting of the year, as a direct request to the new Council would have received immediate attention, while legacies from past Councils are not always in favor.

Drift of Opinion.

☞ A Few days ago President McKinley sent to the senate for confirmation the names of seventy-two non-commissioned officers and privates to be second lieutenants. This is a pretty good illustration of the fact that young men have a chance to rise in the army even though they have not enjoyed the proud privilege of being hazed at West Point.—Baltimore Herald.

New Year's Reception.

The parish of St. Chrysostom's church was welcomed New Year's day at the rectory by the rector and Mrs. Mills. At 8.30 a goodly number assembled in the beautiful parlors where they were received by Mr. and Mrs. Mills. For several hours a social time was enjoyed by all, during which a bountiful lunch was served, of which all partook with satisfaction.

The affair brought closer together the members of the parish, who felt the close bond of sympathy and interest that bound all their hearts together in the work of the church.

TODAY'S COURT.

George E. Carver, Archie Hayden, Joseph L. Dennahey, Henry A. Barnes, Bernard L. Simmonds, William McGibbon and John H. Devin were arraigned for the larceny of a boat at Weymouth, Cases continued until next Thursday.

John Campbell and Michael Breslin were arraigned for being tramps at Braintree. Cases continued until Friday.

Adelbert M. Waite was arraigned upon three complaints, for larceny of a gold pin from T. L. Williams at Quincy; a pair of shoes from L. W. Spaulding of Braintree and a pair of shoes from Ansel R. French at Braintree. He was sentenced to six month in the House of Correction.

A CLEVER ARREST.

Officer Barry Adds New Laurels in Capturing Imposter.

If an officer in Quincy ever earned his stripes, or is entitled to wear a detective star upon the breast of his coat, or be promoted to an inspector, it is Officer David J. Barry, who is on duty during the day in City Square. His arrests of wrong doers are legion, and he is continually adding to his laurels by clever work.

His latest act in this line was on Wednesday afternoon when he landed behind the bars a man who gave the name of Adelbert M. Waite of Brockton. It was about 2 o'clock when he received a telephone message from Braintree to look out for a young man who was obtaining goods by false pretences. Dave brushed the dust from his eyes, pulled down his coat and started out. The description given was a poor one, but that made no difference. He soon saw a man enter Linscott's jewelry store whom he thought might be the party, and taking no chances he also went in and after the fellow had made a purchase he took him for a walk to the police station. Here he was searched, and out came a gold pin and other articles, while in his pocket were pawn tickets for a diamond ring and two overcoats.

After giving his name he was locked up and Barry started out to look up evidence. He found that the fellow had obtained the pin from T. L. Willams' jewelry store where he represented himself as a former customer. He said he had accidentally left his money at home and requested credit which he got. From here the fellow visited the Granite shoe store, where he tried to get a pair of shoes on trust but failed. He then tried to sell McConnell a pair of shoes he had obtained in the same manner at Braintree, but failing in this, he left them for a while. He then went to Linscott's where he would doubtless have tried the same game if Officer Barry had not showed up.

It later developed that in Braintree the fellow had obtained a pair of shoes from A. R. French on trust, and then sold them to a crossing tender, and had got a pair of shoes of L. W. Spaulding which were the ones he left at McConnell's. Waite was arraigned in court this morning. He was found guilty and sentenced to six months in the House of Correction.

Reception to Pastor.

Rev. and Mrs. George A. Strong Greeted by Parishioners

The wardens and vestry of Christ church tendered a reception to its rector, Rev. George A. Strong and Mrs. Strong, Wednesday evening at the Parish House. The reception was from 8 to 10 o'clock, and during those hours the rooms, which were prettily decorated with evergreen, were thronged with the parishioners of the church. About three hundred were present, including several clergymen, among whom Rev. Edwin N. Hardy, Rev. Carleton P. Mills, and Rev. Merrill Ward. The guests were presented by the wardens and vestry, who acted as ushers. Light refreshments were served. Mrs. Strong was presented with a handsome boquet of Jacqueminot roses, by the vestry.

Hiram Hitchcock Dead.

Mr. George H. Hitchcock of Foster street is at Hanover, N. H., today, attending the funeral services of his uncle, Mr. Hiram Hitchcock, who died in New York city on Monday. The deceased was for the greater part of 40 years one of the proprietors of the Fifth Avenue Hotel in that city, and was known to a number of Quincy people, having visited in this city. He was sick but a week, having contracted a cold at the dinner of the New England Society at the Waldorf-Astoria on Dec. 22, which developed into pneumonia.

Mr. Hitchcock was born in Claremont, N. H., Aug. 27, 1832. He was an instructor in Black River academy in Ludlow, Vt., until 1852, and soon after began his hotel career in New Orleans. During the summers he conducted the Nahant House in Boston. In 1859 he with others opened the Fifth Avenue Hotel. He travelled in Egypt, Syria, Cyprus, Greece and Italy, and obtained prominence as an archaeologist. He was a member of several societies, and one of the organizers of the Madison Square Garden Company, the Nicaragua Canal Company.

At the funeral services in New York Rev. Dr. C. H. Parkhurst officiated, and the floral tokens equaled anything ever seen in that line in New York.

Mrs. Dexter E. Wadsworth and Mrs. George T. Magee were the hosteses at the ladies' matinee whist of the Granite City club Wednesday afternoon. Prizes for the best scores were awarded as follows: A Sepia picture to Mrs. Peter Mead; decorated china teapot, to Mrs. H. E. Hardwick; silver spoons to Mrs. John R. Graham and Mrs. J. H. Penniman.

Now that skating has come again, Wollaston people begin to fear for their boys who go skating on the Third Hill reservoir. It is said that skating will be prohibited there, but boys care not for "no-tresspassing" and "please-keep-off" signs. There are no trees or bushes, nothing to save a boy with should he fall through, and the water is fully fifteen feet deep.

A High Mark.

The New York Almanac for 1901, issued by Chas. H. Fletcher of New York City, has set a high mark for similar publications during the new century, and shows remarkable enterprise on the part of the publisher when we consider that it is intended solely for free distribution. The numerous publications of this character are usually gotten up with the single idea of cheapness, while the thought of expense has certainly been set aside in the case of the New York Almanac.

The artistic colorings of the cover, the accuracy of its calendars and its fund of information all go to make it well worthy of perusal and preservation. It has innumerable hints for mothers as to the care of children. An unique page is the "Baby's Record" page, which is blank, to be filled in with baby's name, date of birth, cut first tooth, etc.

The whole is a very creditable piece of work and may be procured at any drug store or direct on request, free.

CHARGED WITH BIGAMY

G. W. Howard Said to Have One More Wife Than Law Allows

New York, Jan. 3.—George W. Howard, a consulting engineer of Boston, who came to this city about a year ago as the representative of the Whitney Elkins-Widener syndicate, and who has made his home in this city since that time, was arrested last night on a warrant charging him with bigamy. Howard had offices in this city since his arrival here from Boston, and has been a prominent figure in the social circles of Brooklyn. Last September Howard married Miss Helen Hawkes. After the ceremony the bride was presented with a handsome residence by her father, and after the wedding tour the couple returned to their new home. Howard, however, for alleged business reasons, brought his wife to this city and they put up at the New Amsterdam hotel.

Howard, it is said, frequently pleaded press of business and went to Boston, remaining away on the Fridays, Saturdays and Sundays of the week. The young wife's parents became suspicious and employed a detective to shadow their son-in-law at the request of his wife.

The detective says he secured the evidence on which yesterday's warrant was issued.

New Move of the Shoe Manufacturers

Chicago, Jan. 3.—The Record says that shoe manufacturers are planning the establishment of a National Shoe company to dominate the distribution of shoes to the retailers and eliminate the middleman's profits. The company it to consist of not more than 12 houses manufacturing dissimilar lines of shoes, with a total capital stock of $3,500,000. Depots will be established in every leading city in the United States.

Strike Promptly Ended

Havana, Jan. 3.—Two thousand stevedores struck here yesterday morning on account of the employment of non-union men. Governor General Wood notified the leaders that the police would preserve the peace, protect the non-union workmen, and also bring the ships to the wharves to offset the strike of lightermen. This brought the strikers to terms, and the strike was declared off during the afternoon.

Went Through the Ice

Hudson, N. Y., Jan. 3.—While Mrs. Herbert Shaw and Mrs. Jonas Miller, sisters, accompanied by Miss Amelia Spencer, were returning from a visit at Athens, across the ice in a sleigh, the ice broke. Two men who were drawing the sleigh succeeded in pulling Mrs. Miller out of the water, but the other two women were drowned.

Objections to Salt Trust's Prices

Kansas City, Jan. 3.—Twenty-five thousand tons of common salt, purchased in Lisbon, have been contracted for by the Armour Packing company of this city. "We found that prices have gone steadily up on account of the salt trust," says the company's purchasing agent, "and we went outside of this country for our salt."

A Four-Cornered Fight

St. Paul, Jan. 3.—The formal announcement of the senatorial candidacy of Chairman Bixby of the Dawes' Indian commission is made, making four avowed candidates for the seat of the late Cushman K. Davis. The re-election of Senator Nelson for the long term appears almost certain.

CITY CLERK'S Office, Dec. 31, 1900.

THE Record of birth in any city or town is always more or less unsatisfactory, owing to the fact that the canvasser finds difficulty in getting the necessary information. Names and dates are frequently given incorrectly. The importance of accuracy is shown in many cases where there is a question of descent, or inheritance of property, or collection of life insurance or pensions. The City Clerk's copy of the record is accepted as conclusive evidence in a court of law. While great pains are taken by this office to have the record correct experience shows that it is necessary that parents themselves should lend their assistance. In fact, the law requires that parents shall give notice to the City Clerk of the birth of their children, and provides a penalty for neglect to give such notice for the space of 40 days.

It often happens that only children or servants are at home when the canvasser makes his call, and the answers to his questions are open to doubt. A SURPRISE PARTY.

Presentation to Mr. and Mrs. Forbes Craig of South Quincy.

New Year's evening, to Mr. and Mrs. Forbes Craig of Independence avenue, was more than they had expected. In their calculations of what the first day of the century would bring them they did not reckon on an invasion of their fine new home by a host of their friends bent on merry-making and the giving of more tangible evidence of their good will and respect. The genial couple though taken by surprise welcomed with open arms, and did their best to entertain for the evening the happy crowd who filled their house with joyous laughter.

After the invaders were once inside it did not take them long to make known the chief object of their visit. The Rev. Dr. Todd and wife, happened to be there on a short call and Mr. Todd kindly consented to act as spokesman, and in a very happy speech, in the name of the assembled company, presented to Mr. and Mrs. Carig a handsome set of polished brass fire irons. The set included fender, andirons, stand with poker, shovel and tongs.

Mr. Craig, for himself and wife, thanked his friends for the splendid gifts they had so kindly placed on his hearth, as he was too overcome to speak at any length he simply wished everybody a Happy New Year and a pleasant evening.

As the company was large, the opportunities for a variety of amusements were many, so without any previous arrangements a program of vocal and instrumental music, and games was enjoyed with a gusto that was heart stirring.

Hot tea, coffee, tonics, sandwiches, cake, and ice cream, were frequently and generously handed round during the evening. Not until the small hours of the morning did the party leave for their homes.

Besides members of four generations of the Craig family there were included in the company: Mr. and Mrs. George Donald, Mr. and Mrs. William Birnie, Mr. and Mrs. William Pratt, Mr. and Mr. Alexander Hall, Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Deane, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Diack, Mr. and Mrs. Andrew McIntosh, Sr., Mr. and Mrs. James McLeod, Mr. and Mrs. William Laing, Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Cowe, Mr. and Mrs. D. T. Drummond, Mr. and Mrs. John Ross, Mr. and Mrs. John Birnie, Mr. John Capacioli, Mr. and Mrs. John Lawrie, Mr. and Mrs. William Farquharson, Mr. and Mrs. John Mason, Mrs. John Stronach, Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Kirkland, Mr. and Mrs. James Birnie, Mr. and Mrs. John Robbie, Mr. and Mrs. T. Bishop, Mr. and Mrs. John C. Murray, Mr. and Mrs. Alexander McGregor, Mr. Alexander Clark, Mr. and Mrs. James Craig, Mr. and Mrs. James Malcolm and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. James Milne, Mr. George Gordon, Mr. and Mrs. John Wood, Mr. Alexander Kenn, Mr. Robert Croft, Mr. A. C. Smith, Miss Matty Anderson, Miss Maggie Robertson, Mr. and Mrs. Mitchell, Mr. William Cummings, Mr. McInnis, also Mr. and Mrs. Robert Diack, friends who are visiting from Wilmington.

A Big Caribou.

Every sportsman who spends a few days hunting in the woods of Maine or Canada longs to bring home a set of antlers that for size and beauty cannot be surpassed. Some fine heads of deer and caribou with broad branching horns bearing fifteen to twenty-five points are sometimes exhibited by their proud owners.

Mr. E. J. Sheldon of Wollaston, who has recently returned from the coasts of Newfoundland and Labrador has succeeded after many years of careful searching in securing the head and antlers of a caribou which for size and other interesting features can hardly be surpassed. The head bears two sets of antlers of good size and shape, yet with two important dissimilarities from the ordinary antlers. Instead of two fans as they are called coming out from the base of the horns and meeting over the nose, there is a single fan growing from the left side of the head, extended straight out over the nose, fully eighteen inches in height, bearing fifteen points. In addition to this singular growth there is yet another horn about four inches in length growing out from under the right eye. On the corresponding side of the head is a cavity showing that a small horn once grew there also, tho' it has become detached.

Mr. Sheldon obtained this "lusus naturae" at Stick Point, Labrador. The animal, weighing nearly four hundred pounds was shot in September when the horns are at their best. The head and antlers were mounted in life like manner by a Boston taxidermist and now graces Mr. Sheldon's dining room. He is very proud of his prize, which probably has no duplicate in the United States.

—The City of Detroit, Mich., tried standard time for just one week. Then the astute Common Council voted to abandon it and return to local time, regardless of railroad time tables.

COUNCIL BANQUET.

Heads of Departments and Press As Guests at Essex Hotel.

The annual banquet of the City Council of 1900 was held Wednesday evening at Hotel Essex, Boston, and proved to be one of the pleasantest social gatherings ever held by a City Council. These banquets are supposed to be the occasions upon which those who have labored together for a year, legislating for the welfare of the city, take their final leave of each other. This Council, however, will part at an adjourned meeting to be held Friday evening.

It was a little after 7 o'clock when the Councilmen and invited guests took seats about the table which was arranged in the shape of a horse shoe. President Bryant occupied the seat at the heel of the shoe, while Mayor Hall sat on his right and City Solicitor Sears at his left. The usual roll call was omitted, but had it been called it would have showed the absent members to have been Councilmen Cleverly, Newcomb, Johnson, Hogan, Callahan and Freeman. The latter's absence was explained by one gentleman who said he was probably playing golf somewhere.

The guests of the evening were Mayor Hall, City Solicitor R. A. Sears, Commissioner C. F. Knowlton, City Messenger, Harry W. Tirrell, City Engineer, Hamilton Flood; Tax Collector A. L. Baker; Principal Assessor James Thompson; Chief Engineer, P. J. Williams; Chief of Police, Walter H. Ripley; Clerk of the Council, Christophen A. Spear; Foreman of the Water Department, Jed. Gleason. The newspaper men were T. J. Collins, W. J. Parker, Fred F. Green and George T. Magee.

The menu provided was as follows:

Cotuits on shell.
Cream of Celery aux Croutons.
Consomme Printaniere.
Olives, Celery, Radishes.
Broiled Bluefish Maitre d'Hotel.
Cucumbers Potatoes Parisienne.
Larded Tenderloin of Beef with Mushrooms.
String Beans, Potatoes Roasted.
Sorbet Creme d'Menthe.
Roast American Pheasant, Bread Sonce, Currant Jelly.
Lettice Mayonnaise.
Fancy Creams, Assorted Cake.
Roquefort Cheese, Toasted Saltines.
Coffee.

While the several courses were being partaken of music was furnished by an orchestra. Between selections the air was full of witticisms, many of which were directed at Councilman Packard, who took them good naturedly and hit back in his inimitable manner.

At the conclusion of the dinner, Councilman Gassett was introduced. He rendered several pleasing vocal selections.

President Bryant then said, that as the Councilmen had talked all the year, it was proposed that what speaking there was should come from the guests, and that the first speaker he would introduce was Mayor Hall.

His Honor expressed his thanks and pleasure at being present, and spoke of the cementing together of the friendships that had been made. During the year there is that determined effort of accomplishment that brings out the fire, but tonight all is forgotten. They have striven with intense activity to accomplish those things the people desire, there has been that friendly clash. But in the final moment when the time has come, when the duties, the privaleges and the opportunities are ended, there has been that gathering together and the hand shake that makes these moments among the sweetest things of life. We have finished the work we have striven to accomplish, and so we turn the page, close the book, and meet around this board to cement the good feeling for all time, and when the record of life on earth is completed there shall come to us the sympathetic love of these earthly battles which we have fought.

City Messenger Tirrell was the next speaker. His remarks were brief as he said he was deathly sick. He however expressed his pleasure at being present.

President Bryant said he desired at this time to express his thanks to the faithful and efficient aid rendered by Clerk of Council, C. A. Spear, and he would like to hear a few words from him.

Mr. Spear said he was pleased to be present, and was thankful for the complimentary remarks. He then wished all a Happy New Year.

City Solicitor Sears said he was the only man who ever had a special Council meeting on his account, to raise his salary. He was pleased to see the Council rub it into Councilman Packard Tuesday evening, but they did not mention the axes he had to grind. He was also pleased at the way the committee "got it." He then spoke briefly of friendship, for without friends man can accomplish nothing. Friends in joy, friends in sorrow and suffering when a friend is dearest. And after a year of rubbing it into each other, I find you shaking hands in friendship and confidence and love one for the other. Nothing has ever been heard against the honor of any member of our City Government and he prayed God it may continue so.

Principal Assessor Thompson said he always had a weakness for the City Council, and he counted the years he had served as Councilman among the pleasantest of his life. It was a high honor and he would impress it upon all here and upon young men that among their aspirations should be to be a member of the City Council. You regulate the large expenditure of money. It lays in your hands what the tax rate shall be. What a lesson it was at the last Council meeting when the school lot was being acted upon, the conscientious manner in which men expressed their ideas. He would impress the importance of a personal investigation of every matter that comes before the Council. He was free to say that the committee made one of the best reports he ever heard.

Commissioner Knowlton considered it a great privilege to be invited to attend a banquet like this, where the outgoing Councilmen shake hands with those that remain and part friends. He spoke of the friendship existing between the Council and himself. He never knew a Council where they had so little friction. Today he felt every member of the Council was his friend. During the year 103 orders had come to his department involving an expenditure of $240,000 added to which was $40,000 coming over from last year for a school house. It was no small task to spend that amount and he counted what success he had was due to the confidence and support and backing by His Honor, the Mayor, and every member of the Council. He felt that he had received a dollar's worth of work for every dollar he had expended. He also paid a tribute to Mr. Gleason, his foreman in the Water department. I came to Quincy four years ago knowing no one I could call friend. Today I feel every member of the Council is my friend.

Tax Collector Baker said there never was a bed of roses without a thorn. No one could collect taxes and do it honestly without some thorns. He wished to extend his thanks for the increase of his salary for six months work. He only wished he had six months more for the same salary. Was glad that, though the Councils that have been so one-sided politically, there has been little politics, and that all have acted honestly, although some voted against the Tax Collector's salary. Few knew the amount of work in his department. He found it was all he could do, with his clerks, to keep his work up, by working from 8 to 12 and from 2 to 5.

Chief Ripley said as far as his department, it did not amount to much, as it had little to do with. What had been done was by good luck. Quincy was fortunate it had so little vandalism. He knew nothing new the police had received since he first became a constable in 1879. He also spoke of the lockup which he called deplorable.

Chief Williams thanked the Council for all they had done for the Fire Department. He had asked for nothing they had not given him, even to increasing his salary. When a box was pulled the department could be depended upon to do its duty. But they could do better work with better salary.

City Engineer Flood never made speeches, but he was glad to be present. Upon request he explained the method of numbering streets.

The last speaker was Councilman Smith, whom President Bryant said was the only member of the Council who had not addressed him during the year.

Upon this occasion, Councilman Smith proved, when occasion required, he could speak.

TAX COLLECTOR.

Not Six Months Services But Whole Time Given to City.

Editors of the Daily Ledger:

Having been interviewed by a score or more citizens in reference to the action of the City Council in adjustment of the Tax Collector's salary, I would say, I have the highest regard for any Councilman who from an intelligent standpoint votes to reduce the salary of a city official which in his judgment is not giving to the city a fair return for salary paid.

But any member of a City Council, who will allow personal spite or prejudice instead of the city's interest to influence his vote in the Council, or a chairman of a committee will after careful investigation recommend a salary, of fourteen hundred dollars for a city official, and then admit in the Council that he does not know whether the incumbent of the office is working six months or twelve out of the year, is unworthy the trust placed in him and unfit to fill such responsible position.

The tax collector department is no bed of roses. During the past year my whole time during city office hours has been given to the office, and I do not hesitate to say that whoever fills the position for this year, without a careful, constant, and intelligent service the wheels of the city machinery will often go slow or stop for want of lubrication.

The changing of summons and cost money from the tax collector to the city treasury is a movement in the right direction, and should have been done years ago. There is no good reason why a hangman should have to look to his victim for pay for his service. Since Quincy has been a city, for political reasons, or otherwise, the collection department has been run entirely too loose, but during the past few years the reports will show that we are collecting within one per cent. of our tax levy.

A. Lincoln Baker, Collector.

Handsome Testimonial.

Mr. Edward E. Hoxie, a native of Plymouth, but for quite a number of years a citizen of Quincy, had a pleasing incident occur in his Masonic experience at the recent December Convocation of St. Stephen's Royal Arch Chapter of that city, in which for the past two years he has been seated in the Oriental chair as M. E. H. P. On that evening his successor was installed and a presentation was made to Ex. Comp. Hoxie of a Past High Priest's jewel of massive gold, with breast plate set in gems of varied colors representing the 12 tribes of Israel, the whole forming a valuable testimonial fraught with good will of the chapter, in appreciation of his services during the two terms of office.

The recipient stands excellently as a Mason and a citizen in his adopted city, while still retaining strong interest in the town of his birth, where he has many friends who will be pleased to learn, through the Memorial, of the honors and esteem to which he has attained.—Old Colony Memorial.

NEW HOUSES
FOR SALE.

Just to remind you that I have another lot of houses nearly completed, I will list these three bargains:

Many were disappointed on the last lot so be on hand early if you would be in it.

Also, one of eight rooms and bath, Independence avenue; all modern improvements, bounds on two streets, can sell for $500 less than real value. This house is of the popular size to suit any business man, and is very roomy and convenient. I don't like to have other builders know how I am cutting prices, but $3,000 buys this one, look at it and compare with others you see building.

Another, and a money maker for some one with only an ounce of pluck. This is a two-family House, 5 rooms and bath each, and 60 foot lot, $3,000. Pay in $500 on this and I will guarantee you a twenty five per cent. investment for one year; who would dare invest in a twenty-five per cent. GUARANTEED investment.

Remember these houses are built by competent workmen, by the day, of the best material, and are personally superintended by the owner, are but four minutes to station, electrics pass, and everything is most desirable as a residential section. All houses are connected with sewer and cellars are perfectly dry.

Come and look them over and select one that suits you. Can be seen any day.

A RISING OF THE DUTCH

Considered Likely to Occur Throughout Cape Colony

THE SITUATION IS PERILOUS

From the British Point of View—Guns to Be Landed at Cape Town From a Battleship — Greatest Trouble Appears to Be Scarcity of Horses

London, Jan. 3.—A general rising in Cape Colony is feared. The situation has become alarming during the past 24 hours. The opinion in Cape Town is that England has not sufficiently awakened to the danger of the situation. The Cape Dutch are believed to be joining the invading Boers in large numbers. Commandoes are appearing in the most unexpected places.

A dispatch from Cape Town says: The invaders have reached Glenharry, a few miles north of Graaf Reinet, in the heart of the disaffected portion of the Colony. The British battleship Monarch will land guns tomorrow at Cape Town, as a precautionary measure. The situation is undoubtedly serious.

It is true that the Dutch have not joined the invaders in any considerable numbers, but a lack of arms is believed to be the true reason for abstention. In many places horses are freely offered and information supplied to the Boers.

The early proclamation of martial law in the Cape Town division is expected. This division does not include Cape Town itself.

The latest reports show the situation to be generally as follows:

Kurman, if still uninvested, probably soon will be. Griqualand West is filled with small parties of Boers, who are working south toward Priesta, for the purpose of co-operating with or supporting Commandant Hertzog, whose advance parties are in the neighborhood of Fraserburg.

In the eastern part of the Colony the advance guard of the Boers is close to Mariasburg, about 25 miles northeast of Cradock.

Martial law has been proclaimed in the Worcester, Ceres, Prince Albert, Fraserburg and Sutherland divisions.

The great trouble is the scarcity of horses. Seven hundred Boers have broken through the cordon at Zuurberg and are advancing upon Richmond. The magistrate there reports that they are burning and looting a few miles from that town.

Lord Methuen is concentrating a force at Vryburg, whither a thousand troops have been sent from Kimberley, and others from northern towns, to deal with a commando that is raiding around Kukuman.

The Boers have reoccupied Jagersfontein, which, together with Fauresmith, the British evacuated on Christmas day. The convoy of retiring inhabitants, with hundreds of wagons, extended for seven miles. It was a mournful spectacle. Camp was pitched at Edenburg. The motive for the evacuation was the difficulty of maintaining food supplies so far from the railway.

The steamer Canada, having Lord Roberts on board, anchared off Osborne at 11:45 a. m., yesterday.

When Lord Roberts reached Osborne House the queen was out driving, and he conversed with the princesses while waiting for her to return. The audience lasted a quarter of an hour. Lord Roberts was then taken to Southampton by the royal yacht Alberta, and went on board the Canada, where he spent the night.

The queen bestowed an earldom on Lord Roberts, with a special remainder for his daughters. He was also made a Knight of the Garter.

A "remainder" is a provision for the passage of a patent of nobility to a special successor or line of succession, in default of male issue on the decease of a present holder.

Want Twelve Percent Increase

Halifax, Jan. 3.—The position of the Nova Scotia coal miners' strike is not materially changed. Members of the Workmen's association at Springhill met and decided not to abide by the 10 days of grace. They notified Manager Cowans that they would join the strike at the mines in Pictou unless the 12 percent increase of wages was granted in two days.

Dwellings and Factory to Be Built

Cape May, Jan. 3.—The trustees of the Baron De Hirsch fund will now develop the town of Woodbine for the benefit of the Russian Jews. They have given out a contract for the erection of 50 dwellings and one large factory. The fund has now four progressive colonies in southern New Jersey.

Severed Artery In His Side

Woonsocket, R. I., Jan. 3.—While Albert M. Truesdale, 14 years old, was engaged in cutting off waste from a filling bobbin with a sharp knife in the Lippitt woolen mill, the blade slipped and penetrated his left side, severing an artery. The lad bled profusely and died before he could be taken to his home.

Increase In Value of Silver

Washington, Jan. 3.—The quarterly estimate of the value of foreign coins made by the director of the mint shows that the value of silver has increased during the last three months 2.41-1000 percent. This increase is accounted for by the abnormal demand for Mexican silver in China.

Omaha, Jan. 3.—Edward A. Cudahy, Jr., failed yesterday to identify J. J. Crowe as one of the men who kidnapped him. Crowe was given a hearing in court, but as no charge was preferred the case was dismissed.

WENT ON TO SUMMIT

Newspaper Man Supposed to Have Been Lost Turns Up All Right

Gorham, N. H., Jan. 3.—W. H. Bodwell, the Boston newspaper correspondent, who was lost in a storm Monday on Mt. Washington, was found yesterday safely sheltered in the stage house of the Summit House by a searching party. Bodwell, with two others, started to go up the mountain on foot to take pictures, and as the correspondent was greatly fatigued by the climb he was left at the Half Way House by his associates, who continued on to the summit. When the men returned Bodwell had disappeared, and on Tuesday his tracks were followed to a dangerous precipice. They came down the mountain and reported the occurrence and searching parties started out.

Bodwell states that after his friends left him he refreshed himself at the Half Way House, and on Tuesday started up the mountain. As it was stormy it is thought he passed them as they were coming down without seeing them. He was unable to get photographs on account of the weather conditions, and reaching the top of the mountain, and being unable to get into the hotel, he made himself comfortable in the coach house. He had taken along some provisions so that he suffered no discomfort, and he was considerably surprised to learn that searchers had been looking for him. He came down the mountain with the party, and said that he intended to start for home at once.

Half a Dozen Passengers Hurt

Hartford, Jan. 3.—There was a bad wreck on the Central New England railroad near Cottage Grove, yesterday. A passenger train, consisting of engine, tender, combination smoking car and one coach left the track. The engine turned completely over, but the engineer and fireman escaped with only a few bruises. Six passengers were injured. The engine was running backward, and the tender left the track through some unexplained cause. The first coach fell against the engine, which probably saved the lives of the passengers.

What Lawson Wants

Boston, Jan. 3.—The special development in the cup defending yacht line yesterday was a statement of Thomas W. Lawson, giving prominence to his desire to have Captain Haff in command of the new boat, and a repudiation of all claims that he is interested in the wooden centerboard craft that Hanley of Quincy Point wants to build. He has made Captain Watson an offer to become reserve and advisory captain of the new boat, and the offer holds good until such time as it can be definitely settled.

Nine Italians Held For Trial

Barre, Vt., Jan. 3.—The 10 Italians who were arrested on the charge of attempting to assassinate Chief of Police Brown were taken before Judge Fay yesterday afternoon and the cases of nine of them were continued two weeks. One of the prisoners, Innocente Celli, against whom the cherges were not as serious as in the cases of the others, was released on $1000 bail, which was furnished by a fellow countryman. The other nine were held without bail.

Pluggers Closely Bunched

Boston, Jan. 3.—With but three inches to spare, Kaeser, the German, crossed the finish line in the lead on the last mile of the third day of racing at Park Square Garden. Walthour was his closest competitor, and the last man in the lot was not 10 yards in the rear. The distance at the end of the day was 582 miles, 4 laps. The day brought but one retirement, that of Gougoltz. His leg will have to go into a splint for a week or two.

A Frightful Experience

Stamford, Conn., Jan. 3.—Clinging to an oyster stake in the middle of the sound for over an hour, with the thermometer below the freezing point, and the waves breaking over him frequently was the experience of George Collins of Greenwich. Collins was planting seed oysters when his craft was overturned. He swam a quarter of a mile to an oyster stake, and clung there until rescued by John E. Patterson.

His Mission Was Successful

Boston, Jan. 3.—United States Secret Service Detective Gammon of Pittsburg, who was especially detailed to work up the fraudulent naturalization cases in this city, has completed his work here, and left last night for Pittsburg. Some half a dozen fraudulent naturalization cases have been unearthed, and the principals therein either sent to jail or forced to pay heavy fines.

Harmonizing Rubber Interests

Boston, Jan. 3.—The Transcript says that the United States Rubber company will not make the threatened 25 per cent cut in prices, as proposed, because of the fact that the Hood Rubber company has agreed to consider a proposition for the sale of its business to interests friendly to the United States company. Pending these negotiations no change in prices will be made.

Evidently Contemplated Suicide

Lowell, Mass., Jan. 3.—Emil Lebland, who was arrested here yesterday for larceny, was found a short time after his arrest kneeling in his cell evidently praying. Close examination disclosed the fact that he had formed a slip noose with his necktie and suspenders. It is believed that he contemplated suicide.

Doctors Arrived Too Late

A DISTURBER OF PEACE

Russia Said to Be Trying to Sow Seeds of Dissension

AN AGREEMENT WITH CHINA

By Which Manchuria Virtually Becomes a Russian Protectorate—Said to Be Utterly at Variance With Her Previously Professed Attitude

London, Jan. 3.—The Pekin correspondent of The Daily Mail, wiring Jan. 1, says:

"Russia, by conciliation, is trying to secure special advantages and there is a strong belief that she will receive American support. It is hinted that Russia inspired unfounded charges of barbarity against the German troops, her motive being to sow dissension between Great Britain and Germany."

In a dispatch to The Times from Pekin, dated Dec. 31, Dr. Morrison gives the text of the Russo-Chinese agreement for the Russian protection of the Manchuria province of Fen-Ting. Russia, he says, consents that China shall resume the civil government on the following conditions:

First—The Tartar general, Tseng, undertakes to protect and pacify the province, and to assist in the construction of the railroad.

Second—He must kindly treat, feed and lodge Russians engaged in the military occupation, and in the protection of the railway.

Third—He must disarm and disband the Chinese soldiery, delivering to the Russians all munitions of war in such arsenals as the Russians have not yet occupied.

Fourth—All forts and defenses in the province, not occupied by the Russians and all powder magazines not required by them must be dismantled in the presense of Russian officials.

Fifth—Niu-Chwang and other places now in Russian occupation shall be restored to the Chinese civil authorities when Russia is satisfied that the pacification of the province is complete.

Sixth—The Chinese shall maintain law and order by local police under a Tartar general.

Seventh—A Russian political resident, with general powers of control, shall be stationed at Mukden, to whom the Tartar general, Tseng, must give all information respecting any important measure.

Eighth—In the event of the local police being insufficient for any emergency, General Tseng will notify the Russian resident and invite Russia to send reinforcements.

Ninth—The Russian text shall be the standard.

"The functions given to the Russian resident," says Dr. Morrison, "are similar to those of the Russian resident in Bokhara, or those of the British residents in the native states of India.

"The agreement will necessarily be followed by similar agreements with reference to the other two provinces. Then Manchuria will be de facto a Russian protectorate, Russia by a pre-existing arrangement having already the right to maintain all troops necessary for the protection of the railway."

Commenting upon the information transmitted by Dr. Morrison, The Times says: "The problem raised is very serious. The agreement is utterly irreconcilable with Russia's professed attitude toward China and the assurances she has volunteered to the powers. In fact, the situation contemplated by the Anglo-German agreement seems definitely to confront us."

Pleads Guilty of Forgery

New York, Jan. 3.—Charles R. Westervelt, former cashier of the Dime Savings institution of Newark, N. J., yesterday entered a plea of guilty to two indictments for forgery, and not guilty to two indictments of embezzlement. The amount he is charged with embezzling is $56,500.

Eighteen Years For Killing Infant

Vessel Probably Doomed

Pensacola, Fla., Jan. 3.—The large Russian ship Yorkland, bound for Mobile, went ashore on the outside beach, 30 miles from Pensacola. Her crew was rescued, but it is feared the vessel will be a total loss.

Black Men as Lynchers

Quitman, Ga., Jan. 3.—A Negro was lynched by a mob of his own color last night, nine miles north of Quitman, for assaulting a small negro girl.

HURRY UP!

Everywhere one hears that expression "hurry up!" It is a genuine Americanism expressive of the "rush" in which we live. Nothing is swift enough for us. We race against steam and lightning and find them slow. We grudge the time given to eating, and rush through meals as though life depended upon our haste.

Life does depend on our haste, but not in that sense. Look at the obituary columns of the papers and see how many prominent men are carried away by "stomach trouble," "acute indigestion" and other related diseases. Their lives have in general been sacrificed to the haste and rush of business which overlooked the fact that food can only nourish the body when digested and assimilated and that the digestive and assimilative processes can't be hurried.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, cures diseases of the stomach and the associated organs of digestion and nutrition. The source of all physical strength is food, properly digested and perfectly assimilated. By enabling the perfect digestion and assimilation of food "Golden Medical Discovery" increases and enriches the blood supply and sends new strength to every organ of the body.

"I was at one time as I thought almost at death's door," writes Mr. J. S. Bell, of Leando, Van Buren Co., Iowa. "I was confined to my house and part of the time to my bed. I had taken quantities of medicines but they only seemed to feed the disease; but I must say that 'Golden Medical Discovery' has cured me, and to-day I am stouter than I have been for twenty years. I am now forty-three years old."

FREE. Dr. Pierce's Medical Adviser sent free to you on receipt of stamps to pay expense of mailing only. Send thirty-one one-cent stamps for cloth bound book or twenty-one stamps for paper covers to Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

HURRY UP!

Everywhere one hears that expression "hurry up!" It is a genuine Americanism expressive of the "rush" in which we live. Nothing is swift enough for us. We race against steam and lightning and find them slow. We grudge the time given to eating, and rush through meals as though life depended upon our haste.

Life does depend on our haste, but not in that sense. Look at the obituary columns of the papers and see how many prominent men are carried away by "stomach trouble," "acute indigestion" and other related diseases. Their lives have in general been sacrificed to the haste and rush of business which overlooked the fact that food can only nourish the body when digested and assimilated and that the digestive and assimilative processes can't be hurried.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, cures diseases of the stomach and the associated organs of digestion and nutrition. The source of all physical strength is food, properly digested and perfectly assimilated. By enabling the perfect digestion and assimilation of food "Golden Medical Discovery" increases and enriches the blood supply and sends new strength to every organ of the body.

"I was at one time as I thought almost at death's door," writes Mr. J. S. Bell, of Leando, Van Buren Co., Iowa. "I was confined to my house and part of the time to my bed. I had taken quantities of medicines but they only seemed to feed the disease; but I must say that 'Golden Medical Discovery' has cured me, and to-day I am stouter than I have been for twenty years. I am now forty-three years old."

FREE. Dr. Pierce's Medical Adviser sent free to you on receipt of stamps to pay expense of mailing only. Send thirty-one one-cent stamps for cloth bound book or twenty-one stamps for paper covers to Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

PRELIMINARY SKIRMISH

On Disfranchisement Question Favors the Democrats

SIGNIFICANT LANGUIDNESS

Revealed by Republicans Toward the Project — Appeared Quite Willing That Democrats Should Carry Their Point—Army Bill In the Senate

Washington, Jan. 4.—The radical element among the house Republicans who favor cutting down the representation from the southern states in which the franchise is abridged suffered defeat yesterday because a number of their colleagues refused to act with them. The issue was precipitated quite unexpectedly. The leaders had decreed that the reapportionment bill should be taken up, but before it could be called Mr. Olmstead of Pennsylvania offered as a matter of privilege a resolution reciting the alleged abridgment of the suffrage in Louisiana, Mississippi, South Carolina and North Carolina, and directing the committee on census to investigate and report the facts to the house in order that a constitutional basis of representation could be established for those states.

The resolution created a sensation. It was a surprise even to several of the Republican leaders. The leaders on the Democratic side sought in vain to head off the resolution with points of order, but the speaker ruled against them. They then began a filibuster, openly avowing that they would fight every proposition looking to the reduction of representation from the southern states to the bitter end. Several of the Republicans were secretly in sympathy with them, and their indifference to the fate of the Olmstead resolution in the end gave the opposition the victory of yesterday. Many of them quietly paired with absent Democrats, leaving their absent colleagues unpaired.

These tests of strength revealed a significant languidness among Republicans toward the project. The cloak rooms were filled with Republicans who were quite willing that the Democrats should carry their point. It is known that the president is opposed to the Crumpacker idea, and in these circumstances any agitation of it merely means a delay of the apportionment bill, and that is something that is not desired. The fact that out of about 188 Republicans in the house only 81 could be mustered for this proposal was significant of the real feeling. Mr. Hopkins, chairman of the census committee, is against the plan, saying that we lack data for its proper carrying out.

The Massachusetts Republicans are strongly in favor of the Crumpacker idea.

The situation with reference to the apportionment bill is greatly complicated as a result of the injection of the Olmstead resolution. Chairman Hopkins, however, is confident of victory for his bill.

Without a murmur of dissent and without a word of comment, the senate yesterday displaced the shipping subsidy bill from its privileged position as "unfinished business" and substituted for it the army reorganization bill. Since the second day of the present session the shipping bill had been the unfinished business, with the understanding that it should not interfere with the consideration of the army re-organization bill or of appropriation bills.

When the senate convened yesterday, in its first session of the 20th century, the army bill was taken up, with a view to pressing it to a final vote as soon as possible. Its consideration proceeded until 2 o'clock—the end of the morning hour—when the subsidy bill was laid before the senate. Mr. Pettigrew of South Dakota then objected to a request for unanimous consent to continue the discussion of the army bill. By a vote of the senate the consideration of the bill was continued, and the subsidy bill sent back to the calendar.

Can't Have Lawshe Report

Washington, Jan. 4.—The president sent to the senate a reply to the Bacon resolution, asking the secretary of war to transmit to the senate the Lawshe report upon the Cuban postal scandal. The president states that for reasons given by the secretary of war, he deems it incompatible with the interests of the public service to comply with the senate's request. Secretary Root had stated that criminals are now being prosecuted, and that for that reason it is deemed inadvisable to make public the facts contained in this report.

Alleged Ill-Treatment of a Marine

Washington, Jan. 4.—The navy department has called upon the superintendent of the naval academy for a report upon a charge to the effect that a marine named Hobart Green had died at Annapolis, Dec. 14, from ill treatment while sick. It is alleged that Green was obliged to march while ill from pneumonia, and that the decks were washed beneath him while he lay in his hammock on the Santee.

SAYS HE HAS ONLY ONE WIFE

But Howard Admits That He Passed as the Husband of Two

New York, Jan. 4.—George W. Howard, superintendent of the Lexington avenue branch of the Metropolitan railway, charged with bigamy, pleaded not guilty in court at Brooklyn yesterday, and his examination was set for Jan 8.

Attached to the warrant on which Howard was arrested is the original certificate of Howard's marriage on Aug. 19, 1890, at Cambridge, Mass., with Anna R. Ray of Red Beach, Me., by Rev. Joseph Lambert. In addition there is a certificate of the record of the marriage on Aug. 21, 1890, furnished by Albert M. Pearce, city clerk of Cambridge, Mass.

The arrest of Howard is a tremendous shock to fashionable society in Brooklyn. His marriage to Miss Hawkes on Sept. 10 last was attended by persons prominent socially and politically, and the presents showered on the pair were valued at $100,000.

William A. Price was accepted by the district attorney as Howard's bondsman, and the accused was allowed to go on the bail Price had furnished.

In a statement to a reporter, Howard said: "I am innocent. I was never married before I met Miss Hawkes. She is my only wife."

"Do you deny that Mrs. George Howard in Cambridge is your wife?" Howord was asked.

"Certainly I do; she is not my wife," answered the prisoner.

"But you lived with her, and passed as her husband?"

"Yes, I lived with her as her husband, but I was never married to her, nor to any one else except Miss Hawkes."

Howard denied that he contemplated suicide, as he was alleged to have threatened in a telephone message to his father-in-law.

Paris' Big Job of Purification

Paris, Jan. 4.—The sweeping police measures taken to purify Paris in consequence of the alarming situation created by the closing of the exposition and the consequent throwing out of employment of thousands of people who were dependent upon it for a living and who in many cases were cast upon the streets, have resulted in no fewer than 12,970 arrests during the month of December.

Banker Couldn't Raise $1500

New York, Jan. 4.—Walter H. Gates who is described as a banker and broker, was arrested yesterday in an action brought against him by William H. Rhodes for the recovery of $2093 which Rhoads claims he advanced to Gates and never received an accounting. Bail was fixed at $1500, and as Gates could not secure a bond for that sum he was locked up in jail.

Dennis Is Unlucky

Northampton, Mass., Jan. 4.—G Dennis of Boston, reported to have been arrested in Nebraska on suspicion of being Pat Crowe, wanted in the Cudahy kidnapping case, is the same individual arrested here a year ago while gathering botanical specimens. At that time it was thought he had escaped from an insane asylum.

Gotham Policeman Killed

New York, Jan. 4.—Policeman J. F. O'Flaherty died last night from a pistol shot wound through the brain. The wife of the policeman is under arrest, as she was in the room where the fatal shot was fired.

To Go on Retired List

Washington, Jan. 4.—The navy department has issued orders detaching Rear Admiral Kautz from his post as commander-in-chief of the Pacific station, to take effect Jan. 28. Admiral Kautz's retirement takes place soon after.

Needed by the Boys Abroad

Washington, Jan. 4.—The secretary of war has submitted to congress an additional deficiency estimate of $3,000,000 for army subsistence, caused chiefly by the heavy demands made by the forces in China and the Philippines.

A DENIAL FROM CHAFFEE

United States Troops Did Not Go on Looting Expedition

NO OFFENSIVE OPERATIONS

Movement Was to Investigate Report of Murder of Christians—Earl Li and Prince Ching Will Sign Agreement as Soon as It Is Ready

Washington, Jan. 4.—General Chaffee has cleared himself of any suspicion of participating in any of the looting expeditions which are said in some quarters to be going on in China under the disguise of punative expeditions.

His report of the conditions under which he took his last excursion from Pekin has been received at the war department by cable from Pekin.

The officials here were surprised when they saw the press reports stating that the American troops in Pekin, which were distinctly designated as legation guards, and as such were to have no part in ordinary military operations, had gone out into the country to cooperate with a German expeditionary force.

From the nature of General Chaffee's cablegram it would appear that the officials had communicated with him on this subject, and invited the explanation which is afforded in the following cablegram:

"Pekin, Jan. 2.—Colonel Theodore J. Wint returned. Movement simply to verify report that Christians had been murdered and secure arrest of guilty parties if allegations found true.

"Germans from Tientsin had been in country. Take no part in offensive operations; patrol country between Pekin, Hoshiwu and Chang Kiawan occasionally for the purpose of order.

(Signed.) "Chaffee."

A dispatch from Pekin announces that at a meeting of the foreign ministers yesterday it was announced that Li Hung Chang and Prince Ching were prepared to sign an agreement as soon as it was ready for signature.

Li Hung Chang desires to conduct the peace negotiations to a conclusion, and the physicians attending him think he might be taken to the Spanish legation, where the conferences have been held, if the weather is favorable.

Rumor of Waldersee's Death

Paris, Jan. 4.—Le Journal reports, under reserve, the death of Count Von Waldersee, the rumor being that he was killed by an officer of the allied troops, the circumstances not being related. It is stated that the rumor is current in Berlin, where it is not confirmed.

Freed Only to Be Lynched

Rome, Ga., Jan. 4.—George Reed, charged with an attempted assault on Mrs. J. M. Lockyear, was hanged yesterday to a tree, after which his body was rifled with bullets by a mob of citizens. The negro had been taken before Mrs. Lockyear, but she failed to identify him. The judge of the superior court, not seeing any reason for holding Reed, and fearing an attack on the jail, ordered the sheriff to release him. The mob, learning of the release, found Reed and lynched him.

Looking For Canadian Trade

Buffalo, Jan. 4.—A special to The News from Toronto says: Joseph Leiter of Chicago is negotiating for the control of the Canadian meat packing trade. City packers admit that the trade in Canada would be far more profitable if a combination of the packing houses could be engineered, but they do not think Leiter can do it. The capital of Ontario packing houses is over $5,000,000.

Going Before Grand Jury

New York, Jan. 4.—Morton L. Mortimer, actuary of the Provident Savings and Life Assurance society, and John M. Van Kleeck, assistant actuary of the same concern, who were arrested and admitted to bail in the sum of $2000 on a charge of grand larceny, waived examination in police court yesterday and were held for the grand jury.

Cardenas Strike Extending

Havana, Jan. 4.—The strike of the stevedores and sugar handlers at Cardenas is growing serious. Several hundred are out and they refuse to allow others to work. The strike has extended to all classes of ship laborers, as well as to those employed in lumber yards and mills.

The valuable private libraries of the city seem to be fated. In recent years the libraries of Dr. Joseph M. Sheahan, Herbert M. Federhen, and now the most valuable of all, that of Dr. William Everett, has suffered from disastrous fires. Such a library as that of Dr. Everett has an intrinsic value to the owner which cannot be measured in dollars and cents, and the people generally sympathize with him over his loss.

The Republican State Committee has taken the initiative and will seek to secure changes in the laws of the State relative to registration, the caucuses and elections. At present the laws are satisfactory to no one, and it is expected that the Democratic State Committee will cooperate and secure desired changes. It is proposed to give more opportunities during the year to get registered, to prevent those of one party voting in caucuses of the other party, to arrange the ballot so that a man can vote a straight ticket with one cross, and to make many other changes.

Economize, economize, was a salient feature of the inaugural address of Governor Crane on Wednesday, and the legislature and the officials now know that His Excellency means to practice as well as preach. The net actual debt of Massachusetts showed big increases Jan. 1, 1898, 1899 and 1900, over the preceding years, the total increase being over six million dollars. Gov. Crane was able to report a reduction during his year from $16,869,171.04, to $11,704,166.45, so that today the net debt is less that a million dollars larger than on Jan. 1, 1897. If large undertakings are postponed, commissions consolidated, and salaries kept down as Gov. Crane desires, he will make a still better showing a year hence, and the taxpayers will be relieved of some of the heavy burden of taxation.

Quincy is one of the few cities and towns of the Commonwealth which had the distinction of being mentioned in the inaugural address of Gov. Crane. Not only once but twice, in connnection with the Metropolitan high level sewer to be constructed through our city. In speaking of the development of industries in the State, the Governor might have included the Quincy ship yard which is now building a cruiser for the U. S. Navy, and will also build the first battleships ever constructed in New England. Quincy also very much in the Metropolitan to which was devoted nearly rter of the address. The itan water debt amounts to 21 parks debt

Fire Raises Havoc at the Colonial Residence of Dr. Everett.

All The Apparatus and Firemen Respond and Have a Hard Fight.

The most disastrous fire that Quincy has had since the Music Hall building a year ago, occurred Thursday afternoon, shortly after 3 o'clock, when the large mansion of Dr. William Everett on Miller Stile road one of the old landmarks was badly gutted, and many of Dr. Everett's valuable books destroyed.

There was but one servant in the house at the time and she was employed in the rear of the house. Hearing a crackling noise she opened the door to investigate when the flames burst upon her. She rang the bell to call the man and shouted for help. At about the same time, an employe in Whicher's factory on Union street saw the smoke and flames in the front part of the house. He rushed down stairs and pulled in Box 171, which is located on that building. At about the same time Henry Chubbuck, who was at work about Faxon hall, also saw the fire and pulled Box 19, located at the corner of Revere road and Chestnut street. Both boxes being of the non-interfering kind, box 19 did not strike until Box 171 had been completed. The sounding of the second box was taken by the apparatus in the outlying districts to be a general alarm, and in a few minutes after the first box sounded all the apparatus of the city was hurrying to the scene.

When the first piece of apparatus arrived the entire front part of the house was a roaring furnace, and the flames were shooting out through many of the large windows. Two streams were laid from the hydrant in front of the residence of Paul R. Blackmur on Elm street, while two more were laid from the hydrant near the corner of Elm and Union streets, and when the other apparatus arrived still two more were laid from the hydrant in front of Faxon hall, and one from Bigelow street.

The fire, which apparently started in the library, on the south-east corner of the house, run across to the room in the southwest corner and had gone up between the walls and had spread all over the attic of the building, and fire soon appeared from under the eaves at the northerly end of the building.

The house was completely surrounded by streams and gallon upon gallon of water were poured onto the flames. It was bitter cold, and the water freezing to the firemen caused a great deal of suffering among them. As the spectators watched them get soaking wet and their clothes frozen, the thought came, do they not more than deserve all the increase in pay asked by them. It is on such occasions as this that these things come home, and it is doubtful if any councilman who witnessed Thursday's fire would not today hold up both hands to vote an increase.

The powerful streams had their effect and it was soon seen that Chief Williams had the fire under control, although at 4.30 there was still a little fire under the eaves at the northerly end which the firemen were trying to get at.

Dr. Everett doubtless possessed the most valuable private collection of books outside of Boston. Many were rare volumes which money could not replace. These books were kept in various rooms about the house and specially fitted rooms in the stable. His most valuable books were in the library where the fire is supposed to have started. Many of these were totally destroyed, and others were badly damaged by smoke and water. There were also in this room a number of valuable paintings, one of the most prized being a portrait of his grandfather, Peter C. Brooks; all of these were destroyed.

Another valuable relic in this was a gold-headed cane, once arge Washington. This The case was was asleep upstairs, and Chief Williams and Officer Barry entered the house and fought their way through flame and smoke to where Dr. Everett was supposed to be. The interior of the room was all ablaze but it was seen that he was not there.

It was later learned that he had gone to Atlantic to visit Dr. Peirce, one of his old boys at the Adams Academy. He arrived home shortly after 4 o'clock and was greeted by many of his present and former pupils at the Academy and friends who offered sympathy.

He was much concerned over the writings of his father, Edward Everett, which were kept in the library at the rear, when he found that these and many of his books had been saved, and moved to a place of safety, he was very much relieved. The books were removed by willing hands, from the rear of the house while the firemen were busy fighting flames from the front.

The house is what was originally known as the Charles Miller mansion, from whose heirs it passed into the hands of Dr. Everett. He has expended considerable money in alterations and in beautifying the grounds and it was a stately looking estate. The house was well furnished, much of the furniture being antique, and it is said that his collection of antique furniture was the largest and most valuable of any in the state. Much of this was destroyed or badly damaged.

The fire is supposed to have started from an open grate in the southeast room, and as there was no one in this part of the building the fire had an opportunity to make a great headway.

The loss on the building is estimated to be from $3,000 to $4,000, and is said to be covered by insurance. The loss on contents, including books is hard to estimate as Dr. Everett would not have parted with them for money. It is reported that the curios were not insured.

Dr. Everett spent the night with Mr. and Mrs. Henry E. Hardwick, and firemen remained on duty all night with a line of hose ready to quench any outbreak that might occur.

An incident of the fire was the mishap to a man and two girls. They were rushing to the fire and heedless of their footing fell into the brook which runs through Dr. Everett's estate.

Dr. Everett has had many visitors today, who have called to offer sympathy. The scene in the hall and library is one of chaos and rain.

New York Stone Law.

The New York Times sheds more light on the unconstitutionality of the "Stone law."

Ralph J. Treat, who was the contractor for the construction sewers and appurtenances in East One Hundred and Eighty-second street, has succeeded in obtaining from the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court a peremptory writ of mandamus compelling Controller Coler to draw a warrant in his favor for $3,201.63. The Court, at Special Term, sustained the Controller in his refusal to issue the warrant, because Mr. Treat did not comply with the so-called "Stone law" of 1895, now incorporated in the "Labor law" of 1897, providing that all stone in State municipal work, except paving blocks and crushed stone, should be worked, dressed, and carved within this State. It was contended on behalf of Mr. Treat on the appeal, that this provision, as well as that requiring such a clause to be inserted in every contract of this character, is in contravention of the commerce clause of the Constitution of the United States, and absolutely void. The statute was also claimed to be in conflict with the Constitution of this State, and the fourteenth amendment of the Constitution of the United States.

NOTICE TO PARENTS.

CITY OF QUINCY.

CITY CLERK'S Office, Dec. 31, 1900.

THE Record of birth in any city or town is always more or less unsatisfactory, owing to the fact that the canvasser finds difficulty in getting the necessary information. Names and dates are frequently given incorrectly. The importance of accuracy is shown in many cases where there is a question of descent, or inheritance of property, or collection of life insurance or pensions. The City Clerk's copy of the record is accepted as conclusive evidence in a court of law. While great pains are taken by this office to have the record correct experience shows that it is necessary that parents themselves should lend their assistance. In fact, the law requires that parents shall give notice to the City Clerk of the birth of their children, and provides a penalty for neglect to give such notice for the space of 40 days.

It often happens that only children or servants are at home when the canvasser makes his call, and the answers to his questions are open to doubt. I therefore request all parents in whose household a birth has occurred in the year 1900, to place upon a paper or card the required information, and keep it in a convenient place until the canvasser appears.

The canvasser will begin on Jan. 1, 1901.

KENILEY REMOVED

Board of Health Want Inspector's Resignation.

Inspector Has Engaged Counsel and will Fight.

Previous Administrations Have Attempted His Removal.

Jeremiah J. Keniley, the Inspector of Plumbing, who has held his position since July, 1894, has been notified that his services are no longer required and he as been given until Saturday morning, Jan. 5, at 9 o'clock, to hand in his resignation.

He was at first requested verbally to resign but refused to do so. The Board of Health held another meeting on Monday evening when upon motion of Dr. Dion, it was voted to remove Mr. Keniley and he was given until Saturday, Jan. 5, at 9 o'clock, to hand in his resignation as stated above.

The following day Inspector Keniley received a letter in which it was stated that he "had not discharged the duties of his office in a proper manner and that the duties could be better performed by some one else."

Inspector Keniley, when seen, said that he was appointed under the civil service rules, and claims that the Board of Health cannot remove him unless they show cause, and he has engaged counsel to defend his rights. On the other hand, it is claimed the authorities know what they are about, and unless he resigns, as requested he will be removed "for the good of the cause."

Dr. Dion, secretary of the Board of Health, was seen at City Hall this morning, by a representative of the Ledger, and when asked in relation to the matter, replied that he had nothing whatever to say.

Efforts have been made for the past five years to dispose Inspector Keniley, both under Republican and Democratic administrations, but have failed. Charges were preferred against him in 1898 under Mayor Sears administration, and after a protracted public hearing before the Board of Health they were dismissed. Again in 1899 under Mayor Keith, and in 1900 under Mayor Hall, charges were made with the same result.

The matter has been kept very quiet and did not leak out until Thursday night The outcome is the result of a long standing fight between Inspector Keniley and some of the plumbers of the city, who have long been after his scalp.

"The Flower of the Family."

The dramatics given by the young people of the Wollaston Uaitarian church were a complete success. The play "The Flower of the family" abounded in good characters and funny situations. The parts were all well taken.

Lawrence Loring was a capital insurance agent with a nerve wonderful to behold; Harry Schumacker played the sappy dudish clerk in a clever manner; "Jack" Simmons made a fine merchant of mature years; Ernest Arnold was a lover strong in sentiment, though lacking in form; Miss Bessie Whittemore looked charming and acted with finished grace; Mrs. Charles Baker played the widow with much skill: Miss Haven was a sweet, but foolish girl, who found her lover at last and Mr. Edward Bodge was effective in his part.

The two performances Wednesday Thursday evenings went off very smoothly, showing how conscientiously each had studied his or her part. Music during the intermissions was furnished by Miss Eugenia Hatch, Miss Zanetta Sprague, Miss Page, Miss Phelan, Mr. Stone and Mr. Avery Bennett.

The net proceeds of the sale of tickets will be given to the church.

K. & L. of H. Installation.

A large delegation assembled at Wilson's hall, on Wednesday evening, to witness the installing of the officers elect of the Knights and Ladies of Honor, which was done in a very creditable manner by D. D. G. L. Carrie L. Ingram and suite of Boston. The officers:

P. P.,—Mary A. Fox.
P.,—A. Cora Curtis.
V. P.,—Thomas Hewson.
Chapalin,—Laura F. Tirrell.
Secretary,—Mary A. H. Crane.
Financial Secretary,—M. Lizzie Furnald.
Treasurer,—M Jennie Davis.
Guardian,—Florentine Rizzie.
Sentinel,—Hiram W. Campbell.
Pianist,—Effie L. Rhines.

During the evening, fruit, cake and frappe were served under the direction of the social committee, Laura F. Tirrell, chairman.

SERMONS BY MACHINERY.

Novel Instrument Used In a London Church.

Sermons preached by machinery are the latest. The instrument used is of brass and is called a "monsterphone," writes the London correspondent of the Cincinnati Enquirer. It performs pieces of music for the entertainment of the congregation and varies its programme with an occasional address. It has been introduced with the hope that it would play upon the curiosity of the populace and attract crowds to the services. Already has the hope been justified, for St. Mary-at-Hill, the church in which the monster machine has been placed, now resounds on Sundays with the tramp of many feet instead of being left to its usual desolate emptiness.

Introducing this modern and highly sensational crowd attracting method into this five centuries old church has, withal, a touch of pathos. Into an interior which carries one back to ages long since dead has this "monsterphone" been put. In addition to it there is a magic lantern in the loft which throws pictures on the screen stretched across the middle aisle. These pictures illustrate the text of the machine sermon. A skilled pianist presides at the grand piano, a numerous stringed orchestra ranged before the altar performs pieces of music that are known in every household, the bass drum booms and echoes through the venerable pile, and an earnest preacher tells his congregation some plain home truths—no subtle, theological hair splitting, no didactics, but straight rhetorical blows from the shoulder.

It is a novel method of bringing the people to church, but it has succeeded, for the congregation, numbering once barely a dozen, is now over 600. At midday the workmen in their toil stained clothes spend part of their dinner interval listening to the "monsterphone" or looking at the magic lantern pictures, and the Sunday congregation is just as homespun in its character.

A LIQUID INVENTION.

It Will Produce Undulations In Women's Hair Without Injury.

The most casual observer of woman's beauty must have noticed that the waving curls commonly called undulations are not entirely the work of nature. They are indeed the result of rather laborious art, and the Frenchman who first dressed the hair in this style has made a fortune and retired from business. His imitators are now to be found all over that part of the world that interests itself in the fashions of womanhood. The process has always involved a skillful use of the curling tongs, and the theory was the same as that of the hot poker, which has been always the most effective cause of the artificial curl. The results of this fashion were not always beneficial, as women who have constantly used it can testify. So injurious has it proved in cases that women unwilling to run the risk of having their own hair destroyed have taken to using a false substitute that can be repeatedly curled in the approved style without injury.

A Frenchman now in New York has recently made an invention which not only removes all danger to the hair, but also insures to the style the continuance which has been so much desired, says the New York Sun. This new invention is in the form of a liquid and will not only produce the undulations, but keep them in excellent condition for at least six weeks. And it does not in the least damage the hair. Such a substitute for the deadly hot iron has been sought for years, and its inventor seems sure of as great a fortune as the famous originator of the fashion in Paris.

Japanese as Woodchoppers.

John Kinney of Leland, Josephine county, Or., who has a large contract to furnish cord wood to the Southern Pacific railroad, was in Portland the other day, says The Morning Oregonian. The company, he said, has built a spur upon which to receive the wood, and the price agreed on is $2.75 per cord piled alongside the spur. He has had a good deal of trouble with the labor problem, but has solved it lately by hiring 125 Japs in Portland. These Japs are paid $1.25 per cord, and they work hard 30 days in the month, never resting even on Sunday. They are out early and late and thus are enabled to make pretty good wages. One pair of Japs in particular pile up five cords every day, which amounts to $6.25 for the two. Others, however, do not put up over a cord apiece. White men are the best workers while they are at it, but they like to quit and go hunting every few days, so, on the whole, do not put up many cords. Whites and Japs get the same price.

Book With Silver Leaves.

The Northeastern saengerbund's gift to Emperor William in recognition of the prize offered by him for a musical contest in the United States was completed the other day and will be sent to Germany in a few days, says a Philadelphia dispatch. The gift consists of a large book bound in leather, the pages of which are solid silver. The whole weighs 25 pounds and cost more than $1,200. Upon the first page are the German and American flags crossed. These are beautifully worked in enamel. The second page is engraved with resolutions passed in praise of the emperor. Then comes a page engraved with the song which won the emperor's prize, and the last page is adorned with a facsimile of the prize.

PROMPT ACTION

Taken by Chief Williams to Discipline Firemen.

Driver Weeks Summarily Removed Last Night

Had Passed Everett Fire in Responding to Alarm.

Charles E. Weeks, driver of Combination wagon, No. 1, at the Central fire station, was removed by Chief Williams Thursday night. The reason given for his removal is that in responding to the alarm from Box 171 Thursday afternoon, that he drove by the hydrant and the fire toward the box, failing to see where the fire was. He then turned and drove back to the fire. It is claimed this caused an unnecessary delay.

IT IS SAID

That There Have Been Changes in Our Home Life and Labor.

That our grandmothers split pine into small sticks and dipped the ends into melted brimstone so they would blaze when applied to a live coal.

That if the coal was not to be found fire must be "borrowed" from some neighbor.

That a large portion of the learning, which has made the achievements of the past century in this country possible, was acquired by the light of a tallow candle or a pine knot blazing on the hearth.

That the people were clothed with cloth carded, spun and woven in the home.

That the shoemaker went from house to house with his bench and tools to make shoes and boots for the families as winter approached.

That the leather was from hides of the calves or beef animals raised on the farm and used for food for the family.

That within twenty years some writer on the condition of farmers has called it a mark of extravagance for a farmer's family to have a carpet in the best room other than the rag carpets made at home.

That previous to 1814 all the cloth made in this country was woven on the hand looms.

That during that year the first power loom in this country was set up at Waltham, Mass.

That spinning was done by machinery a few years earlier, and the yarn was carried out to the farmers' wives for them to weave.

That in the early part of the nineteenth century Ohio was so far from New England that it was regarded a fabulous country.

That when a boy wanted to express his utter contempt of another he would say he wished he was "in Ohio," meaning by that that he never wanted to see him again.

That the approach of danger was signaled by building fires on the hilltops.

That grain was harvested with the sickle at the rate of acre a day for a smart man, and threshed with the hand flail.

That a day's work in the hay field lasted from 4 o'clock in the morning till after dark.

That all the work was done by hand excepting drawing the loads to the barn.

That Quincy was until a generation ago a farming town.

That in 1845 there were in the town 310 sheep, 397 horses, 723 neat cattle and 660 swine.

That in 1845 there were raised in Quincy 3,360 bushels of Indian corn, 469 bushels of rye, 360 bushels of barley, 9,673 bushels of potatoes, 1,565 tons of hay.

Monday Evening Club.

The Monday Evening club of the Memorial Congregational church Atlantic begins its fourth season Monday evening, Jan. 7, at 8 o'clock, in the church. The club has always aimed to be representative of the community, and while organized and sustained by the Congregational church is strictly unsectarian; last year 225 people became members. (The Congregational church has a membership of only 68). This year the subject for the winter will be "For the promotion of a better Public Spirit" and it is hoped to make the evenings full of interesting and helpful local applications.

The musical program for the first meeting includes, Mrs. Willianna Folsom, contralto; Mr. Oscar Chamberlain, baritone; Mr. John Manning, pianist.

FISH AND GAME.

Laws for Their Protection Work Well and Increase Noted.

Editors of the Daily Ledger:

The increase of game birds and fish in the State of Massachusetts in the past two years has presented a point of great interest to gentlemen sportsmen and to persons fond of forest life. In the eastern part of the State the increase has been remarkable, and there is now an immensely greater number of birds and fish than there was, say, five years ago. The chief cause of this increase is undoubtedly the enforcement of proper laws regulating hunting and fishing.

Take the smelts, for instance, which visit our shores every spring and fall. Having been for the past five years protected from indiscriminate slaughter, they have multiplied to an extent beyond the most sanguine expectation. By the laws referred to, it is sought to protect them, from being taken by nets or other devices used by "market fishermen" while they are "spawning" in the small creeks and rivers, and to continue this protection through the breeding season and until the spawn have grown large enough to take care of themselves. The open season for these fish is from June 1 to March 15 and even in the open season no person is allowed to use a net.

These laws relating to our fish and game are not only on the statute books, but they are enforced and meet public approval. The enforcement of the various fish and game laws, supported by a hearty public sentiment, will early result in there being still greater numbers of birds and fish and of the many other kinds of game, for the support of which the State of Massachusetts and the beautiful country of New England is so well adapted.

by local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflamation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars; free.

LONDON FEELS BETTER

Because of Reports of Active Recruiting of Local Forces

A TALK WITH BURGHERS

In Which Kitchener Urges Them to Make It Known to Their Brethren In the Field That It Is Useless to Continue the Fight

London, Jan. 4.—Advices from Cape Town this morning are more hopeful, owing to the active recruiting of local forces in all quarters, and a better feeling prevails in London, based upon the prospect of Lord Roberts taking the reins at the war office.

From Sydney, N. S. W., it is reported that there is quite a rush of men there anxious to join the new contingents, 5000 having volunteered.

A dispatch from Cape Town says that the military authorities are preparing for all contingencies. It has been decided to transfer the Boer prisoners from the camps to transports.

In Cape Town such business men as are unable unable to leave are organizing a town guard, composed of the leading citizens. The commercial companies have asked the mayor to call a mass meeting to urge the government to suppress disloyal newspapers and to proclaim martial law.

The British battleship Monarch yesterday landed men and guns to relieve the troops for service northward. It is believed that the guns will be sent up country.

Five hundred citizens enlisted at Cape Town yesterday, the enrollment being very active. It is hoped that the first batch of mounted men will leave within three days for Worcester. They are to hold the passes of the Hex River mountains, and to protect the railway tunnel. The organization is rough and ready and not troubled with much drill or special uniform. Horses are scarce.

Sixty-five hundred South African irregulars have been recruited during the last eight weeks.

The Boers in the Transvaal have been exceedingly active for the last week or so, daily attacking trains, convoys and isolated posts. In most instances they have been repulsed, and the railways are now working more regularly.

A commando is supposed to be in the mountains dividing Middleburg and Graaf Reinet, but cannot be exactly located. The invaders in the west, who were expected at Fraserburg, have altered their course, and are now moving in the direction of Williston, to the northwest.

The Boers in Bechuanaland have been again joined by the inhabitants who once before rebelled.

Commandoes are reported to be at Blikfontein, Boestap and Daniel's Kiul. Their objective is believed to be Griqua Town, which is occupied by the British.

The censorship has just permitted news of the following peace tenatives to emanate from Pretoria.

About the middle of December a number of prominent burghers, who had submitted and were living in the Pretoria district, formed a peace committee. Mr. Van Rensberg, a former member of the first volksraad of the Transvaal, was elected president of the commission, which included other prominent former members of the volksraad. The committee resolved to attempt negotiations and accordingly, in response to a suggestion, Lord Kitchener attended a meeting of the committee Dec. 21, and addressed the meeting.

He said he was glad to meet a committee desirous of bringing the war to a speedy conclusion. He proceeded to point out the folly of a continuance of guerilla warfare, since the British government would never permit the re-establishment of the Boer government. Mr. Chamberlain's statement in parliament, Lord Kitchener concluded, clearly showed that there was no wish to oppress the burghers.

Lord Kitchener urged that it was useless to continue the present inhumane struggle, pointing out that the powers had refused Mr. Kruger's request for intervention. The burghers, he said, had fought a good fight, but they had been overpowered, and there was no dishonor in the leaders recognizing that fact. He reminded them that there were hosts of Boer prisoners waiting to be restored to their families.

Referring to his proclamations to the country, Lord Kitchener said that, unfortunately these had not been allowed to reach the burghers, and he trusted that the committee would make known the facts to the Boers in the field, as he desired to give them every chance to surrender, and wished to finish the war by the most humane means possible. He promised to give the committee notice if compelled to abandon conciliatory for harsher measures.

Going on to explain his recent proclamations, confirming the statement that those who had broken oaths of neutrality would be treated in the same way as the others, he told the committee that all would be accommodated with their families in protected laagers along the line of railway.

No one, he promised, would be sent out of the country; but all who had fought fairly, including the leaders, would receive the consideration due to their rank. He advised the formation of local sub-committees to send out agents to the Boer commandoes, explaining that they could communicate through the central committee and the military governor and could also come to see him personally, if necessary.

The committee cordially thanked Lord Kitchener, and promised to print the speech in Dutch and to circulate it everywhere.

MATRIMONIAL CLOUDS

Are Hovering Over the Queen of Holland and Her Husband-to-Be

London, Jan. 4.—A special dispatch from Berlin reports that Duke Henry of Mecklenburg-Schwerin, whose marriage to Queen Wilhelmina of Holland has been announced for Feb. 7, has left The Hague, indignant at the tone of the parliamentary discussion on the subject of his future position.

Whether this is true or not there is no doubt that there has been endless trouble connected with the projected marriage. Queen Wilhelmina has contrived to get up as much fuss about the style of precedence as that experienced in England in 1840. She wished Duke Henry to be created prince consort and have precedence over her mother, but she was overruled on both points.

On the other hand, her solicitude for her future husband's pecuniary comfort has by no means been equal to her solicitude for his dignity. She has given up her original proposition to settle a large sum on him out of her private fortune, and now proposes that parliament settle $80,000 a year on him, payable if he survives her majesty. While the latter is alive Duke Henry will get nothing, according to this plan. But there is a very strong feeling in Holland that no allowance for the duke should be asked, considering the vast property at the disposal of Queen Wilhelmina. Duke Henry's private fortune is inadequate for his position as prince consort. He will practically be dependent on his spouse.

"Relief or Bankruptcy"

Denver, Jan. 4.—Retiring Governor Thomas yesterday transmitted his final message to the legislature. Concerning the condition of the state's finances, he said: "Our credit is exhausted, and we are face to face with relief or bankruptcy. I would recommend that our great industrial corporations be placed, with transportation companies, under the jurisdiction of the state board of equalization. Their evasions of the revenue laws are general and notorious." The floating debt of the state for the payment of which the governor declares some provision should be made amounts to $2,073,077.

USED DYNAMITE CARTRIDGE

Farmer Webber's Queer Way of Making Away With Himself

Lisbon, Me., Jan. 4.—The people of this town thought for a time that they had a most mysterious murder case on their hands, when it was reported that the body of H. E. Webber, a well-to-do farmer, had been found lying near an outbuilding, disembowelled and the head severed from the body, but after an investigation it was proved beyond doubt to be a case of suicide. The man had gone to the barnyard during the night and after placing a dynamite cartridge beneath his body, exploded it.

Bert Douglass, the hired man, went to the barn yesterday morning, and as he was about to enter the building he saw a portion of a human leg lying on the ground, and, upon investigating, other pieces were found. On the roof of the barn he saw what he recognized to be the trunk and head of his employer. The man at once notified Mrs. Webber and the town authorities.

Coroner Sampson with City Marshal Odlin of Lewiston came to this place at once and murder rumors were quickly put at rest when the officers, in examining the dead man's clothing, came upon a note addressed to his wife, stating that he intended to take his life by blowing himself up with dynamite, making suggestions as to the disposition of the property and advising her to live as comfortably as possible.

Mrs. Webber says that her husband had been acting strangely for some time, but the thought never occurred to her that he might wish to take his own life.

Farmer Shoots His Wife

Worcester, Mass., Jan. 1.—Moses Bouvier, a farmer of Holden, is under arrest here charged with having shot his wife. One bullet took effect, and that, being deflected by a rib, did not have an immediately fatal result, and the woman may recover. The cause of the shooting is not known positively, Bouvier contending that it was accidental, but Mrs. Bouvier says that her husband intended to kill her after having failed to involve her in a quarrel.

The Lily will undoubtedly be a total loss.

The Hub Bicycle Contest

With the exception of a few brief moments during the evening, the day was quiet in the extreme.

HURRY UP!

Everywhere one hears that expression "hurry up!" It is a genuine Americanism expressive of the "rush" in which we live. Nothing is swift enough for us. We race against steam and lightning and find them slow. We grudge the time given to eating, and rush through meals as though life depended upon our haste.

Life does depend on our haste, but not in that sense. Look at the obituary columns of the papers and see how many prominent men are carried away by "stomach trouble," "acute indigestion" and other related diseases. Their lives have in general been sacrificed to the haste and rush of business which overlooked the fact that food can only nourish the body when digested and assimilated and that the digestive and assimilative processes can't be hurried.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, cures diseases of the stomach and the associated organs of digestion and nutrition. The source of all physical strength is food, properly digested and perfectly assimilated. By enabling the perfect digestion and assimilation of food "Golden Medical Discovery" increases and enriches the blood supply and sends new strength to every organ of the body.

"I was at one time as I thought almost at death's door," writes Mr. J. S. Bell, of Leando, Van Buren Co., Iowa. "I was confined to my house and part of the time to my bed. I had taken quantities of medicines but they only seemed to feed the disease; but I must say that 'Golden Medical Discovery' has cured me, and to-day I am stouter than I have been for twenty years. I am now forty-three years old."

WAS THRICE MARRIED

Howard's First Wife Was Granted a Divorce

ADMITS THAT HE HAS A SON

By the Woman Claimed to Be His Second Wife, But Says That There Was No Marriage, Records to the Contrary Notwithstanding

Boston, Jan. 5.—The marriage records at the state house show that George W. Howard, now of Brooklyn, was twice married in this state. The name of the bridegroom is identical in both cases, and so is the place of the bridegroom's birth.

The first record shows that on July 7, 1879, George W. Howard, 21 years old, a brakeman, born in Reading, son of James A. and Eliza J. Howard, was married by Rev. N. P. Whittaker, a Methodist minister of Chelsea, to Delia M. Perry, 17 years old.

The record at the Cambridge city hall shows that George W. Howard, resident of Cambridge, 33 years old, born in Reading, son of James H. Howard, was married to Anna R. Kay.

The officiating minister was Rev. Joseph Lambert. The date of this marriage was Aug. 19, 1890. Howard stated that this was his second marriage, while it was the first venture of the bride.

In the first certificate, the bridegroom gave his age as 21 years, while in the second, 11 years afterwards, he described himself as 33 years old.

From court records it appears that the first Mrs. Howard obtained a divorce on the grounds of adultery, cruelty and abusive treatment, on May 13, 1887, and that she was given the custody of the child. There was also another charge which did not figure in the decree. The marriage, therefore, was three years later. The woman in this marriage is the one living in Cambridge.

Howard's Side of It

New York, Jan. 5.—Henry Hawkes, Jr., stood sentinel for three hours yesterday in the corridor of the New Amsterdam hotel. His sister, Mrs. George W. Howard, was upstairs packing her trunk to send it to her parents' home in Broklyn. Howard, bailed out on the bigamy charge, sat in the hotel barroom, talking to his lawyer.

"That woman in Cambridge never was my wife," said Howard. "Her name was not Kay, but Rooney. I met her in a department store when I worked in Boston. She accompanied me to New York, and we lived here in an apartment at 152 East Forty-eighth street, and she remained here until my engagement to Miss Hawkes, when I sent her to Cambridge. I felt that I must take care of her, for she was the mother of my 9-year-old son, Rudolph. I lived with this Rooney woman in Rochester, too, and that is the explanation of the story that I had a wife there.

"I can easily explain where I got the money to live as I do, and to entertain as I did before my marriage. I made some fortunate investments some years ago, and these have netted me handsomely.

"About the third woman, to whom I am said to have been married before I met the Kay or Rooney woman, I will only say that I was legally freed from her. I defy the Hawkes family, when the case comes up next Tuesday, to produce a bona fide marriage certificate of any marriage to Miss Kay. There is no such document. It never was issued."

Worried Over "American Invasion"

London, Jan. 5.—The Daily Express announces today the probability that an American syndicate will provide a summer steamer service on the Thames. "This American invasion," it says, "is much more serious than the Boer invasion of Cape Colony; but it serves the Britishers right for their discouragement of inventors and their neglect of the opportunities to progress."

Green Was Not Ill Treated

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 5.—A searching inquiry was held yesterday at the naval academy into the charges of ill-treatment made by friends of Hobart Green, who died on board the Santee on Dec. 14. It was proved conclusively that there was nothing in the charges of ill-treatment and neglect preferred by the friends of the young man.

Roberts Speaks For Soldiers

London, Jan. 5.—Lord Roberts, in a communication to the public, expressing his thanks for the reception tendered him, eulogizes the soldiers in South Africa, and appeals for contributions to the Soldiers' and Sailors' association, seconding the efforts of the Prince of Wales to take care of the families of the men who are fighting.

To Prevent Spread of Consumption

Berlin, Jan. 5.—The Saxon ministry has issued a decree requiring physicians, hospital managers and boarding house keepers, as well as undertakers, to report all tuberculosis cases. The decree directs also the disinfection of rooms in which persons suffering from tuberculosis die.

THE ELUSIVE DE WET

Three Columns of British on His Trail, but Without Satisfactory Results

London, Jan. 5.—There is no further news from Lord Kitchener, who, according to a Cape Town dispatch, is calling for 5000 men to guard the Rand mines. Enlisting in Cape Colony continues active, and 500 men will leave Cape Town for the north within the next few days.

Information regarding the invasion is scanty. Colonel Williams attacked the eastern invaders Jan. 1 near Middleburg, but failed to dislodge them. He has since been joined by Lieutenant Colonel Grenfell, and the Boers have retired.

General Brabant has arrived at Graaf Reinet.

Advices from Masern, Basutoland, dated yesterday, say that three separate columns are still pursuing General De Wet, but with no success, beyond taking 28 prisoners. Cannon firing is continually heard.

All the English have deserted Ficksburg, taking their stocks of grain across the border, and the Boers have looted the town.

According to The Daily Mail's correspondent at The Hague, the directorate of The Netherlands' South African railway has applied to the Amsterdam courts for a suspension of payment.

The Daily Chronicle advises that favorable attention should be given to a movement, reported by its Montreal correspondent, to induce Sir Wilfred Laurier, the Dominion premier, provided the colonial office consents, to proceed to South Africa as a commissioner, empowered to intervene with a view of restoration of peace.

Infernal Mechanism Didn't Work

Paris, Ills., Jan. 5.—Thomas Coffman, an attorney and collecting agent, residing at Hume, received an infernal machine through the mail yesterday. The box was of wood, with a sliding lid. It contained a pound stick of dynamite and several match heads, which, however, failed to ignite when the box was opened. The box was addressed to Dr. Coffman, the attorney's brother. It is thought the jolting of the box in the mail disarranged its mechanism. An indistinct postmark seemed to indicate that the box was mailed at Logansport, Ind.

Europe In Ice King's Grasp

London, Jan. 5.—A cold snap is appearing throughout Europe. There have been severe snowstorms in eastern Galicia and southern Russia, accompanied by gales. Considerable property has been destroyed in Odessa, where the trains are delayed by deep snow drifts. Black sea vessels are overdue. The Danube is frozen over at Bucharest, and there is skating in north Holland.

Quarantined by Smallpox

Wichita, Kan., Jan. 5.—Mrs. Carrie Nation's husband, who is a lawyer, has begun habeas corpus proceedings to get his wife out of jail, where she has been quarantined since her temperance crusade in smashing bar fixtures. A case of smallpox in the jail caused the quarantine and prevented Mrs. Nation's release on bail.

Anti-Imperialists Amend Figures

Boston, Jan. 5.—An amended return of election expenses was filed at the secretary of state's office yesterday by Secretary Haskins of the New England Anti-Imperialist league. The first report showed receipts of $183.50, while the present report shows receipts of $3641.48, and expenditures of $187.50.

Was Killed by a Fall

New Haven, Jan. 5.—The coroner's report upon the death of Gerald Melberg, whose body was found in the yard of the Cotton Hollow roadhouse, at Naugatuck, on Dec. 23, states that the death was accidental, and that Melberg was probably killed while attempting to climb from the window of his room.

Meyer Leaves For Post of Duty

New York, Jan. 5.—George Von L. Meyer, recently appointed ambassador from the United States to Italy, arrived here from Boston yesterday. He was accompanied by his wife, children and a corps of servants. They sailed today on the steamer Furst Bismarck, which goes to Naples and Genoa.

Burns May Result Fatally

Worcester, Mass., Jan. 5.—Mrs. William H. Lockwood, 25, of West Brookfield, is in a hospital here, and probably will die of burns. Her 3-year-old boy knocked a table and lamp over last night, and Mrs. Lockwood's clothing caught fire when she picked up the lamp.

Victory For Nova Scotia Miners

Halifax, Jan. 5.—At a further conference yesterday between the coal miners and the mine managers, all matters in dispute were settled, and the men will receive the full 12 percent increase. Cape Breton miners alone do not share in the increase.

Choate Presents Canal Treaty

London, Jan. 5.—United States Ambassador Choate yesterday presented the Hay-Pauncefote treaty amendments to the secretary of state for foreign affairs, the Marquis of Lansdowne.

THE VOTE OF NEGROES

Some Southerners Think It Should Be Eliminated

THE OLMSTEAD RESOLUTION

Referred to the Census Committee, Where the Opposition Desired It to Go Originally—Senate Passes Lodge's Intoxicant Resolution

Washington, Jan. 5.—The house yesterday had another spirited struggle over the Olmstead resolution to investigate the abridgment of the suffrage in certain southern states, with a view to reapportionment upon the actual basis of suffrage.

Mr. Olmstead offered to refer the matter to census committee if its chairman would agree to act upon it within one week. Mr. Hopkins to this proposal replied that he was not in a position to make any bargain, but that the census committee would attend to all business before it, as it had done in the past. It was then voted without dissent to refer it to the committee, where the opposition desired it to go originally, and so the incident has for the present closed.

The debate upon the resolution was marked by exceeding frankness. Some of the southern members avowed that the attempt to enfranchise the negro had been a lamentable failure, and the action of certain states in legally eliminating the blacks as factors at the polls, they said, was in the interest of civilization and progress.

Mr. Hopkins then called up the reapportionment bill for general debate, suggesting that a vote be taken on Monday. He said that 27 legislatures would this month be in session, some of them to adjourn in 60 days, and that the apportionment bill ought to be passed in time to give them a chance to act under it, in dividing the states into districts. The Democrats demanded more time, suggesting Wednesday as the day for calling the previous question. Tuesday, at 2 o'clock, was finally agreed upon as a compromise.

Favorable action was taken by the senate committee on foreign relations on the resolution previously introduced by Senator Lodge, declaring for the enactment of laws prohibiting the sale of opium and intoxicating liquors to the aborigines and uncivilized peoples of all countries, and the resolution was afterward reported to and passed by the senate.

For five hours the senate discussed the army reorganization bill. The debate took on a wide range at times, but was confined principally to the question of the necessity for the increase in the regular army provided for in the pending measure. The Philippine question was threshed over at great length, but few really new points were advanced.

One of the sharpest colloquies of the session was between Mr. Carter and Mr. Wellington of Maryland, and in the course of it the Alaskan boundary dispute was brought forward prominently.

During the debate on the army bill Senator Hoar introduced an amendment which came as a sort of surprise to his fellow senators. He prefaced his motion with the statement: "Let the Filipinos come here; let them state their case. They can come and go in peace and honor. If we say to the Filipinos that we will not consider their case until they lay down on their knees, lay their hands upon their lips and their lips in the dust, this war will go on, if there is a spark of spirit and principle in their breasts, until every Filipino of one sex is exterminated, and until the women among them take up the fight and are exterminated also. The way to prepare them for liberty is to set them free."

His amendment read as follows:

"Provided that no further military force shall be used in the Philippine islands, except such as may be necessary to keep order in places there now actually under the peaceable control of the United States, and to protect persons and property to whom, in the judgment of the president, protection may be due from the United States, until the president shall have first proclaimed amnesty for all political offences committed against the United States in the Philippines, and, if in his power, shall have agreed upon an armistice with the persons now in hostility to the United States, and shall have invited such number, not less than 10, as he shall think desirable, of the leaders or the representatives of the persons now hostile to the United States there, to come to the United States and state their wishes and condition, character and wishes of the people of the Philippine islands to the executive and congress, and shall have offered to secure to them safe conduct to come, abide and return, and shall have provided at the public charge for the expenses of their transportation, both ways, and their stay in this country for a reasonable and sufficient time for such purposes."

Good Afternoon.

The winter has only just begun.

It is a good thing for Quincy she doesn't need a bigger police station.

The city skating pond near Merrymount park is becoming very popular. Hundreds of young people enjoy skating there every day when there is ice.

For architectural beauty and general good looks the new Wollaston fire station far surpasses the Central Fire station. Wollaston is proud of the building, and so is Quincy.

Probably no work which the Park Commission have undertaken the past year has struck the popular chord more forcibly than the making of the great skating rink at the Merry Mount Park meadows. Thousands of people have enjoyed skating over this field of ice which at present is as smooth as glass. The rink covers an area of about 40 acres and is over 1,500 feet long.

Drift of Opinion.

☞ Mr. Cramp told the industrial commission that the difference between the first cost of a ship built here and one built abroad was scarcely worth consideration; the important thing adverse to American ownership was the expense of operation. Commissioner Chamberlain has been figuring out that the first cost in this country is much in excess of that abroad, but Mr. Cramp will not admit that his prices are higher than those of Harland & Wolf. As to the operating expenses, the American owner may ship his crew in a foreign port at the wages of the port, which brings the foreign sailor into direct competition with the American sailor, and leading American steamship companies do get a great part of their men in foreign ports. The American dietry is probably more expensive than the foreign, and there may be some minor odds against the American owner, but if the first cost of the American ship is not much more than that of the English ship, and sailors may be obtained abroad, the disadvantage of the American owner can hardly be serious.—New York Journal of Commerce.

Dr. Everett's Loss.

Friends of Dr. Everett were busy at the ruins all day yesterday, taking care of the books and searching for valuable relics. It is understood that the bill of John Elliot, the Indian apostle, valued at $2,000, was found intact. All that could be found of the Washington cane was the brass ferule. A life-sized figure of a stallion greyhound of Italian marble was saved. It is said of Dr. Everett, that were every copy of "Pilgrim's Progress" destroyed, that he could rewrite the entire book word for word. This is probably true in reference to other works, but the lifetime of Dr. Everett is too short to permit him to replace but a few of the books lost, even if he could.

—The Somerville Journal says: "It costs $22,000,000 a year to govern New York, and even at this high price the government of the city isn't nearly as good as that of Somerville."

SALARY DOUBLED.

City Council Increase That of City Solicitor to $1,400.

The last meeting of the City Council of 1900 was held Friday evening with 15 members, Councilmen Badger, Callahan, Cleverly, Johnson, Poland, Walsh and Wilson being absent.

A petition was received for a common victualler's license, and it was referred to the next Council.

SALARY OF SOLICITOR.

The order defining the duties of the City Solicitor took its second reading. The rules were suspended and the order passed.

The order increasing the salary of the City Solicitor from $700 to $1,200 a year took its second reading.

Upon motion of Councilman Alden the amount was changed to $1,500.

The rules were suspended. The order failed to pass by a vote of 8 in favor and 5 against, as follows:

YEAS — Alden, De Normandie, Elcock, Gassett, Hill, McLennon, Newcomb, Packard—8.

NAYS—Faxon, Freeman, Hogan, Nicol, Smith—5.

ABSENT—Badger, Callahan, Cleverly, Johnson, Poland, Walsh and Wilson—7.

Upon motion of Councilman Alden the vote was reconsidered. He then moved reference to next Council.

Councilman Freeman opposed. With increased duties under the order passed he would have to do all for $700 if the salary was not changed at this meeting.

Motion to refer lost.

Upon motion of Councilman De-Normandie the vote amending the order was reconsidered.

Councilman Packard would like to hear about the duties of the office.

Councilman Freeman gave the figures of amounts received by the City Solicitor in years past: In 1890, salary only; in 1891, salary and extras amounting to $1,031; in 1892, salary and extras amounting to $927; in 1893, salary and extras amounting to $852; in 1894, salary and extras amounting to $851; in 1895, the present ordinance defining duties of the office were passed; in 1896, total $1,139; in 1897, total, $1,500; in 1898, total $2,224; in 1899, total $1,945.

Continuing, he said, that as the Sewer department would probably soon be turned over to the Commissioner of Public Works, this would make extra work, for which charges had been made.

Councilman Packard moved the City Solicitor be called upon to give light on the duties of the office.

City Solicitor Sears said that it was very embarassing for him to say anything. He desired it to be distinctly understood that the request for change of salary was without the knowlege of the City Solicitor. He would speak for the office and not for the present holder of the office. Under the present ordinance the salary is a reduction of from $200 to $600 compared with past years, although duties are increased. The sewer was not considered when the original ordinance was drawn. During the past year and in the future there is bound to be Metropolitan hearings. Much time was given last year to these and Legislative hearings, taking three or four weeks from his private business. There were now claims against the city of over $100,000, not including those not yet docked. Under the new ordinance the Solicitor is obliged to attend to these without extra cost, also to examine titles, which is a difficult task that takes much time and is really a branch by itself.

Councilman Alden. He has told you of the duties of his office and then again it should be considered that his knowledge is worth something. He moved to amend by making the amount $1,400. Voted.

Councilman Smith said that now he had a full knowledge of the duties of the office he should change his vote and support the order.

The order was then passed to be ordained, Councilman Hogan alone voting no.

Upon motion of Councilman Freeman all unfinished business was referred to the next City Council.

Adjourned at 8.02, probably sine die.

OLD DUTCH COLONIAL.

Floor Plans Are Especially Well Arranged—Costs $4,000.

[Copyright, 1900, by George Hitchings, architect, 1090 Flatbush avenue, Brooklyn.]

This design shows a colonial house with elegantly arranged floor plans. The wide piazza, extending across the front and around the side, enables the occupants to find shelter from the hot summer sun at all times of the day.

Upon entering the hall you are greeted with a style of architecture that prevailed in the period of the Revolution, what is termed the old Dutch colonial. The exposed beams on the ceiling and the high paneled wainscoting are very effective. This hall is ornamented with an elaborate winding open staircase with carved newels and balusters. Directly back of the front doors is a pair of sliding doors entering the sitting room, which is also a very pleasant room, separated from the parlor by sliding doors. The parlor is a large room, with windows looking out in every direction.

The dining room and kitchen are on the other side of the hall, entirely separated from the rest of the house. The dining room is provided with two china closets and a buffet, and also a large window seat looking on the front of the house. The pantry and kitchen are fitted up with all the modern improvements.

The second story has four large rooms and a bath fitted up with an iron enameled bathtub and open set fixtures with nickel plated trimmings. Each bedroom is provided with a large closet.

The attic contains two bedrooms and a billiard room of good size. The woodwork is oak on the first floor and cypress on the second and attic.

The exterior is painted three good coats of paint.

Cost complete, $4,000.

Some Kitchen Hints.

"When I furnish a kitchen as my workroom, some idea as to convenience and the saving of time and steps modifies the arrangement of things," says a writer in Good Housekeeping. "All the utensils are kept as near as possible to where they will be needed. The tin covers of saucepans and kettles are on a rack within reach of the range. The cooking forks and spoons have their niches just below. The little paring knife I like best is not in the knife box amid carvers and mixing spoons, but where I can get it without leaving the low rocker where I sit when preparing vegetables. The bread knife and cutting board (which last is apt to be the cover of a grape basket, light and clean) are always convenient to the bread jar. Two or three favorite saucepans are kept hanging abroad, in full view, near the water faucet, for is not the first step toward cooking almost everything the preparing of some freshly boiled water?"

For Washing Paint.

An excellent soap for washing woodwork, straw matting or oilcloth is made by dissolving a bar of soap in a pint of boiling water. Add a tablespoonful of borax and set it aside to cool. Add enough of this soap to a bucket half full of water to make a good suds and wash with a soft flannel cloth. Rinse with clear water and wipe quite dry. The borax makes the cleaning easy and does not injure the paint or oilcloth. Give the oilcloth one or two coats of varnish during the year, and it will greatly lengthen its period of usefulness.

St. Mary's Ball.

The twenty-fifth anniversary ball of St. Mary's C. T. A. and M. R. Society was held last evening at St. Mary's hall and was the social event of the season, in that section of the city. Previous to the ball there was a promenade concert by the Pioneer Singing Orchestra who also furnished music for the dancing. The grand march took place at 9 o'clock. It was led by Mr. Philip T. Egan and Miss Mary McLaughlin, they were followed by fifty or more couples. At midnight Caterer Nash served a supper. Mr. Philip T. Egan was floor director and Mr. Edward Finn assistant and they were assisted by a large corps of aids. Thomas D. McGrath was chairman of the committee of arrangements and Lewis Pendis, secretary and treasurer.

WAS THRICE MARRIED

Howard's First Wife Was Granted a Divorce

ADMITS THAT HE HAS A SON

By the Woman Claimed to Be His Second Wife, But Says That There Was No Marriage, Records to the Contrary Notwithstanding

Boston, Jan. 5.—The marriage records at the state house show that George W. Howard, now of Brooklyn, was twice married in this state. The name of the bridegroom is identical in both cases, and so is the place of the bridegroom's birth.

The first record shows that on July 7, 1879, George W. Howard, 21 years old, a brakeman, born in Reading, son of James A. and Eliza J. Howard, was married by Rev. N. P. Whittaker, a Methodist minister of Chelsea, to Delia M. Perry, 17 years old.

The record at the Cambridge city hall shows that George W. Howard, resident of Cambridge, 33 years old, born in Reading, son of James H. Howard, was married to Anna R. Kay.

The officiating minister was Rev. Joseph Lambert. The date of this marriage was Aug. 19, 1890. Howard stated that this was his second marriage, while it was the first venture of the bride.

In the first certificate, the bridegroom gave his age as 21 years, while in the second, 11 years afterwards, he described himself as 33 years old.

From court records it appears that the first Mrs. Howard obtained a divorce on the grounds of adultery, cruelty and abusive treatment, on May 13, 1887, and that she was given the custody of the child. There was also another charge which did not figure in the decree. The marriage, therefore, was three years later. The woman in this marriage is the one living in Cambridge.

Howard's Side of It

New York, Jan. 5.—Henry Hawkes, Jr., stood sentinel for three hours yesterday in the corridor of the New Amsterdam hotel. His sister, Mrs. George W. Howard, was upstairs packing her trunk to send it to her parents' home in Broklyn. Howard, bailed out on the bigamy charge, sat in the hotel barroom, talking to his lawyer.

"That woman in Cambridge never was my wife," said Howard. "Her name was not Kay, but Rooney. I met her in a department store when I worked in Boston. She accompanied me to New York, and we lived here in an apartment at 152 East Forty-eighth street, and she remained here until my engagement to Miss Hawkes, when I sent her to Cambridge. I felt that I must take care of her, for she was the mother of my 9-year-old son, Rudolph. I lived with this Rooney woman in Rochester, too, and that is the explanation of the story that I had a wife there.

"I can easily explain where I got the money to live as I do, and to entertain as I did before my marriage. I made some fortunate investments some years ago, and these have netted me handsomely.

"About the third woman, to whom I am said to have been married before I met the Kay or Rooney woman, I will only say that I was legally freed from her. I defy the Hawkes family, when the case comes up next Tuesday, to produce a bona fide marriage certificate of any marriage to Miss Kay. There is no such document. It never was issued."

Worried Over "American Invasion"

London, Jan. 5.—The Daily Express announces today the probability that an American syndicate will provide a summer steamer service on the Thames. "This American invasion," it says, "is much more serious than the Boer invasion of Cape Colony; but it serves the Britishers right for their discouragement of inventors and their neglect of the opportunities to progress."

Green Was Not Ill Treated

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 5.—A searching inquiry was held yesterday at the naval academy into the charges of ill-treatment made by friends of Hobart Green, who died on board the Santee on Dec. 14. It was proved conclusively that there was nothing in the charges of ill-treatment and neglect preferred by the friends of the young man.

Roberts Speaks For Soldiers

London, Jan. 5.—Lord Roberts, in a communication to the public, expressing his thanks for the reception tendered him, eulogizes the soldiers in South Africa, and appeals for contributions to the Soldiers' and Sailors' association, seconding the efforts of the Prince of Wales to take care of the families of the men who are fighting.

To Prevent Spread of Consumption

Berlin, Jan. 5.—The Saxon ministry has issued a decree requiring physicians, hospital managers and boarding house keepers, as well as undertakers, to report all tuberculosis cases. The decree directs also the disinfection of rooms in which persons suffering from tuberculosis die.

THE ELUSIVE DE WET

Three Columns of British on His Trail, but Without Satisfactory Results

London, Jan. 5.—There is no further news from Lord Kitchener, who, according to a Cape Town dispatch, is calling for 5000 men to guard the Rand mines. Enlisting in Cape Colony continues active, and 500 men will leave Cape Town for the north within the next few days.

Information regarding the invasion is scanty. Colonel Williams attacked the eastern invaders Jan. 1 near Middleburg, but failed to dislodge them. He has since been joined by Lieutenant Colonel Grenfell, and the Boers have retired.

General Brabant has arrived at Graaf Reinet.

Advices from Maseru, Basutoland, dated yesterday, say that three separate columns are still pursuing General De Wet, but with no success, beyond taking 28 prisoners. Cannon firing is continually heard.

All the English have deserted Ficksburg, taking their stocks of grain across the border, and the Boers have looted the town.

According to The Daily Mail's correspondent at The Hague, the directorate of The Netherlands' South African railway has applied to the Amsterdam courts for a suspension of payment.

The Daily Chronicle advises that favorable attention should be given to a movement, reported by its Montreal correspondent, to induce Sir Wilfred Laurier, the Dominion premier, provided the colonial office consents, to proceed to South Africa as a commissioner, empowered to intervene with a view of restoration of peace.

Infernal Mechanism Didn't Work

Paris, Ills., Jan. 5.—Thomas Coffman, an attorney and collecting agent, residing at Hume, received an infernal machine through the mail yesterday. The box was of wood, with a sliding lid. It contained a pound stick of dynamite and several match heads, which, however, failed to ignite when the box was opened. The box was addressed to Dr. Coffman, the attorney's brother. It is thought the jolting of the box in the mail disarranged its mechanism. An indistinct postmark seemed to indicate that the box was mailed at Logansport, Ind.

Europe In Ice King's Grasp

London, Jan. 5.—A cold snap is appearing throughout Europe. There have been severe snowstorms in eastern Galicia and southern Russia, accompanied by gales. Considerable property has been destroyed in Odessa, where the trains are delayed by deep snow drifts. Black sea vessels are overdue. The Danube is frozen over at Bucharest, and there is skating in north Holland.

Quarantined by Smallpox

Wichita, Kan., Jan. 5.—Mrs. Carrie Nation's husband, who is a lawyer, has begun habeas corpus proceedings to get his wife out of jail, where she has been quarantined since her temperance crusade in smashing bar fixtures. A case of smallpox in the jail caused the quarantine and prevented Mrs. Nation's release on bail.

Anti-Imperialists Amend Figures

Boston, Jan. 5.—An amended return of election expenses was filed at the secretary of state's office yesterday by Secretary Haskins of the New England Anti-Imperialist league. The first report showed receipts of $183.50, while the present report shows receipts of $3641.48, and expenditures of $187.50.

Was Killed by a Fall

New Haven, Jan. 5.—The coroner's report upon the death of Gerald Melberg, whose body was found in the yard of the Cotton Hollow roadhouse, at Naugatuck, on Dec. 23, states that the death was accidental, and that Melberg was probably killed while attempting to climb from the window of his room.

Meyer Leaves For Post of Duty

New York, Jan. 5.—George Von L. Meyer, recently appointed ambassador from the United States to Italy, arrived here from Boston yesterday. He was accompanied by his wife, children and a corps of servants. They sailed today on the steamer Furst Bismarck, which goes to Naples and Genoa.

Burns May Result Fatally

Worcester, Mass., Jan. 5.—Mrs. William H. Lockwood, 25, of West Brookfield, is in a hospital here, and probably will die of burns. Her 3-year-old boy knocked a table and lamp over last night, and Mrs. Lockwood's clothing caught fire when she picked up the lamp.

THE VOTE OF NEGROES

Some Southerners Think It Should Be Eliminated

THE OLMSTEAD RESOLUTION

Referred to the Census Committee, Where the Opposition Desired It to Go Originally—Senate Passes Lodge's Intoxicant Resolution

Washington, Jan. 5.—The house yesterday had another spirited struggle over the Olmstead resolution to investigate the abridgment of the suffrage in certain southern states, with a view to reapportionment upon the actual basis of suffrage.

Mr. Olmstead offered to refer the matter to census committee if its chairman would agree to act upon it within one week. Mr. Hopkins to this proposal replied that he was not in a position to make any bargain, but that the census committee would attend to all business before it, as it had done in the past. It was then voted without dissent to refer it to the committee, where the opposition desired it to go originally, and so the incident has for the present closed.

The debate upon the resolution was marked by exceeding frankness. Some of the southern members avowed that the attempt to enfranchise the negro had been a lamentable failure, and the action of certain states in legally eliminating the blacks as factors at the polls, they said, was in the interest of civilization and progress.

Mr. Hopkins then called up the reapportionment bill for general debate, suggesting that a vote be taken on Monday. He said that 27 legislatures would this month be in session, some of them to adjourn in 60 days, and that the apportionment bill ought to be passed in time to give them a chance to act under it, in dividing the states into districts. The Democrats demanded more time, suggesting Wednesday as the day for calling the previous question. Tuesday, at 2 o'clock, was finally agreed upon as a compromise.

Favorable action was taken by the senate committee on foreign relations on the resolution previously introduced by Senator Lodge, declaring for the enactment of laws prohibiting the sale of opium and intoxicating liquors to the aborigines and uncivilized peoples of all countries, and the resolution was afterward reported to and passed by the senate.

For five hours the senate discussed the army reorganization bill. The debate took on a wide range at times, but was confined principally to the question of the necessity for the increase in the regular army provided for in the pending measure. The Philippine question was threshed over at great length, but few really new points were advanced.

One of the sharpest colloquies of the session was between Mr. Carter and Mr. Wellington of Maryland, and in the course of it the Alaskan boundary dispute was brought forward prominently.

During the debate on the army bill Senator Hoar introduced an amendment which came as a sort of surprise to his fellow senators. He prefaced his motion with the statement: "Let the Filipinos come here; let them state their case. They can come and go in peace and honor. If we say to the Filipinos that we will not consider their case until they lay down on their knees, lay their hands upon their lips and their lips in the dust, this war will go on, if there is a spark of spirit and principle in their breasts, until every Filipino of one sex is exterminated, and until the women among them take up the fight and are exterminated also. The way to prepare them for liberty is to set them free."

His amendment read as follows:

"Provided that no further military force shall be used in the Philippine islands, except such as may be necessary to keep order in places there now actually under the peaceable control of the United States, and to protect persons and property to whom, in the judgment of the president, protection may be due from the United States, until the president shall have first proclaimed amnesty for all political offences committed against the United States in the Philippines, and, if in his power, shall have agreed upon an armistice with the persons now in hostility to the United States, and shall have invited such number, not less than 10, as he shall think desirable, of the leaders or the representatives of the persons now hostile to the United States there, to come to the United States and state their wishes and condition, character and wishes of the people of the Philippine islands to the executive and congress, and shall have offered to secure to them safe conduct to come, abide and return, and shall have provided at the public charge for the expenses of their transportation, both ways, and their stay in this country for a reasonable and sufficient time for such purposes."

Good Afternoon.

The winter has only just begun.

It is a good thing for Quincy she doesn't need a bigger police station.

The city skating pond near Merrymount park is becoming very popular. Hundreds of young people enjoy skating there every day when there is ice.

For architectural beauty and general good looks the new Wollaston fire station far surpasses the Central Fire station. Wollaston is proud of the building, and so is Quincy.

Probably no work which the Park Commission have undertaken the past year has struck the popular chord more forcibly than the making of the great skating rink at the Merry Mount Park meadows. Thousands of people have enjoyed skating over this field of ice which at present is as smooth as glass. The rink covers an area of about 40 acres and is over 1,500 feet long.

Drift of Opinion.

☞ Mr. Cramp told the industrial commission that the difference between the first cost of a ship built here and one built abroad was scarcely worth consideration; the important thing adverse to American ownership was the expense of operation. Commissioner Chamberlain has been figuring out that the first cost in this country is much in excess of that abroad, but Mr. Cramp will not admit that his prices are higher than those of Harland & Wolf. As to the operating expenses, the American owner may ship his crew in a foreign port at the wages of the port, which brings the foreign sailor into direct competition with the American sailor, and leading American steamship companies do get a great part of their men in foreign ports. The American dietry is probably more expensive than the foreign, and there may be some minor odds against the American owner, but if the first cost of the American ship is not much more than that of the English ship, and sailors may be obtained abroad, the disadvantage of the American owner can hardly be serious.—New York Journal of Commerce.

Dr. Everett's Loss.

Friends of Dr. Everett were busy at the ruins all day yesterday, taking care of the books and searching for valuable relics. It is understood that the bill of John Elliot, the Indian apostle, valued at $2,000, was found intact. All that could be found of the Washington cane was the brass ferule. A life-sized figure of a stallion greyhound of Italian marble was saved. It is said of Dr. Everett, that were every copy of "Pilgrim's Progress" destroyed, that he could rewrite the entire book word for word. This is probably true in reference to other works, but the lifetime of Dr. Everett is too short to permit him to replace but a few of the books lost, even if he could.

—The Somerville Journal says: "It costs $22,000,000 a year to govern New York, and even at this high price the government of the city isn't nearly as good as that of Somerville."

SALARY DOUBLED.

City Council Increase That of City Solicitor to $1,400.

The last meeting of the City Council of 1900 was held Friday evening with 15 members, Councilmen Badger, Callahan, Cleverly, Johnson, Poland, Walsh and Wilson being absent.

A petition was received for a common victualler's license, and it was referred to the next Council.

SALARY OF SOLICITOR.

The order defining the duties of the City Solicitor took its second reading. The rules were suspended and the order passed.

The order increasing the salary of the City Solicitor from $700 to $1,200 a year took its second reading.

Upon motion of Councilman Alden the amount was changed to $1,500.

The rules were suspended. The order failed to pass by a vote of 8 in favor and 5 against, as follows:

YEAS — Alden, De Normandie, Elcock, Gassett, Hill, McLennon, Newcomb, Packard—8.

NAYS—Faxon, Freeman, Hogan, Nicol, Smith—5.

ABSENT—Badger, Callahan, Cleverly, Johnson, Poland, Walsh and Wilson—7.

Upon motion of Councilman Alden the vote was reconsidered. He then moved reference to next Council.

Councilman Freeman opposed. With increased duties under the order passed he would have to do all for $700 if the salary was not changed at this meeting.

Motion to refer lost.

Upon motion of Councilman De-Normandie the vote amending the order was reconsidered.

Councilman Packard would like to hear about the duties of the office.

Councilman Freeman gave the figures of amounts received by the City Solicitor in years past: In 1890, salary only; in 1891, salary and extras amounting to $1,031; in 1892, salary and extras amounting to $927; in 1893, salary and extras amounting to $852; in 1894, salary and extras amounting to $851; in 1895, the present ordinance defining duties of the office were passed; in 1896, total $1,139; in 1897, total, $1,500; in 1898, total $2,224; in 1899, total $1,945.

Continuing, he said, that as the Sewer department would probably soon be turned over to the Commissioner of Public Works, this would make extra work, for which charges had been made.

Councilman Packard moved the City Solicitor be called upon to give light on the duties of the office.

City Solicitor Sears said that it was very embarassing for him to say anything. He desired it to be distinctly understood that the request for change of salary was without the knowlege of the City Solicitor. He would speak for the office and not for the present holder of the office. Under the present ordinance the salary is a reduction of from $200 to $600 compared with past years, although duties are increased. The sewer was not considered when the original ordinance was drawn. During the past year and in the future there is bound to be Metropolitan hearings. Much time was given last year to these and Legislative hearings, taking three or four weeks from his private business. There were now claims against the city of over $100,000, not including those not yet docked. Under the new ordinance the Solicitor is obliged to attend to these without extra cost, also to examine titles, which is a difficult task that takes much time and is really a branch by itself.

Councilman Alden. He has told you of the duties of his office and then again it should be considered that his knowledge is worth something. He moved to amend by making the amount $1,400. Voted.

Councilman Smith said that now he had a full knowledge of the duties of the office he should change his vote and support the order.

The order was then passed to be ordained, Councilman Hogan alone voting no.

Upon motion of Councilman Freeman all unfinished business was referred to the next City Council.

Adjourned at 8.02, probably sine die.

OLD DUTCH COLONIAL.

Floor Plans Are Especially Well Arranged—Costs $4,000.

This design shows a colonial house with elegantly arranged floor plans. The wide piazza, extending across the front and around the side, enables the occupants to find shelter from the hot summer sun at all times of the day.

Upon entering the hall you are greeted with a style of architecture that prevailed in the period of the Revolution, what is termed the old Dutch colonial. The exposed beams on the ceiling and the high paneled wainscoting are very effective. This hall is ornamented with an elaborate winding open staircase with carved newels and balusters. Directly back of the front doors is a pair of sliding doors entering the sitting room, which is also a very pleasant room, separated from the parlor by sliding doors. The parlor is a large room, with windows looking out in every direction.

The dining room and kitchen are on the other side of the hall, entirely separated from the rest of the house. The dining room is provided with two china closets and a buffet, and also a large window seat looking on the front of the house. The pantry and kitchen are fitted up with all the modern improvements.

The second story has four large rooms and a bath fitted up with an iron enameled bathtub and open set fixtures with nickel plated trimmings. Each bedroom is provided with a large closet.

The attic contains two bedrooms and a billiard room of good size. The woodwork is oak on the first floor and cypress on the second and attic.

The exterior is painted three good coats of paint.

Cost complete, $4,000.

Some Kitchen Hints.

"When I furnish a kitchen as my workroom, some idea as to convenience and the saving of time and steps modifies the arrangement of things," says a writer in Good Housekeeping. "All the utensils are kept as near as possible to where they will be needed. The tin covers of saucepans and kettles are on a rack within reach of the range. The cooking forks and spoons have their niches just below. The little paring knife I like best is not in the knife box amid carvers and mixing spoons, but where I can get it without leaving the low rocker where I sit when preparing vegetables. The bread knife and cutting board (which last is apt to be the cover of a grape basket, light and clean) are always convenient to the bread jar. Two or three favorite saucepans are kept hanging abroad, in full view, near the water faucet, for is not the first step toward cooking almost everything the preparing of some freshly boiled water?"

For Washing Paint.

An excellent soap for washing woodwork, straw matting or oilcloth is made by dissolving a bar of soap in a pint of boiling water. Add a tablespoonful of borax and set it aside to cool. Add enough of this soap to a bucket half full of water to make a good suds and wash with a soft flannel cloth. Rinse with clear water and wipe quite dry. The borax makes the cleaning easy and does not injure the paint or oilcloth. Give the oilcloth one or two coats of varnish during the year, and it will greatly lengthen its period of usefulness.

St. Mary's Ball.

The twenty-fifth anniversary ball of St. Mary's C. T. A. and M. B. Society was held last evening at St. Mary's hall and was the social event of the season, in that section of the city. Previous to the ball there was a promenade concert by the Pioneer Singing Orchestra who also furnished music for the dancing. The grand march took place at 9 o'clock. It was led by Mr. Philip T. Egan and Miss Mary McLaughlin, they were followed by fifty or more couples. At midnight Caterer Nash served a supper. Mr. Philip T. Egan was floor director and Mr. Edward Finn assistant and they were assisted by a large corps of aids. Thomas D. McGrath was chairman of the committee of arrangements and Lewis Pendis, secretary and treasurer.

MANY NOVELTIES

At Carnival and Reception of Prof. Kaplan's Classes.

One of the largest gatherings ever in Music hall was in attendance at the carnival and reception of Prof. Kiplan's classes last night, and the exhibition was very pleasing to fond parents and other friends of the pupils. More novelities mere introduced than it was thought possible, particularly in the grand march.

The orchestra chairs were arraigned in rows on the sides and rear of the hall, the stage being reserved for the pupils. The balcony was literally crowded with people to the rear wall.

When the programme opened the adult class was seated on raised seats at the rear of the platform, and there were tiers of seats in front down to the floor.

The juvenile class was introduced in twelve parts each entering by the main entrance from the annex, and taking positions on the enlarged stage, as follows:

1. Boys of the class.
2. Infantry, cavalry, rough riders and firemen.
3. Group of fancy dancers.
4. Fairies.
5. Skirt dancers.
6. Bowery girls.
7. Doll dancers.
8. Butterfly dancer.
9. Queen Victoria.
10. Admiral and Mrs. Dewey.
11. Baby Cake-walkers.
12. Grand march.

Most of the boys in the first group wore white blouses. The next group were in costume, and so were the others. The fancy dancers and fairies wore very pretty gowns. The bowery girls were cute little tots and also the doll dancers. The butterfly dancer was a feature in herself especially when her wings were spread.

Queen Victoria was a young miss who won applause for her stately bearing, and was the recipient of a bouquet. Bouquets were also presented to Admiral and Mrs. Dewey who were in costume. The baby cake walkers won their share of approbation.

The grand march was led by Prof. Kaplan and Mrs. Phelan of Quincy one of his pupils, and balls of the future will find it hard to copy.

The specialties of the juvenile class included the Sailors' hornpipe, Fishers' hornpipe, the dance of a young miss who changed her steps when the music changed, waltz of a young lady with glass of water on her head, another with the addition of glasses of water in each hand, and also fancy solo dances. The groups mentioned in the program above also took their special parts.

The program of the adult class included the Rye, Danish and Oxford Waltzes, Newport Caprice and Santiago two step.

It was 10.30 before the prize waltz was reached, and as his pupils were excluded only a half dozen couples entered. Miss Bertha Richards won the ladies prize, and Mr. William McKenna, the gentlemen's prize. They were not partners.

Miss Harkins was awarded the prize for selling the most tickets, and Miss Whitmore the free class ticket.

Prof. Kaplan was presented by the adult class with a smoking jacket, and by the children with meerschaum pipe match box and a horse shoe floral piece.

Dancing was opened to all after the prize waltz and was continued until 2 A. M. when special electric cars were run.

NEW HOUSES
FOR SALE.

Just to remind you that I have another lot of houses nearly completed, I will list these three bargains:

Many were disappointed on the last lot so be on hand early if you would be in it.

Also, one of eight rooms and bath, Independence avenue; all modern improvements, bounds on two streets, can sell for $500 less than real value. This house is of the popular size to suit any business man, and is very roomy and convenient. I don't like to have other builders know how I am cutting prices, but $3,000 buys this one, look at it and compare with others you see building.

Another, and a money maker for some one with only an ounce of pluck. This is a two-family House, 5 rooms and bath each, and 50 foot lot, $3,000. Pay in $500 on this and I will guarantee you a twenty five per cent. investment for one year; who would dare invest in a twenty-five per cent. GUARANTEED investment.

Remember these houses are built by competent workmen, by the day, of the best material, and are personally superintended by the owner, are but four minutes to station, electrics pass, and everything is most desirable as a residential section. All houses are connected with sewer and cellars are perfectly dry.

Come and look them over and select one that suits you. Can be seen any day.

PRISONERS' GRIEVANCES

Recited Before Investigators of Prison Methods

A DISCHARGED POLICEMAN

Is Night Officer at Boston House of Correction — How the Head of the Institution Regards the Question of Solitary Confinement

Boston, Jan. 5.—Some interesting testimony was adduced at the South Boston house of correction yesterday in the investigation by the aldermanic committee appointed for the purpose. Alderman O'Brien presided.

The hearing began with John Whiton, the master of the institution, on the stand. Counsel Dennison asked if he had a night officer by the name of Leon Harris, and the master replied that he had. He added that Harris was once a policeman, and questions from counsel brought out the fact that Whiton knew that Harris was the policeman who was discharged for alleged brutality to a citizen. Whiton said that Superintendent Eldridge told him that Harris was discharged because of the charge brought against him, but he understood that the charge was by no means proved.

Dennison asked: "Do you think a man who had been discharged from the police force after a full and complete hearing on a charge of brutality to a citizen is a proper man for a place here?"

"I think this man was," replied Whiton.

The question of solitary confinement was taken up. Mr. Whiton said that four years ago light was admitted to the solitary cells in the hospital. A solitary cell contains a plank, two or three blankets, a bucket, a quart dipper of water and a loaf of bread. The water is supplied once a day, and each man gets about three-quarters of a quart. Formerly each prisoner was given a pint of water and one-half pound of bread. The bread allowance is now three-quarters of a pound. In reply to questions by the counsel for the committee, Whiton said that a man is usually confined in solitary for three days, but there have been cases where men have been confined for a longer period, six or nine days. The usual offenses which lead to an extension of solitary confinement are singing, whistling, talking or pounding. For any of these offenses a man's confinement in solitary may be extended. Mr. Dennison asked if the law did not provide that a man shall not be in solitary confinement for more than three days at a time, without notice to the commissioner. Mr. Whiton replied that a five-minute walk was considered a break in the continuity of solitary, and that after serving the lawful three days he might be given a five-minute walk and a bath and put back for three days more.

"Then by your theory solitary confinement of a man for three, six, nine, 12 or any number of days, can be justified?" asked the counsel.

"It can," answered the master.

"Then if a man sings on the second day of his first solitary he may be given an additional three days?"

"He may."

One prisoner, a Pole, named Turk, stated that, although he has been subject to epileptic fits for a long time, he has received practically no medical attention, and has been compelled to remain in his cell when he was unfit to be there.

Another, a colored prisoner named Barret, stated that his wooden leg was taken away from him when he was placed in solitary confinement, and that he was forced to remain there for six days, with only an interval of an hour, when he was let out.

Mary Russell, another colored prisoner, testified that she has been five times in solitary confinement since last March, once for six days, and that she had been forced to work at the washtub when she had hemorrhages of a serious nature, and was otherwise sick.

After further testimony as to food supplies, etc., the hearing adjourned.

Turkish Diplomat Reinstated

London, Jan. 5.—Ali Ferrouh Bey, who was recently displaced as Turkish minister in Washington in favor of Mustapha Bey, has been reinstated, says the Constantinople correspondent of The Times, because of the fear that he might join the young Turkish party. He will receive £10,000 as commission on the new Ottoman cruiser to be built by the Cramps Shipbuilding company.

A Pessimistic Prophecy

St. Petersburg, Jan. 5.—The Novoe Vremya characterizes the Chinese acceptance of the peace terms of the powers as being a formality due to China's inability to oppose the European armies. The paper adds that the next catastrophe is probably not far distant, and that it will far surpass the recent occurrences.

Youngster Has Set Many Fires

Boston, Jan. 5.—Richard Erwin, aged 12, has confessed that he has set several fires at Woburn. The boy, who has no mother and whose father has requested the state to take charge of him as an unruly child, said that he had set the first fire shortly after his mother's death, four years ago.

An Important Decision

Boston, Jan. 5.—The supreme court yesterday settled, a much disputed question that, maliciously and without justifiable cause, to induce a third person to end his employment by discharging plaintiff, whether induced by false slander or successful pursuasion, is an actionable wrong.

MONEY ALL PLEDGED

Yachtsmen Will Chip In Enough to Built Centreboard Cup Defender

Boston, Jan. 5.—The Post says: Forty thousand dollars, in addition to the sums already subscribed, were practically assured yesterday for the Hanley centreboard cup defender. This means that the boat will be built, as enough money is now in sight to exceed the total of $75,000 necessary to build the boat and carry it through the trial and cup races. After a meeting of four men interested in yachting, held at Young's hotel, one of the quartet said to a member of the Hanley syndicate: "We will subscribe $40,000 toward the centreboard boat. You may set us down for that amount."

By a simple calculation in arithmetic, it becomes plain that this amount, added to the total in sight, exceeds the cost of the boat. The sum of $16,000 had been previously pledged, and one of the officers of the Hanley construction company had promised that if $50,000 could be raised by subscription, he will make up the other $25,000.

Manufacturing Company In Debt

Boston, Jan. 5.—The Glasgow Manufacturing company of South Hadley is in the hands of receivers. A bill of equity brought in the United States circuit court yesterday alleged in substance that the company owed about $100,000; that its assets were wasting, and that receivers should be appointed forthwith for the protection of creditors. Counsel for the company admitted the debt, and practically assented to the appointment of William Hill and C. F. Smith as receivers. The company operates a cotton mill.

Fisherman Had Rough Time of It

Eastport, Me., Jan. 5.—While smelt fishing on Pennamaquan river, Isaac Goff, 34 years old, broke through the ice and for nearly an hour and a half struggled for his life in the water, while the mercury above registered 11 degrees below zero. A number of persons witnessed his struggles from the bank of the river, but were powerless to aid him, and only for his great presence of mind and endurance he would surely have drowned. Goff suffered intensely from the effects of his accident.

Rumor Has No Foundation

Cambridge, Mass., Jan. 5.—In regard to the rumor that has come from San Francisco that President Eliot has resigned from Harvard university, to be succeeded by the president of the University of California, Dr. Wolcott, acting president of Harvard in President Eliot's absence, says: "President Eliot has not the slightest intention of resigning, and the corporation has not the slightest intention of accepting his resignation even if he should wish to resign."

Griswold Again Sentenced

Norwich, Conn., Jan. 5.—George L. Griswold, a former collector of taxes, who is now serving a sentence of two years in state prison for embezzling $5000 of the taxes of the town of Norwich, was present in the superior court yesterday and pleaded guilty to embezzling $15,000 of Norwich city taxes, while collector in 1897. Judge Prentiss sentenced him to two years and three months' imprisonment, the sentence to begin at the expiration of his first one.

Held Many Positions of Honor

Boston, Jan. 5.—William T. Van Nostrand, one of the pioneer brewers of this country, died yesterday at his home in Charlestown, after an illness of some months. Mr. Van Nostrand was born at Hempstead, N. Y., in 1821. He was a member of the state legislature in 1863-67. In 1868 he was elected to the common council, and the following year was elected to the board of aldermen. He served two terms as state senator.

Rubber Trust Cuts Prices

Negotiations which have been pending with the 14 independent companies have been declared off It is announced that another and more severe cut will be made in April. Unconscious For Over a Month

Exeter, N. H., Jan. 5.—The preliminary hearing given to Martin Tohen, who is charged with murderous assault with an axe on William Hudson, an aged farmer and his employer, was begun yesterday, and is unfinished. The evidence given was entirely circumstantial, as Judson cannot testify. For more than a month he has laid in an unconscious state, due to a fractured skull.

Regarded as a "Joke"

Boston, Jan. 5.—Dorchester police have been notified that Mrs. Harry Vinal has been receiving anonymous letters telling her that unless she leaves a certain sum of money at a stated place tomorrow her 9-year-old daughter will be kidnapped. Captain Hunt of the Dorchester station expresses the opinion that it is the work of some joker.

Demented Man In Custody

Providence, Jan. 5.—A demented young man, who has been wandering about the state, was taken into custody and adjudged insane yesterday. He either did not remember his name or would not give it, and the only means of identification was the laundry mark on his underclothes—C. Rogers.

Work May Be Resumed

Woburn, Mass., Jan. 5.—The F. A. Loring leather factory in Woburn, which has been idle since an explosion occurred there about six years ago, when several lives were lost, has been bought by a syndicate. It is understood that the factory will be repaired and put into operation.

KIDNAPING OF CUDAHY.

Action of the Victim's Father Criticised by Detectives.

MEN MIGHT HAVE BEEN CAPTURED

Pinkerton's Men Assert That They Could Have Caught the Outlaws and That the Boy Was In No Danger—Details of Their Plan of Capture.

The amazing conspiracy resulting in the abduction of young Eddie Cudahy, the only son of the millionaire packer of Omaha, and the payment of a ransom continues to be an absorbing topic of conversation in Omaha. The ease with which the daring plot was consummated and the boldness with which the whole thing was designed and executed seem almost incredible at this day and time, says the New York Times. From the window of his temporary prison young Eddie Cudahy could have seen his father's packing houses, provided the curtains had been removed. In fact, he remarked after his release upon the nearness of his place of captivity to the packing houses because of the pronounced odor.

This phase of the case was the first clew the Pinkertons selected. The boy related that the odor from the packing plants was most intense the whole time he was a prisoner. The detectives sought the local weather bureau and ascertained that during all of Tuesday evening and Wednesday and Wednesday night, the period of the boy's imprisonment, the wind at Omaha was due north. The detectives then agreed that the boy's temporary jail was but a short distance north of the packing houses, and at once began a search of all the vacant houses in the section that were located in that territory. They are very numerous, but the force of searchers were near to the very den in which the robbers had confined their victim when a boy who had seen the horse described as belonging to the bandits tied at the old house telephoned the police, and the search for the place was over.

One of the most singular phases of the whole case, according to a leading Pinkerton man engaged on it, is the ease with which the bandits secured the ransom and the immunity from interference which they appeared to have enjoyed. The Pinkertons point out that here was the opportunity for the police to have bagged their game, and, in fact, it was about the only weak point of the case, so far as the bandits were concerned. Chief of Police John Donahue admits, too, that in attempting to secure the gold deposited by the frantic father the robbers left a breach in their plans which would have resulted in their capture, but he explains that he was unable to do as he desired at this stage of the game because of Mr. Cudahy's positive refusal to take the police into his confidence for fear that they would scare the bandits away in trying to capture them and he would risk the life of his son.

Mr. Cudahy told the chief clearly that he must keep his hands off until he got his boy. Then he would offer a reward, and they could go to work on the case. Chief Donahue did point out the ease with which the men could be taken while they were trying to escape with a hundred pounds of gold, but the point the bandits made in their letter demanding the money—that the police had prevented the father of Charley Ross from paying the ransom demanded and the boy had thus been lost to his parents forever—had the desired effect.

It is now clear that it would have been the easiest thing in the world to have either captured or killed the daring chief of the outlaw band who undertook the dangerous task of receiving the ransom. In fact, the chief of Omaha's police had figured the case out very correctly up to this point. The letter of the kidnapers explained that Mr. Cudahy should take the gold in his buggy and drive west along the Center street boulevard until he reached a point where he should observe a lantern tied to a tree or bush by the roadside. The letter did not explain how far the father would have to go, and in this there was great cunning manifested on the part of the thieves. Had the letter stipulated a certain point for the cash to be delivered a cordon of officers and civilians would have been placed around the place, and capture would have been certain.

As numerous vehicles passed the point where the lantern signal was shown just before and just after Mr. Cudahy arrived and no light was seen, it is quite certain the robbers knew of the approach of the Cudahy vehicle and did not light the signal until the Cudahy buggy was within a short distance of the rendezvous. In fact, Mr. Cudahy said, he was within a few yards of the light when it suddenly flared up as if just lighted or just uncovered. These facts make it quite probable that there was one robber stationed at the point where the signal light was to be exhibited and another on a bicycle who followed close behind the Cudahy buggy to be sure there was no guard following Mr. Cudahy who would undertake to interfere with the operation of the robbers. Either this was the case or but one robber was out on the road. This is the view many of the detectives take of this phase of the case.

Mr. Cudahy recalls that when he was within a quarter of a mile of the place where the light was shown a small man bending low over a bicycle passed by him swiftly and disappeared in the direction of where the light was seen a few minutes later. The detectives think this man on the wheel was either one of the bandits, who was the first assured that there was no one following Edward Cudahy and was then to dart forward and have his brother bandit in waiting show the signal, or that he carried the lantern and dismounted from his wheel at this point with the lantern which he carried or had secreted in advance, which he immediately lighted and displayed.

If this were so, the robber of necessity either followed Edward Cudahy from the time he left his home or was intimate enough with the Cudahy vehicles to be able to recognize the buggy as it passed him in his hiding place, somewhere along the road. The last proposition is more likely, because at that time the entire neighborhood around the Cudahy residence was in a state of alarm, and a stranger found waiting around there, as the robber must have done if he were looking for Mr. Cudahy to start on his trip to the woods, would have been arrested or would have excited suspicion. Mr. Cudahy noted that the lantern was extinguished before he had proceeded 50 yards from the spot. This was another indication of the boldness of the robber and of his utter indifference to danger or detection.

Here was where the detectives are inclined to think the Omaha police erred in not making certain the capture of at least one of the robbers. They knew the route Mr. Cudahy would take to reach the locality described by the letter of the bandits. The route was over a natural bicycle course. It is a sand boulevard and stretches for seven miles west into the adjoining county. At intervals of every quarter section along this boulevard are intersecting dirt roads, which on that night were in perfect condition for bicycling. The detectives of the Pinkerton agency argue that it would have been the easiest thing imaginable to have placed a couple of well armed and nervy policemen in citizen's clothes just beyond the city limits along this route to watch for the approach of the Cudahy buggy. They could have let the wagon get a half mile ahead of them, or at least far enough ahead that it could just be discerned by the bicycle scouts. If one of the bandits had been following on a wheel, he could not have been any farther back than this behind the Cudahy buggy.

Taking it for granted that one of the bandits on a wheel was behind the Cudahy buggy, the detectives would have probably located the thief before he did them. If he took alarm and started on a run for it, they could have speeded right after him. Certainly the presence of a strange man in that section on a wheel at that time at night would have been sufficiently suspicious for the detectives to have halted him. The city has a number of very speedy bicycle men. If they had been forced to arrest the bandit scout on his wheel before he had committed an overt act, they would at least have been in a position where they could have made the man explain who he was and what he was doing out there at that hour. Had he been a known crook it would have been certain evidence of his guilt. Had it been an honest man the police had stopped by mistake, one officer could have taken him back to town for identification while the other continued on after the Cudahy buggy.

If the bicycle detectives had not been interrupted, they would have continued in Mr. Cudahy's rear until they saw his vehicle stop and the driver place the sack of gold near the lantern. The scouts could have crept up near enough to watch any one moving around the light without exciting the suspicion of a robber lying in wait near that point. The moment the detectives saw a man around the lantern they could have recourse to two steps. They might have followed the retreating form at a distance, which would have been easy, since the robbers were carrying a hundred pounds of gold, or they could have rushed in with pistols ready and either killed or captured their man. If he made a fight, he would have been killed. With his heavy load he might have been possibly pounced upon and taken without firing a shot. In that event he would have been forced to tell where Eddie Cudahy was or at least held as a hostage for the boy's safe delivery. Better still, if the scouts remained undiscovered, they could have leisurely followed the retreating thief back to the prison of the boy and there taken the whole outfit or from the darkness killed them with their pistols.

Of course there was the chance of the plan failing and the robbers then murdering or crippling the boy and taking flight. It is the consensus of opinion that the robbers, discovering that the ransom was not obtainable would have fled without hurting the boy. They could not have taken the boy with them, neither could they have remained long where they were without discovery. They would not have dared put their horrible threats into execution, which contemplated burning out the boy's eyes. Had they done this and they were captured their immediate lynching would have followed, whereas if they had been captured after releasing the boy a short term in the penitentiary would have been their worst punishment.

A Twentieth Century Hope.

Christianity is old beside Darwinism. It is still a living force, and evolution, we believe, is a great scientific truth. Somehow the two must get along together, says the Toronto World. Man stands in need of a rule of life even more than he stands in need of an accounting of variety in species. It is better to have both, and both we have, as a matter of fact. If Darwinism is the glory of the century, Christianity has been the mainstay of many centuries, and somehow the two must find, as they are finding, a way to march together for the century to come.

ON A FIRM FOOTING

New Year Finds General Business In a Healthy Condition

New York, Jan. 5.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s weekly review of trade says: In spite of the interruptions of the holiday and of the unusually heavy annual settlements in all lines of business, the New Year opens with indications of further progress. It is a relief in iron and steel as well as some textile markets, that tension has not developed with respect to labor. In some departments of cotton goods there is a better movement though speculation has depressed the price of the raw material. Otherwise a decline in wheat is the only noteworthy movement in staples. It is explained by a reduction in the flour output at Minneapolis, some mills shutting down, while the foreign demand at Atlantic seaboard cities is not brisk. The ordinary measures of business continue to make gratifying exhibits.

No alteration has yet occurred in quotations of iron and steel products, and this industry is on such firm foundation that most large concerns have maintained wages at the old scale, instead of making the reductions anticipated.

The market for textiles has been featureless, as the holidays and stock taking reduced business to limited dimensions. Wool has again declined. Cotton goods have not the same difficulties to contend with, but an abnormally high price for raw material acts as a check on this industry.

Local jobbing and retail trade is brisk in boots and shoes, and many manufacturers are behind with orders.

Sixto Lopez Has Doubts

Chicago, Jan. 5.—"This is about the 40th time Aguinaldo has been killed," said Senor Lopez, the Filipino envoy, when he was shown the report that the insurgent leader was dead, which had come through President Wheeler of the University of California, and was based upon the statements of Filipino students in his charge. "All that I can say definitely about the matter is that Aguinaldo was alive when I received my last advices. But the death of Aguinaldo would really not make so very much difference in carrying on the campaign. There are other generals in the field who are just as capable as Aguinaldo, and if he was killed the war would go right on just the same."

Faced Practical Slavery

Biera, Portuguese East Africa, Jan. 4.—On the arrival of the German steamer Hertzog at Beira, with 136 Abyssinians and Somalis for the Rhodesian mines, the "boys," as they are called, were informed that they would be compelled to work in chains. Thereupon they refused to go ashore. Portuguese police and troops were summoned, and a big fight ensued. Victory rested with the police, after an hour's fighting. One Somali was killed and 26 were wounded. Nine of the police were wounded. Subsequently it was found that there were only 50 "boys" on the steamer, the remainder having jumped overboard.

Skirmishing With Filipinos

Manila, Jan. 5.—Generals Wheaton and Bates report many small captures, the destruction of insurgent camps and the seizure of supplies, animals and other necessities. Among the captures was Colonel Techon, the insurgent governor of Tarlac. Insurgents entered Gapan and San Isidro, in General Funston's district, during the night, and burned a score of houses. Their firing was ineffective.

Does Not Want to Return

Jacksonville, Fla., Jan. 5.—William H. Rockwell, a 15-year-old boy, who ran away from his home in Taunton, Mass., and for whom a systematic search was made by his millionaire grandfather, Charles H. Swan of New York, was found here yesterday, selling lunches in a restaurant. He declares he will not return home.

Retires From Military Service

Boston, Jan. 5.—Governor Crane has received the application of Brigadier General William A. Bancroft for retirement, and caused an order to be issued placing the general on the retired list of the M. V. M., as a major general. General Bancroft retires from active service in the militia on account of the pressure of business.

College Boys to Be In Line

Washington, Jan. 5.—One of the most conspicuous features of the forthcoming inaugural parade will be a section composed of college men. Assurances have been received at inaugural headquarters, indicating the presence in the parade of delegations of from 90 to 200 men each from 43 leading educational institutions.

Two Negroes Lynched

Madison, Fla., Jan. 5.—Two colored men, Jim Denson and a half-brother, were taken from the county jail here by persons unknown, carried into the woods about a half mile from town and hanged. The bodies were riddled with bullets. They were charged with killing Frederick Redding, a farmer.

Expensive Tinkering on Baltimore

Washington, Jan. 5.—The navy board on construction yesterday decided almost completely to rehabilitate the cruiser Baltimore, now lying at the New York navy yard. Her improvements will involve an expenditure of about $500,000, and take at least a year and a half to complete.

IT'S CHILD'S PLAY

To treat a woman for a disease year after year and give her no permanent relief. Yet that has been the case with scores of women who have "doctored" for year after year unhelped and unhealed, to find at last that a few bottles of Doctor Pierce's Favorite Prescription would have saved years of suffering and a great deal of money.

For the regulation of the periods, the stopping of disagreeable drains, the healing of inflammation and ulceration, and the cure of female weakness, there is no medicine can equal Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It makes weak women strong and sick women well.

"About five years ago I had very poor health," writes Mrs. S. E. Whalen, of Holden, Johnson Co., Missouri. "After doctoring four years with our town doctors they gave my case up; said they had done all they could. I had been confined to my bed half my time; the other half could hardly drag around. I had such pains in my back and abdomen I could not stand for more than a few minutes. My feet were cold or burning, and my periods came too often. The doctors said it was change of life, so, as I had heard of Dr. Pierce's medicines, my husband got me a bottle of 'Favorite Prescription.' I took it and it helped me in some ways, so I wrote to you and followed your advice. I commenced 'Favorite Prescription,' Golden Medical Discovery' and the 'Pellets,' as I was so constipated all the time and pills would weaken me so that I would have to go to bed. To the great surprise of everybody I got well, and when I met my friends they would say, 'We never thought you would be here now.' But I can say it was your medicine, which no doubt is the best in the world. Have had no use for doctors since I tried your medicine."

WAS NOT REMOVED.

Chief Williams Says That Driver Weeks Resigned.

The article published in Friday's Ledger in relation to Charles E. Weeks, driver of combination, No. 1, of the Central fire station, has stirred up quite a breeze in certain quarters, the claim made being that he was not removed, but that he resigned his position as driver. The first information received was that he had been removed. Chief Williams was communicated with by telephone and the inference drawn from his conversation was that Weeks had driven by the hydrant and the fire, and that evening he was removed. Driver Weeks denies that he was removed.

Chief Williams when seen this morning said he did not desire to say anything about the matter, and nothing about it should have been published. Upon being questioned further he said that Mr. Weeks was not removed, but that he resigned.

It is a fact that the Chief and Driver Weeks had some words after the fire. The rumors that the wagon was driven into South Walnut and Union streets do not appear to be facts, for Driver Weeks informs the Ledger that he turned into Miller Stile road in responding to the alarm and that he had no knowledge where the fire was until he reached South street. To stop three spirited horses as quickly as he did, would seem to be all that could be expected under the circumstances.

A TEACHING MACHINE.

New Way of Acquiring Ancient and Modern Languages.

Some time ago a teacher of languages in New York city found that his time was so filled by professional engagements that he had either to refuse new students or else turn them over to an assistant. At this juncture it was suggested to him that he could multiply himself indefinitely by using the phonograph. He tried the experiment and after a little practice found that he could make a record which would enunciate as clearly and sonorously as himself, says the New York Post. This was the beginning of a new system. When he announced his invention to the public, it met with a smile and now and then an expression of incredulity. Curiosity seekers and students who came to hear the records, however, were agreeably disappointed and surprised. The moment they applied the ear pieces to their ears they found that the voice was almost indistinguishable from that of the professor. It had one great advantage over the man. Whenever a student desired to have a specific sound repeated it was no longer necessary to interfere with the tenor of the discourse. All he had to do was to stop the motor and move the cylinder back a few spaces. In this way he was able to have the vowels and accents which pertain exclusively to other languages repeated indefinitely.

The system as finally evolved is very simple. The student receives a language phone with the receiver tubing, ten records and a textbook. The latter gives the grammatical and theoretical knowledge and the former the practical part of the instruction. The books educate the eye and the phonograph the ear. One may study as he pleases. He may give himself a course of ten lectures and conversations, or he may repeat each separate lesson until it is so memorized as to become a part of his mind. While he is learning the members of his household may join in the acquisition of the tongue selected. A family of moderate ability can in this wise master a fair knowledge of any of the European languages within a year.

The languagephone seems to afford the right method of attacking the numerous tongues of the far east. These at present are a sealed book to the western world on account of their having no alphabetic characters, but only ideographs. In addition to this difficulty are the singular accents or intonations which are such a stumbling block to the Caucasian ear. The languagephone will obviate both difficulties and enable the amateur sinologue to progress fivefold more rapidly than under any other existing system.

ELECTRICITY FROM RIVERS.

Plan on Foot to Supply Philadelphia With Cheap Power.

Philadelphia capitalists have under consideration a plan to employ water power as a substitute for steam in the production of electricity, says the Philadelphia Press: It is proposed to utilize the waters of some accessible river and transmit the electricity by cable to Philadelphia and other cities for electric railways, lighting and power supply. The financial advantage of the use of water power is great, and the scheme if organized, as is now probable, will mean a revolution in power supply.

The project provides for the use of a river the waters of which may be dammed to procure the vast power which may be demanded. The Susquehanna, the Patapsco, the Delaware and the Schuylkill have all been suggested, any one of which would be adaptable. Power houses would be built along the river banks, and the electricity manufactured would be carried to Philadelphia and other cities by heavy copper cables.

This means of production and transportation is much more economical than the present separate plants of production. In order to supply the electricity used for running the cars, lighting and other purposes the Union Traction and the Philadelphia Electric companies have been under tremendous expense. More power houses, involving heavy expenditures of money for equipment and connecting cables, are now in use. Yet they are insufficient.

Dainty Lure For Churchgoers.

Devices to attract congregations to church are spreading from sensationalism to a businesslike æstheticism. The Sussex Daily News says there is a place of worship where tiny bouquets of flowers are, at the close of every morning service, handed to each lady member of the congregation. During service the flowers decorate the altar and the pulpit. The plan is defended on the ground that since it was instituted the congregation has largely increased, and the larger offertory enables the clergy to distribute more money among the parish charities. Success, however, was largely assured from the fact that the parish mainly consists of houses without gardens, and flowers therefore cannot be grown to any great extent.

Altruism the Century's Gift.

But there is one peculiar product of this age—the greatest gift of this century to the succeeding age is the popularizing of the teaching which says "Live for others." That altruism is the most conspicuous principle developed by our century is shown by its presence today in all departments of our civilization, says the Chicago Tribune. Our books and thoughts are saturated with altruism. It is the background of all our popular literature to such an extent that one of our most successful publishers states that "no book sells well unless it impresses one with an enthusiasm for humanity."

FUTURE WAR ENGINES.

General Greely's Predictions For the Twentieth Century.

NOTABLE ADVANCES TO BE MADE.

Famous Military Authority Believes That Aerial Ships Will Be Utilized as Agents of Destruction—Navigation to Proceed on Three Lines. Aeroplanes to Carry Dead Weights.

Scientific forecasts for a century must be regarded as merely vague suggestions, especially in an age of such tremendous advances as have characterized the nineteenth century, says General A. W. Greely in the New York Herald. War in the twentieth century must to a greater extent than ever before make tributary the sciences of commerce and industry. The evolution of offensive military methods must invariably be in the direction of improved mechanism which will be automatically operated.

Improved means of observation, communication and transportation will surely follow, as indispensable to efficiency. The most notable advances will be:

First.—Rapid fire machine guns of considerably extended power and range and so constructed that the fire can be controlled and regulated automatically with the greatest precision.

Second.—Devices wherewith high explosives can be safely thrown long distances, but so accurately delivered as to effectually shatter and destroy all objects adjacent to the point of its delivery.

Third.—Extensive improvements in mechanical traction, suited to its efficient use in a rough country and capable of concentrating rapidly men and material.

Fourth.—Adaptations and improvements in electrical devices which shall make surprises impossible and largely increase the facilities for the collection and diffusion of military intelligence.

Fifth.—The development of aerial navigation, which from its expense, difficulty and danger will first be utilized for war purposes rather than as a means of transportation. Such navigable means will serve for observation and for the effective delivery of high explosives.

The evolution of aerial navigation will proceed in three lines—viz, balloons, flying machines and a combination of the two. The dirigible balloons in their constructive system will tend eventually to the use of very light metal, whereby sufficient strength of the envelope will be gained so as to safely permit great speed of travel and ability to withstand great air pressure.

The flying machine will be improved so that the carrying of dead weights—say perhaps half a ton—can be done with ease and to moderate distances. This possibility will be the first system of acknowledged practicability.

The combined method—that of separate balloons with attached chambers, of which the Zeppelin airship is a type—will be so developed that it can carry large weights for long distances, although the landing of such an airship must necessarily be a problem of such difficulty and danger as to confine its use to war purposes.

The American Soldier In China.

In spite of his many handicaps the American soldier has fully held his own, writes Thomas F. Millard in the January Scribner's. He has numerous weaknesses, but fear of the enemy is not, fortunately for the security of the republic, among them. I heard foreign officers freely criticise his military manners and organization, but never his fighting qualities, once his burden of antiquated methods has been cast aside and he faces the foe on the firing line. Then is he as he always was and, let us hope, always will be. In all the criticism one hears there is an undercurrent of respect. I never see him in a fight but I feel with absolute certainty that the American soldier will ever give a good account of himself if not asked to do more than should be asked of a man. Other elements being approximately equal the stoutest heart and steadiest nerve will win the most battles. In these qualities Uncle Sam's boys are second to none. "They've done their share," is the verdict of people in China who have been here through it all.

Why American Trade Wins.

According to a Calcutta correspondent, the port commissioners of that city recently invited tenders from both English and American builders for locomotives. The lowest English tender quoted £1,544 each, and the firm asked nine months to complete the order. The lowest American tender was £1,260, the order to be completed in six months. The commissioners have accepted the American tender subject to the approval of the government of India. They save a quarter of a lak of rupees by doing so.

MEN AS THEY PASS.

Senator Clark started in life driving a mule team to haul supplies into western mining camps. Today he is the richest mining man in the western hemisphere.

Mr. Dillingham, the new senator from Vermont, is one of the few senators, possibly the only one, who has thoroughly mastered the art of operating a typewriter.

Arthur Balfour, the English statesman, can bear on the part of his friends nothing in the shape of disloyalty. It will goad him to fury, and he is said never to forgive it.

The famous blind oculist, Dr. Javal of Paris, has just been promoted to the highest rank in the French Legion of Honor and has been offered the decoration of the Black Eagle.

Wilson Barrett, the actor and dramatist, after eight years of hard work has succeeded in paying off debts amounting to $300,000 and enters upon the new century absolutely free from debts.

Sir Ernest Mason Satow, the new British minister to China, began his career in the diplomatic service as an interpreter in the Japanese legation in 1865 and has worked his way up step by step.

Former President of Venezuela Andrade, who was exiled after the last revolution and all of whose real estate and property were confiscated, is living in New York very quietly, but most prosperously.

The Duke of Manchester was shown over the Cincinnati police headquarters the other day and was examined according to the Bertillon system. He had the largest head on the police records, 8½ by 6½ inches.

"Kid" Fox, a Fort Scott colored man in the penitentiary for a term of three years, has written to a lawyer offering to become his slave for life if the lawyer will only get him out. And Fox explains that he means it literally.

Liberty Hyde Bailey, the most celebrated living horticulturist, professor of general and experimental horticulture in Cornell university, has been secured for the faculty of the next summer session of the University of California.

It is said that during the 14 years which President McKinley served in congress he purchased and smoked 37,000 cigars. He always bought his cigars by the box and left the box at the cigar stand, calling for the smokes as he needed them.

General Michael J. Bulger, who died the other day at Dadeville, Ala., was the oldest Confederate officer or veteran living, being 100 years of age. He was one of the few surviving members of the famous secession convention at Montgomery and led the fight against secession. When defeated, he offered his sword and obtained a commission in the Confederate army. He was a candidate for governor of Alabama soon after the civil war.

THE COOKBOOK.

When boiling fish, add a bunch of sweet herbs and a piece of lemon rind tied in muslin to the water.

The best cakes for keeping are rich fruit cake, dried apple cake, English pound cake and old fashioned election or loaf cake.

Gingerbread made with oatmeal or barley flour makes a very good mild aperient medicine for children and as a rule is much liked by them.

To singe a turkey pour two spoonfuls of alcohol into a saucer, set fire to it, and singe the turk over the flame. It will not smoke and blacken it as paper will.

Meat should never be put away wrapped in the paper in which it was sent from market, nor should it be put upon tin or metal of any kind. An agate or earthen plate should be used.

Bananas may be baked in the skins when they are to be left in the oven until the skins burst or they may be baked more pretentiously by peeling them first, then rolling them in melted butter, then in sugar. Lay them in a baking tin and cook in the oven until they are brown.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS.

A porcelain sink can be cleaned by scrubbing with hot soda water and then rubbing with sand or rotten stone, where there are hard stains.

Worm eaten furniture should be treated thus: Take some copal varnish and varnish the wood well over with it. Give it two coats so that all holes are filled up.

Soap has a tendency to discolor marble. In cleaning marble statuary the pieces should first be thoroughly brushed and then washed in a very weak solution of hydrochloric acid.

A cleaning fluid that is a useful adjunct to the household supply closet is made as follows: Dissolve one-half ounce of castile soap in one quart of soft water and add to it one-half ounce of ammonia, two ounces of aqua ammonia, one-half ounce of spirits of wine, with a soft sponge, the fluid when applied spots on furniture and carpets will remove on clothing.

THE PEDAGOG

President Butler of Columbia college has resigned and will become a member of the faculty of the University of Chicago.

The Yale catalogue for 1901 states that there are 2,542 students in Yale this year. This is only a gain of 25 over last year, the smallest gain for years.

W. R. Thompson of Pittsburg offers to build for Washington and Jefferson college, Washington, Pa., a library building to cost $50,000 and to equip it.

Dr. Winthrop E. Stone, who succeeds the late James H. Smart as president of Purdue university, has been vice president of the university since 1892. He is 38 years old and a graduate of the Massachusetts Agricultural college. He also studied at Gottingen.

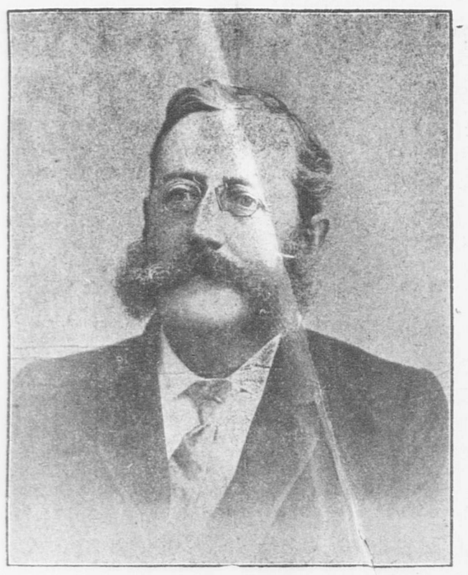
CITY GOVERNMENT OF 1901 ORGANIZED.

n. John O. Hall Delivers His Second Inaugural Address as Mayor of the City of Presidents.

Jrges Utmost Restraint upon Legislation that a Greater Burden May Not be Imposed on our Citizens Than They Can Bear.



HON. JOHN O. HALL,
Mayor 1900 and 1901.

Mayor Hall's second Inaugural address is worthy of a careful reading. It is published in full below:

GENTLEMEN OF THE CITY COUNCIL:

We are assembled at this time to assume the responsibilities of the management of the affairs of our city for the coming year placed upon us by our fellow citizens.

Recognizing this responsibility our thanks are due for the confidence reposed in us.

For myself, I wish to publicly express my deep appreciation of the honor conferred upon me, and to return my hearty thanks for the generous labor and support given me by so many members of this Council and of the citizens throughout the city.

As you enter upon the consideration of the business which will be presented in your councils you will be impressed with the many demands for expenditures which seem to be imperative and at the same time will be made conscious of the heavy burden resting on our citizens and the somewhat limited revenue outside of the direct tax on real estate.

In view of this condition you cannot fail to be impressed with the imperative necessity of giving the most careful consideration to the minutest detail of every matter submitted for your legislative acting that only those enterprises be undertaken which have the very strongest claims.

I urge upon you the necessity of the most conscientious discharge of the duties of your position, ever bearing in mind your friends and neighbors who must furnish the money which you may vote to spend and who consequently will demand of you that you advocate only those matters which will prove of real benefit to the community.

Make yourself familiar with our City Charter that you may know of its requirements and be informed of the duties and privileges, and also the limitations of the Council.

The welfare and prosperity of our city depend in a large degree upon the wise, conservative and business like legislation of the Council.

While we cannot remain passive in the rush and hurry of the present strenuous life, we must use the utmost restraint upon our legislation so that in our enthusiasm for a progressive city we do not entail a burden upon our citizens which will be greater than they can bear and which will prove to be a curse rather than a benefit.

EXPENSES.

To show how we have grown in our expenses, I have only to state that the total of our appropriation the last year of the town government was $177,000.

Our total for 1900 was $676,235.93. Of this amount, $123,000 was borrowed; $112,750.98 was for debt; $66,169.20 was for interest; $270,808 was the amount of our annual appropriation in April, and the remainder was sundry appropriations during the year from receipts.

Our appropriation for streets last year was for maintenance in the annual appropriation,	$25,000 00
Appropriation made during year,	66,900 00
Appropriation under Railroad Excise Tax,	12,467 46
	$104,367 46

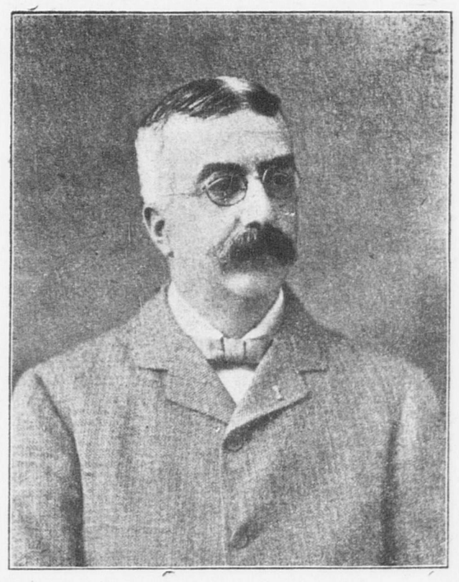
CITY HALL, QUINCY,
Built of Granite in 1844.



HON. CHARLES M. BRYANT,
Reelected President of City Council.

THE CITY COUNCIL OF 1901.

The thirteenth year of the Quincy City government was inaugurated at 12 o'clock noon today, in the presence of a large gathering of citizens, including many ladies.

A few minutes before the hour of 12, City Messenger Tirrell entered the Council Chamber by the rear entrance. Following him were Mayor Hall, City Clerk Cleaves and Rev. Edward A. Chase of Wollaston.

The desk of the president was prettily decorted with ferns which were also entwined about the chandeliers and on the desk were bouquets of choice cut flowers.

The exercises were opened by prayer by Rev. Mr. Chase, following which City Clerk Cleaves administered the oath of office to Mayor Hall, and to the members elect of the City Council.

The inaugural address of the Mayor followed, and received close attention, but no applause until the close. It appears in full in this issue.

Upon roll call Charles M. Bryant was relected President of the Council, the vote being as follows:

NOTICE TO PARENTS.

CITY OF QUINCY.

CITY CLERK'S Office, Dec. 31, 1900.

THE Record of birth in any city or town is always more or less unsatisfactory, owing to the fact that the canvasser finds difficulty in getting the necessary information. Names and dates are frequently given incorrectly. The importance of accuracy is shown in many cases where there is a question of descent, or inheritance of property, or collection of life insurance or pensions. The City Clerk's copy of the record is accepted as conclusive evidence in a court of law. While great pains are taken by this office to have the record correct experience shows that it is necessary that parents themselves should lend their assistance. In fact, the law requires that parents shall give notice to the City Clerk of the birth of their children, and provides a penalty for neglect to give such notice for the space of 40 days.

It often happens that only children or servants are at home when the canvasser makes his call, and the answers to his questions are open to doubt. I therefore request all parents in whose household a birth has occurred in the year 1900, to place upon a paper or card the required information, and keep it in a convenient place until the canvasser appears.

The canvasser will begin on Jan. 1, 1901.

EDGAR G. CLEAVES, City Clerk.

Mayor 1894, 1895.

BORROWING MONEY.

While we have added to our debt this year more than we have paid, yet the increase is not as much as last year. Still it is more than it should be, for I am firmly of the opinion that we should at once take stringent measures to do away with the practice of borrowing money to the extent which we have done to the present time.

If we should be asked to appropriate the sum of $80,000 or $90,000 and put it into the tax levy of the current year, there would be an earnest protest from the citizens and yet we are doing just that very thing and in addition are paying the interest charge on that sum which is a dead loss to the city.

Every dollar of interest which we pay is a tax upon our citizens from which no benefit whatever is derived.

If we have an unusual large expense, it might be necessary, perhaps advisable, to borrow it on a term of years but if this is repeated each year we have the same burden each year on the the expenditure and in addition the burden of the interest.

By referring to the debt statement which I have given, you will see the need of the most careful scrutiny of every measure which is presented.

I am firm in my conviction that it is the duty of this and succeeding Councils to legislate in such a manner that we shall in a very few years be beyond the necessity of borrowing. Under the present laws limiting the power of cities to exceed $12.00 per thousand on the average valuation of the three preceding years, all city governments resort to borrowing money for their schemes, claiming permanent improvment as an excuse for a wrong interpretation of the laws which allow and provide for borrowing money for municipal purposes.

A movement is now being made to see if the $12.00 limit cannot be removed and every community allowed to spend what it is willing to be taxed for.

As it is at the present time the people are deceived by deferred payments and the interest item becomes almost appalling.

CITY HALL.

At the last city election the people voted upon the question of authorizing the Council to vote money to build a new City Hall and that question was answered in the negative.

The situation is so serious that additional accommodations must be be provided for the safe keeping of the records of the city business, and I shall again submit for your consideration some changes in the present building which will accomplish this purpose.

ASSESSING DEPARTMENT.

The assessing of taxes in any community is one of the most difficult tasks in the whole lists of municipal affairs.

To equitably apportion the payment into the city treasury of the amount needed to carry on the government requires skill and courtesy in large measure.

During this year our charter has been amended so that we shall have a continuous board of three Assessors, one appointed each year for three years, instead of all being appointed yearly as at present.

During this past year a change has been made in the matter of recording the work of the Assessors, the card system, so-called, having been introduced, and this will add greatly to the effectiveness of the work; will give greater accuracy and will lessen the liability of overlooking taxable property.

This change was made in the short time of six weeks and because of the shortness of the time there were some errors and defects which will be corrected during the present year and the system made complete.

Under this system taxable property was found which before had escaped assessment, the tax from which exceeded the cost of establishing the system.

The change in the appointment of Assessors will require legislation on the part of the Council to provide assistants for the field work in May and June.

COLLECTOR'S DEPARTMENT.

During the past year, at my recommendation, the Council changed the salary of the Collector making it a fixed sum and directing all fees and emoluments to be paid into the City Treasury.

The business of this office is increasing in a very rapid manner both in amount of money to be collected and in detail, and the Council will have to give additional clerical assistance for the work for the present year.

Some changes will have to be made in the arrangement of the office, to enable him to efficiently transact the business of the department. The detail of sewer and sidewalk assessments adds greatly to the business of this department.

While the collection of the taxes is purely an executive function, it is a matter which to a large extent is in the hands of the people, and I wish for this reason to speak at this time of the desirability of a prompter payment of the taxes, thus securing the advantage of a saving of interest in the money which we must borrow in anticipation of the collection of the taxes.

HON. CHARLES F. ADAMS, 2nd,
Mayor 1896, 1897.

All cities are moving in this matter and some collectors are proceeding to force the payment at the earliest day under the law, and I trust our citizens will see the wisdom of early payment and co-operate with the executive.

A delay in payment is of no advantage to the tax payer but is rather an injury.

OFFICE ACCOMMODATIONS.

There must be some changes made in the arrangement of the offices of Assessors department, Treasurer and City Clerk for the efficient transaction of the business and for the preservation of the city documents.

POOR DEPARTMENT.

Money must be expended this year for the improvement and preservation of the Almshouse; in painting, and making additions to the toilet facilities.

This department is very efficiently and economically administered, and the city is fortunate in having so conscientious a man in this office as is Mr. Bass.

I am certain that our city will compare very favorably with other cities in this vicinity in the cost and manner of caring for the poor.

STREETS.

You will learn from the figures which I have read to you, and from your personal examination, that the expense of the city in providing for our walks and roadways makes a large item in our annual budget of appropriations.

Under Mr. Knowlton's efficient and intelligent administration the citizens can feel certain of getting an equivalent for all money expended by him.

While we are believers in good roads, we must remember our financial limitations and be very careful in expenditures in this direction.

I am reminded by the Commissioner that the streets and roads in Ward 2 will have to receive considerable attention during the coming year, owing to the developments which are likely to come in that section at an early date.

The appropriations for street watering and street lighting were quite substantial the past year and I am desirous that our receipts will warrant the same liberal appropriations for the present year.

The expenditure of money for edgestones and sidewalks I believe is wise and economical. No improvement is more permanent than this and nothing that we can do will reduce the cost of maintenance of ways in so substantial a degree.

ACCEPTANCE OF STREETS.

The Commissioner of Public Works reminds me that in his judgment it is not wise to accept streets without making a sufficient appropriation to put them in first-class shape for the demands likely to be made upon them in the section which they are.

I believe it will be wise to decline to accept any streets unless the abuttors are willing to pay one half the cost of edgestones and to release the city from any damages by reason of a change of grade.

Much comment has been made regarding our expenditures on streets and while it is a fact that we do spend considerable sums in this work yet the fact remains that this is a considerable item of cost in every city, and the demands upon our streets are peculiarly heavy and we must expect that our cost in this regard will be large.

I wish to have you carefully consider whether the time has not arrived requiring all wires, so far as possible, to be put under-ground, thus preventing to a great degree the disfigurement and destruction of our shade trees.

I have always been of the opinion that street watering should be included in the general tax and not be a special levy.

The injustice of this is to me very apparent, all enjoy the benefits but the expense falls upon a portion of the citizens and is not apportioned on all as it would be under the practice of including it in the levy.

Action is being taken in some cities to have this method adopted, and I would suggest the consideration by your body of legislation looking to its advancement.

The desirability of naming the squares and junctions of our principal thoroughfares, it seem to me, is apparent and should be attended to at an early day.

By giving to these places, in nearly all of which is some prominent or public building, the names of patriots and statesmen, the deeds and events of the past would be constantly brought to the attention of both old and young.

Good Afternoon.

Mayor Hall's second Inaugural Address is much more business-like than his first. It seems to cover all the city departments and needs yet is considerably shorter. It excels in suggestions as to minor improvements rather than in big undertakings, which might win laurels but would at the same time jump up the debt. The taxpayers have been somewhat surprised that during 1900 the Mayor allowed such a large increase in the municipal debt, but they will be pleased with the opinion "that we should at once take stringent measures to do away with the practice of borrowing money." The interest item, he says, is almost appalling, but many would omit the word almost.

We thought a relief was coming this year in a reduction of the maturing debt and interest, but it appears from the elaborate financial review in the address that the maturing municipal debt of 1901 is $68,605.61 which is only $2,345.37 less than last year. It will be seen by following comparison that the total maturing debt is within $1,500 of what it was last year, and interest must be paid on $44,399. 2 additional this year, so that there will be no relief in this direction.

	Paid Last Year.	Matures This Year.
Municipal Debt,	$70,950.98	$67,105.61
Water Debt,	30,500.00	30,500.00
Sewer Debt,	10,300.00	11,300.00
Playground Debt,	1,000.00	1,000.00
	$112,750.98	$109,905.61

At the beginning of 1900 the amount of debt maturing in 1901 was but $46,305.61, but the figures of Mayor Hall show that the Council of 1900 increase the maturing debt of 1901 by $20,800.00. The summary below shows how the debt was apportioned a year ago and today, and how the Council of 1900 apportioned the new debt:

Debt Matures.	Statement of Dec. 31 1899.	Statement of Dec. 31 1900.	Apportionment of New Debt.
In 1900,	$79,950.98	— —
In 1901,	46,305.61	$67,105.61	$20,800.00
In 1902,	29,450.00	40,250.00	10,800.00
In 1903,	27,550.00	37,850.00	10,300.00
In 1904,	27,150.00	35,450.00	8,300.00
In 1905,	26,650.00	34,950.00	8,300.00
In 1906,	24,650.00	32,950.00	8,300.00
In 1907,	16,150.00	24,450.00	8,300.00
In 1908,	15,150.00	23,750.00	8,600.00
In 1909,	11,450.00	20,750.00	9,300.00
In 1910,	6,750.00	15,575.00	8,825.00
In 1911 to 1924.	1,500.00	3,300.00	1,800.00
In 1925,	——	800.00	800.00
	$323,206.59	$379,405.61

Not much latitude is allowed to increase current expenses, as the Mayor says but $236,230.00 can be raised by taxation which is only $9,000.00 more than last year. The increases of salaries under the ordinances will require most of this.

The debt cannot be reduced unless the municipal loans of 1901 are less than $67,000.00. An effort should be made to keep within this limit. It will be impossible to do this if City Hall is to be remodelled, the Almshouse improved, new streets accepted, Faxon park improved, a police station provided and signal service established, the High schoolhouse enlarged, and one or two schoolhouses erected in Ward Two. Evidently, as Mayor Hall says, "we must use the utmost restraint upon our legislation, so that in our enthusiasm for a progressive city we do not entail a burden upon our citizens which will be greater than they can bear, and which will prove to be a curse rather than a benefit."

The Sunday's Herald says that "the horseless engine saved the day at the great hayshed fire at Charlestown Saturday afternoon." Councilman Badger and Mr. Whiting can shake hands on that, as both are strong advocates of a horseless engine for a reserve steamer in this city owing to their immense power and slight cost of maintenance.

Haverhill has been paying her three Assessors but $400 each but has decided to increase their salary to $600 per year. Haverhill is a city of over 30,000, and is a hot bed of Socialism.

Mrs. Langton's daughter is sick with scarlet fever.

Drift of Opinion.

☞ In spite of extraordinary inducements Canada has increased in population only 350,000 during the last ten years. The Dominion receives many emigrants who look over the field and then remove to the United States. —Milford Journal.

☞ The fact that W. J. Bryan has seen fit to go into the newspaper business and settle down at home instead of exhibiting himself at agricultural fairs and horse trots for the next few years will make it harder for Grover Cleveland and his reformed democracy to read him out of the party leadership. It brings him nearer the "rank and file" than Grover ever dared to be.—Beverly Times.

☞ The present-day native American girl of the middle-class is the artificial product of advanced civilization. She is a bundle of nerves encased in a fragile frame, and there is undoubtedly reason to fear, that unless a radical change is made in her upbringing, the consequences will be serious to the entire community. Less brain-work and more fresh air and exercise are the remedies recommended.—Medical Record.

☞ A Baltimore preacher said in his sermon last Sunday that God had made the English speaking people to be the custodians of the earth; with a man in that state of mind we have no desire to dispute. But to our mind, the principles of justice, humanity and mercy are wider than the English speaking peoples; the possibilities of human excellence are more diverse than is the catalogue of Anglo-Saxon virtues: and the suppression of a heroic little nation of farmers—"though their faults be thick as dust in vacant chambers"—there is more evil than can be compensated by any amount of smug prosperity, and Anglo-Saxon order, and increase of mining dividends, that can be established upon its ruins.—Baltimore News.

The Hanley Boat.

A meeting of the gentlemen interested in building the Hanley boat was held at O'Brien Bros. Sea Grill on Saturday say the Herald. The feeling was that the boat would be built, and that $28,000 was in sight, not including whatever M. M. Cunniff may contribute. This last will not be as large as the figure that has been named.

At the recent meeting of the Columbia Yacht club, at which Joseph E. Doherty was elected commodore, Col. L. J. Logan addressed the members on the subject of the new boat, and said he was willing to help out, though he named no amount. Within two days John McGinnis of Medway has come forward and offered to contribute, and the committee who are working the matter up hope to receive a substantial sum from David Heffernan of Lynn.

So far as any definite settlement of the matter is concerned, the situation remains quite unchanged. Another meeting will be the at the Sea Grill Tuesday afternoon next, when the matter will be further discussed.

Should the money be raised those donating it would appoint Capt. Joseph Turner sailing master of the yacht.

Week of Prayer.

The Week of Prayer will be observed at Bethany church this week, beginning tomororw night. The Rev. Ellsworth and Rev. F. T. Knight will assist the pastor. The subject will be as follows:

Tuesday—Prayer for a Church which, through faith in Christ and by the indwelling of the Holy Spirit, shall be wholly Christian, doing God's will and winning the world to Christ.

Wednesday — Prayer for such Christian character and life as shall be pleasant in the home, honored in business relations, welcomed in the neighborhood, helpful in the church,—personal religion being thus manifested in its rightful attractiveness.

Thursday—Prayer for right relations in socciety and the nation, with the Golden Rule obeyed as between man and man, and all social and political action guided by justice and good will, —the Christian ideal.

Friday—Prayer for a better realization of spiritual truth and a better estimate of spiritual realities; a clearer vision of the redeeming Christ and of the actual need and the divinely intense glory of the world which He redeemed.

CRANCH SCHOOL

Opened Today With About 250 Pupils.

Most of the Number from John Hancock.

Some from the Coddington and the Adams.

Six grades of the new Cranch school were opened for the first time today with about 250 pupils.

Of this number 193 came from the John Hancock school, 45 from the Coddington school, and 12 from the Adams school. This number may be slightly increased.

The corps of teachers with one exception is the same as elected at the ast meeting of the School Committee. The exception is Miss Maud M. Briggs, who was elected to the first grade. Miss Briggs has resigned to accept a position in the Boston school. The vacancy has been filled by the election of Miss Lucy J. Mitchell of South Quincy, who has been teaching in Hudson for the past two years. Miss Mitchell will not assume her duties until next Monday. In the meantime a substitute will look after that grade.

The new school is one of the pleasantest in the city and the children in attendance today are doubtless the happiest of any in the Quincy schools today.

Contracts Conditional.

A Washington dispatch of Saturday to the Herald says: the secretary of the nav has decided that the law relative to the building of the new ships requires the derpartment to allot one of the vessels to the Pacific coast. Therefore, he will award the contract for one sheathed battleship to Moran Bros. of Seattle, one to the Bath warks of Main and one to the Newport News Ship Building Company.

These awards will be made conditional upon the bidders named bringing their proposals within the $3,600,000 limit of cost fixed by Congress and restoring many important items cut out of the specifications of the department by them. Moran Bros.' bid was $3,865,000, that of the Bath works $3,590,000 and that of the Newport News company, $3,593,000.

Glorification Night.

Thursday evening, at 8 o'clock, will be a glorification night for the Spanish War Veterans. Every man who has served his country during the late strife with Spain, should be present a this meeting. John A. Boyd Camp, No. 2, L. S. W. V., will install their officers on the above night at French's hall. The ritual of the order will be displayed with impressive ceremonies. Several prominent speakers have been invited for this occasion. The National headquarters have detailed Adjutant Pierce and Mustering Officer Matthews to confer the work upon the newly elected candidates to office.

SANDY! SANDY!!

A Surprise Party the Other Night With a Tale to It.

A few evenings ago a small party of ladies surprised Mrs. A. C. Smith at her home on Granite street and presented her with a beautiful window table and jardiniere, also, a wee bit trackie t' brew a drappie tea in. Mrs. Smith's friends have of late been associated with her on the various committees connected with the order of the Loyal Ladies of Clan McGregor, and in recognition of her helpful and genial disposition as president, they paid her the tribute.

The evening was spent by the fraternal coterie in a most happy manner and had the visiting ladies been accompanied by their proper escorts all might have been well to the end.

After taking leave of their friend and chief at a fairly late hour they deemed it advisable to go home by way of the crow line which led through rush and brake and fields of ice.

Their judgment as to the strength of the frozen fluid was faulty, and the results were that when at the very deepest part of the pond the brittle crust gave way and more than one of the party got a waist deep and chilling bath.

The work of rescue was successfully accomplished by the others, and a speedy run made for home. Home, where all is ready welcome and warmth. Expectations are not always fultilled, however, and in the case of one of the unfortunate wanderers, she found it no very easy matter to reach the ear of her sleeping husband, who held the key of the situation.

Her husband, Sandy, a canny honest Scot, not being disposed to encourage the stealthy art of burglary, at nine thirty o'clock bolted and barred every possible entrance to his humble home; stuck a feather in his ears, so that he would sleep lightly; tumbled into his downy nest, and was soon in the entrancing arms of Morpheus.

When his cold and freezing better half reached the door, already cheered by the thoughts of the love and warmth within, for be it said Sandy's intentions on going to bed were to respond at the approach of his wife, she plaintively called Sandy! Not getting an answer, she again called in the same fashion. Again and again, louder and louder, still no move within. She rapped and tattooed on the door for a moment and tried to open it. Then stepping to one window after another with no better results.

Getting more desperate, she banged herself against the door and yelled, Sandy! But Sandy was sleeping the sleep of the just. The next door neighbors, however, had been aroused by the commotion and finding what was up went to the anxious lady's assistance.

Mrs. —— armed herself with the "tattie chapper," assaulted Sandy's door with such a storm of drum rolls that the whole neighborhood woke up, thinking it was the advent of another century, if not the crack o' doom itself.

Woman's ways are wondrous, and Mrs. —— with her tattie chapper soon had Sandy on his feet and at the door.

His excuse was that dreaming is a terrible thing, especially when it is in the shape of a mountain of salt water in the head.

Excepting for fits of sneezing and a bit stiffness at the joints, the lady is well and enjoys the banter she gets about the episode.

MY SISTER'S BABY

My baby is full of abounding life and joy; my sister's boy is a puny thing.

The difference is: my baby is healthy. He takes his fill and sleeps; and he grows. My sister's boy gets fully as hungry, he cries with hunger; then cries, I think it must be, from weakness; his food is a burden to him.

Scott's emulsion of cod-liver oil will set that poor little boy in the way of being as good as his cousin.

We'll send you a little to try, if you like.

KITCHENER NEEDS HELP

Present Force Inadequate to Protect Cape Colony

INVADERS GAINING GROUND

British Residents Leaving Dutch Villages Near Cape Town — Rebellious Colonists Will Construe Call to Arms as a Challenge

London, Jan. 7.—In a letter to The Times this morning, the Earl of Dunraven, emphasizing the "very grave situation in South Africa," warns the country to distrust the opinions of experts on the spot, and to be ready for the unexpected. He complains of the "apertia of the authorities," and urges the necessity of large reinforcements.

This morning's news from Cape Town is again unsatisfactory. Martial law has been proclaimed at Malmesburg and would have been proclaimed in other districts but that the cabinet meeting called at Cape Town Saturday was unable to agree as to its advisability.

The vagueness of the information concerning the movements and position of the invaders has sent a fresh cold fit over the colonists, and Cape Town calls loudly for strong reinforcements from England, on the ground that the greater part of Lord Kitchener's available force is employed in protecting the lines of communiation and the Rand mines, the latter extending for a distance of 50 miles.

It is asserted by one Cape Town correspondent that, unless the forces in Cape Colony are increased, a most undesirable state of affairs may result, as the success in arms of the invaders, however slight, might be the signal for a Dutch rising. As it is, many British residents have had to leave the Dutch villages near Cape Town, their lives being unbearable.

According to a native report, 100 men, either Boers or local farmers, have just passed through Clanwilliam district in the direction of Malmesburg.

The Cape Town correspondent of The Daily Mail, who calls for 40,000 fresh troops, says: "Prominent Afrikander loyalists declare that the rebellious colonists will construe the colonial call to arms as a challenge, and that the ominous silence of the pro-rebels, combined with the fact that members of the pro-Boer junta in Cape Town have been touring in the disaffected districts, emphasizes the necessity for martial law. The necessity was never more acute for dispatching reinforcements. Already there is proof that colonials are leading one commando."

The military movements reported are quite unimportant, though Portugal is sending reinforcements to Lourenzo Marquez. Dr. Leyds, according to The Hague correspondent of The Daily Mail, is recruiting in Holland, Belgium, France and Germany, and his recruits will be sent out to Namaqualand, ostensibly as emigrants, each man receiving £50 down on starting.

Foreigners Experience Severe Weather

London, Jan. 7.—Severe cold has suddenly set in throughout Europe. In England it is accompanied by a northeasterly wind, amounting to a gale over the channel. At Dover a boat was capsized, four persons being drowned, and probably other accidents will be reported. On the continent the weather is still more severe. Snow has fallen as far south as Naples. At Moscow the temperature is 30 degrees below zero. Tremendous gales are blowing over the Adriatic. Terrible blizzards are reported from Austria and southern Russia. The storm caused a collision between passenger trains at Mikola, near Szatmar, Hungary, six persons being killed.

Miners Get All They Asked For

Halifax, Jan. 7.—The colliers' strike, which was renewed on Friday at Pictou owing to a misunderstanding, was finally settled Saturday night, and all hands went to work today. The settlement gives the 12 percent increase in wages to actual miners, 50 cents a day increase to mechanics, and 25 cents a day to miners' helpers. Every demand of the men is conceded.

Fatal Termination Probable

New York, Jan. 7.—David Canter, proprietor of a billiard room, is charged with shooting George O'Hara, 21 years old. O'Hara was playing billiards in the hall when he got into a dispute with Canter over payment. Canter is held without bail. O'Hara will probably die.

Mail Robbers at Work

St. John, Jan. 7.—It has just been made public that during the past two months the mails have been robbed at Moncton. Moncton police are assisting the postal authorities in the case and suspect local parties. No arrests have yet been made.

Forgery Charge Against Him

Chicago, Jan. 7.—Henry H. Hook, agent for the Knights Templars' and Masons' Life Indemnity association of Chicago, is under arrest here on a telegram from Washington, which stated that he was wanted in that city on a charge of forgery.

Ten Went Down With Steamer

Brussels, Jan. 7.—News has been received here that the steamer Soudan, which left Antwerp early in December to undertake river service in the Congo Free State, foundered a week ago, 10 of her company being drowned.

Big Haul by Thieves

Rome, Jan. 7.—Five bags of registered letters have been stolen on the railroad between Turin and Rome. Three of the bags came from New York. The loss is estimated at 200,000 lire.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

by local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflamation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

NEW HOUSES
FOR SALE.

Just to remind you that I have another lot of houses nearly completed, I will list these three bargains:

Many were disappointed on the last lot so be on hand early if you would be in it.

Also, one of eight rooms and bath, Independence avenue; all modern improvements, bounds on two streets, can sell for $500 less than real value. This house is of the popular size to suit any business man, and is very roomy and convenient. I don't like to have other builders know how I am cutting prices, but $3,000 buys this one, look at it and compare with others you see building.

Another, and a money maker for some one with only an ounce of pluck. This is a two-family House, 5 rooms and bath each, and 60 foot lot. $3 000. Pay in $500 on this and I will guarantee you a twenty five per cent. investment for one year; who would dare invest in a twenty-five per cent. GUARANTEED investment.

Remember these houses are built by competent workmen, by the day, of the best material, and are personally superintended by the owner, are but four minutes to station, electrics pass, and everything is most desirable as a residential section. All houses are connected with sewer and cellars are perfectly dry.

Come and look them over and select one that suits you. Can be seen any day.

FOR BEST RESULTS,

THE INAUGURAL ADDRESS.

HON. RUSSELL A. SEARS,
Mayor 1898.

HON. HARRISON A. KEITH,
Mayor 1899.

enditure very profitable in returning to the city treasury taxes on property which had escaped notice before such plans were prepared.

I recommend this matter to your attention and in this connection urge the enactment of such legislation as will conduce to a symetrical growth and extension of our city.

WATER DEPARTMENT.

Our water service is becoming to be an extensive plant and will require quite a liberal appropriation this year because of the industries which are being developed in Ward 2.

I shall ask an early appropriation for this purpose that we may secure our pipe in season for an early beginning in the spring.

Expenditures in the extention of our water service are wise in many ways, and the return we get from them is very generous.

We are very fortunate in being in the Metropolitan district for if we had been dependent on our own supply during the past year and a half I fear we should have been in a dangerous situation.

The consumption of water in the Metropolitan district is increasing to almost an alarming degree, and I wish to urge for your consideration the matter of requiring a general use of water meters in our city as a matter of economy and of safety.

There are many questions connected with the Metropolitan districts of Water and Sewer, and at a later date I may find it necessary to place the matter before you at length.

SEWER DEPARTMENT.

The system of sewerage of our city will in a year or two be extended for discharge into the outlet of the South Metropolitan District Sewer, and only the care and maintenance of our lateral sewers will devolve upon us. Very little has been done the past year by our Commission; the putting in of a few small connections being the extent.

The Metropolitan Sewerage Commissioners are in conference with the officials of the city for determing the price to be paid for our pumping station and force mains and we shall try to bring these negotiations to a close at a very early day.

In accordance with the provisions of the Sewerage Act, I have requested the Sewerage Commissioners of Quincy, to transfer the Sewerage system to the Commissioner of Public Works, and the power and duties of that Board will be vested in the Commissioner of Public Works at a very early day.

PARKS.

During the past year we have made some improvements in our play grounds in Wards 3, 4, and 6, and some further work can be done the present year to advantage if our revenue will permit.

The Park Commissioners were not able to complete the Bath House in Ward 2 in season for use during last year, but it is completed now and will be available to the citizens in the summer of 1901.

It was the intention of the Park Commissioners to equip it with suits, laundries, etc., and charge for service, but that plan has been given up, and the bath house will be free, all making use of it to provide their own suits.

It is not my desire to ask for any considerable sum for Merry Mount Park, but I do desire that an appropriation should be made for the improvement of Faxon Park that the citizens may be able to enjoy this truly delightful section.

At the proper time I shall ask an appropriation, with statement of the improvement which it is desirable to make.

The Boulevard under the direction of the Metropolitan Park Commission is being advanced and in connection with our parks and reservations will greatly improve our city.

This Boulevard passes directly in front of the Willard schoolhouse and I believe that we should proceed this year to put an iron fence about that school yard, not only for the improvement in the looks of the grounds, but also for the protection of the building and the safety of the children who attend the school.

PLUMBING ORDINANCE AND BUILDING INSPECTION.

There is certain to be a great deal of building in the city in the near future and there is an imperative need of building inspection and an ordinance regulating the building operations, requiring the obtaining of a permit and a penalty for violation.

The ordinances regulating Plumbing in the city should be amended at once as there are many things in it which need correcting.

PRECINCTS IN WARD ONE.

Ward 1 should be divided into two voting precincts before another election.

FIRE DEPARTMENT.

This department continues to increase and requires quite a generous sum to maintain it.

While it is a department which demands a large sum to support it, still the citizens receive a substantial return in the reduced premiums on their insurance, not to speak of the derangement and loss to business and to their homes which would result if a large fire should sweep through our city for lack of a good Fire Department.

Under the able management of the present Chief, the fires which occur are intelligently handled and quickly extinguished with a small loss in the majority of cases.

The new Hose house in Ward 5 is nearly completed, and you will doubtless be asked to furnish it and place another piece of apparatus in it in the near future.

I should like to provide helmets for the entire force, and wished to do so last year, but accidents to the apparatus caused quite an outlay in repairs and the money could not be spared.

Improvements in the ventilation and in the toilet accommodation of engine houses have been made the past year and the comfort and health of the permanent men have been promoted.

An Inspector of Wires is demanded in our city, and it seems to me that he should be under the direction of the Chief of this department.

POLICE.

This department requires many things and demands our immediate attention.

During the year I have had many calls for officers which I could not answer satisfactorily for want of men.

The expense of this department like the Fire Department causes much unfavorable comment, and objections to it are constantly made, but for all that it is a necessary department and should receive every encouragement to make it effective.

The officers are men of flesh and blood and your fellow-citizens, and they should receive every good word of commendation that you can give them.

Our accommondations for the Chief and his men are objectionable in the highest degree, and it is our duty at the earliest day to make some arrangement for the improvement of the officers quarters and for the humane care of prisoners, especially females.

The few officers which we have are scattered over long routes which they can only imperfectly protect, and in case of trouble have no means of getting help or signalling alarm; the need of a signal service and police patrol wagon is manifest and is continually asked for by the citizens.

This demands a station and I am of the opinion that the building on School street can be made very serviceable for these requirements.

SCHOOLS.

No department of municipal administration is causing so much discussion or requires such careful attention as the schools.

Aiming for the highest education possible for the youth of the land, presided over by men and women of high ideals and broad sympathies who desire the best that these progessive times afford, it is a hard and difficult task to so balance the ambitions by the financial possibilities that there is almost constant friction.

The doubt which is in the mind of many people whether the best lines are being followed in the work of the schools and whether the results are commensurate with the cost, only adds to the difficulties of the situation and adds to the burden when considering the questions connected with them and providing the needed revenue for their support.

With all the difficulties pertaining to the general subject of school provision, we have the added fact of a very large school population and the matter of providing the money and determining the amount which we need and which we will spend will require the most harmonious action of all interested when this matter shall come before you for action.

I ask that you will carefully consider the matter without prejudice or bias, and will in a spirit of fairness and friendliness come to an amicable decision on which the School Committee can conduct the schools to the satisfaction of the citizens.

As the business of the city shall be presented for our action in the months before us, I ask your confidence and co-operation. I assure you we cannot faithfully serve the citizens who have trusted us unless we are in perfect harmony and with an eye single for the public good.

I earnestly hope that the cordial relations and good feeling of the Council of last year will not only be maintained, but will be increased and that beside being fellow servants working the peoples' will, we shall be friends and brothers bound together by strongest bonds of respect, esteem and love.

A TARGET For 10,000 Eyes.

Of course you do not want to be a target yourself, but not so with your "Ad." You want it seen. An "Ad." in the Ledger will be a daily target for over Ten Thousand Eyes.

If you can attract the eyes of over 5,000 people, day after day; know that you're reaching intelligent, thoughtful people who have money to spend, there is no question but an "Ad" in the Daily Ledger is money well expended and in fact indispensible, especially at the Holiday season.

An "Ad" in Ledger does more than attract, it holds the attention of the shopper.

DANIEL WEBSTER

said the most inspiring words ever spoken to him came from a farmer, after his greatest speech: "You never did your best yet!" This didn't mean that Webster was weak; it meant that he had never used the power that was in him. When we criticize your methods we don't mean that they are weak. We mean that you are not getting the most possible out of your business. Experience has proved that advertising pays. Resolve to be a big advertiser in 1901, and increase your business. Better still; begin now and get the Holiday Trade.

While the Warships Are Building

The Daily Ledger hopes to become 20,000 Eyes. The publishers have improvements constantly in mind, and with the encouragement of Quincy people will print as large and newsy a daily as they are willing to support.

THE CHANGELESS PLAYS.

I've wandered to the theater, I've been to see the show;
I've listened to the same old jokes we heard long years ago
The villain died the same old way—his death was hard and slow—
The last act saw his finish, Tom, like twenty years ago!

The heroine, she suffered, Tom; you should have heard her weep;
Her hair was golden in its hue, for peroxide is cheap.
She found the missing will, though, Tom; she always did, you know,
When we went to the theater some twenty years ago.

The jokes were just the same ones, Tom, about the ma-in-law,
Likewise the goat, the stovepipe and the female suffrage jaw,
And, yes, they sprung the one about the good old baldhead row;
It sounded as it used to, Tom, some twenty years ago.

The hero struts about the stage and hoarsely whispers, "Ah.
I see it all!" And then the crafty villain mutters "Bah!"
The play is just the same, dear Tom; the plot is thickened so,
It looks the same as when we went some twenty years ago.

The soubrette is the same, old boy; she has the same old wink.
Her cheeks are just as radiant; they have the same soft pink.
She's billed as Little Tottie now, and, say, she doesn't show
Her age as much as when she played some twenty years ago.

The songs are full of "mother, dears," the star takes all the stage,
The jokes and other dialogue show very little age,
But youngest of the lot, dear Tom, the soubrette's cheeks still glow
As pinkly as they used to do some twenty years ago.

Financial Dealings Of Dugway's Boy

He Tried Hard to Make Money, but Always Failed.

Dugway was out, but was expected back shortly, and Vance undertook to entertain the visitor. He was in a confidential mood.

"I've been tryin to make some money again," he said.

"So?" said the visitor. "But that's nothing new, is it?"

"Well, I don't know," replied the boy, curling himself comfortably among the pillows on the lounge, "I s'pose I try often enough, but it looks like I ain't a money maker. Pa says I am cut out for a confidence man, but I don't seem to get the best of him ever. Say, do you keep books, an do you know when you have too much money?"

"I never found out that I had too much."

"Well, pa has, an it makes him feel bad. When I go down to the office I see all kinds of money around—dollars an half dollars an quarters till you can't rest, an nobody seems to pay any attention to it, particular. I ast pa about it, an he said that he knew to a cent how much they was because he kept books an made them balance every night. I was wonderin whether he'd know the difference if I took a little of it, just what I needed. I don't like to ast pa for money."

"Why?"

Vance wriggled a little and bit his handkerchief. "Well," he said at last, "he always wants to know what I want to do with it."

"Impertinent curiosity. Why don't you get him to make you a fixed allowance—so much a week?"

"I did try. I wanted him to give me a nickel a day. I don't want a whole lot of money, but I like to have some. Ted Cunningham always has money, an when he wants me to pitch to a crack or anything I have to own up that I'm broke."

"Puts you in an embarrassing situation."

"I thought I would see whether pa could tell about his money, an so when Mr. Jones was gone to lunch an pa was in the back room I put the 50 cents that you gave me that day in with the other 50 cents in the tray. I didn't like to take any out, because I didn't know but it might be so. Then ma an me went home, but we had to wait dinner for pa that night, an then he didn't come for ever so long after we was through. Ma ast him what made him so late, an he said that he had been havin the dickens own time over at the office because Mr. Jones an him couldn't make the cash balance. There was 50 cents over. He looked awful mad about it, an ma didn't say anything more about him bein too late for dinner, an I didn't like to say about me havin put the 50 cents in, because I thought he wouldn't like it. I thought the best thing I could do was to tell ma, so I told her, an she said that I had better go to pa an tell him I was sorry an how it happened. I didn't do it, but I guess she did, because pa threw down my 50 cents at the breakfast table in the mornin an told me never to let him catch me at any such monkey tricks as that again or he'd make me need skin graftin. He said that he worked four hours on account of what I'd done, an it wouldn't have been so bad if there had been 50 cents too little. I ast him why, an he said that then he could have called it a mistake an paid the 50 cents out of his own pocket. I don't see why he couldn't have given the 50 cents away to somebody an said it was a mistake, do you?"

"It looks to me like false logic," said the visitor. "Did you make up your mind to fix it for a shortage next time?"

"I don't know what you mean. I didn't do anything. I told ma I wanted to make some money, an she told me to think up some way an she would help me if she could, and so I thought I might raise some chickens, so I went to Mrs. McClellan an ast her what she would sell me a dozen chickens for. She said that depended on what I wanted, whether it was Plymouth Rocks or Brown Leghorns or banties or what. So I said Plymouth Rocks, an she told me she would let me have a dozen of them for $25.

"I knew that I couldn't get that much money, an I thought I might just as well buy eggs an set them under a common hen."

"That was a bright idea."

"Yes; Mrs. McClellan told me it would be the best thing I could do, an then I could raise a dozen chickens an sell them for $25 myself. Ma gave me the dollar to buy the eggs an loaned me a hen what wanted to set. It takes a hen a awful long time to hatch chickens, though. I used to go out most every mornin an raise her up to see if she had got any, an she squawked an pecked at my hand. Gee! But it was about three weeks before I got any chickens, an then there was only three of 'em. That old hen wouldn't wait for the others to hatch, an when I broke 'em open to see if there was any chickens inside of 'em I wisht I had let 'em alone. I guess that old hen knew all right."

"What was the trouble?"

Vance held his snub nose expressively between his thumb and forefinger.

"I was slidin down the kitchen roof," he continued, "an I knocked a board down, an it fell on one of the chickens an squashed it dead, an the other two was both roosters. I wanted some money one time an I sold one of 'em to the lady next door for a quarter. That was all she'd give me for it. I told her it was a blooded Plymouth Rock, but she said she didn't mind that, just so long as it would make a good fry. I kept the other one all summer an then took it to Mrs. McClellan an ast her what she'd give me for it.

"She said that she'd trade me a pair of rabbits for it an I could make more money raisin rabbits than I could raisin chickens an the rabbits was worth $1 a pair. So I took the rabbits. One of them was named Dick an the other Lizzie. I used to like Dick the best. Ma wouldn't let me keep them up in my room, so I had to build a place for them out in the wood shed an keep them there, except when I turned them loose. They was awful cute. Lizzie used to eat dough out of my hand. She liked dough better than anything."

"Haven't you got them still?"

"No. I gave them away. I got kinder tired of tendin 'em, an they didn't have any little rabbits at all. I couldn't see how I was goin to make any money out of 'em, an when I said anything about it pa he'd laugh.

"I ast Mrs. McClellan about it, an she said that hers had had two or three litters since she sold me mine, an she couldn't see how it was. Pa said they didn't have lucky names, at least Lizzie didn't. He said she ought to have been named Willie or Pete."

"Then the rabbit business wasn't a success?"

"N'huh. I lost all I put into it exceptin the quarter I got from the lady next door for the little rooster."

"How about your mother?"

"Oh, she was only backin me. She knew she was takin chances. I wisht I had that dollar back, though. I need a dollar the worst way. Don't you know a good, easy way for a boy to get a dollar? I don't want to have to wait for it too long. I'd ast pa to give me one, only I ast him for one yesterday, an he wouldn't give it to me. I ain't goin to ast him again."—Chicago Record.

A Bit of Hoyt's Wit.

In his palmy, healthful days almost every act of Hoyt was an anecdote, and there were very many of his acts. One that will appeal particularly to theatrical people is told by an actor as follows:

"Hoyt made many friends, and some of them were real fast friends. Two of the fastest in both the affectionate and convivial sense he took with him in the production of one of his successful comedies in connection with the business management of the piece. Now, it is true of all theatrical management that there is always 'rivalry between the man ahead of the show' and the 'man back with the show' as to which will be the whole thing. After these two men had been on the road with the company for several weeks a strong rivalry grew up, and the man ahead of the show billed himself on the programmes as manager and the other as agent. Of course the reduced gentlemen 'kicked,' and to settle the dispute the man who was the whole thing wired Hoyt in some anger, 'I want to know how I shall bill —— on the house programmes.' Quick as a flash the answer came from Hoyt, 'Bill him as excess baggage.—Hoyt.'"—Kansas City Star.

Two Constitutions.

The Prince of Wales, even from his early years, was thoroughly "dosed" in English constitutional history, says a London correspondent. When quite a boy, he was daily "ground" in this branch of education and consequently grew to dislike it most cordially. The prince, tractable as he always was, once openly rebelled at this constant "grinding" and said to his tutor:

"I hate this study, sir! It is so dry!"

"Oh," replied the tutor, somewhat shocked, "but it is most imperative that you should know all about the constitution of the country you will one day have to rule and govern, most imperative."

"Yes, sir," smartly replied the prince, "the English constitution is important, I know. But what about my constitution?"

Warning to Other Rash Young Men.

"He told her he would give all he had in the world to make her happy," said Miss Cayenne.

"And what did she do?"

"She married him and held him strictly to his promise."—Washington Star.

OLD-TIME STATESMAN

Death of Mr. Bradbury, Who Represented Maine In United States Senate

Augusta, Me., Jan. 7.—Hon. James W. Bradbury died at his home in this city yesterday of bronchitis, contracted about a week ago, since when he had steadily failed.

James Ware Bradbury, LL. D., was born in Parsonsfield, in this state, June 10, 1802, being a direct descendant of Thomas Bradbury, who came to this country from Essex county, Eng., in 1611. He was a former law partner of Governor Morrill. His life was a long and eventful one, but up to the last he retained his mental faculties and took as lively an interest in the questions of the day and city affairs as ever.

Mr. Bradbury was always a Democrat. His election to the United States senate was in 1846 for the term beginning March 4, 1847. In the senate at that time were Webster, Clay, Calhoun, Benton, Cass, Douglass, Seward, Chase and others of great distinction. He had, in 1844, been a delegate to the Democratic convention in which he threw the vote from Maine that resulted in the nomination of James K. Polk. He then took the stump in Maine for Polk. When he entered the senate he gave the president his hearty support.

In 1850, when Clay presented his compromise measure to prevent the clash between the north and the south, Mr. Bradbury supported it, and he ever after said he was glad he did it.

He ever took a deep interest in Bowdoin college, and seldom missed a commencement. He was elected on the board of overseers in 1846, and to the board of trustees in 1861, where he served until his death.

He put through the Maine legislature the charter of the first railroad in Maine, the Portland, Saco and Portsmouth. This was in 1835. He also secured the charter for the Atlantic and St. Lawrence railroad.

He has been a constant attendant on the Congregational church. In 1834 he married Miss Eliza Ann Westbrook of Augusta. She died Jan. 29, 1879.

The distance was 1099 miles and 2 laps.

Runaway.

Officer Barry stopped a runaway in City Square Saturday afternoon and prevented what might have resulted in a serious accident. George Macfarlane left his horse standing in front of the Durgin & Merrill block. He neglected to hitch the horse, but wound the reins about the whip. In the team was a little three year old girl. Suddenly, the horse started on a trot for home. As the team passed Officer Barry he noticed the condition of things and started on a run after the runaway. Fortunately the horse was not going very fast and by sprinting he was able to catch the runaway near Dr. Gordon's residence. The little girl was badly frightened but was uninjured.

WANTED NOTE AMENDED

Terms of Powers Do Not Quite Suit Chang Chih Tung

PROTEST COMES TOO LATE

Because Chinese Envoys Cannot Recall Assent Already Given — Outlines of Russo-Chinese Agreement Were Settled Over a Year Ago

London, Jan. 7.—Chang Chih Tung, the Wu Chang viceroy, wired the Chinese envoys, strenuously urging them to delay the signing of the note, says Mr. Morrison, wiring to The Times from Pekin, until several clauses had been amended and that portion of the preamble had been expunged which charges the imperial court with the responsibility for the attacks upon the legations.

CHANG CHIH TUNG.

He further urges the imperial personages not to return to Pekin, on the grounds that the joint note permits the powers to maintain 10,000 troops between Pekin and the sea.

An imperial decree was issued to delay the affixing of signatures, but the Chinese plenipotentiaries replied that it was impossible to recall the assent already given.

The outlines of the Russo-Chinese agreement regarding Manchuria were settled with Li Hung Chang in December, 189, says the Vienna correspondent of The Daily Telegraph, and prior to that Russia had concluded treaties with the Emirs of Bokhara and Khiva and the Shah of Persia, arranging for neutrality or for military assistance in the event of difficulties arising between Russia and any Asiatic power. In fact, all the steps toward the practical acquisition of Manchuria had been carefully prepared.

China is now endeavoring to negotiate at St. Petersburg a revision of the Russo-Chinese Manchurian agreement.

The Vienna correspondent of The Daily Chronicle asserts that Russia, in her agreement with China, undertakes to defend the latter against any attack on her forts.

Li Hung Chang has suffered a relapse and because of the serious effect of this and his great age, it is feared that he will be unable to act as plenipotentiary in arranging a settlement of the troubles in China, and that the difficulty and delay in securing a successor may cause the postponement for a time of the negotiations.

Unable to Check Smallpox

Kansas City, Jan. 7.—At a meeting of the board of health yesterday, Dr. James said that there are cases of smallpox in more than 100 counties of Missouri, and that the most vigorous quarantine measures have failed to stop the spread of the disease. City physicians express the fear that Kansas City will suffer an epidemic of the disease. There are 100 cases here now, and new ones are being discovered daily.

Inducement For Capture of Crowe

Omaha, Jan. 7.—A specific reward of $13,000 is now offered for the arrest of Pat Crowe, and nothing is said in the offer about conviction. The police are sending out circulars bearing a picture and minute destription of Crowe. The offer for Crowe is made unconditionally, the arrest and delivery to the authorities being the only requisite for securing the reward.

Couldn't Get Suitable Quarters

Cincinnati, Jan. 7.—The Blaine club of Cincinnati, the largest political organization in Ohio, has officially abandoned its proposed trip to the inauguration at Washington next March, for which two special trains had been chartered. The committee could not make arrangements for quarters such as the Blaine club were accustomed to.

Germany Looking Toward Cyprus

St. Petersburg, Jan. 7.—The Molokanen, a sect numbering 40,000, whose founders removed in 1840 from various parts of Russia to the Caucasus, and whose delegates have just brought glowing reports from the Doukhobors, or Russian Quakers, in Canada, contemplate emigrating to America.

PHILIP D. ARMOUR DEAD

Millionaire Had Spent Two Years In a Vain Effort to Regain His Health

Chicago, Jan. 7.—Philip Danforth Armour, philanthropist, financier and multimillionaire, head of the vast commercial establishment that bears his name, died at his home here yesterday afternoon. A muscular affection of the heart, known to the medical profession as myocarditis, was the immediate cause of death. He had been slowly recovering from pneumonia that for three weeks had threatened his life.

The end came after two years of illness, during which time Mr. Armour visited German baths, passed the cold months in southern California and devoted himself largely to an attempt to restore his health.

Philip D. Armour, who was in his 69th year, made his own life on lines unique and wholly original with himself. From a Oneida county, N. Y., farm, to the position of paying more freight and controlling more provisions than any other man in the world, were the two extremes in his life. The ancestoral Armours were Connecticut people.

The California gold fever struck western New York in 1849, and Young Armour was the first in Stockbridge to determine to visit the Pacific coast. He obtained the permission of his parents and at the age of 17 started, having three companions from the same neighborhood. The almost incredible part of it was that the party walked nearly the entire distance from New York to California.

The commercial sense indicated its presence as soon as he saw the gold fields of California. He made money from the start and at the end of six years he returned home with a fortune. Later he came west again, and with a brother-in-law established a large wholesale grocery house in Milwaukee. This venture was also successful, and in a year's time he purchased the largest grain elevator in Milwaukee. This led to more elevators and railroad stock. In 1866 he came to Chicago to take charge of the Chicago branch of a New York packing establishment. The result was that the Chicago house ceased to be a branch, and the west gained the largest packing and provision plant in the world.

In works of charity Mr. Armour's monument will be found in the Armour institute, to which, but a short time ago, he gave $750,000 in one remembrance. Asked once what he considered his best paying investment, he replied: "The Armour institute."

Opposed to Large Standing Army

Baltimore, Jan. 7.—Cardinal Gibbons yesterday delivered a sermon in which he reviewed the events of the century just closed, with special reference to the wars which have been waged during that period, as a preface to an urgent plea for universal peace. He incidentally touched upon the subject of the proposed increase of the standing army in this country, pointing out the evil results arising from the maintenance of large bodies of armed men in Europe, and expressed the hope that similar conditions may never obtain in this country.

Boy Killed His Father

SENATORS INTERESTED

In the House Fight on the Reapportionment Bill

QUAY, PLATT AND LODGE

May Muster Force Enough to Defeat the Hopkins Bill—Senate Will Give Practically Uninterrupted Attention to Army Reorganization Bill

Washington, Jan. 7.—The consideration of the reapportionment bill was resumed today in the house. The indications point to a final vote on the measure tomorrow, but the fight over the basis of apportionment is a bitter one, and the debate may be prolonged.

The outcome is not clear. Mr. Hopkins is still confident that his bill will carry, but in order to pull it through he is now ready to concede an increase of three members to cover the major fractions of the states of Florida, Colorado and North Dakota. If his bill passes it probably will be with this modification.

The opposition is very aggressive, but on the surface seems to lack the strength necessary to carry the Burleigh bill. There are forces at work, however, by which the opposition hope, through the agencies of Senator Quay, Senator Platt of New York and Senator Lodge of Massachusetts, to swing the delegations of New York, Pennsylvania and Massachusetts into line, and, if successful, the Hopkins bill may suffer defeat. Mr. Crumpacker of Indiana proposes to move to recommit the bill, with instructions to reduce the representation of the southern states, but there is no idea that such a proposition will prevail.

After the disposal of the apportionment bill, the river and harbor bill will be taken up. It is expected to consume two days. The remainder of the week will be devoted to appropriation bills. The District of Columbia bill probably will be the next of the supply bills to be considered.

The senate will continue to give practically uninterrupted attention to the army reorganization bill until that measure shall be disposed of. That the bill will pass no one doubts, and the general opinion is that it will get through some time during the present week.

Senator Hawley, chairman of the committee on military affairs, expresses the opinion that the measure will be in conference by Wednesday, but other senators postpone the date somewhat. There are several committee amendments yet to be considered, including those relating to the army canteen and the veterinary corps. It was supposed at one time that the canteen provision would cause prolonged debate, but the best opinion now is that comparatively little will time will be spent on it. A number of amendments suggested by individual senators will be considered at greater length, and some speeches on the bill as a whole are yet to be made. The provision of the bill authorizing the enlistment of Filipinos in the army of the United States is among the features which are almost certain to come in for sharp attack.

With the army bill out of the way, the legislative, executive and judicial appropriation bill will be taken up, and, after it, other appropriation bills, if any are in shape to be considered.

The ship subsidy bill will be restored to the calendar as the regular order of business when the army bill is passed, and it will be pressed when no appropriation bills are awaiting consideration.

The feature of the debate upon the reapportionment bill in the house Saturday was a two-hour speech by Mr. Littlefield of Maine in favor of the Burleigh bill to increase the membership of the house to 386. He had a number of sharp exchanges with Mr. Hopkins, chairman of the census committee, in which he sustained his reputation as a hard hitter and a vigorous debater. During the course of the day Mr. Hopkins expressed a willingness to accept an amendment to his bill, which would give an additional representative each to Florida, Colorado and North Dakota, the three states with majority fractions unrecognized in his bill. He claims assured victory for his bill, but the advocates of the Burleigh bill insist almost as confidently that the Hopkins bill will be beaten.

While the senate was in session for more than three hours, little in the way of important legislation was accomplished. The committee amendments to the army reorganization bill to which no objection had been raised were agreed to, but none of the contested amendments was considered. Dilatory tactics were employed by Mr. Pettigrew of South Dakota to prevent the consideration of matters that would advance the business of the senate.

TO PREVENT OUTRAGES

Military Expeditions Will Continue For the Present

SIGNING OF AGREEMENTS

Strongly Opposed by the Imperial Court—Belief, However, That Prince Ching and Li Hung Chang Will Sign Regardless of Orders

Peking, Jan. 8.—Count Von Waldersee says that China's request, through her representatives at foreign courts, that the expeditions should cease, cannot be complied with at present.

No expeditions, he asserts, are sent out without adequate cause. Where Where there are scenes of bloodshed or disorder troops are sent to interfere, this being the only means of preventing outrages. He declares that the expeditions are not intended for punitive purposes, but merely for police purposes, with a view of giving the necessary protection to life and property.

The report that the Chinese court had instructed the Chinese peace envoys to refuse to sign the joint note of the powers to China is confirmed. The court referred to the objections of the southern viceroys, which are the same as the court have. Prince Ching, however, informed the court that it was too late.

Agreements identical for each nation were presented to Prince Ching yesterday afternoon. Those close to Prince Ching and Li Hung Chang say they have decided to sign, even if they lose their heads, without regard to the latest orders from the court.

Others, who are apparently equally close, say they will not sign immediately, asserting also that there are two factions surrounding the court, equally strong, and that it would be impolitic for the Chinese plenipotentiaries at present to act for themselves.

"THE OPEN DOOR"

Proposed Commercial Treaty With China For Powers to Consider

Shanghai, Jan. 8.—Ernest M. Satow, British minister to China, has proposed to the other foreign envoys the draft of a commercial treaty with China, based upon the following conditions:

First—Freedom for all coasting vessels.

Second—Freedom for all vessels on inland waters, especially the Yang-Tse-Kiang.

Third—Permission to import foreign salt.

Fourth—Adoption of regulations encouraging Chinese investments in foreign concerns.

Fifth—Steps extending China's exports and imports.

Sixth—Protection of trade marks.

Seventh—Protection of treaty ports.

The draft has not been accepted by the powers, and discussion regarding it has been postponed.

Bigoted court officials, it is reported, still raise objections to signing an acceptance of the joint demands.

Awful Doings of Chinese

London, Jan. 8.—A sister of charity, writing from the Maison De Jesu Enfant, at Ningpo, Nov. 29, describes the massacre at Nanking of 100 little boys. Some of them, she says, were roasted alive in the church. Others escaped to the orphanage outside the city, but all were killed and the place was burned.

DEFECTIVE INDICTMENT

Causes a Man's Release From State Prison and His Practical Rearrest

Salem, Mass., Jan. 8.—Because of a defect in the original indictment, Lincoln B. Peaslee of Beverly, who has been serving a 2½-year sentence in Charlestown state prison for arson, was brought back to this city yesterday and in default of a small bail is now in Salem jail awaiting further action of the grand jury.

The case is unique in the legal annals of the state, owing to the recent law that permits a judge to send a convicted person to prison pending the action of the supreme court on exceptions taken at the trial.

Peaslee was arrested July 13, 1899, for setting fire to a building in Beverly Farms, with intent to defraud an insurance company. He was tried and convicted on June 19, 1900, in the superior court at Newburyport, and sentenced to not less than 2½ years or more than 4 years in state prison. On Wednesday last the supreme judicial court found that the indictment under which he was tried was defective and yesterday Peaslee was brought back and practically rearrested. In default of $500 bail he was taken to jail to await new action by the grand jury.

In Advocacy of Socialism

Boston, Jan. 8.—Peter Curran, delegate from the British trade union congress to the Louisville convention of the American Federation of Labor, was tendered a reception here last night by the Social Democrats of this city. Mr. Curran spoke in advocacy of an independent political movement by the workers. He declared that a large percentage of the trade unionists of England are Socialists. He declared that the British working people wanted land and machinery used for the community collectively, instead of, as now for the aggrandizement and enrichment of the few.

Bay State Legislature

Boston, Jan. 8.—The real work of the legislature has begun in earnest, 40 petitions being sent in by the secretary of state to the house, and the day ended with a sensational order aimed at the large ice dealers for the control by the state of the ice business within the so-called metropolitan district. The order was introduced by Representative Carey of Haverhill, who stated that the order was the outcome of the attempt by the American Ice company, a Maine corporation, to control the business in Boston.

Gaston appeared in the superior court and moved that the action brought in the name of Mrs. Adah Richmond Stetson against John Stetson, for dower rights in the estate, be non-suited. He said that he had witnesses present, and was prepared to try the case. As neither the plaintiff nor her representatives were present, the case was defaulted.

Free Passenger Can Recover Damages

Boston, Jan. 8.—The supreme court, in upholding the plaintiff's exceptions in the case of Charles A. CONTRACTOR FLEECED

Had to Give Up Money to Save Himself From Ruin

HOUNDED BY ARMY OFFICER

Who Rejected Much Material as Unsatisfactory Until Arrangements Were Made "Not to Be Too Hard"—Accused Man Admits Receiving Money

Mobile, Ala., Jan. 8.—A sensation was created here yesterday when Secret Service Agent McAdams arrested on Royal street, this city, Captain C. W. King, quartermaster and supervisor of the government work at Fort Morgan, Ala. Captain King had just received $1000 in bills from J. H. Hobson, a contractor on government work at the fort.

McAdams, with a local detective as witness, searched the captain, and found the roll of money. King telling them if it was of any value to them to know he would say that he received the money from Hobson. All the bills had been previously recorded, so that McAdams was able to identify them. Hobson told McAdams that this was the second $1000 paid to King by him. King was taken before United States Commissioner Rickarby for preliminary examination.

Hobson testified before the commissioner that for some time he had been having trouble in carrying out his contracts on buildings at Fort Morgan, about 50 percent of the material he furnished being rejected as unsatisfactory. About eight months ago King approached him and substantially said that if Hobson made an arrangement with him he would not be so hard on him. The amount named by King was $5000, and as failure on the contract meant ruin, Hobson agreed to pay $3000. King said he would accept that amount, as he had caused Hobson loss by being hard on him. Hobson paid King $500 in October and the same amount in November, and $1000 yesterday. Captain King was bound over in the sum of $10,000, but has not made his bond.

King is a volunteer officer. He enlisted at Dubuque, Ia., in 1898, receiving the appointment of captain and assistant quartermaster. He served in Porto Rico during the war, superintending loading and unloading of transports. He was assigned to Fort Morgan in April last. He has a wife and two children, and has been well received here socially. He is said to have well-to-do relatives in Iowa.

Italian Consul In Hot Water

Albany, Jan. 8.—Two local Italian societies have passed resolutions making peremptory demands for the recall of G. P. Baccelli, the Italian consul resident in this city. It appears that Baccelli addressed a meeting of well-to-do fellow countrymen, and said that "Italians live on 15 cents a day." Many who heard the statement branded it as one calculated to cast a slur upon their race. In extenuation Baccelli said that he meant to pay tribute to Italians' excellent habit of thrift and industry.

College Instructor Kills Himself

New York, Jan. 8.—Clarence D. Wood an instructor, 23 years old, committed suicide yesterday by hanging himself to the doorknob of his room. Dr. Walter C. Good Afternoon.

The inaugural address of Mayor Hall has received many favorable comments

The City Council of 1901 has organized very harmoniously, in fact unanimously with the same officers as last year. The indications are that the meetings will be more interesting this year, as several of the new members are ready speakers and will probably desire to take an active part in the deliberations.

THE LEGISLATURE.

Committee Assignments of Senators and Representatives.

As announced in an extra edition of the Ledger on Monday, Senator E. H. Sprague of Quincy will be chairman of the Committee on Public Health, second on the Committee on Public Charitable Institutions, and third on the Committee on Street Railways.

Senator Fales, the other Norfolk county Senator will be chairman of the Committee on Mercantile Affairs, a member of the Committee on Public Service, and a member of the Committee on Roads and Bridges.

Several appointments have yet to be made of House members, but these have been announced:

Representative E. W. Sheppard of Quincy on Railroads.

Representative F. E. Badger of Quincy on Liquor Laws.

Representative E. W. Hart of Weymouth, House chairman of Committee on Towns.

Representative Gordon Willis of Weymouth on Roads and Bridges.

Representative Bradlee of Milton on Counties.

Representative Bemis of Foxboro on Manufactures.

Representative Ord of Medfield on Public Charitable Institutions.

Representative Bradford of Hyde Park on Street Railways.

Representative Collins of Avon on Water Supply.

Representative Dean of Brookline on House Committee on Rules.

Representative Nickerson of Dedham on Metropolitan Affairs.

Representative Bullard of Medway on Military Affairs.

County Appointments.

The appointments of the Norfolk County Commissioners include: Physician at the jail and house of correction, Dr. Francis L. Babcock of East Dedham; chaplain at the same institution, Rev. Edward W. Virgin; engineer at the same institution, Charles F. Tingley; superintendent of county buildings, Albert F. Daniells; county police, Albert F. Daniells and Owen J. Reynolds of Dedham, and Michael J. Burns of Quincy.

Trial of Lawrence.

The builders' preliminary trial of the torpedo boat destroyer Lawrence, recently launched at the works of the Fore River Engine Co., was held this afternoon. Owing to the lack of room but one newspaper representative was allowed on the trip. The trial trip today was principally to warm up her engines and she will probably not be speeded to over twenty knots per hour. The official builders' trial will be held in a short time.

SEWER TRANSFER.

The Biggest Surprise in Mayor's Inaugural.

Rumors of Opposition by the Board.

Everything Harmonious However, and Will Acquiesce.

The announcement in Mayor Hall's address of Monday that he had requested the Sewer Comimssioners to turn the business of that department over to the Commissioner of Public Works, was news to the general public for outside of those directly interested there was no information that such a step was contemplated. It was generally understood, however, that it was only a matter of time when the transfer would take place.

Many upon hearing that the transfer had been requested, expected that it would result in a refusal and a fight. Such, however is not the case.

No appropriation was made for the extension of the main sewer last year and but little work was done. This with the fact of the Metropolitan sewer district had been extended to Quincy, made it advisable to transfer the business.

Mayor Hall in asking for the transfer acted in accordance with Chapter 279 of the Acts of 1895, section 1 of which reads in part:

"The exclusive authority to construct, lay, maintain, repair, alter and operate all sewers and drains embraced within such system or systems, and such other works as may be required to be constructed, maintained and operated for a system of sewage disposal for said city of Quincy, shall be vested in a board of sewerage commissioners to be appointed as hereinafter provided:

"Provided, however, that said commissioners from time to time, whenever any section of said system or systems is completed and put in successful operation, shall, upon request of the mayor, transfer the management, operation and control of the same, to the commissioner of public works of said city of Quincy; and thereafter said commissioner shall have exclusive authority to maintain, repair, alter and operate such section and:

"Provided, further, that whenever said system or systems shall be substantially completed and put in successful operation said commissioners, upon written request of the Mayor, s hall transfer the same to said commissioner of public works; and thereupon the powers of said board of sewerage commissioners shall cease and all of its powers shall be vested in, and all of its duties imposed upon said commissioner of public works.

"Said commissioners shall make all contracts for the above purposes in the name and behalf of the city of Quincy, but no contract shall be made by them which involves the expenditure of money not already appropriated for the purposes by the municipal government of said Quincy."

The Sewer Commissioners held a meeting Monday night at which Mayor Hall was present. Everything was pleasant and harmonious, and the transfer was discussed in detail. There are several matters which the Sewer department has under way and a mutual understanding was reached whereby the Commission should complete this work before the transfer.

Chairman Jones of Sewer Commission when seen this morning said that no action was taken at Monday night's meeting as far as voting to transfer the business of the department to the Commissioner of Public Works, but the transfer would probably take place in about two weeks' time, as by that time the matters the Sewer Commission had under way would be completed.

The Sewer board is at present constituted as follows: Frederick L. Jones, chairman, whose term expires on Feb. 1 next; A. F. Schenkelberger, secretary, whose term expires in 1902, and Representative Frank E. Badger, whose term expires in 1903.

The board employs an engineer, E. W. Branch, and expended during the year 1900 up to Dec. 1, $5,781.62 for maintenance and current expenses; and over $20,620.49 for construction, as follows: $12,026.02 on account of 1899, and $8,594.47 on account of 1900. The Dec. 1 balance was: $1,218.38 on maintenance and $7,505.53 on construction.

A Card.

We the undersigned, do hereby agree to refund the money on a 50 cent bottle of Greene's Warranted Syrup of Tar if it fails to cure your cough or cold. We also guarantee a 25-cent bottle to prove satisfactory or money refunded.

G. A. LORING, Wollaston,
S. F. COPELAND.

IT IS SAID

That Opinions are Divided on the Mayor's Recommendations.

That the necessity of water meters is not apparent.

That they are a nuisance at best.

That Quincy does not buy its water by the gallon.

That it should not therefore sell by the gallon.

That Quincy should not scrimp unless other cities in the Metropolitan district do.

That there are wastes of water which should be checked.

That the Willard school yard does not need an iron fence.

That the fences in front of the Coddington, Adams and Washington have been removed.

That the Quincy and Willard and the Old High are the only ones which now have fences.

That the Mayor may fear the automobiles on the boulevard.

That the boulevard has not yet been opened to travel.

That until then the school yard of the Willard should not be abridged.

That an ex-Selectman is against large expenditures on newly accepted streets.

That more should be expended on the old streets.

That abutters on private ways should be willing to pay one-half the cost of edgestone to have their streets accepted.

That this is required wherever sidewalks are established on old streets.

That City Hall could be remodelled.

That the mistake is made in trying to do too much.

That the Council chamber should be reduced in size.

That there could be several offices on the second and third floors.

That the Mayor dealt the Sewer Commissioners a sad blow.

That they did not expect that their heads would fall in the bucket.

That they may object to vacating.

That the Mayor however is determined.

There is a snow song with music and words, an article on "Nature in January," another on "Experiments with ice," etc., etc. The suggestions in this publication are valuable to teachers, but make interesting reading for young and old.

Popular Educator for January also issued by the Educational Publishing Co., of Boston, is devoted to current thoughts, literature, nature study, geography, history, arithmetic, gems, suggestions. The supplement has several pictures of Lincoln and his birthplace. The school room helps are always appreciated.

Girl Missing.

Annie M. Perry, aged 13 years, of East Weymouth, has been missing from her home since Saturday and fears are entertained that she has been enticed away by some person for bad motives. She left her home to visit a Quincy photographer to have her pictures taken. She did not return and her mother became anxious, and an investigation was begun by Officer Butler. It was learned this morning that the girl had been seen boarding an electric car in City Square, Quincy, about 5 o'clock Saturday evening. She was accompanied by a plainly dressed woman who was unknown to the person who saw them. The car which they took was for Neponset. No other trace of her has been found.

The appointments of Mayor Hall will probobly not be announced until the City Council meeting of Jan. 21.

Work has been commenced building a tence a long the stone wall abutting the estate of Charles H. Porter on Hancock street. The wall is nearly on a level with the sidewalk and it has always been a source of danger. That someone has not walked off the wall and received a bad fall is a wonder.

The Twentieth Century club held its first meeting and banquet of the new year last Saturday evening at the residence of Millard F. Newcomb on Quincy avenue. Covers were laid for forty. Charles F. Knowlton, Commissioner of Public Works, was the guest of the evening. During the supper music was furnished by an orchestra.

The Compass whist club met with Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Jelenek Tuesday, Jan. 1st. Whist was enjoyed for the customary two hours, and resulted in Mr. James Curtin and Mrs. Sanford Small winning first prizes; Mr. James H. Churchill and Mrs. Alfred Jelenek winning second. Supper was served at the close of the game.

Atlantic has one characteristic—its superfluity of dogs. Cross dogs, gentle dogs, big dogs, little dogs—but dogs. If the weary medicant but knew on which side his bread was buttered, he would hie himself far from Atlantic and—the dogs. Some dogs are made to caress; some are born to guard, and some few, alas, are brought into the world to be chained and avoided. "Nuff" said.

Sunday morning many sought the "out door church," and as the quarry was iced over best of any other pond, a lively game of hockey was indulged in to the exclusion of all young women. The Sailors Home pond was crowded with people and offered excellent skating. Those who dutifully went to morning service, looked askance at the clanking skates and short skirted girls who glided over the ponds with such happy faces.

Milton Fire.

The Milton fire department was confronted with a lively blaze Monday evening in the ticket office of the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad at the Milton station. There was no one in the building at the time the fire was discovered, and the cause is unknown. The fire was confined to the ticket office and caused a damage of about $500.

Harvard Man Lives on Bread and Potatoes to Study.

Reuben Cyril Hill Thompson, from Albany, Or., is striving against many obstacles to win for himself an education. In the matter of diet Thompson is different from any other student who ever entered Harvard, writes the Boston correspondent of the New York World. He has lived on the appended frugal weekly fare: Twenty-one orders of potatoes, two to the order, 84 cents; twenty-one orders of bread, two slices to the order, 21 cents; total, $1.05.

At this rate the average cost for three meals is 15 cents. The potatoes are in every case baked, as Thompson asserts that those prepared in this way are not only more satisfying, but more nourishing. The bread is scarcely ever buttered, and the only drink which is indulged in at mealtimes is a cup of hot water.

Thompson takes all his meals in Randall hall, where during meals he waits on some of the 1,000 other students who board there. The fact that he is a waiter proves that the selection of potatoes and bread as a fare is entirely a voluntary one on the part of the westerner, for in addition to a slight salary the waiters receive their board.

Thompson is a graduate of McMinnville college. Owing to the fact that the course of studies at that institution is not as complete as that of Harvard, Thompson joined the junior class, and he commenced his unique method of dieting as soon as his studies were begun. He has already earned a scholarship for his excellent work of last year. As a result of his endeavors he received the mark of "A plus" in Greek. If this keeps up, he will undoubtedly be one of the highest ranked men to graduate from Harvard next June. Speaking of his strange diet, he said:

"I am not as fortunate financially as a great many of the men here, but still it is not from a sense of poverty that I confine myself to potatoes and bread. It is from choice. I do not think that one's mind can work properly when the system is filled with an indiscriminate mass of different sorts of food. I believe that the less a man eats the better it is for him—that is, if he gets enough to nourish his entire system as it should be nourished. My fast will be a thing of the past as soon as I have received my degree in June, as it will then be unnecessary. I shall return to the west, where I shall go into business."

CARRIERS OF THE SEA.

Charles H. Cramp on the Building of an American Merchant Marine.

Charles H. Cramp, president of the William Cramp Ship and Engine Building company, speaking of American shipbuilding prospects during the new century to a Philadelphia Press reporter, said:

"The condition of the shipbuilding industry at the close of the nineteenth century makes its future a most difficult prophecy. The advance during the last dozen years has been due to awards by the United States government of contracts for naval vessels, but naval work alone cannot sustain the shipbuilding industry of any country; hence the future of the industry depends entirely upon the state of our merchant marine, and it therefore remains for us to survey carefully the possible expansion of our commercial fleet.

"There is a popular fallacy to the effect that the United States must develop a great merchant marine in the immediate future for the reason that it appears the logical outlet for national capital and enterprise. This is all wrong. Capital will never seek an unprofitable outlet, and as the conditions exist at present it is not profitable to operate steamships under the American flag in competition with the ships of foreign maritime nations.

"Until these differences are adequately met the operation of American ships in the foreign trade must remain unprofitable, and so long as it is unprofitable there will be no extensive demand for new merchant work in American shipyards. Therefore the future depends entirely on the future conditions of the American merchant marine, for it is altogether unlikely that the United States government will ever again be engaged on a naval programme of such magnitude as it is at present."

Farragut's Cook Dead.

George Powell, one of the two colored members of the Admiral Boggs Association of Naval Veterans, is dead, says a Newark (N. J.) dispatch to the Rochester Democrat and Chronicle. He lived at 89 South street, Orange. Powell was a butler in wealthy families. He was a popular member of the association, and many members will attend his funeral. When about 20 years old, Powell served in the cook's galley in the flagship of Admiral Farragut. When Farragut was lashed to the mast, Powell came on deck to see if the admiral did not want something to eat. "Bring me a sandwich," said the admiral.

Powell hastened to the galley, prepared the most palatable sandwich he could with the materials at hand and took it to the commander of the fleet. "Thanks," said Farragut.

"He took it from my hand," Powell used to say in narrating the incident, "and ate it as coolly and with as much relish as if he had struck a free lunch counter after a long fast."

American Fruit on the Ocean.

The science of keeping fruit has been evolved to a high degree of perfection when the great ocean liners, no matter what flag they fly, no longer patronize the European fruit market for their supplies for the return voyage to America, says The Fruitman's Guide, but stock up right in the New York market for the whole round trip.

NOTICE TO PARENTS.

CITY OF QUINCY.

CITY CLERK'S Office, Dec. 31, 1900.

THE Record of birth in any city or town is always more or less unsatisfactory, owing to the fact that the canvasser finds difficulty in getting the necessary information. Names and dates are frequently given incorrectly. The importance of accuracy is shown in many cases where there is a question of descent, or inheritance of property, or collection of life insurance or pensions. The City Clerk's copy of the record is accepted as conclusive evidence in a court of law. While great pains are taken by this office to have the record correct experience shows that it is necessary that parents themselves should lend their assistance. In fact, the law requires that parents shall give notice to the City Clerk of the birth of their children, and provides a penalty for neglect to give such notice for the space of 40 days.

It often happens that only children or servants are at home when the canvasser makes his call, and the answers to his questions are open to doubt. I therefore request all parents in whose household a birth has occurred in the year 1900, to place upon a paper or card the required information, and keep it in a convenient place until the canvasser appears.

The canvasser will begin on Jan. 1, 1901.

Incidents of Inaugurations and Some of Recommendations.

Some of the recommendations of different Mayors will be of interest, and also incidents in connection with the the inauguration of the new city governments.

Mayor Anderson of Fitchburg favors consolidating the highway and water departments.

Mayor Sheppard of Lynn believes there is no better material for paving than granite blocks.

A new High school is among the possibilities of Newburyport.

Woburn was unable to elect a president of the City Council, taking 26 ballots. Lawrence took 500 ballots with a like result, and Pittsfield got into a snarl.

Mayor Gould of Chelsea desires to live strictly within the city means, and thereby live honestly.

A fight between the aldermen and common council of Salem delayed the delivery of the inaugural address in that city for over an hour.

Lynn reduced its School Committee from 21 to 12.

The Mayor of Chelsea wants an automobile street sweeper.

The debt of Newburyport is above the limit.

The Lowell City Council elects the superintendent of streets, city solicitor and other officers.

Mayor Coulter of Brockton wants a large police force, and urges municipal ownership of public utilities.

Medford has a larger debt than Quincy.

The Mayor of Gloucester says the School Committee must not increase their expenditures this year.

Atlantic Don't Sleep.

A young man who had visited Atlantic some two or three years ago boarded a train from Boston and decided to repeat his visit. He dozed pardonably on the way, the train being an accommodation, and at each station waked just enough to peep out to see if he had reached Atlantic. Neponset came, the young man looked out and resumed his nap. Atlantic next—but still the sleeper ignored the destination, just peeping out, and going to sleep again. When he had ridden as far as Braintree, he motioned to the conductor and asked how soon the train would reach Atlantic.

"Bless you, we've passed it long ago," said that worthy man.

"Ah, no you haven't" replied the young man. "I've taken a look at every straight station and I could tell that little tumbled down affair at Atlantic anywhere."

Then the conductor put the young man next to a recent truth, and the N. Y., N. H. & H. was the richer by sixteen cents.

Brockton, Jan. 5, 1901.

$4,000 TO $8,000,

The Cost of Launching of the Big Battleships.

"The mere act of getting a war vessel into the water costs a lot of money, time and trouble," said an engineer to New Orleans Times-Democrat reporter, speaking of the recent launching of several new torpedo boats. "I spent a year and a half in the designing room of the Cramps' yard," he continued, "and happen to know what I am talking about. Of course the launching of a little torpedo boat is comparatively easy, and the cost is not over a few hundred dollars, including flowers and sonvenirs and even the bottle of champaign used in the christening. But when it comes to a big armored cruiser or a first-class battleship it is a horse of a different color, and the actual expense seldom falls below $4,000 or $5,000. I've known it to go as high as $8,000.

"The building of the ways for the ship to slide down over is the main item, and then comes the greasing. Every inch of timber over which the vessel slides must be covered with a lubricant. Different firms use different substances, but soap and tallow form the main ingredients of them all. At the Cramps' we used a layer of beef tallow and a layer of soft soap, and taken altogether between one and one and a half ton of the stuff was required to put a move on the average battleship. The tallow is spread on first, to the depth of about three fingers and the workmen use big flat trowels to make the surface as smooth as possible. Then they pour over the soft soap, which is just thick enough to run, or about the consistency of tar.

"As a general thing, the double coating answers the purpose admirably, and the ship glides into the water as if it was sailing on air. If it sticks, as has happened in a few cases, it is likely to spring some of its plates, and accidents of that kind are so costly that nothing is spared to avert them."

New Officers.

The newly elected officers of the Societe Saint Jean Baptist of West Quincy are:

TODAY'S COURT.

William F. Freeman was fined $5 for drunkenness at Braintree.

HIVE AND BEE.

More bees are lost in wintering than by disease.

Keep bees to make your own honey, but begin on a small scale.

Lack of ventilation is the cause of dampness in many hives.

Heavy snow should be allowed to remain about the hives just as it fell, even if it covers the hives entirely.

It is important to have an alighting place convenient for the bees to enter the hives; an east or south front is desirable.

The entrance to the hives should be contracted during the winter. Three inches long and three-eighths wide is sufficient.

Bees seldom, if ever, take a fly while there is much snow on the ground. If they are in a proper condition, they will not fly at all.

One result of disturbing the bees in winter is that it causes them instinctively to fill themselves with honey, and, as a consequence, they become unhealthy.

If bees are wintered in ordinary, thin, unprotected hives, the moisture arising from them will condense and freeze to the hive, thereby encircling the bees with ice. —St. Louis Republic.

PAINTERS AND WRITERS.

Charles Peck, one of the founders of the Chicago Academy of Design and a pioneer artist of Chicago, died recently.

Edmond Rostand, the famous French novelist, owes his poor health largely to his hard work. He writes nearly all the day and far into the night.

Ernest Seton-Thompson, the naturalist, writer and artist, is a physical counterpart of Paderewski. Like the pianist, too, he began his career with a direful struggle against poverty.

Dr. Conan Doyle says that the salutation given by his little girl when he returned home after his defeat at the parliamentary election was: "Oh, daddy! I am so sorry you did not pass!"

One of the first things Winston Churchill did on reaching Boston was to make a tour of the old bookshops. He has a hobby for old books and while in this country has gathered up several rare ones.

SIGNALS THE MARTIANS

Plan of Camille Flammarion Discussed by a Chicago Genius.

IMMENSE LIGHTS MUST BE USED.

Ingenious Scheme to Attract Notice of the Inhabitants of the Faroff Planet Described by Sam Fox, a Machinist Philosopher—How Searchlights Will Look.

In one of Chicago's big manufacturing plants on the Northwest Side there works a queer genius—astronomer, geologist, essayist and philosopher, says the Chicago Times-Herald. On the time book of the shop he is known as "Sam Fox, machinist, time check No. 35." When he arrives at the shop at 7 o'clock every morning, he assumes that role for nine hours of daylight, but in the long hours of darkness, far into the morning, this man studies, studies, studies. Earnestness is the keynote of all he does, whether it be a simple problem in mechanics or a complex astronomical proposition.

The subject of astronomy offers a field unlimited for such theories, and this "learned machinist" has long been a close student of solar mysteries, or, as he calls them, the "hieroglyphics of the heavens." He has closely followed the researches of the celebrated French astronomer, Flammarion, and the publication a few days ago of the latter's scheme for communicating with the planet Mars has aroused his enthusiasm. He gladly consented to elucidate his "idea of Flammarion's idea," as he aptly put it.

"It is a theory accepted among scientists," began Fox, "that if Mars is inhabited the people must be a very intelligent race, as the planet is much older than the earth. They are as intelligent as the inhabitants of the earth, undoubtedly more so. It therefore follows as a natural conclusion that there are students of astronomy on Mars as well as here, and it also follows that, as their planet is in the same solar system as ours, they observe the same planets, suns and constellations that we do. This is the basis of Flammarion's scheme.

"The appearance of the earth to the Martians is somewhat similar to the appearance of the moon to us. The earth shines with a reflected light only. A very powerful illumination on the earth's surface would at night be noticeable to the inhabitants of other planets, particularly if the illumination were in powerful parallel rays and was directed toward any particular planet. Taking the two theories, first, that the Martians observe the same constellations and planets that we do and of course the earth also and that a light can be projected toward Mars, we come to a fuller realization of Flammarion's plan—that is, to produce, by artificial means, a solar constellation by means of powerful searchlights properly placed on the surface of the earth with their rays directed toward Mars. You see the idea? The next step is to select the constellation to be reproduced. Flammarion has chosen that of Ursa Major, the Great Bear, or, as it is commonly called, the 'Big Dipper.' Why he chose that I do not know, but it looks as if he had been directed by some unseen hand. The fact that the Great Bear is one of the largest constellations makes it likely that a reproduction of it would attract the attention of the Martian astronomers and cause them to examine into the matter further.

"The next step was the selection of the points, of which there must be seven, as there are seven stars in the Great Bear. Here again is seen the guiding hand of Providence. In Europe there are seven large cities, centers of population, which are in the same relative position as the stars in the constellation of Ursa Major. These cities are Bordeaux, Marseilles and Paris in France, Strassburg in Germany, Amsterdam in Holland, Copenhagen in Denmark and Stockholm in Sweden. Flammarion proposes that in each of these cities there shall be erected a powerful electric searchlight, supplied with a powerful dynamo and mounted in the same manner as a large telescope, that it might follow the planet as the earth revolves. The lenses of the searchlights would be made so that the light would be thrown in parallel rays, and these seven immense searchlights would be connected so that they could be operated from a central station, probably Paris, and could be lighted or extinguished simultaneously.

"Now, in order to give a better illustration of this I have taken this terrestrial globe, and on the dots representing these seven cities I have placed pins. You will notice that they form the Big Dipper. To get an idea of the appearance that these lights would present to the Martian astronomers paste a sheet of paper over the front of a small box, first puncturing the paper with seven pinholes to form the Big Dipper. In a darkened room place a candle behind this, and you will see how the seven points of light will shine out, while the rest of the paper is not so light. That is the way the searchlights will look to the Martians. Their rays will be thrown directly at the planet night after night and will without doubt attract the attention of her scientists, who will undoubtedly investigate the phenomenon at once. They will see that we are trying to communicate with them and will probably devise some means of reply."

"But how would we continue the conversation should Flammarion's plan succeed?" was asked.

"That part of it will have to be left to the imagination," replied Fox. "I have my idea, and I presume Flammarion and others have theirs."

TWELFTH DAY.

The 6th of January and Its Popular Phrase For Good Luck.

Last year developed quite a fad among the fashionables for Twelfth Night parties. Twelfth day, or "Old Christmas" day, is the 6th day of January, or 12 days after Christmas. Ecclesiastically, it is the Epiphany, or "appearance," and commemorates the coming of the three "star led magi" to Bethlehem. Down to the time of the civil wars in England Twelfth day was kept with great festivity at court, among the nobility, in the barristers' inns, at the universities and among the people generally. The lord mayor of London, accompanied by the aldermen and the city guilds, used to attend St. Paul's and hear a sermon. Large, elaborate cakes were made in which a bean was inserted, and he who obtained the slice containing the bean was recognized as "king for the day." The custom is traced back beyond Christian times to the old Roman days, when children, at the end of their saturnalia, drew lots with beans for the honor of kingship. It gave rise to a proverb indicative of good luck—"He has found the bean!"

Mary, queen of Scots, it is on record, took part in Twelfth Night festivities at Holyrood in 1563, and when the bean fell to the lot of her attendant, Mary Fleming, the queen good naturedly arrayed the lady in her own robes and jewels.

The custom is still kept up in France, where, indeed, the popular phrase for good luck is, "Il a trouve le feve au gateau" ("He has found the bean in the cake.") One of these cakes is cut up every Twelfth Night in the green-room at Drury Lane theater in accordance with a bequest by Baddeley, the comedian, to provide cake and wine on this particular night for the performers. Twelfth Night is a great time in Rome. The people there call it Befana, a contraction of Epifania. Befana is their Santa Claus. He brings all the children their sweets and their toys. On this night the youngsters sally forth with long tin trumpets to the toy bazaar, making a din indescribable, and finally return to hang up their stockings.

The present Twelfth Night festivities include adaptations of some of the old customs and the cutting of the cake, for which any good fruit cake recipe will serve, with the addition of a bean dropped into the mixture just before it is put into the oven.

with oval gold buckles. In the center is a slipper of satin embroidered with beads and finished with a large ribbon bow.

The lower figures are a velvet slipper with velvet bow and rhinestone buckle and a patent leather pump with low heel and square bow of grosgrain ribbon.

Notes From the Jewelers.

Elsie Bee says in Jewelers' Circular: Up to date women have brought back from Europe the fashion of wearing watch fobs.

Latest in its line is the lorgnon a branche. This is simply a pair of perfectly round eyeglasses made to fold and fit into the handle.

The "all gold" seal rings in various hues, including greenish and antique effects, show up more prominently than ever.

Frames for portrait brooches were never prettier and supply a real want of the season. The quarter or half dollar sizes find favor.

Long chains undoubtedly lead the procession of feminine vanities.

The serpent is the one motif approaching omnipresence in today's jewelry.

A busy year begins with JAN.

House linens reach their lowest ebb;
We must replenish them in FEB.

It's not too soon to make and starch
Light summer clothing now in MARCH.

All flower beds must be put in shape
And flower seeds planted out in APR.

Then cleaning house and moving day
Destroy our happiness in MAY.

Midsummer will be coming soon,
So prize each day of lovely JUNE.

With jams and jellies days fly by,
For currants ripen in JULY.

Now rest should come for horse and dog,
And busy housewives, too, in AUG.

For all good cooks who are adept
Make pickles and preserves in SEPT.

It's not too soon to get well stocked
With fall and winter clothes in OCT.

Thanksgiving day. Each kitchen stove
With pies and turkeys groans in NOV.

And all our friends we must remember
With Christmas gifts in gay DECEMBER.

LARGE ARMY IS NEEDED

For the Protection of America's Expanding Interests

LODGE DEFENDS ARMY BILL

Declares That Peace Will Soon Prevail In the Philippines and Speaks In Glowing Terms of Our Commercial Future

Washington, Jan. 8.—Discussion of the committee's amendments striking out the provision for a veterinary corps in the army was begun in the senate yesterday. Mr. Kenny of Delaware, champion in the senate of the proposed vetrinary corps, urged that the committee's amendment be rejected.

Senator Lodge took part in the debate. His position was that although vetrinary science had advanced greatly within recent years, and was of the utmost importance to the army, and although every senator would wish to give the military veterinarians all proper recognition, he could not support a provision for the creation of a great corps, as proposed by the bill.

Discussing the general features of the measure, Mr. Lodge said he did not think any American citizen honestly believed that the liberty of the people was menaced by an army of 100,000. He did not believe an army of 100,000 was, in the circumstances, a large army. As to the situation in the Philippines, Mr. Lodge maintained that "organized rebellion has ceased and the local George Washington is in hiding."

"In a short time," said Mr. Lodge, "I believe there will be peace and ordet throughout the Philippine islands." He did not think, however, that the probability of outbreaks among the Moros and the uncivilized tribes of the interior ever would be eliminated, and he believed there would be no end of trouble for some time.

After some sharp sparring, Mr. Bacon put this question to Mr. Lodge: "From your knowledge, as chairman of the Philippine committee, of the conditions in the island, will the army of 76,000 be needed there for a short time or for an indefinite time?"

"My judgment,' replied Mr. Lodge, "is that at the end of two years we will be able to reduce very largely the army in the Philippines. That is my belief. Spain had an army of 15,000 men, and kept very bad order—"

"And occupied little territory," interjected Mr. Bacon."

"Yes, and occupied little territory," assented Mr. Lodge.

He maintained, however, that with a force of 25,000 in the Philippines the United States would keep better order than ever had been known there. With that force in the Philippines there would be about 35,000 men left to man the fortifications of the country, a force which he believed totally inadequate. In addition that force would be called upon to guard the Nicaraguan canal which it was proposed soon to build. On that canal there would be employed 50,000 laborers. They would have to be protected. When finished the canal would have to be guarded.

In response to further questions, Mr. Lodge said that in his opinion at the end of two years the force in the Philippines could be reduced materially, and at the end of four or five years the force probably could be reduced safely to 20,000 men.

"I am no alarmist, and I have no fears that we are in danger of war with anybody," said Mr. Lodge, "and I do not believe there is a nation on the face of the earth that has any desire to attack us. But no man can tell what may happen at any time.

"We have come in the process of our development until we have expanded far beyond our own markets, commercially, and we are breaking into every market of the world. It is a part of our economic development. We are marching along toward the economic supremacy of the world, in my judgment. Look at Europe and compare it with the United States. It has been worked for a thousand years at least in the endeavor to draw out all its resources.

"Here in the United States we are holding all the best part of the North American continent. Look at your map, a great symmetrical country, all under one flag, no separate government, your railroads running in steady connection and carrying freight from the Atlantic to the Pacific, and from the lakes to the gulf. Europe cannot beat that. Every separate state system, every separate railroad she has enhances the cost of her articles. We are beating her in iron and steel. We can turn them out at prices Europe cannot meet. We are going to surpass her in other articles. She has to take coal from us. It is a mere question of time when her last stronghold—the carrying trade—will be invaded. We will build ships cheaper than she can. We shall in some way or other equal her subsidies to steamship companies by our subsidies and put our ships on an even plane of competition.

Mr. Lodge contended that the control of the ocean is vital to us, and drew a brilliant word picture of the future of the United States.

The animated debate in the house on the reapportionment of representation from the various states is nearing its close, it being unanimously agreed that the final vote would be taken before the session closes today. It was expected there would be a sequel yesterday to the exciting clash of Saturday between Mr. Littlefield of Maine and Mr. Hopkins of Illinois, but the latter made no effort at rejoinder and contented himself with the direction of the measure toward the final vote. He is confident that his bill will be passed today

ORPHAN ASYLUM BURNED

At Least Nineteen Children Known to Have Perished In the Flames

Rochester, Jan. S.—Fire broke out in the hospital section of the Rochester orphan asylum at 1 o'clock this morning and the flames spread rapidly. It is known that 19 of the children perished, and it is feared that many more victims may later be reported.

The fire was first discovered by two men passing the asylum. They hastily sent in an alarm, and then turned their attention to the work of arousing the nurses and the children.

A terrific explosion was next heard, and in a moment the entire hospital section was in flames. The smoke began to pour out of every window in the main building, and the screams and frantic cries of the children could be heard. The work of rescue began with a will. Children and nurses were carried from the building, all in an unconscious condition, some dead.

There were 100 children at the hospital and a corps of about 30 nurses and attendants. Two of the women attendants are among the dead.

The origin of the fire is not known at this time. The property loss will probably exceed $20,000.

How Hewitt Would Eradicate Vice

New York, Jan. S.—Ex-Mayor Hewitt, interviewed upon the subject of vice in New York, said: "The remedy for the evils which the people complain of now lies entirely in the hands of the people. When I was mayor, I concluded that the root of the evils lay in the tenement houses. Then I recommended that the tenement houses be torn down and reconstructed, and that this work be done by the city as a necessity. That may be socialistic, but I do not care, so long as it is done."

When a woman gives up it is because she has gone to the utmost limit of strength and endurance. It is a marvel how women will stagger on under the daily household burdens when the whole body is racked with pain.

For the nervous, run-down condition which so many women experience, as a result of overstrain in household cares, there is no medicine can equal Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It strengthens the weak stomach by curing diseases of the organs of digestion and nutrition. It purifies the blood of poisons which cause rheumatism and other painful diseases. It nourishes the nerves, and builds up the body with sound, healthy flesh.

There is no alcohol in "Golden Medical Discovery" and it is entirely free from opium, cocaine and all other narcotics.

Accept no substitute for the "Discovery." There is nothing "just as good" for weakness, nervousness and debility.

"I want the whole world to know what Dr. Pierce's medicines have done for me," writes Mrs. Helen Hardigrove, of Bangs, Knox Co., O., "I had many of the ills of woman's life. My lungs and throat troubled me besides, and I had rheumatism. About a year ago I had to give up work I was so bad. I had heard so much about your medicine I thought I would try it. I took four bottles of your 'Golden Medical Discovery' and 'Pellets,' and by the time I had taken half of the first bottle I began to gain, and kept on getting better. And now I have no more of my old ailments and am entirely cured of rheumatism, I feel like a new woman."

Burleigh Reapportionment Plan Accepted by the House

INFLUENCE OF SENATORS

Largely Responsible For the Defeat of the Hopkins Bill—Senate Committee Restores Canteen, Stricken Out of the Army Bill by the House

Washington, Jan. 9.—The reapportionment plan proposed by the Burleigh bill, which increases the membership of the house during the next decade from 357, the present membership, and the membership proposed by the committee, or Hopkins bill, to 386, was yesterday accepted by the house—165 to 102. The result was largely brought about by the influence of certain senators from several of the larger northern states, who threw the weight of their influence into the scale in favor of the larger membership.

When it became apparent that these factors were at work against the bill, Mr. Hopkins attempted to compromise by giving an additional representative each to North Dakota, Colorado and Florida, but his adversaries refused to compromise after complete victory was assured.

Under the bill as passed yesterday no state loses a representative and the following make gains: Illinois, New York and Texas, three each; Minnesota, New Jersey and Pennsylvania, two each, and Arkansas, California, Colorado, Connecticut, Florida, Louisiana, Massachusetts, Mississippi, Missouri, North Carolina, North Dakota, Washington, West Virginia and Wisconsin, one each.

The bill provides that whenever a new state is admitted the representative assigned to it shall be in addition to the number provided in the bill. It also adds a provision, never hitherto incorporated in a reapportionment bill, to the effect that congressional districts in addition to being "contiguous" shall also be "compact." States which are allowed additional representatives by the bill shall, by its terms, elect them at large until the legislature shall redistrict the state.

During the legislative session yesterday the senate had under consideration the much-mooted canteen question in connection with the army reorganization bill. The senate committee in effect restored the provision for a post exchange or canteen which had been stricken out of the bill by the house. For nearly five hours the senate discussed the committee amendment, but a vote upon the proposition is not yet in sight.

Assuming a Serious Aspect

Washington, Jan. 9.—The state department received advices yesterday from Consul General Gadger at Panama, indicating that the Colombian revolutionists are approaching Panama and are making preparations for a fight, which is likely to occur soon. There is reason to believe that the United States government will adopt a vigorous line of action in case the city of Panama is attacked, or there is any interruption of the transit facilities of the isthmus.

Argument For Statehood

Washington, Jan. 9.—Governor Murphy and Delegate Wilson of Arizona were heard by the house committee on territories yesterday, in favor of the bill for the admission of Arizona as a state. Each presented an elaborate argument. Delegate Wilson used the figures of the present census, and made a strong showing for statehood for the territory. The general opinion is that no action will be taken this session.

Railroad Men to Lose Fat Jobs

Chicago, Jan. 9.—The Record says: The financial powers controlling the destinies of the great railway systems of the nation are reported to be planning one of the biggest economical reforms in the history of American railroad operations. The intention is to dispense with the vast army of officials directly engaged in the solicitation of business for the lines. Should the plan be carried out it means the discharge of more than 50,000 men.

Another Kidnapping Case

Montgomery, Ala., Jan. 9.—From Union Springs it is learned that N. H. Frazer has received a letter dated Memphis from men claiming they had kidnapped Frazer's 18-year-old son in Atlanta, and demanding $5000 ransom. The letter contained Young Frazer's signature, as proof of their claim. Frazer was a student in the technological school at Atlanta, and it is learned has not been there in several days.

Pingree Trying to Wriggle Out

Lansing, Mich., Jan. 9.—Ex-Governor Pingree has applied to the supreme court for a writ of prohibition to restrain the Ingham county circuit court from proceeding with the contempt case against him. This case grew out of an interview given a Detroit paper by Mr. Pingree when he was governor, in which he severely criticized the court and the prosecuting attorney of Ingham county.

Willing to Serve Another Term

Boston, Jan. 9.—Before the Boston Municipal club last night, Mayor Hart made a 12-minute speech which was so radically a departure from his usual style that it took his hearers by surprise, and is considered as an announcement of his candidacy for re-election next year. He started off by saying that the Democratic side termed him "an old fossil," and in his ideas of economy pronounced him "a tottering old man." He maintained that his administration was strictly business-like and urged the club to work for Republican success next year.

Met Death While Saving Children

Providence, Jan. 9.—Mrs. Pasco Vernava of South Scituate was burned to death by the explosion of a lamp which threw burning oil over her clothing. The house also caught fire, and Mrs. Vernava heroically carried her two children to a place of safety before attempting to save her own life. It was then too late, and she died before assistance could be rendered, her clothing being almost entirely burned from her body.

Testimony Not All In

Montpelier, Vt., Jan. 9.—The special grand jury summoned to consider the case of the Italians of Barre charged with attempting to kill Chief of Police Brown, is still busily engaged in taking testimony. Gratification is felt over the recovery of Chief Brown from his three severe wounds. He is expected to be out in the course of two weeks.

The Granite State Senatorship

Concord, N. H., Jan. 9.—The Republican caucus for the choice of a candidate for the United States senate, to succeed Mr. Chandler, will be held tomorrow evening. It is generally agreed that Chandler and Burnham are considerably in the lead of the rest of the candidates, and that the issue between them is in doubt.

Drowned In the Pawtuxet

Natick, R. I., Jan. 9.—Edward Le Roy, 22 years old, while crossing the Pawtuxet river to join some ice cutters, ventured on the new ice where cutting had been carried on, and broke through. Those who saw Le Roy disappear were unable to give assistance, and the body was carried down stream under the ice.

Places the Blame on Liquor

Gardiner, Me., Jan. 9.—Samuel Brooks was arrested yesterday for assault on Alexander Fuller, station agent of the Kennebec Central railroad, while crossing a bridge. He pleaded guilty to the charge, claiming that he was under the influence of liquor at the time. He was held on the charge of assault.

Searching For Missing Man

Laconia, N. H., Jan. 9.—Frank P. Smith, aged 42, residing in Meredith Centre, has been missing since Dec. 23. Citizens have searched the woods in all directions for traces of Smith, without success. It is thought that he wandered off into the woods and perished from cold and hunger.

A One-Sided Affair

Boston, Jan. 9.—Arthur W. Ross of Harrison, N. J., won the 15-mile motor-paced race from James Moran of Chelsea, at the Park Square Garden last night. His victory was an easy one, his time being 27 minutes 25 3-5 seconds, against 29 minutes 27 seconds for Moran.

Another Victim of Smallpox

Pawtucket, R. I., Jan. 9.—The death late last night of Amelia Provost from smallpox is the third that has taken place in this city from the dread disease, the two others being brothers of Miss Provost. The body of the woman was buried early this morning

Bay State Democrats Organize

Boston, Jan. 9.—The Democratic state committee met here yesterday and organized for the current year. The following officers were elected: Chairman, William S. McNary, Boston; secretary, Stephen T. Walsh, Lynn; treasurer, Thomas E. Dwyer.

NERVE FOOD

If you have neuralgia, Scott's emulsion of cod-liver oil will feed the nerve that is crying for food—it is hungry—and set your whole body going again, in a way to satisfy nerve and brain with your usual food.

That is cure.

If you are nervous and irritable, you may only need more fat to cushion your nerves—you are probably thin—and Scott's emulsion of cod-liver oil will give you the fat, to begin with.

Cure, so far as it goes. Full cure is getting the fat you need from usual food, and Scott's emulsion will help you to that.

We'll send you a little to try, if you like.

IN HANDS OF ROBERTS

General Colvile Sure to Receive a Severe Overhauling

BURGHERS URGED TO YIELD

In a Circular Issued by Central Peace Committee at Kroonstadt—Steyn and De Wet Declared to Be Responsible For Continuation of Hostilities

London, Jan. 9.—The case of Major General Sir Henry Colville, whose resignation was asked by the war office in consequence of the Lindley affair, has been left in the hands of Lord Roberts. Since the war office first passed on the matter much additional evidence has been received upon which the request for resignation was based.

Various high officials who have recently returned from South Africa assert that General Colville, on several occasions, took precautions for the safety of himself and his men which verged dangerously near to showing the white feather. There is no disposition on the part of the war office to recede from the position it has taken up. In fact, whatever Lord Roberts may decide, General Colville will be severely overhauled for a breach of the regulations in discussing the matter with the press.

It is reported that the Boers have reached Sutherland, and are within 20 miles of the village of Piquotberg.

The country around Kimberley is being cleared of people, livestock and foodstuffs. A commando of 150 looted a cattle farm seven miles from Kimberley.

It is reported that all the residents of Vryburg who are unable to supply themselves with provisions for two months must be brought south.

A Cape Town dispatch says that the central peace committee at Kroonstadt has issued a circular, in the course of which it says:

"The time has arrived for the inhabitants of the Orange River Colony to make an effort to save the country from further destruction. The country is literally a vast wilderness. The farmers, ruined and facing starvation, are obliged to go to the towns for protection, and huge refuge camps have been formed by the British for them. This misery is caused by an obstinate minority, who will not bow to the inevitable."

The circular points out that the British will never restore independence to the republics, and urges upon the burghers the duty of surrendering and accepting the terms offered. The recent Afrikander congress at Worcester is criticised in this circular as "misleading the Boers and giving false impressions."

In conclusion, the committee says: "The British government is willing to settle matters in a way not ungenerous or humiliating to us. We appeal to you to appoint another congress and to nominate men of influence out of your list to visit Mr. Steyn and General De Wet and try to persuade them to accept the terms Great Britain offers.

"These two men are the only obstacles to peace. We ask you to believe us when we say that Mr. Kruger and the late Transvaal government are willing and would already have accepted the British terms, but Mr. Steyn has refused to have anything to do with surrender.

"He has continued the war, and has encouraged the burghers with a hope that we would get European assistance. Today he is cut off from all communication with the outside world. You know and we know how unfounded that hope is. It is your duty to assist us to make him understand this. We appeal to you to help us to end the unhappy state of affairs which is plunging everybody into poverty and despair. We appeal to you because we know you are able to assist us in the right manner."

The committee includes W. E. De Wet, late assistant chief commandant, three members of the volksraad and two justices of the peace.

Must Have New Election

Boston, Jan. 9.—The supreme court has handed down a rescript on the petition of P. J. O'Connell, the Democratic candidate for mayor of Worcester, for a writ of mandamus to compel the election commissioners to throw out three ballots cast in the recent city election, which are alleged to be illegal, dismissing the petition. This decision of the court sustains the position of the election commissioners, who by counting the three ballots in question found the vote for mayor a tie between O'Connell and Lytle, the Republican candidate. A special election will have to be held to elect a mayor.

Bank Troubles Tided Over

Baltimore, Jan. 9.—The Old Town bank, a state institution, which closed its doors and went into a receiver's hands a few days ago, resumed business today. The American National bank, which closed its doors the day before the failure of the Old Town bank and which was closely allied with it, is also expected to resume business shortly.

The King Bribery Case

Mobile, Ala., Jan. 9.—There are no new developments in the matter of the arrest of Captain King charged with receiving bribes. Efforts to get a statement were unavailing. He occupies a room at a hotel, where he is guarded by deputy United States marshals. Captain King is trying to make his bond of $10,000.

City Ordinances—Seven.
Wanted—Girl for office work.
Quincy Teachers' Association—Entertainment
Wanted—Young man as local correspondent.
To Let—Tenement.

Good Afternoon.

Seven amendments to the City Ordinances, made by City Council of 1900 in the last few weeks of its existence, are published to-day, as required by law before they become operative. Six of the seven are increases of salary, while one is aimed to prevent the transportation of freight by electric cars. At least two of the orders amending ordinances are missing—one relative to the purchase of city supplies, and the other increasing the salary of the City Solicitor. It is said that the former did not receive the signature of Mayor Hall, but he has forwarded no veto. However, the time-limit did not expire until after the Council of 1900 adjourned sine die. No City Council has been so lavish on the salary question as the City Council of 1900.

The Democratic State Committee as well as the Republicans are divided on the proposition to provide that a single cross may be used to vote a straight ticket on election days.

Thus far not a Norfolk County Representative has been elected clerk of a Committee of the Legislature of 1901, yet fifteen have organized.

Drift of Opinion.

☞ And what pray, is the "social alliance" of Boston, which protested to Gov. Crane through its secretary, Thomas W. Curtis, against the form of Rev. Dr. Edward Everett Hale's celebration at the state house front, last night, of the new century's advent? Mr. Curtis and his "alliance" discover that "the inappropriateness of the programme is in its narrow conception, its traditional bent, and the mixing of the religious and civil functions, even to the overshadowing of the latter by the former," with much more of the same sort. In the name of common sense, can the "social alliance" discover no real abuses to challenge? We are disposed to give some credence to the allegation that cranks do abound in Boston.—Springfield Republican.

☞ The progress of the self-imposed work of the Philadelphia chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution to identify the eight unknown portraits in Independence hall make interesting reading. When the Daughters began their efforts, they knew nothing of the pictures beyond the fact that they were likenesses of men of colonial prominence, and the name of the painter, James Sharpless. Nothing daunted by these osbtacles, the Daughters as a first step had several sets of photographs taken of the portraits and started them on their travels to private and public galleries, museums, or often to a home where there was a single known portrait that might possibly be a duplicate. The journeys of these photographs have included Europe as well as the United States, and by this means all but one of the eight pictures have been identified.—New Bedford Standard.

OVER 20 KNOTS.

Trial Trip of Lawrence Very Satisfactory.

Not the Least Trouble with Machinery.

The Highest Speed was Twenty and One-Fourth Knots.

The Associated Press reporter who was the only newsaper man on the trial trip of the Lawrence Tuesday makes the following report:

The torpedo boat destroyer Lawrence the product of the Fore River Mngine company of Quincy and manned by a Massachusetts crew was sent out on its maiden trip Tuesday preparatory to its official speed trials which will be made previous to its acceptance by the navy department.

The trial was in every way satisfactory, and on the run over a measured course the vessel developed a speed of 20 1-4 knots. This is considered an excellent showing for the destroyer for the first run when all the conditions unfavorable to a fast run such as new machinery and a crew unfamiliar with the boat are considered.

The trip cannot in any way be construed as a tes of the machinery, but was rather to get the kinks out of her and correct any trifles which might have escaped notice when she was in course of construction.

There were on board, beside the government officials, a board representing the company, and a record of the action of the craft was carefully taken. The record 20 1-4 knots was made in slack water, and the officers of the company hope for an improvement of this figure in the trials to come. The start was made at noon. All the morning a gang of men had worked steadily to put everything in shape so that when the lines were cast off she looked trim and clean. The tug Vesta followed in her wake.

The Lawrence was in charge of sailing master George E. Nutter, assisted by river pilots Francis Cleverly of Hull and Marcus Wight of Quincy. The navy department was represented by Lieut. Gustav Kaemmerling, U. S. N., senior inspector of machinery at the works, and Superintendent Naval Constructor D. C. Cutting, U. S. N. The interests of the company were looked after by manager F. O. Wellington, manager H. P. Elwell, and chief engineer George H. Barney.

The trial trip was under the direct supervision of C. F. Edwards, and was carried out smoothly and successfully. The weather conditions were good. The water was smooth outside and only a gentle landswell was perceivable.

The distance covered by the Lawrence was between ranges one-eighth knots apart. The start was made from Point Allerton, and in proceeding to this mark across Quincy bay, where a stretch of 12 knots was found, the Vesta was left far astern. The four boilers were under steam all the time. The coal used was the ordinary kind.

The highest speed obtained was 20 1-4 knots, with a maximum revolution of 203, and maximum steam pressure of 155 pounds. The turning radius of the vessel while going at full speed was one and a quarter times its own length. The angle of heel while turning at maximum speed was noticeably small, [illegible] speed was decreased, Jan. 5, not exceeding 1 1-2 degrees, and there was a perceptible lack of vibration at all times.

There was not the least trouble with machinery or boilers on the entire trip from 12.15 to 3.30. A run was made to Boston light and return at a 20-knot gait. Although the regular complement is 40 men, the crew today numbered only 30.

Builders and navy department officials are highly pleased with the conduct of the boat.

Leland Powers Coming.

The Quincy Teachers' Association offers a rare treat at High School hall, tomorrow evening. They have been able to secure Mr. Leland Powers, the foremost impersonator and elecutionist in this country, today. He is an artist who shows a wonderful power to portray dramatic situations and personalities. He will present Belasco and De Miffe's "Lord Chermley. The ten characters in the play demand the utmost versatility of expression and character impersonation, Mr. Power's delineations are so true that without any scenic accessories one is forced again and again to wonder why the other persons in the casts do not appear.

The special committee of the City Council appointed Monday are: Councilmen Freeman, Alden and Faxon.

THE ATLANTIC CLUB.

Auspicious Opening of Season in Attendance, Papers and Music.

The first meeting for the season of the Atlantic Monday Evening club occurred Jan. 7, and opened with an attendance of one hundred and ninety-four.

The program for the evening included a ten-minute address on the subject, "What is a true public spirit?" by Mr. Charles Merrick, of Atlantic, a clear, pointed and forceful presentation.

Mr. Emory L. Meade of the Milton High school made an exceedingly interesting address on "The family and the school," urging the importance of understanding the child-nature and not mistaking perfectly natural traits, like carelessness for malice, or lack of appreciation for destitution of love, and drawing attention to the contrast between firmness and crossness.

The music was fine. Mrs. W. Crawford Folsom of Jamaica Plain, a contralto, favoring the club with "Since we parted," and "Absence" by Allitsen, and "Ecstasy" by Mrs. Beach; Miss Miriam Heidenreich of New Orleans, a soprano, "A May morning," by Denza, "Auf Wierdersehn," and a "A day dream," by Strelezskie. Miss Helen Bemis was the accompanist.

The literary committee were Mrs. Edmund R. Wade and Mr. T. D. Borst. The music committee, Miss Annie P. Hall and Mr. W. J. Sanborn. The introduction committee, Mrs. Edward Crocker, chairman Miss Louise Kolb and Mr. Charles A. Hall.

Ladies in Office.

Paul Revere, W. R. C. 103, held its regular meeting in G. A. R. hall Tuesday afternoon, the principal business being the installation of the newly elected officers for the ensuing year, by Mrs. Sarah Cain of Weymouth, in the following order:

President,—M. Emma Newcomb.
Senior Vice President,—Isabel R. Holmes.
Junior Vice President,—Emma Marnock.
Secretary,—Alberta Howson.
Treasurer,—Mary A. H. Crane.
Chaplain,—Electa E. Field.
Conductor.—Adelaide McGrath.
Guard,—Fannie M. Souther.
Assistant Conductor,—C. Alice Litchfield.
Assistant Guard,—Cylinda Z. Richardson.
Color Bearer No. 1,—Mary A. Fox.
Color Bearer No. 2,—Sarah Hart.
Color Bearer No. 3,—Jennie Ewell.
Color Bearer No. 4,—Fannie Lane.

There were present delegation from Corps 102 of Weymouth, 157 Boston, 163 Roxbury and 40 of Randolph; also a number of invited guests, friends of the members of the corp. After the services were over Mrs. Laura Holt presented Mrs. Cain, the installing officer, with a beautiful bouquet, and in return Mrs. Cain presented Mrs. Kate A. Hayden, the retiring president, in behalf of the ladies of the corps, with a solitaire diamond ring, in recognition of her faithful and untiring services and the efficient work performed by her the past year. Sister Hayden was taken by surprise, and for a few moments was speechless. But after a few moments recovered, and in a few words thanked the members for the pleasing gift, assuring them, although she had relinquished her duties as president she should continue to take a deep interest in the future welfare of the corps.

At the close a collation was served, to which all were invited to remain. Those remaining numbered about 75. The corps is doing a lot of good work in helping and caring for those who are destitute and suffering, and should have the hearty support of all those interested in the soldiers.

Songs and Song Writers.

Over fifty assembled at Mrs. George W. Morton's on Monday afternoon at four, for an hour with song writers and songs interpreted by Miss Carrie Follett Spear and friends. Miss Spear read from Henry T. Finck's book showing the development of the lyric art sung from earliest folk song. Mr. L. Dowley Williams presided at the piano and accompanied Miss Spear in song interpretations.

Labrador Indian natural song, folk songs, and compositions by Lotti, Bach, Handel, Haydn and Sir Arthur Sullivan were sung. Mr. Rowland Hughes and Mr. Samuel Hughes sang the Welch national hymn and other songs in the original.

Miss Spear, Mrs. N. S. Hunting, Mrs. George W. Morton and Miss Lizzie Newcomb sang "The Lost Chord," after which the hour was brought to a close by all singing "America."

A musical hour, with the discussion of songs, and song writers illustrated by well known singers is something new in Quincy but judging from the large attendance and interest shown on Monday they will become popular. The next in the series is to be held at Mrs. N. S. Hunting's.

CITY BREVITIES.

A Local Budget With the News in a Nut Shell.

The quarterly conference of the Methodist Episcopal churches in this district will be held at West Quincy Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Curtin of Newbury avenue are receiving congratulations on the birth of a son, born on Monday.

Mr. William J. Tilley has the sympathy of his many friends in the loss of his mother, whose death occurred Sunday, at Providence, R. I.

Mrs. Alfred Dell entertained a few ladies at whist Tuesday afternoon. Souvenirs for the best scores were awarded to Mrs. Geo. T. Magee and Miss C. T. Haggett.

The Guild of St. Perpetua of St. Chrysostom's church held its annual meeting Tuesday evening, Jan. 8. Officers for the ensuing year were elected and other necessary business was done.

Maj. Frederick W. Tirrell, president of the Tirrell Carriage Manufacturing Co., has recently been the guest of Col. H. C. Weeden, president of the Hercules Iron and Mine Co., at Anniston, Ala.

Miss Mary Falvey of West Quincy, for a long time the obliging telegraph operator at the station, left Tuesday for Florida, to take charge of an office in that state. She will be missed by her many friends.

Week of Prayer is being observed at the Wollaston Baptist church, under the direction of the pastor, Rev. Preston Gurney. The meetings are proving very helpful to the many people, young as well as old, who are attending them.

Rev. E. W. Whitney of Milford, who is well known in Quincy, married a couple in his town on Sunday, whose ages aggregated 157 years. The groom, Silas B. Parkhurst, is 85, and the bride, Mrs. Sarah S. Mooers 72.

Last Sunday there was a large attendance at the celebration of Holy Communion at St. Chrysostoms church, it being the first Sunday of the new year and century, and the festival of the Epiphany—the manifestation of Christ to the Gentiles.

Paul Revere W. R. C., No. 103 held a whist party in G. A. R. hall, Tuesday evening. Prizes were awarded to Mrs. A. Marnock, six china plates; Charlotte Stoddard, china; Edward Wilford, suspenders; A. J. Taylor, six glass lemonade cups. There were thirteen tables in play.

The Q. H. S. hockey team practised Tuesday at Butlers pond under the direction of Mr. Stacy Southworth. There is good material for a fast team. Saturday morning, weather permitting, aame will be played with Boston Latin, probably at Butler's pond. In the meantime the boys will practice daily.

Wollaston people are expressing much sympathy for their letter carriers, who start out from the post office so overburdened with parcels, packages and letters that they can with difficulty cover their prescribed routes within a reasonable time. Additional carrierl are needed in order to give Wollaston and the Park the service needed. Two deliveries per day are not enough, a third delivery would be much appreciated.

Arrested for Stealing Safe.

Three men were arrested in Chelsea on Tuesday, on the charge of stealing a safe containing money and jewels to the value of $3300 from Morse Bro's, 85 Lowell street, Boston, Nov. 14. The mystery surrounding the safe remained unsolved until Dec. 6, when it was discovered by Officers McKay and Goodhue in the bushes off Squantum street, Quincy. The contents had been removed and the safe was in a badly battered condition. The Boston police followed up the clew thus obtained, and the result was the arrest on Tuesday of David Kerner, David Weeblinsky and Samuel Goldstein, who were arraigned in court today.

Choice Books Saved.

It is pleasant to hear from Dr. William Everett that, while the recent fire in his library made a good deal of havoc there, and destroyed a few rare books and several choice works of art, his choicest books, being behind glass, escaped with very little injury. With characteristic candor Dr. Everett lays whatever blame attaches to the misfortune on his own shoulders, the conflagration having been caused by what he terms his own unpardonable carelessness with an open wood fire—Herald.

Scharnagel Acquitted.

Atlantic friends of Mr. Robert Scharnagel, and they are numerous, rejoice that that gentleman was acquitted by a jury of the Suffolk superior court on Friday last, and believe in his innocence. There were 27 counts of larceny of money and Scharnagel's defence was that it was taken with the consent of his employer to offset a bill of expenses incurred under the employer's directions.

Independence of Salem Mayor Noteworthy.

He Pitches into Departments Fearlessly.

An Inaugural Address that Pleases H. H. Faxon.

No inaugural address delivered in Massachusetts this week has received so much attention as that of Hon. John F. Hurley, the Mayor of Salem. Henry H. Faxon of Quincy thinks he sees some similarity in the condition of affairs in this city, and at his request portion of the address is reprinted:

After referring to former mayors of Salem, Mayor Hurley says:

"While it would be foolish in me to lay a claim to the great ability of these men, I do not mean that the official record of any one of them shall excel mine, so far as devotion to what I believe to be the best interests of the city and its people is concerned.

"As a candidate for the mayoralty of Salem, in 1899, I laid down a municipal platform, giving my opinion of a good many things in city matters as they were and as they ought to be; I see no reason to change that platform. Nothing has been done the past year to cause me to change it. I therefore take the candidate's platform the platform of the mayor; and I intend to carry it out in practice to the full limit of my power as the official head of the municipality.

"Between the hours of 9 and 12, 2 and 5, and 7 and 8 each week day I shall be in my office at the city hall.

"A place full of dead men cannot be expected to push ahead; and so it is necessary to keep ourselves alive and in good health if we expect to make any progress at all. We have got to look after this matter first of all, so that we shall be here to look after other matters. That something in the way of a decided change is needed in the board of health of Salem is sure. The style of service in that department, in the office or outside of it, is not the kind the people are crying for; and the people know a bad thing when they see it. Years ago the clerk and inspector actually did the work he was chosen to do. Today an assistant clerk does the office work and the board employs a coachman at a salary of $780 a year to drive the clerk and other members of the board about the city. It may be that these officials have grown too feeble to hold the reins. If so, they are not robust enough to rattle around in such important positions.

Do we find the police force of Salem a credit to the city in these respects? Hardly. On the contrary it is a standing disgrace to the place and its people.

To start at headquarters: There is no real attempt to keep the place clean. It is filthy through and through, a regular pest house that ought to be abolished as a public nuisance. It is no argument to say that the building is old and cramped. That is no excuse for not keeping it clean. Some of the members of the force are on a par with the station. Dirty coats, dirty pants, dirty caps, dirty boots, dirty everything on them—this is the rule. The whole uniform, which ought to be kept up to military neatness bright, fresh and clean—is dull, and dingy, and foul. Instead of keeping up a proper pride and spending a bit of time to look and act with some decency, if not dignity, both on and off duty, the police grow fatter and lazier, and disorder and dirt, nagging and fooling, rule at police station.

It is not at all strange that such a police force as this should look upon the enforcement of the laws as of no account. Neglect of this bottom duty follows as naturally as the night follows the day. Gambling dens and other worse ones are on the increase all the time, and right under the noses of the police. Some of these dens are almost under the eaves of the police station, running night and day, with not an attempt whatever to stop them by the "guardians of the law."

And you can find law-breaking of every kind without walking yourself tired. And who is responsible for this slackness, looseness and laziness and dirtiness of the police force of Salem—or this filthy den of a police station? This question ought not to be a hard one to answer.

It is ridiculous for this board of health to keep a horse and wagon and a man to drive to pick up dead cats and dogs. With a lady clerk doing the office work, the agent should squeeze time enough to gather in these pets without a coachman. Too many horses are kept in this and other departments.

Salem is running quite a livery stable when we consider the financial situation. A fire alarm stroke any time of the day will tell the story.

Things ae lively with public turnouts at that time. All the city teams rush to the fire. The drivers like the excitement, and it doesn't cost them a cent. Following the apparatus and the chief engineer's team, come the water department team, and the city electrician team, the police patrol wagon, and all the other department teams, with the excited "coachmen" belaboring the steeds to make a record. It is one grand rush and mixup of wheels and horseflesh, fun alive for the actors, but rough on the taxpayers.

So many needless rubber-tired turnouts make the people tired. I recommend that Salem's livery stable be cut down at least three-fourths, and that the officials and employes who have used it be made to do some walking, for their physical and our financial health.

As the matter of the wisdom of employing school superintendents is still in doubt in many cities, I recommend that Salem in her present need of economy, take the full benefit of that doubt, and abolish office. It has always seemed to me that the salary ($2,500) was practically wasted. The routine work can be done by the secretary, and the general supervision of the board of school committee, and this salary waste left in the treasury, where it belongs.

We inherited this office of superintendent of lamps and lights from the tallow-dip days of the fathers. We should see that it is not passed on to our children, for it is a piece of senseless extravagance in these days of gas and electricity. The principal duty of the head of this department is to harness up and drive about the city nights with the "boys" and have a good time generally at the taxpayer's expense.

Thee police can report the condition of all the lights and not overwork themselves. It may take many of them into some parts of the city strange to them, but that wouldn't hurt them, either. I recommend the abolition of this office, and the merging of the department into the street department.

A patent was this week issued to Melville P. Hayward of the Star Tea store for a ladder brace, that would prevent the collapse of a ladder as at the Hearn fire a year ago. The invention is a good one and has been on trial in the Quincy department.

The appointment of Maud Briggs of Quincy as a special teecher in the Gilbert Stuart school of Boston, was recommitted on Tuesday to the sub committee. On the strength of her appointment, Miss Briggs resigned a situation in Quincy and the place has been filled.

Rather Dangerous.

A great many complaints have been made about children being allowed to skate on the quarry at Norfolk Downs. Walled in as it is, it is warmer there than in the atmosphere more exposed, and consequently the ice is thinner. The quarry is over thirty feet deep around the edges, so anyone who got in would stand little or no show of being rescued. When the ice breaks it does so in the centre, and collapses at once. Those who go on take chances, but as signs of warning are of no account, no one is to blame for any accident which may happen, but those who skate there.

SCHOOL COMMITTEE.

The Board for 1901 Organized Last Night.

Letters of Richard Cranch Received.

The New Spelling Book to be Printed in Boston.

The annual meeting of the School Committee was held Tuesday evening. All members were present.

Upon ballot, Hon. Charles H. Porter was re-elected chairman of the board, and Frank E. Parlin clerk.

Mr. Parlin was also elected superintendant at a salary of $2,300.

Charles H. Johnson was elected as truant officer at a salary of $200.

Mr. Johnson was also appointed census taker.

The resignation of Miss A. Maud Briggs, recently elected to the Cranch school was accepted, and Miss Lucy J. Mitchell who has been teaching at Hudson was elected to fill the vacancy.

Miss Beatrice Smith was elected to the Willard school for the balance of the year, to fill the vacancy caused by Miss Hattie M. Smith, who has been granted a leave of absence.

Miss May S. Parker of Middleboro was elected a teacher of the John Hancock school.

The High School Alumni was granted the use of High School hall for its annual reunion Jan. 25.

The Superintendent reported in the matter of getting the word list printed. Two propositions were presented. One from the local printers for $500 for 5000 copies, bound in paper, and the other from a Boston publishing house which would publish the book and waive all royalties as far as Quincy was concerned. By this method Quincy would be furnished with a board bound book at about 6 cents per copy and Mr. Parlin would be enabled to receive a royalty for his work from other places.

The latter proposition was thought the most desirable and a special committee was appointed to assist Mr. Parlin.

Chairman Porter presented to the board, in behalf of Mrs. Emily A. Fifield wife of William Cranch Bond Fifield, two letters of Richard Cranch, for whom the new school was named. The letters are neatly framed.

One is an autograph letter of Richard Cranch, dated Sept. 13, 1794, to his nephew condoling with him on the loss of his partner.

The second is a certificate issued by Samuel Niles, senior judge of the Court of Common Pleas of Suffolk county, setting forth that Richard Cranch was then before him and was entitled to receive an annual legacy from an estate in Great Briton.

The letters were accepted and a vote of thanks was passed to Mrs. Fifield.

It was voted that the salary of the clerk to the superintendent be $500.

Nearly 100 Years Old.

Mrs. Lydia F. Peckham, of Brockton, celebrated her 95th birthday last week. No formal celebration was held, but she was able to receive the congratulations of her relatives and friends. She is the mother of Councilman H. C. Peckham and Alfred M. Peckham of Brockton and Chester T. Peckham, of Los Angeles, Cal., and has one daughter, Mrs. Abbie E. Perry, mother of Mrs. Charles H. Penniman of Quincy, with whom she resides. Sixteen children have been born to her and of these but the four above mentioned are now alive. Sickness in the family prevented a formal celebration. Mrs. Peckham is strong and smart, and gives every evidence of reaching her centennial.

HOW TO ECONOMIZE.

SOME men economize so closely on the number of words in a telegram that the receiver cannot understand it. This is not sensible economy. Neither is it sensible economy to ruin garments of value with cheap soap or powerful chemicals that eat into the fabric. True economy uses Ivory Soap in the laundry. It is the most of pure soap that can be sold for the money. Chemically it is as innocent as water. Yet it does everything you can ask of a soap. Try it!

NEW HOUSES FOR SALE.

Just to remind you that I have another lot of houses nearly completed, I will list these three bargains:

Many were disappointed on the last lot so be on hand early if you would be in it.

Also, one of eight rooms and bath, Independence avenue; all modern improvements, bounds on two streets, can sell for $500 less than real value. This house is of the popular size to suit any business man, and is very roomy and convenient. I don't like to have other builders know how I am cutting prices, but $3,000 buys this one, look at it and compare with others you see building.

Another, and a money maker for some one with only an ounce of pluck. This is a two-family House, 5 rooms and bath each, and 60 foot lot, $3,000. Pay in $500 on this and I will guarantee you a twenty five per cent. investment for one year; who would dare invest in a twenty-five per cent. GUARANTEED investment.

Remember these houses are built by competent workmen, by the day, of the best material, and are personally superintended by the owner, are but four minutes to station, electrics pass, and everything is most desirable as a residential section. All houses are connected with sewer and cellars are perfectly dry.

STATE LINES.

The state that built the Oregon is certainly entitled to have a first class battleship named after it. It is not that we think less of cruisers, but more of battleships, that we enter our protest.—Los Angeles Herald.

Kentucky and whisky seem almost synonymous terms. Therefore it is interesting to learn that 30 of the Kentucky counties, constituting about three-fourths of the state, are "dry"—that is to say, prohibition.—Minneapolis Tribune.

Texas is so hopelessly big that she hardly knows her own productions and can undertake to produce almost everything. She is growing a good deal of rice now, and it is reported that the area of ricefields has increased threefold in the last year. It will grow a hundredfold before long, we presume, with such a magnificent breadth and sweep are things done under the Lone Star.—New York Sun.

by local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflamation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars; free.

A PROPOSAL BY AMERICA

For International Conference on China at Washington

IDEA FAVORABLY RECEIVED

Framing of Treaty of Commerce and Indemnity Would Meet With Obstacles at Pekin — Empress Dowager's Influence May Lead to Complications

Washington, Jan. 9.—The United States has proposed that the questions of indemnity and of framing new commercial treaties with China shall be considered either at Washington or at the capital of one of the other powers concerned, thus removing these two phases of the negotiations from Pekin. The negotiations have now advanced to a stage where there is promise of a satisfactory understanding among the powers.

The plan originated through a suggestion of Minister Conger, cabled about a week ago, to the effect that there was little prospect of securing united action on the subject of indemnity and of new commercial treaties with China. Mr. Conger suggested that better progress in the negotiations were likely to result if these two phases could be taken up at some point entirely removed from local influences.

Mr. Conger's idea met with favorable consideration here and the suggestion was made to the other powers interested in China that the matter of Chinese indemnity and of commercial treaties be taken up at Washington or at one of the other capitals. It has been the purpose to assemble an international commission which could pass upon all questions of indemnity both among themselves and as against China. It would be in the main a conference among the powers, although it is expected that Chinese envoys would be invited to participate, after the proceedings reached a stage where unity of action among the powers was assured.

The state department has already received indications as to the general feeling of some of the powers on this proposition. There appears to be no reason to anticipate serious opposition to the transfer, as most of the powers have appreciated the obstacles at Pekin in the way of an agreement on the two subjects of indemnity and commercial treaties.

Minister Conger was heard from yesterday in a cablegram to the state department. The text of the dispatch was not given out, but it was made known that, in substance, Mr. Conger confirmed recent reports to the effect that there was reason to believe the empress dowager was exerting her influence against the acceptance of the demands submitted by the powers.

It is the feeling among officials here that the influence still wielded by the empress dowager may lead to serious complications in case she seeks to bring to a halt the negotiations now pending. The powers, by stating their demands to be irrevocable, made them practically an ultimatum, and, while a refusal to sign by China would not result in a declaration of war to enforce the demands, there would be a prolonged occupancy of Pekin, and this might lead to fresh complications threatening to the integrity of the Chinese empire.

Acceptance Almost Assured

London, Jan. 9.—Dr. Morrison, wiring to The Times from Pekin, says: Eleven identical protocols, representing each of the powers, were handed to the Chinese envoys on Monday for signature and for the affixing of the imperial seal. As the formality of communicating with the court is a necessary preliminary to using the seal, a delay of a few days is expected, but there is no reason to fear that the Chinese will fail to complete the acceptance of the note.

By Way of Paris

Paris, Jan. 9.—The Havas Agency has received the following dispatch from Pekin, dated Jan. 5: "Prince Ching visited the foreign envoys on the occasion of the New Year and accepted the conditions of yesterday's note. Li Hung Chang is still sick"

Eight Men Were Killed

Fairmont, W. Va., Jan. 9.—An eastbound engine with 23 empty cars collided with a west-bound engine running light on a bridge yesterday on the Baltimore and Ohio railroad, killing eight men and injuring three more, one fatally. Both engines were going at full speed to reach a switch, as the Pittsburg flyer was nearly due. The heroic action of Brakeman O'Leary in running a mile to signal the flyer saved the lives of many of its passengers.

Molineux Case Moving Along

New York, Jan. 9.—Recorder Goff announces that the papers in the Molineux appeal will be filed this week. This means that they will be reduced by the chief clerk of the court of general sessions to book form, and then forwarded to the court of appeals. The appeal makes 6000 typewritten pages.

Municipal Affairs Are Tangled

Santiago, Jan. 9.—Telegraphic orders were received here yesterday removing Isidro Grinon, mayor of Santiago, from office and placing Senor Giro, vice mayor, in the charge of the affairs of the municipality, as the result of charges of irregularity in the conduct of municipal affairs.

Welcomed Home From Africa

Halifax, Jan. 9.—A salute of cannon last night welcomed the Canadian soldiers returning from Africa. The 800 volunteer troops disembarked this morning and paraded through the city, and afterwards attended a public banquet.

ROCHESTER'S HOLOCAUST

Twenty-Six Little Ones Perished In the Fire In Orphan Asylum

Rochester, Jan. 9.—Twenty-eight dead bodies lie at the morgue and 12 others, more or less seriously injured, lie at the different hospitals in the city, as a result of the holocaust which occurred at the Rochester orphan asylum. Of the dead, 26 were children of both sexes, ranging in age from 2 to 4 years, while the remaining two were adults. The fire was doubtless caused by an explosion of natural gas in the boiler room, adjoining the west wing of the asylum, and spread so rapidly that many of the 109 inmates of the institution were overcome by the flames and smoke almost without warning.

That so many children were saved from the west wing of the building seems little short of miraculous, and it is remarkable that the death roll was not even larger. The scene following almost immediately upon the discovery of the fire and the accompanying explosion was one which turned the stoutest hearts sick, and filled the spectators with horror. The windows of the west wing were filled with the terrified faces of the tiny waifs. Working like men possessed, the firemen struggled to release them from their perilous positions. The rooms of the dormitory were filled with smoke and the little ones were being slowly suffocated in spite of every effort to release them from their charnel house. Most of those rescued were lowered by means of ladders to the ground from the second and third stories.

There were awful scenes around the asylum. Deeds of heroism were many. The intense heart-sickness of the spectators and those working is beyond description. Most of those rescued from the building were unconscious from the effects of smoke. It soon became apparent that the building was doomed. A general alarm was sent in, and the entire fire department was soon on the scene. The fire was stubbornly fought from every available point, but it was over an hour after its discovery before the fire was under control.

Paroled After Many Years

Denver, Jan. 9.—The last official act of Charles S. Thomas, who retired as governor of the state yesterday, was to grant a parole to Alfred Packer, who was sentenced to 40 years in 1883. Packer's alleged crime was the murder of a party of five prospectors in the wilds of Colorado. He admitted that he killed one of the men, who, he said, was insane and had assaulted him, after murdering the other four with a hatchet. Packer was 100 miles from civilization at the time and was compelled, he said, to eat the flesh of the murdered men to keep from starvation.

Many Persons Facing Death

Marseilles, Jan. 9.—A terrible disaster threatens the mail steamer Russia, from Oran, which stranded on the coast near the village of Faraman during a violent storm, with 50 passengers and a crew of 40 on board. She has heeled to the starboard, and the waves are sweeping over her. Desperate attempts to rescue her company by lifeboats and steam tugs have been made, but thus far the rough seas have prevented every effort. The wind is still blowing a hurricane, with no signs of abatement.

Killed In Tenement House Fire

New York, Jan. 9.—Four lives were lost in a fire which broke out in the cellar of the five-story tenement house, 357 East One Hundred and Thirteenth street, last night. The dead are: Antonette Mora, Louis Donato Mora, Francisco Mora, the wife and children of Donato Mora, a fruit vender; Francisca Mora, 32 years old, a sister-in-law of Antonette Mora. The family lived in a flat on the top floor.

British Statesman Shoots Himself

Rangoon, Jan. 9.—Sir Edward Spence Symes, chief secretary to the government of Burmah since 1890, and a member of the legislative council of India, shot himself in the head yesterday. He is lingering between life and death. He was born in 1852 in London, has held various appointments in Burmah, and was decorated for service in connection with the annexation of upper Burmah.

Another Senatorial Aspirant

Springfield, Ills., Jan. 9.—Congressman Prince of Galesburg has formally announced his entrance into the United States senatorial race against Cullom, Tanner, Hitt and Cannon. Mr. Prince has been canvassing the situation for several days, and has had a number of conferences with his friends and political advisors.

Unionism a Factor

Reading, Pa., Jan. 9.—About 150 employes of the United Traction company struck yesterday over the discharge of half a dozen men. A branch of the Street Railway Employes' union was recently organized here and it is claimed by the strikers that the discharged men were connected with the union.

Pauncefote Will Remain With Us

London, Jan. 9.—Lord Pauncefote will remain indefinitely in Washington. It was the intention of the British government to appoint his successor next March, but the questions now at issue between the United States and Great Britain are believed to be far too serious to permit his removal.

NOW A PRIVATE CITIZEN

But Bryan Intends to Continue In the Struggle In Behalf of Democrats

Chicago, Jan. 9.—William J. Bryan was the guest of honor at the annual banquet of the Chicago Bryan league which was held last night at the Sherman House. In the course of his speech Mr. Bryan said: "I take this opportunity to express the hope that this club and others which have borne my name will substitute for my name the name of some Democratic saint, or a name descriptive of principle rather than men.

"I am now a private citizen, with excellent prospects of remaining such. I intend to continue actively in the discussion of public questions, and do not desire to be embarrassed by being placed in the attitude of a candidate for an office.

"The Democratic party was never in better fighting condition than it is today, and I rejoice that in the course of nature I have many years in which to participate in the unending struggle between human rights and the usurpations of greed.

"It is not necessary to discuss the subject of reorganization further than to say that reorganization is an internal remedy and that it cannot be applied externally.

"The defeat which the party recently suffered ought not to discourage anyone who believes in the principles set forth in the Kansas City platform, for if those principles weer right when the platform was written and when they were endorsed by nearly 6,500,000 voters they are still right.

"Whether the money question will figure prominently in future campaigns will depend upon circumstances which no one can measure with certainty. What is desired is a sufficient quantity of money to keep pace with the demand for money.

"Monopolies will ultimately become so hurtful that the Republicans will no longer be able to defend them. Even today their defense is more secret than open. A colonial policy when put into full operation will prove so repugnant to American principles that it must finally be repudiated by the American people."

Howard's Bail Fixed at $10,000

New York, Jan. 9.—George W. Howard, who is alleged to have a wife living in Cambridge, Mass., and another in Brooklyn, was arraigned before Judge Aspinwall in Brooklyn yesterday on an indictment charging him with bigamy. Bail was fixed at $10,000. Bond was not furnished, and Howard was locked up in jail. The bail might have been given had not Judge Aspinwall refused positively to accept as bondsman William A. Price, who has been on the prisoner's bond since he was first arrested. Howard was almost overcome by the series of developments yesterday. He lost his debonair and jaunty manner entirely.

A Marvelous Performance

Paris, Jan. 9.—The Figaro, in a special dispatch this morning, describes a voyage of two hours in the submarine boat Morse, during the trials at Cherbourg. The correspondent says: "The vessel reached a depth of 18 feet, when she performed her evolutions with ease and perfect safety. By means of an ingenious instrument, the periscope, floating invisibly on the surface of the water, everything above was visible. The problem of the supply of air has been solved satisfactorily, and the crew were able to remain submerged for 16 hours without fatigue of the lungs."

Car of Powder Exploded

Wilkesbarre, Pa., Jan. 9.—By a collision on the Central Railroad of New Jersey, near Laurel Run, a car filled with black powder exploded with tremendous force. A locomotive was bent and twisted into a shapeless mass, and five of the cars were chushed into kindling wood. The trucks were hurled hundreds of feet away, and underneath the powder car a great hole was torn in the ground. No lives were lost. The concussion was plainly felt at Scranton, 25 miles distant.

Six Persons Killed by Burglar

London, Jan. 9.—According to a dispatch to The Daily Express from Vienna, a burglar named Wanyet robbed a tenement, and, meeting a woman as he left, shot her dead. Pursued by a crowd, he killed five others. He was not arrested until his revolver was emptied.

NEWS IN BRIEF

Wilkinsburg, Pa., was visited by the most destructive fire in its history, entailing a loss of $150,000. The fire was of mysterious origin.

Ex-Judge Charles L. Benedict died at New York of pneumonia. He was judge of the eastern district of New York for 32 years. He was appointed in March of 1865, and his appointment is said to have been the last judicial one ever made by President Lincoln. He was born at Newburg, Vt., in 1824.

Paymaster Charles P. Thompson, U. S. N., died at Washington. He had been an invalid for several years, and his death was not unexpected. He was a native of Richmond.

The war department has been informed of the death at Manila of First Lieutenant Louis P. Smith, assistant surgeon, U. S. A.

Elbridge Healey, who had the record of working 42 years for the Hamilton Woolen company, died at Amesbury, Mass., aged 78 years. For 40 years he had been sextou of the Congregational church.

The Middlesex Women's club of Lowell, Mass., put itself on record as strongly opposed to any amendment of the by-laws which shall limit the membership of the general federation to white women.

The Claremont (N. H.) National bank has decided to reduce the capitalization from $150,000 to $100,000.

NOTICE TO PARENTS.

CITY OF QUINCY.

CITY CLERK'S OFFICE, Dec. 31, 1900.

THE Record of birth in any city or town is always more or less unsatisfactory, owing to the fact that the canvasser finds difficulty in getting the necessary information. Names and dates are frequently given incorrectly. The importance of accuracy is shown in many cases where there is a question of descent, or inheritance of property, or collection of life insurance or pensions. The City Clerk's copy of the record is accepted as conclusive evidence in a court of law. While great pains are taken by this office to have the record correct experience shows that it is necessary that parents themselves should lend their assistance. In fact, the law requires that parents shall give notice to the City Clerk of the birth of their children, and provides a penalty for neglect to give such notice for the space of 40 days.

It often happens that only children or servants are at home when the canvasser makes his call, and the answers to his questions are open to doubt. I therefore request all parents in whose household a birth has occurred in the year 1900, to place upon a paper or card the required information, and keep it in a convenient place until the canvasser appears.

The canvasser will begin on Jan. 1, 1901.

THE CANTEEN MUST GO

Stricken From the Army Bill by Decisive Vote of Senate

LIQUOR IN THE PHILIPPINES

The Subject of Amendments Proposed by Lodge and Gallinger — House Strikes a Snag In Consideration of the River and Harbor Bill

Washington, Jan. 10.—The senate yesterday, by a very decisive vote, concurred in the house provision for the abolition of the army canteen. Only 15 votes could be mustered in the senate in favor of the canteen, while 34 were cast against it.

Most of the time was occupied by Senator Teller of Colorado, Pettigrew of South Dakota and Butler of North Carolina, who all opposed the adoption of the senate committee's amendment, which provided for a continuance of the canteen.

The effect of the vote is to restore to the bill the house provision abolishing the army canteen so far as the sale of any kind of intoxicants is concerned. As the section now stands in the bill, it reads as follows:

"The sale of or dealing in beer, wine or any intoxicating liquors by any person in any post exchange or canteen or army transport, or upon any premises used for military purposes by the United States, is hereby prohibited. The secretary of war is hereby directed to carry the provisions of this section into full force and effect."

The following amendments to the army bill have been proposed:

By Senator Lodge: The importation or sale of distilled spirits into the Philippine islands or their dependencies, except for medicinal purposes or for use in the arts, under regulations to be prescribed by the commissioners of the United States, is hereby prohibited.

Senator Gallinger: Providing that all licenses for the establishment of American saloons in the Philippines shall be revoked and that hereafter no such licenses shall be issued.

Beyond disposing finally of the canteen question, the senate accomplished little, and it seems doubtful whether a final vote upon the measure will be reached before Friday or Saturday.

The reapportionment bill was received from the house, and referred to the committee on census.

The house yesterday considered the river and harbor appropriation bill. Little progress was made. In a bill carrying such a vast sum for local improvements many are bound to be disappointed, and there is considerable soreness among the members who fail to get what they want. This soreness cropped out in several places yesterday, the disappointed members refusing to allow any limit to be placed on the general debate. It extended throughout the day, being seemingly no nearer conclusion at adjournment than when it started.

The house committee on insular affairs has decided to postpone the consideration of all questions relating to our new possessions until after the supreme court renders its decision upon the question as to "whether the constitution follows the flag." Until that question is decided it is considered useless to attempt any legislation for the islands. There are quite a number of matters of pressing importance, but everything now hinges upon the supreme court decision, and there will be no attempt to formulate legislation until that is rendered. It is hoped that the decision may be handed down before this congress expires, March 4. If it is not, all legislation relating to our new possessions will go over until the next congress meets.

King Loses His Position

Washington, Jan. 10.—Action has been taken by the war department in the case of Captain King, arrested at Mobile, Ala., on the charge of having accepted a bribe from Contractor Hobson. An officer will go to Mobile at once for the purpose of determining whether Captain King shall be tried by the civil authorities or by a court martial. An order has been sent to Captain King, relieving him of his duties in Alabama, and directing him to turn all property and funds in his charge over to First Lieutenant Robert E. Wyllie.

Backed by Secretary of War

Washington, Jan. 10.—The action of General MacArthur in sending several Filipino insurgent leaders to the island of Guam was taken with full knowledge and approval of the secretary of war. General MacArthur suggested the advisability of such a course of action, and he was given full authority to act in the premises.

Venezuelans Had Better Beware

Washington, Jan. 10.—Considerable attention is being given by the state department to the disturbed condition of affairs in Venezuela, and the jeopardy to which American citizens and their property are subjected. Some of the foreign governments are beginning to manifest interest in the state of unrest in Venezuela.

BEER WAS DRUGGED

Confession of a Man Implicated In the Murder of a Priest

New York, Jan. 10.—Robert Bryan, wanted in Philadelphia for complicity in the murder there on Friday night last of Rev. Father Riegel, a prominent priest of the Roman Catholic church, was arrested in this city last night. When taken before the detective bureau Bryan made a confession, in which he told the story of the murder of the priest. Captain Titus refused to give any names repeated by Bryan.

Bryan is an unlicensed saloon keeper in Philadelphia. The story told by Captain Titus of the confession is that on Friday night last the priest, accompanied by three companions, went to Bryan's place. The priest was very much intoxicated. The four men gave frequent orders for beer, for which the priest always insisted on paying. Each time he paid he displayed a large roll of bills. He was so intoxicated that he dropped bills on the floor. Bryan admits obtaining $19 in this manner, and asserts that others got more. Finally one of the men excused himself and left the room, and returning brought with him a small vial which, Bryan says, was filled with laudanum and chloral. Four glasses of beer were poured, one of which was drugged.

Bryan says that after the priest had taken the beer, the other men took him out of the room. He says he knew nothing further until Saturday morning, when he was told that the body of a priest had been found in the hallway of the house next door. It is said that Bryan was arrested for highway robbery in 1897 and his picture is in the rogue's gallery under the name of Jack Harris.

Philadelphia, Jan. 10.—The body of Rev. Charles Riegel was found last Saturday morning. The police were reticent and never admitted the man was murdered. The inquest on the body was abruptly adjourned, and it was announced by the court that the clergyman had died of natural causes. Father Riegel was buried yesterday. Over 50 priests attended the funeral.

Boston Thieves' Harvest

Boston, Jan. 10.—Two robberies from the person, the sums stolen aggregating over $1400, were reported to the police last night. Cornelius Landers reports he met a strange man in a Green street store and went with him to his room. They had a drink of whisky and, after Landers left the house $715 was missing from his pocket. Walter H. McKay reported he was robbed of $700 by a white man and a colored man at the South End. There is no clew to the thieves.

Boycott on Milk Contractors

Westboro, Mass., Jan. 10.—Milk producers of Westboro, Northboro and Upton have placed a boycott on Boston contractors, and will send circulars broadcast through New England calling upon all farmers to withhold milk from Boston until their demand for a 36-cent rate, with no surplus clause, is recognized. Four hundred cans a day are being held back in the section on strike.

Mining Catastrophe In Mexico

Eagle Pass., Tex., Jan. 10.—An explosion of gas in a coal mine at Monda, Mex., caused the death of four men and the injury of upwards of 20 others, among the latter being three brothers named Sullivan. They were maimed beyond recognition.

Filipinos Have Missouri's Sympathy

Jefferson City, Mo., Jan. 10.—A resolution was adopted by the Missouri house of representatives memorializing congress to allow the Filipinos to establish a government of their own.

WOMAN'S WEIGH

Does not always keep pace with woman's will. There are energetic, home-loving women who by sheer force of will keep themselves going, and fancy that strength of will can take the place of strength of body. But it can't. Every day will see a loss of strength, and that loss will be indicated by a loss of weight. When the weight begins to fall below the normal it is time to ask, Why?

In general, ill health in women may be traced to those womanly diseases which sap the strength and undermine the vitality. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription dries enfeebling drains, heals inflammation and ulceration, and cures female weakness. Where the disease is marked by loss of flesh, there is a steady regaining of weight coincident with the cure which proves the renewal of health to be thorough and permanent.

"Three years ago," writes Mrs. John Graham, of 2018 Plumb Street (Frankford), Philadelphia, Penna. "I had a very bad attack of dropsy which left me with heart trouble, and also a very weak back. At times I was so bad that I did not know what to do with myself. I came to Philadelphia two years ago, and picking up one of your little books one day began to read what your 'Favorite Prescription' had done for others. I determined to try it myself. I took seven bottles, and to-day I am a strong, well woman, weighing 162 pounds. Have gained 29 pounds since I started to use your 'Favorite Prescription.'"

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets cleanse the bowels and stimulate the sluggish liver.

DEATH CAME QUICKLY

Congressman Clarke of New Hampshire Succumbs to Attack of Consumption

Peterboro, N. H., Jan. 10.—Hon. Frank G. Clarke, representative in congress from the Second New Hampshire district, died last night of quick consumption, aged 50 years. He took an active part in the campaign of last November, and, now being very strong, he was completely exhausted when his labors ended. After election he commenced working on his candidacy for the United States senate, to succeed Senator Chandler. When near the end of the contest he was taken sick, and was obliged to take to his bed a few days later.

Mr. Clarke was born at Wilton, N. H., Sept. 10, 1850. He entered upon the practice of law in Peterboro in 1875, and since had been a resident of the town. He served as a member of Governor Hale's staff in 1883, and in 1885 was elected to the house of representatives. Returning to the practice of his profession, he was again called into political prominence by an election to the state senate in 1889. In 1891 he was again elected a member of the state house of representatives, and was chosen speaker. He was active in the campaign of 1892, and in 1896 was elected to congress, and re-elected in 1898, his term of office expiring next March. He was an active candidate for senatorial honors, to succeed Mr. Chandler, and it was only two days previous to his death that he withdrew from the race on account of ill health.

Suit Ended by Death

Bridgeport, Conn., Jan. 10.—The strange suits for $115,000 damages brought by Mrs. Mary E. Wright Smith of this city against her husband, Eli C. Smith, came to a sudden end yesterday when death claimed the respondent, a few hours after suffering an apopletic shock. The action was brought by Mrs. Smith to recover on account of the transfer of real estate, which she alleged passed out of her hands through the agency of her husband, who subsequently secured the property. The case in court has been declared indefinitely postponed.

She Has Two Husbands

Fitchburg, Mass., Jan. 10.—Emma E. Lawrence, arraigned on the charge of bigamy, waived examination and was held in the sum of $500 for the grand jury. In default of bail she was taken to jail. Miss Lawrence says that on Dec. 20 she married a young man named Day, but when she heard that he was but 20 years old, believing she was at liberty to marry again, she contracted a second marriage with a man named Matthews. Day says the woman importuned him so persistently that he "married her to get rid of her."

The Lawrence Council Muddle

Lawrence, Jan. 10.—A meeting of the common council, which took 500 fruitless ballots for president, was called by Mayor Leonard for last night, to settle if possible the disputed question of the presidency. The nine Democratic members responded to the call, but the nine Republicans stayed away. They affirmed their willingness to enter the meeting if there was any prospect of agreement. The Democratic members responded by saying that they were ready to proceed to business, but would not agree to a compromise.

Portuguese Going to Hawaii

Boston, Jan. 10.—About 100 Portuguese left Massachusetts yesterday bound for Hawaii. Most of them were from the vicinity of New Bedford. Work has been guaranteed the men in different parts of the Hawaiian islands, and they are to have their house rent free and at least $20 a month wages. If these pioneers send back satisfactory reports, a much larger party will be organized to go in the fall.

Malden Should Feel Thankful

Boston, Jan. 10.—It has just been announced that Mr. and Mrs. Elisha S. Converse of Malden, during the past year, have endowed the Malden public library with $125,000. The library with its contents, costing nearly $200,000, was given to the city of Malden by this couple as a memorial to their son, Frank Converse, and this additional gift is a source of great satisfaction to citizens generally.

To Hold Separate Caucuses

Boston, Jan. 10.—Contrary to the usual custom on United States senatorial nominations, the Republicans of the two houses of the legislature will this year hold separate caucuses, but both will nominate Senator Hoar to succeed himself without opposition. Both bodies will vote for senator on Tuesday afternoon.

Cambridge Woman Badly Burned

Cambridge, Mass., Jan. 10.—While engaged in getting supper last evening, Mary Reagan, 35 years old, knocked a lamp from a shelf upon the stove. The oil ignited and set fire to her clothing. She was so terribly burned that it is thought impossible for her to recover. Mrs. Reagan has five small children.

President's Sickness Not Serious

Washington, Jan. 10.—The president had a restful day and is progressing favorably. Dr. Rixey is satisfied with the manner in which the grip is responding to treatment. The president has no fever, and is steadily improving.

Good Afternoon.

Three more of the amendments to the City Ordinances are published today, and there is no longer any doubt about the increase in salary of the City Solicitor. Order No. 265 shows how the duties of City Solicitor have been increased under the salary, and that considerable is expected of him. The City Solicitor and Tax Collector will now receive the same salary.

Few cities and towns have more golden weddings in proportion to their population than Quincy; another being added to the lists this week. The city averages five or six every year. Perhaps it is the salt in the Quincy air, which has recently been found to prolong life, that accounts for the longevity of residents of this city.

The course of Mayor Hurley will be watched with considerable interest this year, particularly if he is sincere in his platform and attempts to live up to it. Often times, however, when officials attempt to revolutionize things generally, they do not accomplish so much as others who are not so cranky. In the case of Salem such a radical change may be necessary.

Drift of Opinion.

☞If Judge Joseph T. Clarkson of Omaha, Neb., had been a Baptist, for example, and it has been reported that he had renounced that faith, probably few beside his fellow church members would have known of it. Being a Christian Scientist, however, the report was widely published and created considerable comment. This goes to show that whether the Christian Scientists are right or wrong, they are being watched closely by their critics, some of whom have expressed doubts as to whether they are either Christian or scientific.—Manchester Union.

The week of prayer has been observed in the First Presbyterian church and was well attended. The theme considered each night was, "A spiritual church the one for the 20th century."

IT IS SAID

That Salem's Mayor Has Loosened Many Tongues.

That Salem people are not talking much for the newspapers.

That distance lends enchantment.

That outsiders rather enjoy the fun.

That Mayor Hurley would be more successful if he had the authority of the Mayor of Quincy.

That the board of aldermen of Salem are not with him.

That his powers of appointment are limited.

That the aldermen may not confirm the changes.

That his appropriations will also be limited.

That it is one thing to talk and another to act.

That he may find it as difficult to remove the City Marshall as it is in Quincy to remove the Inspector of Plumbing.

That a mayor with so much courage ought to be successful.

That it is a common thing for office holders to forget that they are public servants.

That there are a few in Quincy.

That Mayor Hurley's address would have been stronger if he had not struck at the superintendent of schools as he did.

That a superintendent is a great improvement over supervision by a school committee.

That they don't always work for the best interest of a city.

That the new Salem mayor would not allow his school committee to go to Boston for printing.

That he is "agin" royalties and perquisites for officials.

That the police of Salem got "fits."

That they now brush up and black their shoes.

That it is difficult to make some policemen look fascinating.

That some are great favorites with the women, nevertheless.

That in Boston they are called "the finest."

That Quincy has a fine looking Chief when he is is dressed up.

That he is saving his uniform for parades.

That some chiefs object to wearing their uniforms every day.

That a Quincy official under Mayor Keith had a coachman.

That he was also an adviser.

That he was somewhat of a dude.

That Salem is not the only place where young lady clerks do most of the work of department officials.

Stolen Wire.

Officer Barry is suspicious of all junk dealers, and therefore about 6 o'clock Wednesday night, when he saw a stranger bartering with a junk dealer near the residence of Mr. Babcock on Presidents hill, he at once became suspicious that all was not right. He started in to investigate, at which the stranger started to run. Officer Barry started after him but he was no match for the fleet footed fellow.

The officer then drew his revolver and three shots rang out in quick succession. Officer Barry's aim is not so sure as it was when he carried the musket for Uncle Sam, and the fellow disappeared in the direction of Adams street. Going back he found a roll of copper trolley wire where the fellow stood, which proved to be property of the Brockton street Railway, and had been stolen from the rear of Daniel McLane's house on Hancock street. The value of the wire taken for old junk was $16.50. This morning Officer Barry took a daylight look at the scene of Wednesday night's exploit, and was rewarded by finding another roll of the same kind of wire, which had been secreted in the bushes. There is no clue as to the identity of the fellow who was trying to sell the wire, as it was so dark he could not be recognized.

Clerks Well Organized.

Local 224, Retail Clerks International Protective Association, the local lodge of clerks, held a public installation at French's hall Wednesday evening. Past President James A. Daly installed the following officers for the year 1901:

President,—James F. Allen.
1st Vice President,—Henry J. Mathews.
2d Vice President,—Walter S. Weaver.
Recording Secretary,—Luther T. Fernald.
Financial Secretary,—John H. Guinan.
Treasurer,—Albion I. Dixon.
Guide,—Bernald J. Talbot.
Guard,—Archie Rogers.

After the installation ceremonies were concluded, an entertainment was contributed by the following local talent: John McIntosh, Fred. G. Prout, Messrs Barron and Fitzgerald, James A. Daley, Michael F. Scammell, William J. Howard, Daniel J. Coleman, John J. Sullivan, James F. Allen and Edgar H. Doble.

After the entertainment was concluded a collation was served.

The local lodge of clerks is in a very flourishing condition, as it embraces among its members about all the grocery and provision clerks in the city. The clerks of Quincy propose the coming summer to be in line with neighboring cities and intend to make an earnest endeavor to obtain a weekly half holiday, such as is in vogue in Dorchester, Roxbury, Lynn and other places. Why Quincy should be so far behind other places in progressive matters of this kind is hard for the clerks of this city to understand.

Election of Officers.

At a regular meeting of Loyal Ladies held in Doble's hall, Jan. 8, the following officers were elected for the ensuing year:

President,—Mrs. Mary A. M. Smith.
Vice President,—Mrs. Lizzie Perry.
Chaplain,—Mrs. Eliza Smith.
Recording Secretary,—Mrs. Josie Daw.
Financial Secretary,—Miss Agnes Reynolds.

ELEVATORS UNSAFE.

More Persons Killed and Injured than on Railroads.

Editors of Quincy Ledger:

The recent severe elevator accident in Boston by which a former resident of this place had his toes so badly crushed, as to make the amputation of three necessary again calls attention to the fact that the laws of Massachusetts are very lax in demanding safety appliances for this means of transit, in high buildings.

Statistics show that more persons are killed and injured every year in Massachusetts through accidents in and to elevators than by those to railroad trains or trolley cars and, while the latter are hedged about by every safeguard that can be provided for by statute, very little attention has been paid to protection on lifts.

Inspection is insisted on, it is true, and freight elevators must be equipped with guards, but generally those for passengers have been so little regarded that our legislators evidently labored under the impression that danger is not to be thought of.

This feeling has resulted in carelessness and the disregard of even ordinary precautionary methods. So that at present the deadly elevator is more to be feared than kerosene in the hand of a green servant girl. So strong is the feeling of insecurity that in many large buildings thousands of persons prefer walking up half a dozen flights of stairs rather than take chances in elevators.

All danger might be avoided if a few safety appliances were insisted upon by the legislature. What these may be, I have no means of knowing but in view of the thousands of serious accidents during the past few years, I can but believe that some bright inventor has devised something, which would prove of inestimable advantage and benefit to the community; and anything which will prevent the loss of life and limbs to our citizens should certainly be insisted upon by our legislators.

I understand that Rufus R. Wade, chief inspector of factories and buildings is heartily in favor of any measures which will provide additional safeguards, and I should like to see public sentiment on this matter aroused to the point where he will be given the strongest possible support in whatever steps he may take to secure much needed legislation in this direction.

The Boston Record recently printed the report of one hospital in Boston showing that during one year 17 persons had been killed and 125 injured in elevator accidents in Boston. Those figures are most eloquent and must be convincing to any doubter, yet they do not represent by any means all the accidents. There are probably six or eight places where injured persons are treated in Boston to say nothing of the regular practising physicians, and it is not at all improbable that the total number of cases where injuries resulted would be nearly, if not quite 600.

No other single cause of accidents can in any way equal such a record as that. Is it not time that the Legislature adopted measures to prevent such frightful calamities? Humanity.

UNIVERSALISM.

A Forward Movement Predicted for the New Century.

The winter meeting of the Old Colony Association of Universalists was held Wednesday afternoon and evening with the First Universalist church on Washington street, Quincy. The meeting was very largely attended and was full of interest. The societies represented were Abington, Brockton, Braintree, Hingham, Norwell, Plymouth, Weymouth, North Weymouth and South Weymouth.

The afternoon session opened at 2.30 with a praise service led by President Rev. Melvin S. Nash, followed by the reading of the scriptures and prayer by Rev. W. H. Morrison of Brockton District Superintendent. Then followed an able address by Rev. Mr. Morrison on "Some things Univeralists ought to do." In opening he said the question was certainly a broad one. In a recent article in the Independent, it was stated that all denominations had progressed except the Universalists duirng the past ten years. This was not very encouraging. He would like to see the statistics from which the article was drawn.

What does this mean? First that we must be up and coming to redeem ourelves. No church had been boycotted and persecuted more than ours, on account of its ideas. We have fought for the idea that all churches shall have equal rights, fair field and no favors. There are Universalists who do not send their children to our Sunday Schools because they live near some other church, and they say it makes no difference. Their money that should come to our church goes to support some other church.

One of the things the Universalist church has got to do is to crush out that heresy The best church for Universalists to work for and support is the Universalist church and the first thing to do is to convince families that once labored with us that our church is the church for all who are at heart a Universalist.

The Universalist church started out with the idea that hell fire had no foundation in the Bible. Have we not neglected to put a motive equally as strong in place of that old idea a motive that will have a grip on the masses. One of our great works is to make our motive—love—as effective as the old one was. There are many families in Quincy who ought to support this church who do not. To them religion has ceased to be a necessity but a luxury

We do not believe in an endless hell No; but we believe what a man soweth that shall he also reap. Our work is to convince the world that religion is a necessity that men and women should give and sacrifice to keep the church alive; the proper observance of the day and to stem the tide that is sweeping the world carrying away all respect for Sundays; to plant in the mind of the young the respect and reverence they should hold for the Bible.

In closing the speaker said he wanted to see Universalists who have been brought up on it come back and help in the work we are doing. Pull together and we will have the forward movement we have worked for, for a century.

A brief discussion followed this address and the afternoon session closed with an address by Rev. R. Perry Bush on "Christian Sociability."

At 6 o'clock supper was served by the ladies of the parish. Then followed a short business session.

The evening session opened at 7.30 with reading of the Scriptures by Rev. R. K. Polk prayer by Rev. Melvin S. Nash and a solo by Mr. John Green entitled "The Plains of Peace."

The address of the evening session was by Rev. George L. Perin, D. D. on "Universalism in the Twentieth Century" which was full of encouragement and interest.

Minstrel Show.

The advance sale of tickets for the Minstrel show to be given on Jan. 30th by the North Quincy Club at its rooms insures a full house with standing room only on guard. Members of the club are spotting victims for local hits. Many excellent solos will be rendered in the first half of the entertainment. The second half will include a German sketch by a professional team which has appeared in Cadet theatricals. The entertainment will close with a grand Italian opera in English entitled "Augustus and Angelina" the words and music by Arthur S. Kendall. The opera will be executed by members of the club, Mr. L. F. R. Langelier taking the part of Angelina, Alexander Hill as Augustus, Dr. Chas. Munroe as "Chawles," and Dr. Geo. T. Page as Bombasto.

Supt. Frye Has Resigned.

Mr. Alexis E. Frye has resigned his position as superintendent of the schools of Cuba. In accepting the resignation, Governor General Wood said the post would be open for Mr. Frye should he desire to return to it. Mr. and Mrs. Frye sailed from Havana Wednesday.

ANOTHER GOLDEN WEDDING.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Barrett Tilton of Quincy Observe Their Fiftieth Marriage Anniversary.

Had newspapers of fifty years ago been as enterprising as those of today, one might upon consulting the evening editions of the family paper, have seen it noted that on Jan. 9, 1851, Mr. Thomas Barrett Tilton of Boston and Miss Maria Amsden, daughter of Ephraim and Relief Thayer Amsden of Ware, Mass., had been united in marriage and that Rev. O. A. Skinner had performed the ceremony It was to note the golden wedding anniversary of this most worthy couple that the children gathered at the residence of Friend Crane, off Washington street, on Wednesday evening. The affair was one of those quiet home kind, that are ever popular, and Mr. and Mrs. Tilton received many congratulations.

Mr. Tilton has reached the ripe age of 74 years while Mrs. Tilton is 70. Both enjoy good health and bid fair to celebrate their diamond anniversary twenty-five years hence.

Fifty years seems a long time when looking forward but to look backward the time seems all too short. For the past twenty years Mr. and Mrs. Tilton have made their home in Quincy. Previously they resided for the greater part of the time in Boston. Mr. Tilton is a wood turner and in and about Boston there are today many things that testify to his skilled hand, notably the wooden columns that mark the entrance to the United States hotel. During the early years of the telephone he was employed by Charles Williams on Court street, where the Bell telephones and Blake transmitters were manufactured, and it is worhy of note that the first ear piece used on a Bell receiver was turned by Mr. Tilton.

During his early life, Mr. Tilton had the then popular craze of being a volunteer firemen, and for a number of years he was a member of the Boston Fire Department, being attached to an East Boston company.

For the past few years Mr. and Mrs. Tilton have made their home with their daughter, Mrs. Friend Crane. Three children have been born to them, Mrs. Ella M. who married Charles E. Snow and who resides at Quincy Neck, Mr. Charles Burton Tilton, who married Miss Eliza M. Magee and Miss M. Clarabel, who married Mr. Friend Crane.

FR. MUNDY DEAD.

Resident of Quincy in His Youth and Has Three Sisters Here.

Boston papers report the death at Carney Hospital, Boston, on Wednesday of Rev. John F. Mundy, who was a graduate of the Quincy public schools. Fr. Mundy was born Feb. 11, 1846, in Donegal, Ireland, and came to this country in October, 1847. His boyhood days were spent in Quincy, where he attended the public schools. He graduated with high honors from the Quincy high school in 1864 and then entered Holy Cross College, Worcester. Fr. Mundy was ordained at Le Grande Seminary, Montreal, Dec. 21, 1872, and soon afterward was assigned to St. Mary's parish, Cambridgeport, under the Rev. Thomas Scully. He remained there until about 1887, when he was given a pastorate in Abington, which he reluctantly accepted.

The friendships he had formed in Cambridge were too strong to permit him to remain away, and he resigned his appointment as pastor to resume his place in St. Mary's parish.

Fr. Mundy all through his life was identified with the temperance and parochial school work of Fr. Thomas Scully. He is survived by a brother, James H. Mundy, of San Francisco, and four sisters — Mrs. Margaret M. Gavin of Quincy, Mrs. James Clarke of New York, and Misses Sarah A., and Elizabeth Mundy of Quincy.

The funeral will be held Saturday moring at 10 o'clock, from St. Mary's church, corner of Norfolk and Harvard streets, Cambridgeport. The body will lay in state at the church all day Friday.

NEW HOUSES

FOR SALE.

Just to remind you that I have another lot of houses nearly completed, I will list these three bargains:

Many were disappointed on the last lot so be on hand early if you would be in it.

Also, one of eight rooms and bath, Independence avenue; all modern improvements, bounds on two streets, can sell for $500 less than real value. This house is of the popular size to suit any business man, and is very roomy and convenient. I don't like to have other builders know how I am cutting prices, but $3,000 buys this one, look at it and compare with others you see building.

Another, and a money maker for some one with only an ounce of pluck. This is a two-family House, 5 rooms and bath each, and 60 foot lot, $3,000. Pay in $500 on this and I will guarantee you a twenty five per cent. investment for one year; who would dare invest in a twenty-five per cent. GUARANTEED investment.

Remember these houses are built by competent workmen, by the day, of the best material, and are personally superintended by the owner, are but four minutes to station, electrics pass, and everything is most desirable as a residential section. All houses are connected with sewer and cellars are perfectly dry.

Come and look them over and select one that suits you. Can be seen any day.

EMBALMED BEEF AGAIN

General Alger's Veracity Is Questioned by Surgeon Daly

HIS ANALYSIS WAS CORRECT

Report of Government Chemical Experts Said to Have Been Suppressed by "Alger Relief Committee"—Has a Copy of the Document as Proof

Pittsburg, Jan. 10.—Concerning General Alger's recently published article on the beef controversy, Major W. H. Daly, chief surgeon on General Miles' staff during the Spanish war, who has just returned to his home in this city from a hunting trip with General Miles, says:

"It seems to be a hodge-podge of inaccuracies as to facts and the testimony I gave. What Mr. Alger calls my 'verbal statements,' and a 'single letter,' was in fact just one typewritten official report to the commanding general of the army, and it seems to me to have been a rather efficient report in fulfilling his object, made manifest by the prompt abatement of the issue of improper food to our armies.

"I made the chemical analysis after my return to my private laboratory in Pittsburg, and after my official report had been sent in, because there was no opportunity for such accurate chemical work in a military campaign in a foreign country and I wanted to see whether or not I was correct.

"The government chemical experts sustained my analysis, and in very detail, yet the 'Alger relief committee' suppressed this report of their own chemists, and merely said in their report to the public that 'inasmuch as Dr. Daly's analysis was not sustained by the government's expert chemists, he is not worthy of credence.'

"The report written and signed by Chief Chemist Clark and his assistants ought to refute any impeachment of my credibility. Fortunately I have the copy of the report of the government chemists in my possession, else it would have been a question of veracity as between Alger, his relief committee and me."

Date Fixed For Howard's Trial

New York, Jan. 10.—District Attorney Clarke has desiguated Jan. 23 as the day on which to call the trial of George W. Howard. A private detective yesterday exhibited the signature of Anna Kay Howard of Canbridge, obtained by sending her a registered letter when he was in that place and could not reach her so as to converse with her. He claims it corresponds exactly with her signature on her alleged marriage certificate.

Ex-Governor Punched Editor

St. Paul, Jan. 10.—Governor Lind retired from office at noon yesterday. Three hours later he visited the office of the St. Paul Dispatch, which had censured him bitterly during his term, told Managing Editor Black "I am now a private citizen," and struck Black a sharp blow between the eyes. The men clinched, but were immediately separated, and Governor Lind left the office.

To Cultivate Tea on a Large Scale

Charleston, Jan. 10.—The successful planting and manufacture of tea at the Pinehurst farms, Summerville, near this city, has attracted northern capitalists, who will go into the business on a large scale, and expect to raise 300,000 pounds annually for the American market. Major Trimble of New London, Conn., it is said, will be the active head of the company.

Saves Trouble of a Trial

New York, Jan. 10.—Cornelius L. Alvord, Jr., former note teller of the First National bank, was arraigned in the United States circuit court, criminal branch, and pleaded guilty to three counts of an indictment charging him with embezzling $700,000 from that institution. Sentence will not be imposed until Tuesday of next week.

Big Combination In View

London, Jan. 10.—Albert Vickers allows the inference to be drawn that a combination of the Vickers-Maxim company with the Cramps of Philadelphia will be effected. He says, however, that so far as the Vickers-Maxim company is concerned the deal is not yet concluded, though he hopes it will be.

BITE OF MOSQUITOES

Proved to Be Alone Responsible For the Propagation of Yellow Fever

Havana, Jan. 10.—The American commission, under the superintendence of Dr. Reed, which has been making experiments at Quemados as to the propagation of the yellow fever germs by the mosquito, has obtained extremely satisfactory results.

Dr. Reed says the experiments show beyond a doubt that there is no contagion from an infected person or from infected clothing, but that the mosquitoes alone are responsible for the spread of the disease. In the course of the commission's investigations six non-immune persons were infected direct by the bite of mosquitoes which had previously bitten yellow fever patients, and five of these developed yellow fever.

The last experiment made proved conclusively, Dr. Reed contends, the theory of propagation by mosquitoes. A special building was constructed of disinfected material, and one of the rooms was divided into two sections by a wire mosquito screen. In one section were placed disinfected bedding and clothing, and in the other bedding and clothing from the yellow fever hospital, which had not been disinfected. Two non-immunes occupied the two sections. In the former were put several infected mosquitoes. The patient remained in this room only long enough to be bitten, and in four days a pronounced case of yellow fever developed. The patient is now convalescent.

The other subject slept in the infected bedding for many nights, and has not contracted the fever.

Both patients have been sleeping for 20 nights in garments worn by yellow fever victims, and in bedding from the yellow fever hospital. Dr. Reed says they are growing fat, and that in no instance in the course of the commission's investigations has a case of yellow fever developed from exposure to infected bedding or clothing.

Brave Nurse Among the Victims

Rochester, Jan. 10.—The list of dead as the result of the conflagration at the Rochester orphan asylum Tuesday morning has reached a total of 30. Allen Bellmore, aged 2, died yesterday. He was terribly burned about the head and upper portion of the body. Mary Brad, one of the nurses, the 30th victim, died last night. Miss Brad, when the alarm was given, hastily snatched up two of her little charges, suffering with diphtheria, but was overcome before reaching a hospital. Miss Brad was frightfully burned all over the body, and both her charges were dead.

Objections to "Unlucky" Day

Washington, Jan. 10.—Captain Reiter, who is supervising work on the battleship Wisconsin at San Francisco, has recommended that the plan of putting the ship in commission on the 1st prox. be reconsidered. When the plan was arranged the fact was overlooked that Feb. 1 falls on Friday. Old salts say there is no record of a warship being put into acitve service on that so-called unlucky day of the week.

Brokers Charged With Swindling

New York, Jan. 10.—Charles H. Gardner, a note broker, and James Delassel, who claims to be a broker, were arrested last night, charged with swindling. Thomas S. FACING DEATH'S JAWS

A Hundred Persons Still Aboard the Ill-Fated Russie

DESPAIRING SIGNALS FOR AID

Which Those Ashore Are Powerless to Render—Sinking of Vessel's Stern Affords a Refuge In the Bow—Hopes of an Ultimate Rescue

Marseilles, Jan. 10.—Dispatches from the village of Framaman, near the French mail steamship Russie, stranded in a violent storm, with 60 pasesngers and a crew of 41 on board, say that all efforts to reach the steamer have failed, owing to the tremendous height of the seas which are running. The latest information, however, is that the situation is more hopeful.

When nightfall enshrouded the Russie on Tuesday evening, quite a number of the crew and passengers were seen clinging to the fore-rigging and the deck rails, making despairing signals for succor, which those ashore were powerless to afford. The gale increased in fury all night long, and, though a flickering light was perceived from time to time, apparently waved by those on board to attract attention, it was feared the steamer would either break up or disappear in the shifting sands before morning.

A thousand persons awaited along the shore, and the fishermen prepared to launch a boat at the first sign of the abatement of the hurricane. When day broke it was a great relief for the watchers ashore to find that the bow and other foreparts of the ship were still above the water, though the stern had completely vanished. A group of men on the steamer's bow renewed their mute appeal for help.

As the day wore on more persons appeared on the deck, forming three groups—one at the bow, another at the bridge, and a third around the funnel. Thus it was seen that most of the crew and passengers, who, a rectified list shows, number 102, were still living. A signal message was received at 3 o'clock in the afternoon saying that up to that time no one had perished.

The Russie lies partly on her beamends, with her deck facing seaward and the seas have carried away her hatchways, filling the holds and cabins with water. Every possible expedient was tried from the shore to save the sufferers. The coast guardsmen and fishermen manned life boats and made several ineffectual attempts to reach the steamer, which was shifted by the incessant pounding of the seas a trifle nearer the shore.

Shortly after 2 o'clock, during a lull the men on shore succeeded in getting a life line to the Russie, but it snapped as it was being pulled on board. Other similar attempts failed.

A tug approached as near as possible to the wreck and then flew a kite to which a life line was attached, in the direction of the Russie, but it failed to reach the stranded vessel. Floats were also sent out from the beach with lines, but in no case did they succeed in reaching the steamer. Rockets were fired fruitlessly until the ammunition of the rocket-mortars, which was very meagre, ran out.

The tugs which made repeated efforts to approach the Russie were themselves menaced with disaster, and obliged to relinquish the attempts.

Harrowing scenes were witnessed at the offices of the steamship company here, outside of which were gathered the weeping wives and children and other relatives of the crew, who mostly hail from Marseilles. A message, posted at 3:30 p. m., stated that up to that time all on board the Russie were alive. It evoked pathetic explosions of joy.

The sinking of the stern in the sand proves to have been a lucky thing for those on board, as the bow of the mail boat is tilted high above all but the biggest waves, and affords a refuge. Otherwise it is believed that all would long since have perished.

Will Stick to Kansas City Platform

Chicago, Jan. 10.—Former Mayor Hopkins of this city, who was recognized as one of the leaders of the gold wing of the Democratic party in Illinois in the campaign of 1896, was yesterday elected chairman of the Democratic state central committee, at the biennial meeting of that body. A resolution was passed recoguizing the Kansas City platform as representing the principles of the Democratic party until the next national convention.

Kerr were brought into court to witness the drawing of the jury panel which will consider their cases. Judge Dixon notified the four prisoners to be ready for trial Monday.

Turned Over to Legislature

Albany, Jan. 10.—The commission appointed by former Governor Roosevelt to investigate relative to elevating the New York state Indians to citizenship and the apportionment of their lands within and without the reservations, finds that the scope of the subject is too momentous for it to handle, and suggests that the legislature take the matter in hand.

NOTICE TO PARENTS.

CITY OF QUINCY.

CITY CLERK'S Office, Dec. 31, 1900.

THE Record of birth in any city or town is always more or less unsatisfactory, owing to the fact that the canvasser finds difficulty in getting the necessary information. Names and dates are frequently given incorrectly. The importance of accuracy is shown in many cases where there is a question of descent, or inheritance of property, or collection of life insurance or pensions. The City Clerk's copy of the record is accepted as conclusive evidence in a court of law. While great pains are taken by this office to have the record correct experience shows that it is necessary that parents themselves should lend their assistance. In fact, the law requires that parents shall give notice to the City Clerk of the birth of their children, and provides a penalty for neglect to give such notice for the space of 40 days.

It often happens that only children or servants are at home when the canvasser makes his call, and the answers to his questions are open to doubt. I therefore request all parents in whose household a birth has occurred in the year 1900, to place upon a paper or card the required information, and keep it in a convenient place until the canvasser appears.

The canvasser will begin on Jan. 1, 1901.

EDGAR G. CLEAVES, City Clerk.

NOTICE TO PARENTS.

CITY OF QUINCY.

CITY CLERK'S OFFICE, Dec. 31, 1900.

THE Record of birth in any city or town is always more or less unsatisfactory, owing to the fact that the canvasser finds difficulty in getting the necessary information. Names and dates are frequently given incorrectly. The importance of accuracy is shown in many cases where there is a question of descent, or inheritance of property, or collection of life insurance or pensions. The City Clerk's copy of the record is accepted as conclusive evidence in a court of law. While great pains are taken by this office to have the record correct experience shows that it is necessary that parents themselves should lend their assistance. In fact, the law requires that parents shall give notice to the City Clerk of the birth of their children, and provides a penalty for neglect to give such notice for the space of 40 days.

It often happens that only children or servants are at home when the canvasser makes his call, and the answers to his questions are open to doubt. I therefore request all parents in whose household a birth has occurred in the year 1900, to place upon a paper or card the required information, and keep it in a convenient place until the canvasser appears.

The canvasser will begin on Jan. 1, 1901.

STRUGGLE YET TO COME

Signing of Joint Note Comparatively Insignficant

AMERICAN PLAN REJECTED

As Far as Shifting of Seat of Negotiations Is Concerned—Contest Between Conflicting Designs of the Powers Promises to Be Bitter and Protracted

Paris, Jan. 11.—The Associated Press is given the following statement from authoritative quarters in regard to the Chinese situation:

The Chinese plenipotentiaries signed the joint note Wednesday, thus concluding the preliminary stage of the negotiations.

It was added that this important step was insignificant compared with the difficulties to be met with between the powers themselves, whose clashing interests will have full play in the coming discussions. The United States' proposal to shift the seat of the negotiations finds no favor in the European chancellories. Three reasons are given for this opposition.

First—It is considered a great mistake to transfer the negotiations from China, where all the information is at hand respecting the situation and the feeling among the Chinese themselves and more especially regarding the conditions of trade and commerce with which the negotiations will be chiefly concerned.

Second—The United States commerce with China is comparatively small when compared with that of several other countries. Therefore the United States is not entitled to expect the negotiations to be carried on at Washington.

The third, and most delicate, reason advanced is that the European powers have not felt sufficient confidence that the United States government might not find itself influenced in the negotiations at Washington by the pressure of interests having an eye to the exploitation of China. The attitude of some of the powers, moreover, is swayed by other motives in opposing the United States' proposal. Great Britain, for example, which seems to be the most strongly antagonistic, has probably taken into consideration the United States' attitude toward the Clayton-Bulwer treaty.

The feeling here favors Shanghai, if any change is made, as it is pointed out that Shanghai is the most important trade centre of China, and, moreover, that the southern viceroys, who are favorable to foreigners and anxious to further trade, could make their influence felt. Failing Shanghai, Berlin or Paris is likely to be chosen. The enormous British interests are in favor of the choice of London, but it is improbable that the other powers will agree to this.

There is no reason to suppose that Russia will withdraw from the joint negotiations. The treaty she has concluded with China concerns her special interests in regions contiguous to her territories, but she has great political interests to defend, and, further, in the joint conference, which will bristle with obstacles to a speedy settlement, Russia aims chiefly at a wide expansion of her political influence. Great Britain wants to, roughly, open the Chinese empire to her commerce, and at the same time strengthen her political foothold. The United States, apparently, will be devoted to securing commercial advantages, while France and Germany will desire to increase their trade generally, and their political influence in certain provinces.

The struggle between these conflicting designs will be bitter, and in any case, will greatly protract the negotiations.

One thing which Great Britain and the United States wish secured is the raising of the prohibition, which now exists in China, against foreigners acquiring landed interests, a considerable extension of commerce being thereby anticipated.

As Berlin Hears It

Berlin, Jan. 11.—A special dispatch from Pekin to The Lokal Anzeiger says: The Chinese court has abandoned its objections to the joint demands of the powers, and it is believed that Prince Ching and Li Hung Chang will sign in a few days. It is expected that a telegraphic authorization will reach them from Sian-Fu to use the imperial seal, which is under guard in Pekin.

Emperor Favors Return to Pekin

Pekin, Jan. 11.—Phince Chun, brother of the emperor, who is now in Pekin, and in whose honor the Germans will hold a review, says that, though he does not represent the court officially, he knows his brother's sentiment is in favor of returning to Pekin.

King Oscar's Health Restored

Copenhagen, Jan. 11.—The King of Sweden is better, and will resume the reins of government Jan. 10. Queen Sophie, who has been continuously ill, is now suffering from a serious inflammation of the shoulder, but Prince Eugene is much better.

ALLEGED NOTE SWINDLERS

Their Business Methods to Be Investigated by a Grand Jury

New York, Jan. 11.—Charles H. Gardiner, a note broker, and J. D. Lasell, who were arrested for an alleged swindle, were arraigned yesterday. Gardiner was accused of perjury, and was held for the grand jury in $3500 bail.

The charge against Lasell was impersonation, in that he had represented himself as Edward Rafter. In that capacity, it is alleged, he went to the office of T. F. Smith, where he signed seven checks as Edward Rafter, payable to Thomas C. Moffat of Chicago, who has an office here, each check being for $2500 on the Mutual bank of this city. Besides these, three others, it is charged, were given to Mr. Moffat, one for $5000 and two for $2500 each.

In addition to these notes, detectives say, paper to the extent of $10,000 was turned into the Puritan Trust company of Boston by a man named Turner, who, the police say, got them from Gardiner.

Lasell's wife was in court when he was arraigned, and said that she would tell everything to the defectives. It is maintained that Lasell is a member of a large gang which has been flooding the country with bogus notes.

Redmond Prays For Disaster

Dublin, Jan. 11.—Addressing a meeting of the United Irish league in this city last evening, John Redmond, leader of the Irish parliamentary party, spoke most hopefully of the prospects of the Irish cause. The Liberal party, he said, had gone to pieces because a large proportion of its members had been false to Ireland. The Conservative government was engaged in perilous enterprises, in China, South Africa and elsewhere, and, he added: "I hope to God that the government will be overwhelmed by military and financial disasters at Cape Town."

Sequel to Alleged Forced Marriage

Kansas City, Jan. 11.—Philip H. Kennedy, agent for the Merchants' Despatch Transportation company, was shot and instantly killed by his wife at his office last evening. The woman kicked the lifeless body of her husband as she exclaimed: "Now you will never seduce another woman." Mrs. Kennedy, who was formerly Lulu K. Prince, married Kennedy five weeks ago. Kennedy brought suit last Tuesday to annul his marriage, alleging in his petition that he was forced into the marriage by threats against his life if he refused.

Death of Nat Burbank

New Orleans, Jan. 11.—Major Nat Burbank of The Picayune, widely known as a dramatic critic and as the author of the humorous column of that paper, died suddenly in a street car yesterday. He came here with the northern army during the Civil war, and had been associated with The Picayune for many years. He was 55 years old. He was a native of Massachusetts, and was educated in the Boston public schools. He entered the Federal army as a private in a Massachusetts regiment, and rose to the rank of major.

Considers the Boom Healthy

London, Jan. 11.—G. M. Lamberton, in an interview published by The Daily Mail this morning, says: "The present boom in American railroad securities is quite healthy. It is the outcome of the nation's prosperity and of the confidence that followed the endorsement of President McKinley's administration. Therefore railway securities may safely be bought as a permanent investment, especially preferred stock and bonds."

Pleases Friends of Gomez

Havana, Jan. 11.—The Cuban constitutional convention, in secret session yesterday, decided to insert in the draft constitution a clause providing for universal suffrage in the future republic. Only one vote, it is understood, was cast against the proposal. Friends of General Maximo Gomez, who assert that he is the popular candidate for the presidency, are elated over the prospect of an unrestricted vote.

DEMENTED MAN'S DEED

ELDER WOMAN ALONE LIVES

With but Slight Chance of Recovery—Despondency Over Business Troubles Believed to Have Led to the Terrible Doings of a Boston Man

Boston, Jan. 11.—Harold Anderson, 3 years old, died at the city hospital last evening, making the third death resulting from a tragedy which occurred in the Jamaica Plain district yesterday.

It was just after 6 o'clock in the morning when the quiet neighborhood in the vicinity of Centre and Sheridan streets was started by successive pistol shots. The shooting took place in the three-story wooden house at the corner of the two thoroughfares. The deed was committed on the first floor, over a drug store and a grocery store, which occupy the ground floor of the building.

Svante Anderson, a Swede, 36 years old, had lived in the neat apartment for the past five years, and he had always been looked upon as a quiet, law-abiding citizen and a devoted husband and father. At the hour above named, while probably laboring under temporary insanity, he arose, and fired two shots at his wife, Emma, 31 years old, as she lay in bed. The bullets entered her breast, and death was instantaneous. He then turned the still blazing revolver on his little 3-year-old son, Harold, and fired one shot at him. The bullet entered the child's abdomen, passing out through the back.

Anderson's mother-in-law, Mrs. Mary Anderson, was awakened by the shooting and screams. Her room was directly opposite that occupied by the husband, wife and child, and she hastened to her daughter's assistance. As the mother-in-law entered the room, Anderson turned the revolver on her and shot the woman in the breast.

Mrs. Anderson, badly wounded, ran down the stairway to the entryway to the room occupied by William Mosser, 20 years old, a lodger. Mosser jumped from his bed and just as he lighted the gas Mrs. Anderson fell in a swoon to the floor. Dressing himself, Mosser hastened to to 19 Forbes street and told Svante's brothers, Anton and Victor, what had happened. They returned to the house with Mosser. When they entered the room occupied by their brother, his wife and child, they found him lying dead on the floor, with a bullet wound in his breast. The child was crying with pain from his wound. Mrs. Anderson, the elder, was still unconscious in Mosser's room.

Miss Hattie Reynolds, 20 years old, another lodger, on hearing the pistol shots had locked her door and she was in her room, badly frightened, when the police arrived. The latter summoned an ambulance, and Harold and the mother-in-law were removed to the city hospital. Harold died last night. Mrs. Anderson is in a dangerous condition, with slight chance of recovery.

Until about two months ago Anderson was employed as a leather sorter on South street, and his two brothers still work there. He left for the purpose of opening a periodical store and pool room in Jamaica Plain, but he failed to pay expenses, and he had recently been depressed over his business troubles. To add to his misfortune, he was recently in the West Roxbury court on a complaint made to the police by a school teacher that he had been selling cigarets to minors. In court he pleaded nolo contendere, and his case was placed on file.

Great Triangular Duel Predicted

London, Jan. 11.—In the course of an editorial upon Andrew Cernegie's prediction that the United States, within a quarter of a century, will surpass all the other countries of the world combined in steel production, The Daily Telegraph says: The United States have secured the lead in steel and will increase it, and, since Germany is also preparing to "dump her surplus production abroad" we are on the eve of the greatest triangular duel yet seen in international trade.

To Testify Against Companions

New York, Jan. 11.—The World states, on information furnished by one of those closely connected with the prosecution of the four men charged with the murder of Jennie Bosschieter, that George Kerr will go on the stand and tell the whole story of how the girl met her death. It is expected that he will escape without punishment as a reward.

Death of Rear Admiral Phelps

New York, Jan. 11.—Rear Admiral Thomas F. Phelps of Washington died at the New York hospital last night of pneumonia. He was taken to the hospital only Wednesday from the hotel where he was stopping. He had come to this city to be with Mrs. Phelps, who has been sick at the New York hospital for the past three weeks.

Penetrating Heart of Cape Colony

London, Jan. 11.—Five thousand Boers, supposed to be trekking west from Vryburg, says the Cape Town correspondent of The Daily Mail, are now making their way into the heart of Cape Colony. The supposition is that they have captured several small garrisons on their way.

Good Afternoon.

Regular patrons of certain routes of the local street railway know when to expect cars on that particular route, but almost daily people have inquiries as to when cars run on this or that route, which they are unable to answer. No timetable is posted or advertised and transient travellers are all at sea, and the company is not only the loser, but the subject of considerable criticism. There are eight routes out of City Square, and an ordinary person cannot carry the running time of each in his head, but he wants a timetable to refer to at his place of business or at his home before he starts for West Quincy or Wollaston, because he has no time to waste on the street corners waiting for a car. Where cars are run every few minutes as in Boston, it is not necessary to advertise the timetable, but in Quincy no cars are run oftener than half hourly, and not as frequently to Norfolk Downs and Houghs Neck. If the company cannot afford to advertise the timetable daily they should have it published at least once a week. Had people known last night in the storm when cars for the High school might be expected, they would have patronized them, as it was many remaind at home, and the railway and Teachers' Association were the losers. This is only one example out of hundreds. When one round trip per day on each of the eight routes, or fourteen fares, would pay for publishing the table daily, is it not mistaken economy to keep the people in ignorance?

It was left to a newspaper man, Representative Dowse of Malden, to offer a bill in the Massachusetts Legislature to punish kidnappers. Many States find that they have no laws to reach such crimes, and the sooner a bill is adopted the better. Mr. Dowse's bill is none too severe, and reads as follows: "Any person convicted of kidnapping may, at the discretion of the Court, be punished therefore by imprisonment for life, or for any lesser term."

A GREAT SURPRISE

Is in store for all who use Kemp's Balsam for the Throat and Lungs, the great guaranteed remedy. Drift of Opinion.

☞Possibly the Chinese would take a little more kindly to Christianity, if they realized that you can believe in it without practicing it.—Puck.

☞Only one thing was lacking to Ignnatius Donnelly. That thing was intellectual sincerity; and if he had possessed it he would have placed his name high in literature's temple of fame. The man who wrote "Atlantis" and that wonderfully ingenious attack on the glacial hypothesis, "Ragnarok," could have contributed much that would have been of real value and permanent interest to the world's supply of great books if he had actually believed in anything.—Chicago Journal.

☞If some bright mind at the Hague peace conference had suggested that Christendom should agree to some single act of celebration, to be performed at the same moment all over the world, on the first day of the new century, it is hardly to be doubted that the idea would have taken root and have resulted in the most beneficent celebration of this or any other age. The spectacle of countless millions of persons pausing in their merriment or their devotions and at the midnight hour lifting up their voices to the great strains of "Old Hundred" in every city and village and homestead that follows the Gregorian reckoning would have been an event to quicken every heart with a feeling of the brotherhood of man, and sober every mind with a sense of the august flight of time. Why not establish some such custom for every new year?—San Francisco News Letter.

☞Mayor Hurley did not express much more radical views concerning municipal affairs in Salem than the newspaper correspondent of that city have uttered from time to time, but he set them forth far more pungently than the scribes have been in the habit of doing when touching upon the delinquencies prevailing within our neighbor's borders. And, by the way, some of those self-same shortcomings will be readily recognized as having existence in many other places, but people living in glass houses cannot refrain from shying a pebble now and then. According to one writer a well-known citizen of that city, commenting on the municipal election, made the statement that in Salem personalities and desire for little petty contracts and jobs is what elects and defeats men. He cited numerous actual instances in this election where men were elected or defeated by these personalities without regard to the public good.—Lynn Item.

Parker Engaged.

It was learned Thursday, says the Globe, that Arthur H. Parker had agreed to be on the Lawson cup defender throughout the season, giving up all his other interests in yachting.

Mr. Parker will be a valuable addition to the amateur complement on board the new boat. He is a first-class yachtsman and is popular in every place he has raced along the coast. He has been interested with Charles Hayden in the 17-footer Duchess, the 21-footer Heiress, and, last season, in the H. O. 25-footer Empress. He has been the man at the wheel in all of these boats. He also sailed in the 21-footer Oogrook, when she competed for the Quincy cup in 1899, and has sailed in a number of boats, large and small, during his yachting career.

JOHN A. BOYD CAMP.

Public Installation of Officers—Mayor Hall Among the Guests.

The newly-elected officers of John A. Boyd Camp, Legion of Spanish War Veterans, were publicly installed Thursday night at French's hall, in the presence of a number of invited guests, who included Mayor Hall, City Clerk Cleaves, Chief of Police Ripley and ex-Councilmen Packard and Wilson.

John A. Boyd camp was one of the first camps to be instituted under the State charter in 1899. Later, on Feb. 22, 1900, it was reinstituted under a National charter. The camp, although small at first, has grown rapidly, and now numbers about 150 members, and is one of the most thriving camps in the State. The members of Camp John A. Boyd are composed largely of those who served during the Spanish war with Co. K, although there are others who served in different branches of the service.

The installing officer was Assistant Inspector General Frank Pierce, assisted by Mustering Officer Thomas Brown.

The officers installed were:

Commander, William E. Morrissey.
Senior Vice Commander, Herbert F. Tucker.
Junior Vice Commander, Theodore H. Hermanson.
Adjutant, William J. Colligan.
Paymaster, William W. Dunn.
Quartermaster, John W. Fitzgerald.
Officer of the Day, Harry J. Matthews.
Officer of the Guard, Peter N. Carlson.
Officer of the Watch, Frank G. Fitzgerald.

At the conclusion of the installation ceremonies, the installing officer, as toast master, called upon a number of the guests present. He made a capital toast master, prefacing his introduction of each speaker by relating some humorous incident that had come to him during his service for Uncle Sam in the Spanish war.

Mayor Hall paid tribute to the citizen soldier, and the spirit of reverence found in all parts of the country for the flag. He also referred to the youthfulness of many of the Quincy boys who served in the late war, and said if in the future the old flag should need the soldier's protecting arm, no more courageous or faithful guardians would be found than the members of John A. Boyd camp.

Ex-Councilman Packard spoke in his usual inimitable way. He told of his experience in the army. There was no canned beef in those days, but they had what was called "salt horse." The only fault he found with the coffee in those days was that it was boiled in the same kettle used for the meat, which did not improve the flavor.

City Clerk Cleaves was glad to be present and felt a hearty good feeling for the boys, and he had always done what he could to aid those who had applied to him in his official capacity.

Ex-Councilman Wilson said he was not old enough to go off with the boys in '61, and was too old in '98. He however remembered the parade in '61, and departure from Quincy of the old company. He also remembered that after the war Councilman Packard had been called to Boston to help quell a riot, and had got hit in the head with a brick, and was brought home on a stretcher.

Chief of Police Ripley paid a tribute to Commander Morrissey, who had served as one of his officers during the past year, and spoke of him as a faithful conscientious officer.

Capt. Maurice Colbert of Co. K and others spoke.

During the evening music was furnished by Deslaurles' orchestra.

A collation of sandwiches, crackers, cheese and coffee was also served.

—It is estimated that the wheat crop in the Darling Downs district, Queensland, will beat all records, the yield in some instances reaching fifty-two bushels per acre.

IT IS SAID

That There Will Be But Few Changes in City Officials.

That nevertheless there will be new faces at City Hall this year.

That there are already ten new Councilmen.

That these are planning to serve their constituents.

That they may not be able to accomplish everything.

That there may be a successor to Inspector Keniley.

That doubtful things are always uncertain.

That a continuous board of three Assessors is to be appointed.

That the seven members of the present board are all candidates.

That there are others.

That Principal Assessor Thompson is sure to be one.

That Johnson and Nash may be the other two.

That the Sewer Commissioners will be missed.

That there may be a new Chief of Police.

That H. H. Faxon would like a change.

That a strong No-License man is wanted.

That Charles H. Johnson may be the man.

That the Chief must be a Ward Four man.

That it may be Tobias H. Burke.

That Tobias has downed Walter before.

That the recommendations of the committee to examine the Woodward Fund have not been adopted.

That one of these would cause a change in that board.

Of The Kind That Are Rare.

Editors Daily Ledger:

During the month last past nearly every salary has been raised with the possible exception of the efficient foreman of streets of Ward Six. This official receives the same pay he received in 1894 when the position of permanent foreman was established, and during that time the work and responsibilities have increased three fold. The present foreman Mr. O'Neil is worth at least as much as any foreman in the city, and in the opinion of Ward Six taxpayers a great deal more. Early and late he is at his post and during the most severe rain and snow storms he is out all night, working with might and main that the streets and walks may be in a passable condition for the early trains. For this extra labor he receives no additional pay. Municipal servants of this kind are so rare that the citizens of this ward earnestly hope our efficient Commissioner will take such steps as will give the foreman of this district the increase of pay he so justly earns.

MILTON.

The contractor on the section of the Metropolitan sewer near Pierce street is having a lot of trouble with water, and has not made much progress. This section is the one that is to be tunneled and the water comes faster than it can be handled. Three pumps have been in use at times and even these were not sufficient to keep it down. Artesian wells are now being driven to a depth of twenty-five feet and it is hoped that this may enable work to progress.

The annual March meeting is quite a way ahead, yet local politics are being talked up. Rev. Theodore I. Reese will commence another series of illustrated lectures on the Bible on Sunday evening.

The annual meeting of the Unquity club will be held next Monday evening.

At the whist party Wednesday evening, under the auspices of the Thursday Evening club, first prizes were awarded William Ward and Mrs. Christopher Graham, and consolation prizes to Christopher Graham and Mrs. Charles Detling.

At the whist party last week at the Unquity club, prizes were captured by Robert Clark and Paul Eaton.

Mrs. Harriet Smith died at the home of her sister, Mrs. Bela French at East Weymouth Thursday afternoon as the result of burns received that morning. In lighting a lamp the match came in contact with the table cover which caught fire, also setting Mrs. Smith's dress on fire. She rushed through the house and fell exhausted. Mr. and Mrs. French and her daughter went to her assistance and finally succeeded in extinguishing the flames. All were severely burned. Mrs. Smith suffered terrible agony and lived until noon. She was an enthusiatic worker for the Mission connected with the Congregational church, and it was her custom to contribute each year as many pennies as she was years old. She had saved 76 cents this year, one less than her age and realizing that she could not live she requested one to the family to add the penny and present it to the mission.

HOLIDAY TRIFLES.

Some Unique Little Arrangements Suitable For Presents or Bazaars.

During the latter part of the gift season it sometimes happens that one would like to quickly concoct little trifles for use as "belated" presents, and the following hints found in Good Housekeeping will afford a few appropriate affairs of this kind:

An attractive pad may be made by covering a heavy piece of pulp board, 8 by 6 inches in size, with old rose paper. Paint on it in water color the head of a pretty girl, using brown madder for the outline or shading. Wash a touch of rose madder on the cheeks. In bold letters paint "Engagements" and the verse, "Noiseless falls the foot of time that only treads on flowers."

A needlebook makes a gift which pleases any woman, from the grandmother to the proud young owner of her first workbasket. For a small needlebook cover four visiting cards with silk, satin or linen. If linen is chosen, use it for the outside of the cover and silk or satin for the inside. A dainty effect is obtained by using white taffeta for the cover and some bright shades of silk for the inside. The matter of decoration allows the widest latitude—flowers, a pretty child figure, a few silver winged bugs, called darning needles, or a bee hovering over a pink clover blossom. If you use the bumblebee, paint in crimson letters on the other side of the cover, "How doth the little busy bee improve each shining hour."

Another suitable adornment for a needlebook is a sketch of an old dame flying through the air, witch style, on a bright silver needle instead of a broom. Use with this the ancient nursery rhyme.

Old Mother Twitchett had only one eye
And a long tail, which she let fly,
And every time she flew over a gap
She left a bit of her tail in the trap.

Choose an old rose art linen to make a handkerchief case. Cover four pieces of card about five inches square, two with the linen, two with delicate pink china silk into which has been put a layer of cotton batting with sachet powder. In the center of the linen paint a disk in gold and beside it with water color a rich hued crimson chrysanthemum. Use the same color and a fine outline of gold for the "Handkerchiefs." Then tie the two sides together with three inch satin ribbon the tint of the chrysanthemum.

Something rather unique is a tag case. Its foundation is four visiting cards, over which are stretched, then stitched together, bits of white taffeta for the outside and some darker silk for lining. Let the decoration be a traveler, a dainty maid with a dress suit case, a drummer with his grip or a dude with a heavy cane. When it is finished, put inside it a dozen tags.

Fancies of New Year's Eve.

The great way of celebrating New Year's eve in days of yore was by giving a supper party, on which occasion the proceedings were of a very solemn character. No one was permitted to speak until midnight, and no lights or fires were allowed. Directly the clock struck 12, however, every available lamp and candle was lit, every bell in the house was rung, pianos and other musical instruments were played with emphasis, all the guests shouted "Evvina!" at the top of their voices, and discord reigned supreme. The next part of the programme consisted in every one counting in solemn silence all the silver he happened to possess in his pockets at the moment. Gold was considered unlucky, but silver was supposed to bring all manner of good fortune to the owner. Those ladies who wished to discover whether or not the New Year would see them wedded to the "man of their choice" had only to throw their sandals some distance, presumably when the person upon whom they had fixed their affections was in the same room, for we are told that if the sandal alighted with the toes directed toward that person the wedding would infallibly take place during the year. If, however, the toes were turned in a contrary direction, farewell to their hopes.

The Empire Coats.

The short waisted empire coats, when properly made, have a quaint and becoming effect on a slight figure, but some weird examples are to be seen which have the appearance of an outgrown garment and quite ruin the figure. The empire fashions are prettiest of all for tea and evening gowns, and in these elaboration is not out of place, and the strict empire style need not be closely followed.

The Cozy Feast.

I like my dining room at night,
The little table draped in white,
The window with its vines and flowers,
The mantel clock to tell the hours;
The fruit dish heaped with red and gold,
A few quaint bits of china old;
The poet faces on the wall,
Just where the rays of lamplight fall;
The silver shining bright as new,
The cups and saucers sprigged with blue;
The fragrance of the steaming tea,
With bread as white as it could be,
And merry chatter not the least,
With love enough to grace a feast.

THE PROBLEM.

DOROTHY in the nursery can calculate the price of Ivory Soap per cake, but it would take a mathematical genius to calculate its true value. For he must take account of time, labor, and materials. He must deduct from the apparent cost the saving in the longer life of the cake, in the longer life of the washed fabric, in the labor required, in the time consumed, in the strength expended, in the results obtained. When all is finished, Ivory is the cheapest soap in the world. It floats.

O'Connell Will Try Again

Worcester, Mass., Jan. 10.—City Solicitor Rugg has been asked to determine just how soon a special mayoralty election can be held under the statutes. Deafness Cannot be Cured

by local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflamation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars; free.

Just to remind you that I have another lot of houses nearly completed, I will it t these three bargains:

Many were disappointed on the last lot so be on hand early if you would be in it.

Also, one of eight rooms and bath, Independence avenue; all modern improvements, bounds on two streets, can sell for $500 less than real value. This house is of the popular size to suit any business man, and is very roomy and convenient. I don't like to have other builders know how I am cutting prices, but $3,000 buys this one, look at it and compare with others you see building.

Another, and a money maker for some one with only an ounce of pluck. This is a two-family House, 5 rooms and bath each, and 60 foot lot, $3,000. Pay in $500 on this and I will guarantee you a twenty five per cent. investment for one year; who would dare invest in a twenty-five per cent. GUARANTEED investment.

Remember these houses are built by competent workmen, by the day, of the best material, and are personally superintended by the owner, are but four minutes to station, electrics pass, and everything is most desirable as a residential section. All houses are connected with sewer and cellars are perfectly dry.

Come and look them over and select one that suits you. Can be seen any day.

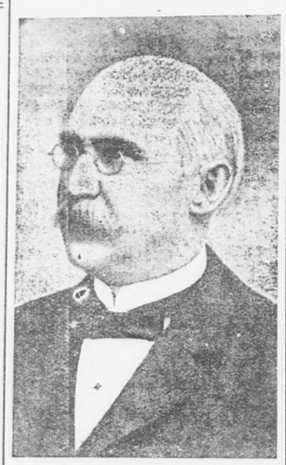
Burnham Receives Nomination For United States Senate

WON ON THE FIRST BALLOT

With Thirty-Seven Votes to Spare Over Number Necessary For a Choice — Lawyer and Orator Who Has Been Greatly Honored by His Native State

Concord, N. H., Jan. 11.—As the outcome of the greatest political canvass the state of New Hampshire ever saw, United States Senator Chandler was defeated for re-election by Judge Henry E. Burnham, a prominent lawyer of Manchester, who received the nomination in the Republican legislative caucus of 320 members. The ballot was as follows:

Whole number of votes	320
Necessary for a choice	161
Henry W. Blair	1
Henry D. Quinby	22
Cyrus A. Sulloway	23
Henry M. Baker	29
William E. Chandler	47
Henry E. Burnham	198



HON. HENRY E. BURNHAM.

Members, on behalf of the defeated candidates, severally moved that the nomination of Mr. Burnham be made unanimous, and it was so voted.

Judge Henry E. Burnham was born in Dunbarton, N. H., Nov. 8, 1844, and is a descendant of the eighth generation of John Burnham, who came from Norwich, Eng., in 1635, and is the son of Hon. Henry L. Burnham. His early youth was spent upon his father's farm. He entered Dartmouth college in 1861 at the age of 17, and graduated with high honors in 1865. His college life gave promise of a brilliant professional career, by which he is distinguished, and forshadowed the fine oratorical powers he has since displayed. He was admitted to the bar in 1868 in Merrimack county, and at once opened an office in Manchester, where he has since practiced his profession with eminent success.

SENATOR WILLIAM E. CHANDLER.

He filled the office of judge of probate for Hillsboro county for the years 1876 to 1879, inclusive. He was a member of the house of representatives in 1873-74, and of the constitutional convention of 1889.

Judge Burnham has taken a deep interest in Masonry, and received the highest honors of the grand lodge of the state, serving as most worthy grand master. He has also long been prominent as a member of the Odd Fellows.

In 1874 Judge Burnham married Miss Llizabeth H. Patterson.

Judge Burnham is an orator of large gifts and attainments, and as such is widely known. He is a member of the present house of representatives from Manchester.

Senator Chandler filled out the two years of Senator Pike's term, the latter having died in office, and two full terms as senator, thus serving 14 years. He was secretary of the navy in the McArthur administration, and was a dominant factor in the councils of his party, both state and national, and for many years had a large share in the control of his party in New Hampshire. His opponents in the remarkable senatorial contest which closed last night attribute his defeat to the fact that, during the years of his public life, he attacked any one whom he fancied stood in his way, and thereby raised up many enemies, who seized this opportunity to unite in bringing about his defeat.

FILIPINOS' APPEAL

For Cessation of Military Operations Presented to Senate by Mr. Teller

Washington, Jan. 11.—Considerable progress was made yesterday by the senate with the army reorganization bill, but the final vote upon the measure seems to be as far off as ever. Yesterday's proceedings were characterized by several sharp colloquies, some of which were of a decidedly personal character.

A sensational appeal was presented by Mr. Teller of Colorado from more than 2000 persons in Manila, urging the United States government to cease its operations against the Filipinos. Mr. Hawley of Connecticut made a vigorous objection to its publication as a document. He declared that it was a treasonable denunciation of the government and an attack upon our soldiers.

The general debate on the river and harbor bill continued in the house yesterday until 4 o'clock, when the death of Representative Clarke of New Hampshire was announced, and the house adjourned out of respect to his memory. The features of the debate were the speeches of Mr. Cushman (Wash.) and Mr. Hepburn (Ia.). The latter has been a persistent opponent of river and harbor bills for years, and he attacked the bill all along the line in his usually vigorous fashion. Mr. Cushman's glowing appeal for justice to the Seattle project brought a stirring round of applause.

Minnock's Sensational Story

New York, Jan. 11.—The grand jury began an investigation into the insane pavilion of Bellevue hospital yesterday, and it seems as though the abuses of the entire charities' department are likely to come before the public. Thomas W. Minnock appeared before Commissioner Keller and repeated his story of the horrors of the insane asylum. He told of a man named Fitzgerald who was an inmate of the pavilion, and who, Minnock says, was taken out of the insane pavilion and dropped in the street by an attendant.

Life Savers Reach Stranded Ship

Marseilles, Jan. 11.—A message from Faraman says that in spite of the heavy sea still running a lifeboat succeeded in reaching the stranded French steamer Russie, and attached a line to her by which food can be furnished to the passengers and crew, numbering 102 persons, who had all been cooped up in the forecastle since Monday evening, when the vessel stranded, and were famishing. There are sanguine hopes that the rescue of the endangered persons is possible now that communication with the Russie is established.

Customs Union Advocated

Vienna, Jan. 11.—The Viennese papers comment extensively upon Senator Lodge's discussion of America's supremacy in the trade of the world, during the debate in the United States senate on the bill to increase the military establishment. His utterances are regarded as a serious challenge, and the papers advocate, as the sole effective means of defense, a European customs union.

Night Air Is Dangerous

New York, Jan. 11.—Estimates from physicians indicate that there are probably more than 500,000 cases of grip in greater New York. Leading physicians say that its victims are almost exclusively people who go out at night. Business has in all branches been greatly affected by the prevalent epidemic.

Captain King Secures Bail

Mobile, Ala., Jan. 11.—Captain King, who was bound over in the sum of $10,000, to answer to the charge of accepting a bribe from Contractor Hobson, made his bond yesterday. Captain Singer has arrived from Washington, to determine whether the accused shall be tried by civil or military authorities.

Alleged Misuse of Mails

Baltimore, Jan. 11.—Anthony Comstock of New York has caused the arrest of Dr. Anna Giering and Mamie W. Giering (Dr. Jane Dor) of this city, on the charge of misusing the mails. It is alleged that the doctors sent pills through the mails for criminal purposes. They were held in $2500 bail each.

Charged With Murdering Priest

Philadelphia, Jan. 11.—Jacob Winne, Annie Bryan, Charles Burns and Ellie Barrett, were arrested yesterday, charged with participating in the murder of Father Riegel, who was found dead on Saturday night last in the hallway of a lodging house in the Tenderloin district of this city.

Death of Commander Quackenbush

Washington, Jan. 11.—Commander John W. Quackenbush, U. S. N., retired, died yesterday at his residence in this city. Commander Quackenbush was born in New York and was appointed in the navy Sept. 24, 1847.

MUST BE TRIED AGAIN

Jury Reports a Disagreement In the Case of Cote vs. City of Biddeford

Saco, Me., Jan. 11.—The jury in the case of Former City Marshal Daniel Cote vs. the city of Biddeford, an action to recover salary amounting to $5000, reported a disagreement last night. The jury was out six hours. Cote brought suit to recover his salary as city marshal of Biddeford, which is alleged he is entitled to, as he never was legally removed from the office by the Biddeford board of police commissioners, which was established by the Maine legislature in 1893. Cote was appointed city marshal by the Biddeford city government in 1893. City Solicitor Hovey, who appeared as counsel for the city, filed a motion yesterday that the jury be instructed to render a verdict for the plaintiff, in order that the case may go up to the law court on exceptions. The motion was overruled by Judge Powers, and the case went to the jury.

In dismissing the jurors last night, the judge told them that in the present case, when the issue of facts was so plain, he was surprised that 12 intelligent men were unable to agree upon a verdict. The case will be tried again at the May term of the supreme court.

Milk Producers Refuse to Yield

Westboro, Mass., Jan. 11.—Boston milk contractors yesterday sent three representatives to Westboro to confer with the striking milk producers of this district. The producers refused to take any stock in the arguments presented, and left the meeting after the contractors' men had invited them to stay for a dainty luncheon that had been laid out in an ante-room. When the Boston men left Westboro they said no concession of any kind will be made. The strikers are equally firm.

To Enforce Prohibitory Law

Lewiston, Me., Jan. 11.—Acting upon orders issued by the committee on police, City Marshal Odlin has warned all those known to be engaged in the sale of liquor in this city to close their places immediately and keep them closed. This is a new departure in Lewiston, as in the past the task of stopping the sale of liquor has fallen to the sheriff of the county.

Runaways Gave Wrong Address

Portland, Me., Jan. 11.—City Marshal Sylvester received a dispatch from the Manchester, N. H., police saying that they arrested as runaways two boys giving the names Joseph Kenney and James McGinn, and who claimed to live at 75 and 82 May street, this city. There are no such numbers on May street. The boys are not known to the local police.

Almost as Dangerous as Real Water

Hartford, Jan. 11.—James O'Neill, the actor, was caught beneath the mass of cloth used to represent water in a scene in "Monte Cristo" last night at Parsons' theatre, and failed to reach the aperture through which he comes at an important climax of the play. He came near being suffocated, and the services of a physician were needed to revive him.

Disagreement as to Construction

Boston, Jan. 11.—The Post says that the work of forming a syndicate to build the Hanley cup defender is going along steadily, although there is a division of opinion among the members over wood or metal. Several want a metal boat, while the adherents of the wooden boat say that there will not be time enough to build a metal boat.

NOTICE TO PARENTS.

CITY OF QUINCY.

CITY CLERK'S Office, Dec. 31, 1900.

THE Record of birth in any city or town is always more or less unsatisfactory, owing to the fact that the canvasser finds difficulty in getting the necessary information. Names and dates are frequently given incorrectly. The importance of accuracy is shown in many cases where there is a question of descent, or inheritance of property, or collection of life insurance or pensions. The City Clerk's copy of the record is accepted as conclusive evidence in a court of law. While great pains are taken by this office to have the record correct experience shows that it is necessary that parents themselves should lend their assistance. In fact, the law requires that parents shall give notice to the City Clerk of the birth of their children, and provides a penalty for neglect to give such notice for the space of 40 days.

It often happens that only children or servants are at home when the canvasser makes his call, and the answers to his questions are open to doubt. I therefore request all parents in whose household a birth has occurred in the year 1900, to place upon a paper or card the required information, and keep it in a convenient place until the canvasser appears.

The canvasser will begin on Jan. 1, 1901.

EDGAR G. CLEAVES, City Clerk.

Quincy, Dec. 31, 1900. 12t

QUINCY DAILY LEDGER.

Vol. 13. No. 11. QUINCY, MASS., SATURDAY, JANUARY 12, 1901. PRICE 2 CENTS.

NOTICE TO PARENTS.

CITY OF QUINCY.

CITY CLERK'S Office, Dec. 31, 1900.

THE Record of birth in any city or town is always more or less unsatisfactory, owing to the fact that the canvasser finds difficulty in getting the necessary information. Names and dates are frequently given incorrectly. The importance of accuracy is shown in many cases where there is a question of descent, or inheritance of property, or collection of life insurance or pensions. The City Clerk's copy of the record is accepted as conclusive evidence in a court of law. While great pains are taken by this office to have the record correct experience shows that it is necessary that parents themselves should lend their assistance. In fact, the law requires that parents shall give notice to the City Clerk of the birth of their children, and provides a penalty for neglect to give such notice for the space of 40 days.

It often happens that only children or servants are at home when the canvasser makes his call, and the answers to his questions are open to doubt. I therefore request all parents in whose household a birth has occurred in the year 1900, to place upon a paper or card the required information, and keep it in a convenient place until the canvasser appears.

The canvasser will begin on Jan. 1, 1901.

EDGAR G. CLEAVES, City Clerk.

Knowing ourselves, our world—our tasks so great
Our time so brief—'tis clear if we refuse

To execute our purpose, life will fleet,
And we shall fade, and leave our task undone.

THE LATEST SCHEME.

Rumors of Movement for Incorporation of New Town of Watson.

To Include Quincy Point and Neck, East Braintree, Weymouth Landing and North Weymouth.

Perhaps It Would Become a Second Pullman But There is a Very Big "If."

Rumor has it that East Braintree, Weymouth Landing and Quincy Neck are to form a new town. Several of the citizens of South Braintree say they will do all they can to help this new movement.—Braintree Observer and Reporter.

The above squib from the Braintree paper today is the first intelligence that Quincy people have received that anything of the kind was in the air, and many are inclined to think it will continue in the air.

The territory named will undoubtedly be largely developed by the Fore River Company which is now building a government cruiser, and will build two battleships, and ships large and small. Perhaps the incorporators would like to control the town, as well as their works but no such intimation has reached us except that contained in the opening paragraph above.

In Braintree, it is said, that there is not much in common between East Braintree on one side and North and South Braintree on the other, and that the North and South would not object to the East being set off, especially as the lattter has the balance of power, and has recently fostered precinct voting upon the town, to the chagrin of some who have ruled in the past.

It is doubtful, however, if East Braintree people care to become the tail end of the new town of Watson, for that is the name suggested for the new town.

Weymouth is a widely scattered town, and it has bothered the voters from time to time where to locate the Town House, the High school, and public buildings so as to accommodate everyone. Weymouth Landing at the extreme north west corner was for years the business section of the town, and the banks, library and newspaper office are located there, but nevetheless other villages of the town have grown faster and carried the day at town meetings.

East Braintree and Weymouth Landing have been almost as one village, and both are probably sore over the removal of the Fore River Company, to Quincy, and someone has concocted a scheme to grasp that portion of Quincy in which the new works are located.

Well! it would make quite a town; a city probably in a few years; but the promoters may count on the solid objection on the part of the city of Quincy, who believe the river is an excellent natural boundary and must be continued.

Once upon a time Quincy Neck was a part of the town of Braintree, which was incorporated May 13, 1640. In Feb. 22, 1792 Quincy was set off from the old town. Then came the set off for Randolph in 1793. In 1811 certain estates of Braintree were re-annexed to Randolph and in April 1856, a part of what now known as Quincy Neck was annexed to Quincy.

While slices are being continually taken from Braintree, Quincy has continued to grow. For instance Squantum and the Farms were annexed in 1814, and a part of Dorchester in 1819, other parts of Squantum were annexed in 1820 and 1855. In 1885, the lands between Milton and Quincy were established and part of each town was annexed to the other town.

The only thing that Quincy has lost is a part of its land at Squantum and Moon island, and a part taken by the Metropolitan Park Commission.

Several attempts have been made or rather talked about, of annexing Atlantic to Boston, but the nearest Quincy ever came to losing any of the land at its northerly part was in 1889, when N. V. Titus and others petitioned the Legislature that Squantum, Moon Island, Little Moon Island, and New Squantum be annexed to Boston.

The boundary line set fourth in this petition was as follows: Beginning at a point on Hancock street and running easterly by a line through the centre of Atlantic street, to a point on the shore of Quincy bay, and thence bounded by the waters of Quincy bay, Dorchester bay, the Neponset river, and Hancock street to point of beginning."

Several hearings were held at which prominent citizens opposed. The Legislature refused to annex and the scheme fell through. Since that time nothing has been done toward dividing the city, which is growing fast and taking rank among the cities of the Commonwealth.

To Visit Battle Fields.

Albert Keating and Mark Mayett of the Boston and Quincy Express Co., leave this afternoon by the Merchants and Miners Transportation Co. line for a ten days trip to Baltimore, Washington, Norfolk and other Southern ports. Mr. Keating has long had a desire, and will now visit Fortress Monroe, and what was a cornfield and woods at Newport News in 1861 when he landed there with the army. It is now one of the largest and principal shipping ports in the south. Probably very little of the fortifications thrown up by the 4th Regiment and others can be seen now.

DANDELIONS.

Oh, mute wild prophets, what of life know ye,
Of eager breath?
E'en as I pray, ye molt your living gold
And, gray and hopeless on the morning breeze,
Drop into death.

Oh, wayworn brethren, what of earth know ye,
What end of strife?
Lo, as I grieve, ye bound from chilling sleep,
Breaking the firmament of the somber glebe
With beaming life!

—Philip Gerry in Lippincott's.

THE OUTWITTING OF SORROWFUL JIM.

Allyn rode across the prairie joyously and looked longingly toward the east, where the sun was scarce an hour high. The fresh, bracing air seemed to permeate every fiber of his being, and he drew in great breaths of it, feeling a wild sort of pleasure in the mere fact of being alive.

For once in three years he was happy, and he had been in that beatific state for two whole days. The rest of the cowboys of the outfit did not know what to make of it. Cayuse Ike swore he had been "locoed," for Allyn had been nicknamed by the camp Sorrowful Jim, and to see him boyishly exuberant and in a gay humor was an unheard of thing until the last day or so.

Allyn had once made the mistake of considering life a very serious matter indeed, and then, after trying for a year to practice law and not getting any one to practice upon he had given it up in disgust and migrated to the home of opportunity in hope of getting rich.

During his idle hours Allyn had fallen in love, and he took that very seriously also. It went hard with him, for he had nothing on earth except a few bonds an old aunt had left him, and the revenue from them did not amount to $300 a year. At the rate his practice was not increasing Methuselah would have been a youngster compared with Allyn if he waited for the revenue from his profession to enable him to marry.

"Jim," she said, "you are acting very foolishly. What does it matter if you haven't any money? I don't want money. I've got enough, or will have when I am 24, when I get control of it. That would keep us very nicely and would hold us up until you could establish a paying practice. Now don't be silly."

"Nelly," he said solemnly. "I cannot afford to marry now. People would say that I married you for you money, and I don't intend to put myself in a position where such a motive could be imputed to me. It would be unjust to me and to you."

"Well, Jim," and there were tears in her voice, "I don't think you are acting fairly toward me. Here I am an orphan, with nobody on the earth to love except an old guardian, and I despise him. You've made me love you so that life without you will be worse than no life at all, and now you say you cannot marry me until you make what it took my father a lifetime to accumulate. Why, by that time I'll have wrinkles and maybe false teeth and glasses and be a horrid, snuffy, fussy old woman."

"No, Nell, I don't want to make $200,000. If I had $100,000 it would be all right. And it will not take long. Out west I will make it quickly. Just you stand fast and wait for me."

"Oh, I'll wait, but I think you are hateful and pigheaded just the same. Would you marry me if I hadn't any money at all?"

"Yes, gladly, and we would be happy too. You would manage somehow. But now my self respect will not allow me."

So it was that he went to make his fortune and at the same time peace with his unduly active conscience. To his utter disgust he found, after a year's prospecting, that gold mines were not at all plentiful, and that every foot of the mountains had been prospected over time and again. A year in Mexico assured him that the business of finding silver mines lying around loose had also played out long ago, and that it took lots of capital to start ranching on a paying basis. Funds were getting low, so he secured a place as one of the herdsmen of the XXX outfit and on account of his grave demeanor was promptly named by the other cowpunchers Sorrowful Jim. And the name stuck to him.

During all his wanderings he had written to Nell as regularly as possible and had begun to regret in a measure his Puritanical conscience. At $40 a month and grub he did not see that a fortune was in immediate prospect. Absence had indeed made his heart grow fonder, and he longed for a sight of Nell's laughing eyes and dimpled face.

Yet he would not acknowledge himself beaten or that he would give in. Much against his inclination he remained consumed with a desire to see her, yet impelled to remain in stiff necked pride, acting as avant courier and escort for a lot of wild eyed, long horned steers, all the while cursing himself for a fool. So he and the rest of the outfit did not have very much in common together, and he grew more and more unsociable and lonely.

Small wonder was it, then, that when he received a letter from her he felt that his voluntary exile was broken. His penance was done, and he was free to return to civilization and Nelly.

"You come on, Jim, dear," the letter said—"that is, of course, if you care to take an almost dowerless bride. I have now only enough left to bring me in $300 a year—exactly what you had. I do not own another thing on earth. I had concluded that the money without you is not worth having, and as long as you are so stubborn about it I saw that I must give in, so I have done so gladly. I have got to be 24, as you know, and have absolute control over my property. So, in order to get you, I have given away my fortune.

"You have cost me nearly $100,000, so I'm of the opinion that you had better come on and deliver yourself up as a victim. I don't propose to tell you another thing about it, as you have no right to know now. After—after—oh, well, some time I will tell you what I did with the rest of the money, but just now it is no affair of yours. You will simply have to take my word for it. Come on, Jim. I am anxious to see you."

So it was that Jim was so happy. He had only two more days to wait; then he would get his month's wages. He had $400 saved up, and he reflected that he and Nelly would manage to get along nicely on that for awhile. His pride was riding rampant, also, and his conscience was very self satisfied, indeed, for had he not held out against the allurements of beauty, wealth, position, ease—everything? It was a victory well worth rejoicing over.

* * * * * * *

The ceremony was over, the few intimate friends had taken their departure, and Jim and Nell looked at each other in a bewildered sort of way.

"I think we ought to take a trip, Jim. I'm so deadly tired of this place. I don't know what to do. Let's go to Europe. I've always wanted to go there."

"Nelly, are you daft? I can't afford a trip to Europe, and you know it. And you haven't any money either, so how are we to go?"

"I think it is very unkind of a person of your wealth to be taunting me with my poverty. For a man as rich as you, I think you are undoubtedly 'close.'" Her eyes twinkled merrily. "I want to go to Europe, and now I've got you to go with me you ought to be glad of the opportunity."

"Nell, dear, if I could afford it you know I would be delighted to take you."

"Well, you can afford it."

"I tell you I cannot."

"I know better—you can. Why, just look at these," and she handed him a bundle of books and papers. He picked up the first one and read the inside page: "First National Bank, in account with James M. Allyn. Deposited May 1, $35,000; May 9, $12,000; May 12, $12,000.

"What does this mean, Nell?" he asked wonderingly as he looked at another book and read: "Received May 9, bonds, mortgages, stocks and securities duly transferred and assigned to James M. Allyn, and aggregating $130,000, and more particularly described as follows: The Trust and Safe Deposit company." Nell was hugely enjoying the situation. She seated herself on the arm of the chair and said:

"You dear old stupid, mulish, stubborn thing, I told you the truth, for I gave everything I owed to you before I wrote that letter. I told the truth, for I reserved just enough to bring me in $300 a year."

"Well, I'll be"— She kissed him and stopped the word.

"Are you going to Europe?" she asked.

"Yes. I think I would enjoy the trip myself, but don't you think you paid too much for me?"

"Oh, I don't know. Not as long as you are nice as you are now. Come on. Let's get ready and catch the steamer leaving tomorrow evening."—St. Louis Star.

An Irishman's Ruse.

In the pioneer days of Victoria, B. C., a Hibernian drayman, whose property abutted on to that of a merchant, was very much disgusted to find that the merchant's chickens were constantly in his little garden patch and would root up his flowers and vegetables.

Appeals to the merchant, who was a patron of the drayman, were of no avail, so the following ruse was adopted:

Our friend from the Emerald Isle purchased some eggs and placed them here and there in his garden. He then awaited the merchant's wife, who would call the chickens to feed them, and in full view of the lady picked up the eggs and put them in his hat.

The lady asked Mike what he was doing.

"Oh, getting a few eggs for my breakfast," said he.

"Well," said the lady, "you have no chickens. The eggs are mine."

"Oh, sure are they, mum. Then what do they do in my garden? Anything on my premises is my own."

After this the fence was made chicken proof, and Mike had no more trouble.—London Tit-Bits.

A Story of Dumas.

One day Alexandre Dumas visited Marseilles and made a trip to the Chateau d'If to visit the palace he had helped to make famous. The guide showed him everything; also the subterranean passage by which Edmond Dantes and Abbe Faria used to visit each other. "This passage was dug by Abbe Faria by the aid of a fish bone,' the guide explained. "M. Dumas tells about it in his story of 'Monte-Christo.'"

"Indeed," replied the author. "Alexandre Dumas must be familiar with all the surroundings here. Perhaps you know him?"

"I should think so. He is one of my best friends."

"And you are one of his," replied the impulsive scribe, letting 2 louis d'or slip into the hand of the astonished guide.

FASHIONS IN FURS.

MANY SHAPES, MANY SKINS AND FANCIFUL GARNITURES.

Short Coats, Long Coats, Boas and Boleros, Muffs and Toques All In Fur—Flat Furs Used For Trimmings on Cloth and Lace Gowns.

Fashion is a tale of furs. Short coats and long coats, boas and boleros, muffs and hats are all made of fur, and in spite of the threats of the authorities the sealskin jacket is as popular as ever. Very smart indeed is the latest example of this, with the square tailed back and cut rather short on the hips.

The whole fox boa has been adopted, and we may see these in every color hanging over the shoulders of lovely woman. To wear a whole animal is not perhaps entirely gratifying to the aesthetic sense. We are able to forget more easily the details of their slaughter when we merely gaze upon the skins of the bodies worked into garments. There is nothing very heartrending in the sight of a sable cape, except it be on your dearest friend and you want it for yourself, but the whole dead animal staring at you with glazed but reproachful eyes is a disquieting object. However, the whole fox boa obtains in white, black and brown and blue, and muffs are made to match, with heads set in the center, and for little children these are to be seen in white. A fur, however, more appropriate to children is miniver, and most attractive little boas and muffs are made of this. Then, too, ermine is very well suited to the young child, and, in combination with rose pink or pale blue or mauve cloth, it will make a beautiful winter coat.

The influence of the fashion of fur is discernible on the latest cloths, which are mostly rough of surface and zibeline in texture. Again, some of the cloth dresses show designs of fur traced with gold or fanciful braid, the flat furs being mostly used for such purposes, caracal and broadtail in preference.

A very stylish bolero of sealskin appears in the first cut, just draped over the bust and held by an engraved gold button, while the fringe is of old gold and steel beads, the cuffs and ends of the stole being embroidered in dull gold braid, steel and gold beads. The muff is decorated to match.

The second costume is of a pale ocher colored cloth, with a bolero of chinchilla, and it is worn with most excellent effect over a blouse of very coarse lace.

Fur intrudes itself upon the lace dresses for evening wear, and some of the elaborate applications on mousseline or silk show patterns outlined in fur.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Topic For the Week Beginning Jan. 13—Comment by Rev. S. H. Doyle.

TOPIC.—Youthful consecration.—Eccl. xii, 1.

"Remember now thy Creator in the days of thy youth, while the evil days come not nor the years draw nigh when thou shalt say, I have no pleasure in them." These words were written by one who had failed to do what these words demand. He had spent his life in foolishness and selfishness, and with bitter remorse and regret he had learned in old age that he had made a mistake, and he tried to warn others against this mistake. He spoke from a bitter experience, and we should therefore hear his voice.

The wise man in these words calls upon us to remember God, to remember that there is a God and that He is our God, and to do this in the days of our youth. If we do not, evil days will come upon us, sickness, affliction and maybe death, and we may not have the opportunity; if we do not, years will draw nigh in which we have no pleasure, no desire either for the world or for God, and we will be incapable of remembering God and consecrating our lives to Him. Youth, therefore, is the proper time for remembering God and consecrating our lives to Him.

1. Youth is the easiest time for consecrating the life to God. This is the experience and testimony of all men. In the days of our youth the heart is easily touched, faith is easily aroused and service more gladly and willingly rendered. As we grow older all these things become harder. The heart is hardened, we become skeptical and distrustful, and our lives are often so engrossed with the things of time and sense that we feel that we have no time to remember or to serve God. There are many men and women in the world today who are anxious to serve God, but delay in the matter has made it a hard thing for them to do. They wish now that they had consecrated their lives to God in their youth. Let us profit by their experiences.

2. Youth is the right time to consecrate the life to God. What justice is there in spending the best and most years of our lives in the service of self and the world and then at the last moment, when they are worthless and useless, to bring them and offer them to God? Yet many have this idea of consecration. They want to be saved, but they want to serve themselves first. It is a dangerous principle to live upon and a most ungrateful and unjust one. Would you smoke a cigar and offer the ashes to a friend? No man would. Why, then, will we burn our lives into ashes and smoke and come and offer these to God? Will we treat God worse than a human friend? If we do, we will find that God is not to be mocked. God wants the best or nothing, the best love of our hearts and the best service of our lives. We cannot give Him these if we put off doing it until we are old.

3. Youth is the safest time to consecrate the life to God. Youth is the only safe time in which to consecrate the life to God. Who has any guarantee that he will live to be old? Who has any mortgage on the future? Who can say, "I will serve myself today and God tomorrow?" How do you know that you will have a tomorrow in your life? Good intentions for the future will not serve God or save the soul. The way to hell and not the way to heaven is paved with them. God demands present remembrance and present service. "Remember now thy Creator," not "Remember thy Creator tomorrow," but "now." It is the only time to do it. "Begin in the beginning of thy days to remember Him from whom thou hadst thy being and keep on according to that good beginning. Call Him to mind when thou art young and keep Him in mind throughout all the days of thy life and never forget Him. Guard thus against the temptations of youth and thus improve the advantages of it."

Opposition to Missionaries and Civilization In China.

When we come to examine the excuse put forward that the trouble is owing to the intrusion of western ideas and methods, which is undoubtedly the fact, it becomes at once apparent that, so far from it being an excuse, we find it constitutes a conclusive reason for the energetic introduction of those ideas. No nation has a right to place itself in opposition to such ideas, inasmuch as to do so is to hinder the preservation and growth of principles essential to human progress. Superstition, bigotry, intolerance, ignorance, incendiarism, murder, persecution of foreigners and all the ills of barbarism are represented by the Boxers, as by other mobs, and even in New Orleans. —Episcopal Recorder.

A Higher Christian Life.

A higher Christian life is more talked about than realized. It is regarded too often as a privilege rather than a duty. It is frequently a matter of emotion rather than of principle. What is needed is a steady and persistent movement toward Christ as our Saviour and pattern or a daily dying unto sin and living unto holiness.—Presbyterian.

The End of the Century.

Let us thank God that the nineteenth century is drawing to an end. It has been a century of material triumphs and ends, with the substitution of low ideals for great truths, but the reaction is sure to come and put an end to the apotheosis of dirt.—Jewish Times.

DEMANDS ANNEXATION

Russia's Attitude Toward a Large Section of China

THE CONTROL OF MANCHURIA

Will Be the Subject of "Special Arrangements" — Reported "Graceful Concession" by Lord Salisbury Indicates Lack of Diplomatic Strength

London, Jan. 12.—"Prince Uchiomky's mission to Pekin," says the St. Petersburg correspondent of The Daily Mail, "was to secure a convention, I understand, on the following basis:

"In return for renouncing her claim for war indemnity, Russia demands an indefinite, instead of a 90-year lease, of the Liao-Tung peninsula and of Port Arthur. In other words, she demand annexation, as well as the complete possession of the Manchurian railway, which, under the existing agreement, reverts to China after 90 years."

M. De Giers, the Russian minister to China, says a dispatch from Pekin, denies the current report that Russia is endeavoring to make a special agreement with China irrespective of the other powers.

"Had this been the case," he said yesterday, "it would not have signed the joint note, although probably, so far as Manchuria is concerned, Russia and China will make special arrangements which will not conflict with any treaties or agreements made by Russia and the other joint powers.

M. DE GIERS.
[Russia's minister to China.]

"I do not believe that Russia has any intention of keeping Manchuria. Indeed, she is placing all the Chinese officials possible in office. Probably, however, it will be necessary to guard the railroad for an indefinite period. I do not believe that there are 250,000 Russian soldiers in Manchuria."

The Daily Chronicle makes the following important statement: "From a trustworthy sources we learn that Lord Salisbury has agreed to cede to Russia the railway from Niu-Chwang to Shan-Hai-Kwan. It is not known what compensation will be received for the concession."

Leading financiers, versed in Chinese affairs, who were interviewed yesterday by representatives of The Daily Chronicle, appeared to think that if the news was correct it indicated that Lord Salisbury recognizes the impossibility of preventing the partition of China, and that Russia would get the north, and Great Britain the Yang-Tse valley.

The original prospectus of the railway company stipulated that the bondholders, mainly British, could be bought out at any time at the rate of $600 per $500 bond.

The Daily Chronicle, in an editorial on the subject, taunts Lord Salisbury with having made another "graceful concession" because Great Britain's entanglements deprive her of the strength to back up her diplomacy."

LIVELY TIMES COMING

Chandler Thinks That His Defeat Was Accomplished by "Railroad Methods"

Concord, N. H., Jan. 12.—Senator Chandler has not appeared in public, and has declined to be interviewed for publication. For an authorized expression of his views, he refers inquirers to an editorial in the Concord Evening Monitor, which says in part:

"The defeat of Hon. William E. Chandler in the Republican senatorial caucus Thursday evening is a fulfilment of a part of a purpose long since determined upon by the Boston and Maine railroad. While recognizing all the merits of Judge Henry E. Burnham, it is fatuous to suppose that his polished and colorless personality could possibly have secured for him the 198 votes which he received on the first ballot had not the most strenuous efforts of the railroad power been exerted in his behalf. There is now no pretense that the result is not a railroad victory won by railroad methods. It now remains to be seen whether the other portions of the railroad plot to control all Republican politics in New Hampshire shall succeed. We are looking for exceedingly interesting times during the next two years.'

Spinster's Will to Be Contested

Worcester, Mass., Jan. 12.—A special to The Telegram from Ashland says that James A. Bartlett of Exeter, N. H., is to contest the will of Miss Zela F. Wiggin, who died Dec. 12, and who was supposed to be a spinster, on the ground that he is her son. It is recalled that 25 years ago there was a principal of the Ashland high school named Bartlett, who was an intimate friend of Miss Wiggin. The claim is said to be that the elder Bartlett is the father of James A. Bartlett. The will made no provision for the alleged son.

SUFFERED INTENSELY

Terrible Experience of Passengers Aboard the Russie

WERE STRICKEN WITH PANIC

During Their Long Incarceration In "The Mariners' Graveyard" — Score of Brave Fishermen Successful In Heroic Attempts to Save Lives

Marseilles, Jan. 12.—The remarkable rescue of the passengers on the steamer Russie was effected by the bravery of 20 fishermen, who, after many heroic efforts to attach a line to the stranded steamer, were finally successful. The passengers of the Russie arrived here last night by rail. They were loudly cheered, and many touching scenes ensued when the sufferers met their relatives.

Lieutenant Guatheret tells the following story of the Russie's experiences: "The steamer ran ashore at 5 o'clock Monday morning. The passengers rushed up undressed when they felt the shock, and a panic ensued. The captain and officers finally succeeded in calming the people, and the boats were prepared for launching.

"It was found, however, that the sea was too rough. As night came on, the Russie began to sink. The after hold and the engine room were inundated, and the vessel, which rolled badly, heeled to the starboard. The passengers took refuge in the first cabin and the smoking room.

"Tuesday morning a violent wave burst in the door of the saloon. The passengers, who were again stricken with panic, rushed on deck. We reassured them and barricaded the doorway with mattresses. All day we were obliged helplessly to watch attempts to reach us with rockets and life boats from the shore, and by tugs.

"We passed the night in a state of the deepest anguish. The waves increased in fury and dashed over the vessel, which was thumping on her starboard side, until, in the early morning, the plates gave way, and the stern of the vessel went to pieces. The utmost consternation now prevailed among the passengers, who fled to the forecastle deck amidship and the foredeck, clinging to the rails and stanchions. Again we witnessed desperate efforts all day long to rescue us.

"When night fell without relief and with the tempest still raging, the scene on board was frightful. The passengers seemed heart-broken.

"Thursday morning the cruiser Galilee hove in sight. Hope revived as she was seen approaching us with engines reversed. The lamentations of the passengers changed to rejoicings. But suddenly the Galilee stopped. The water was too shallow, and the waves threatened to engulf her. She made for the open sea, and the pasengers were again plunged into the deepest despair.

"The efforts on shore with life boats and rockets were renewed, but without success. A rain of small shot from the rockets fell on the deck, endangering the seamen. Finally the crew of a life boat got alongside and gave us a line. This we hauled in order to drag the hawser attached to it, but the hawser broke. Toward evening a big sea swept all the holds except the forehold.

"Our provisions now were almost exhausted. All our solids were consumed at the last meal, Thursday evening. We passed an atrocious night, but were rescued this morning. All the cargo was lost, and only a part of the mail and the passengers' baggage was saved.

"The accident was due to mistaking the Faraman light for the Planier light, a mistake which has caused the loss and wreck of more than 20 steamers and given to the coast the name of 'The Mariners' Graveyard.' "

The attachment of a line to the Russie was due to the heroic efforts of 20 fishermen, who attempted what appeared to be a foolhardy task. Their flat-bottomed craft was tossed about like a straw on the waves. Several times it appeared as though the craft was lost, but it finally got into a current which carried it to the starboard side of the Russie's bow. A line was then thrown on board the wreck. A moment later amid great excitement among the spectators ashore, the line was seen to part. Several more attempts were made, and finally a rope was thrown from the vessel, which the fishermen caught, and the lifeboat was soon afterward alongside.

Then, above the howling wind, rose cries of joy from those on board the Russie, which were re-echoed by the crowd ashore. Another boat, manned by four men, was launched, and succeeded in reaching the wrecked vessel. A few minutes later the Carro boat left the Russie's side, heavily laden. As she approached the shore the occupants were seen to be women and one baby.

The enthusiasm was delirious. The spectators plunged into the sea. Some of them dragged the lifeboat ashore and others lifted the women out of the boat and carried them in their arms, through the waves to dry land. The four-oared boat next arrived with seven more passengers, and the lifeboats then made repeated journeys, until all were saved and sheltered in the lighthouse. Not one of the passengers or crew was injured.

Bravery to Be Rewarded

Paris, Jan. 12.—A movement is on foot to recompense the brave sailors who, time after time, risked their lives in the endeavor to rescue the passengers and crew of the Russie. Minister of Marine Delanessan has asked for particulars regarding the acts of bravery, and, in response to the proposal of several senators, the men will be decorated.

ARE PRESSING FORWARD

Boers' Invasion of Cape Colony Leads to Active Precautionary Measures

London, Jan. 12.—According to the Pretoria correspondent of The Daily Mail, Lord Kitchener is now organizing a force of 30,000 irregular horse, which will occupy weeks. When this force is ready, he will resume offensive operations.t

Meanwhile the invasion of Cape Colony looks more threatening. The news that Commandant Hertzog has two guns is rather startling, as it was formerly asserted that the invaders had no guns.

The defenses of Cape Town, including two 4.7 naval guns, are now complete, and the recruiting of volunteers is active throughout the colony. According to dispatches to The Daily Express, the admiral of the Cape fleet is prepared in an emergency to land a naval brigade of 2000, with six Hotchkiss guns.

A Murraysburg telegram this morning says the Dutch there received the British troops sullenly and it reports that there are rumors that the colonial rebels of the neighborhood are joining the invaders.

The Pretoria correspondent of The Morning Post wires that a member of the burgher peace committee, whom he interviewed, frankly confessed that there was no hope of many burghers surrendering.

West Point Hazing Inquiry

West Point, Jan. 12.—The congressional committee which is now holding their sessions daily at the West Point academy, ferreting out the details of the alleged causes of the deaths of Cadets Booz and Breth, and making inquiries regarding the practice of hazing at the military institute, has plainly declared that every witness called before it will be made to answer any questions put to him. The committee's work will probably last all through next week, and possibly into the following week, as each witness is to be examined at great length.

Three Railroad Men Killed

Detriot, Jan. 12.—A disastrous collision occurred on the Pere Marquette railway last night near Plymouth, resulting in the death of the engineers of two trains and one fireman and injury to several others. The collision was a head-on affair, between a passenger train and a freight engine. The accident is supposed to be due to a snowstorm.

Lieutenant Whitside Marries

Manzanillo, Jan. 12.—Miss Lilian Rigney, daughter of Joseph Rigney, a planter and sugar manufacturer of this province, was married to Lieutenant Warren W. Whitside, of the Tenth United States cavalry, son of Brigadier General Whitside. Father Daly of St. Patrick's cathedral, New York city, performed the ceremony.

Quay Confident of Election

Harrisburg, Jan. 12.—M. S. Quay returned yesterday afternoon from Washington with Senator Penrose, and will remain in Harrisburg until after the senate and house ballot separately on Tuesday for United States senator. Mr. Quay repeats his previous declaration that he will be elected on the first ballot.

Robbed Brewery of $16,000

New York, Jan. 12.—Arthur Friebel, the entry clerk of the George Ringler Brewing company, was held in $2000 bail for the grand jury yesterday on the charge of embezzlement from the company. The attorneys for President Jetter declare that the shortage will approach $16,000.

Bryan Indicted For Murder

Philadelphia, Jan. 12.—The grand jury yesterday indicted Robert Bryan for the murder of Father Riegel, the priest whose death occurred after "knockout drops" had been given him. Bryan is now in prison in New York, awaiting the arriwal of requisition papers.

Good Afternoon.

There are in Massachusetts 135 cities and towns with a population of over 3,000. Twenty-eight of these have doubled since 1880, and Quincy is one of the number; her population in 1880 being 10,570, the same as Weymouth; in 1890 it was 16,711; and in 1900 reached 23,899. The 38 cities and towns which have doubled are Quincy; Amesbury, from 3,355 to 9,473; Arlington, from 4,100 to 8,603; Belmont, from 1,615 to 3,929; Brockton, from 13,608 to 40,063; Brookline, from 8,057 to 19,935; Dracut, from 1,595 to 3,253; Everett, from 4,159 to 24,335; Fall River, from 48,961 to 104,863; Fitchburg, from 12,429 to 31,531; Gardner, from 4,988 to 10,813; Haverhill, from 18,472 to 37,175; Holyoke, from 21,915 to 45,712; Leominster, from 5,772 to 12,392; Ludlow, from 1,526 to 3,536; Malden, from 12,017 to 33,664; Medford, from 7,573 to 18,244; Melrose, from 4,560 to 12,962; Milton, from 3,206 to 6,578 New Bedford, from 26,845 to 62,442; North Adams, from 10,191 to 24,200; Norwood, from 2,345 to 5,480; Revere, from 2,263 to 10,395; Somerville, from 24,933 to 61,643; Waltham, from 11,712 to 23,481; Whitman, 3,024 to 6,155; Winthrop, from 1,043 to 8,058; Worcester, from 58,291 to 118,421. It will be noticed that many of the cities and large towns, including Boston, are not in the list.

The Randolph Register has good news, and it is right in its assumption that Quincy will be pleased. The Register says: "It seems that the electric lines now known as the Brockton Street Railway are likely to be changed and known as the Old Colony Street Railway, which name will suit Quincy, and cities and towns along the route. Brockton does not like it, and that is not strange. As the name has not been changed, but little can be said about it. More may be expected hereafter."

How many people broke their good resolutions last evening? So many had id: "I have made a few resolutions for the new year and century, and intend to stand firmly by them." But many were helpless to stand firm last night—Slippery, "don't you know."

Drift of Opinion.

☞ A really great man is one who is ever ready to say that he knows very little. He is willing to wait, study and investigate before handing in his verdict. He is slow at reaching conclusions and still slower in condemning motives or ideas.—Uncle Tim.

☞ The newspapers are giving more space to young Vanderbilt, who drives horses, than they are to all the wars and discoveries in the world. The present instance only shows to what lengths the "truly democratic" American goes in his Chinese-like worship of the power of gold.—Brockton Enterprise.

☞ Hon. E. Moody Boynton has filed a petition for the further extension of the time for beginning the work of contracting the Boston, Quincy and Fall River bicycle railway. It will be safe enough to give him the balance for the twentieth century.—Lynn Item.

Nothing can disturb the optimism and equanimity of the West Newbury man eloquent. Colonel Sellers must retire to the background when Moody's schemes are to be considered. By all means let the great and general court give him all the time he wants for any project his brain conceives.—Haverhill Gazette.

☞ We may blunder here in legislation, but the American people and the economic forces which underlie all are carrying us forward to the economic supremacy of the world. It is a great position, but dazzled by its splendor, do not forget its perils. It carries its dangers with it, and I want to see the United States always prepared to meet those dangers. We have no quarrel with any nation, and I hope we have none. I see none who would wish to attack us, yet I wish to see the United States so prepared that under these new conditions she always will be safe by sea and by land.—Senator Lodge in the senate.

☞ When we see members of the police force in Boston, who have never been injured in the course of their duty, who have had 20 and 30 years' good work at good pay, retiring on a pension that gives them more than many a person who is assessed to help pay the pension earns and when these same retiring policemen hold blocks of real estate valued at $30,000, we are inclined to balk at a law that makes this possible, and claim that it is an injustice. There is no right or reason in a pension bill for the members of the police forces of the cities of this state and every legislator should set his face against it, even though by so doing he may sacrifice his name for being a good fellow in the circles where police influence is the most to be felt.—Newburyport News.

☞ Those cities, says the Springfield Republican, that contemplate the use of asphalt paving would de well to seek the advice of Hartford and other cities that have tried it extensively. They might gain some good information also from Albany, N. Y., which has about three miles of one continuous asphalt failure on its handsomest avenue. A brisk municpal fight is in progress over asphalt at Council Bluffs, Ia., and brick paving seems likely to win in spite of the vigorous lobbying of the asphalt people. Columbus, O., is demanding a 15-year guaranty of its asphalt. If Albany had done this it would not be in the plight it now is.—Brockton Enterprise.

SHEPPARD HOUSE CHAIRMAN

Of the Important Committee on Election Laws Which will Pass on Single Cross for Ballots.

Speaker Meyers has filled the vacancies on the standing committees of the Legislature and at the head of the list is Representative Eben W. Sheppard of Quincy who is appointed House chairman of the Committee on Elections. Representative Bradlee of Milton will also serve on this committee, which will be called upon to make important changes in the registration laws, the caucus laws, and the election laws. The only other Norfolk county man to get an additional appointment was Representative Bullard of Medway, who will serve on printing.

VARIETY NIGHT.

President Cowe Addresses the City Band Society---A Hat Debate.

The City Band Musical and Literary society meeting on Thursday evening was a "Variety Night," and there certainly was a good deal of it.

The chief feature of the evening was the address of the President, Mr. Alexander Cowe, to the members on the duty they owe to the society so as to make it interesting to all.

To fill out the remainder of the evening it was voted to have an extempore debate, or what is termed a hat night. The slip of paper drawn which created most debate was: "What do you think of Carey's ice bill?" All who spoke were in favor of it becoming a law (if) it could be kept out of politics, and run in the interests of the people. Because the ice business as conducted by the city of Boston is no criterion that the principle is wrong.

Jan. 17th the subject will be, "The Public Schools" by Miss Mabel Adams and Supt. Frank E. Parlin. The subject is one which both are well able to speak on, and there is no doubt a good deal can be learned from them.

Visitors are always welcome, and it is hoped there will be a large attendance as we are all interested in the public schools. Also that many ladies will be present.

—In the old Colonial days Boston had an "intelligence office," which was also a slave market, as appears from a notice published in February, 1770:—"The intelligence office opposite the Golden Ball lately kept by Benjamin Leigh, is now kept by Grant Webster. There is to be sold at said office West India and New England rum, wines of several sorts, male and female negroes, several second-hand chairs," etc.

February First Ball.

It is suggested that the name "Ball" is a misnomer for the February first function at Music hall to which so many Quincy people are looking forward. While every provision will be made for the pleasure of the dancers, the presence of older people and those who will contribute to the sociability of the occasion chiefly by interchange of courtesy and friendly converse is especially desired. The gaiety, animation and pretty gowns of the young people are always such an attractive element that older people are too apt to forget what they themselves can and ought to contribute to our American social life—lending it a dignity and interest which none are quicker to appreciate than young people of intelligence and social experience.

It is hoped that young and old will unite to make the February first ball in every way a success and a credit to the community of Quincy. This year the stage will not as has heretofore be given up to the musicians, but is to be arranged with simple decorations and furnishings of rugs, chairs, etc., and a small table from which coffee will be served—as a place retired from the music and movement on the floor, where quiet conversation and unobstructed view of the dancing will be possible.

☞ Mr. Lease having signified his willingness to allow his spouse, Mary E., a divorce, that lady has now exercised a woman's privilege and changed her mind. Mr. Lease's readiness to comply with her wishes is a striking example of his utter want of tact. Had he opposed her the law would have made the mismated pair two in short order.—Haverhill Gazette.

—The most valuable stock in the world is said to be that of the London New River company. There are but seventy-two original shares, and one these sold recently for $625,000.

A Swede, who has since been adjudged insane, had considerable fun with several business men in City Square of late. He would go in and make large purchases, making the proprietors smile. Later they found out that the man was wrong in his upper story, and the smile vanished. In one place he bargained for nearly $400 of furniture which the owner still has for sale.

Midnight Search.

One night last week a rough looking man stopped at the house of Mrs. Robinson, of Norfolk Downs, at 12 30 A. M., and rang the bell repeatedly. Mrs. Robinson was alone, Mr. Robinson being a traveling man, but she answered the bell. The tramp inquired for the whereabouts of several people, but Mrs. Robinson professed ignorance on the subject. The man has visited several houses in the Downs on this same errand.

A number of Quincy people have received invitations to attend the annual banquet of the Y. M. C. A., of Massachusetts and Rhode Island, at the Vendome, Boston, next Tuesday evening.

The renovation of the club rooms in the old house house at Quincy Point have been completed, and the members are able once more to enjoy the privileges of the rooms.

Everybody remarks that the new fence along the C. H. Porter property on Hancock street is a good thing and should have been built long ago.

Criminal business at the district court has been unusally quiet thus far this year. This may be because the New Year's resolutions have not been broken as yet.

The rain that fell early Friday evening froze as fast as it fell, covering the street railway tracks and trolley wire with a coating of ice. This caused the cars to move with difficulty and it was therefore not to be wondered at that they were off time.

THE COMING WARD

Demand for Houses Greater than the Supply.

Need of Enterprise in Erecting Houses.

A Large Increase of Voters Probable This Year.

Boarding places at Quincy Point and Neck are in great demand. There are several places where meals can be obtained, but when it comes to rooms they are as scarce as gold dollars. The rooms in the new building about completed at the corner of Washington and Chubbuck street, are all spoken for. The demand, however, is great, and unless the enterprising men of Quincy get a move on themselves many of those who would prefer to locate in Quincy will find room and board in Weymouth or Braintree and once located it will be hard to get them to change.

The new plant of the Fore River Engine Co., at Quincy Neck, has been a settled fact long enough for people seeking an investment to put up a lot of houses. The fact remains however, that while the real estate agents are doing a great deal of running about, but comparatively few new houses have been built. The only apparent reason for this is that owners of property want to get rich too fast, and while they will not build themselves they have placed the value on their land so high that an ordinary speculator will not touch it.

There is no question but what Ward Two will become the growing ward, and politicians have already begun to size up the new citizens locating there. The voting lists next fall will doubtless be very much increased. It might not be a bad idea when the City Council divides Ward One into two voting precincts to include Ward Two at the same time and divide that.

The school house question in this ward is but little heard of now, but will be prominent when the new City Council get at it. To many it seems that neither of the two lots mentioned are the proper ones and that the buildings should be erected somewhere near North street. There are few children now of school age between North street and the Quincy Point bridge, but there are hundreds west of North street and along South street. Quincy Neck is expected to furnish many school children in the future and for them North street would be fully as handy as the present location or the Packard lot. However this matter will get another airing before the City Council in the near future.

Reception at Wollaston.

We are just advised of the New Year's reception tendered by the Rev. Mr. Pratt and his wife of the Wollaston Unitarian church to their parishioners.

This reception which was largely attended was something of an innovation, Mr. Pratt's house being rather small, the people were invited in sections of an hour each everyone being much pleased with the novel idea.

Mrs. Fay and Mrs. Armstrong poured in the afternoon, Mrs. Walter E. Simmons and Mrs. Chandler Smith from 7 to 9 and Mrs. Frank P. Waterhouse and Mrs. Charles K. Crane from 9 to 10.30.

During the afternoon and evening musical selections were rendered by Misses Eugenia Hatch and Zanetta Sprague, and the closing entertainment was a humorous scene from the "Hunchback" given by Mrs. Herbert J. Gurney.

This reception marks the end of the first year of Mr. Pratt's pastorate and the large number in attendance indicates the vigorous social and religious condition of the church.

MAY IRWIN'S SCHEME.

Jolly Comedienne Going to Build a Model Home For Bachelors.

"I'm going to turn philanthropist and make a lot of money," said Miss May Irwin to a New York World reporter the other afternoon. "I think it can be done easily enough. I'm going to build a bachelor apartment house that will make life one grand, sweet song for the single man who pays his bills regularly.

"It will be the newest and the best bachelor apartment house in the world. I don't say it will be the most gorgeous, for I'm not going to spend more than $150,000 on the building, but it will surely be the most comfortable place on Manhattan Island.

"Are you a bachelor? No? Well, you were? Yes? And you remember? Of course. All the discomforts and annoyances are going to vanish in thin air. The house will be a perfect marvel of home comforts. I'm going to keep my eye on it.

"My home at 155 West Forty-fourth street struck me as a pretty good place to begin operations. I paid $35,000 cash recently for the property at 156 West Forty-fifth street, so I own a broad strip of land right through the block, with two houses on it. The architect is preparing plans and drawings for a big modern house, to run from street to street. It will be divided into suits of two, three and four rooms.

"The elevators will run all night. The closets will be enormous. Don't tell me that women are the only genuine closet fiends. Your modern bachelor with two dozen outfits needs a good, big room to keep his clothes in. And the tubs—um-m-m—big enough to swim in.

"Then there will be a special valet service. I don't mean that a sad eyed man will scorch your trousers and iron off your buttons and waylay you for tips with the air of one of Fox's martyrs. This will be the real thing.

"The apartments won't have any restaurant or general dining room, but it will be possible to have a good, dainty breakfast served in your rooms at a reasonable price.

"Now, is this philanthropy or isn't it? And there's much money in it."

NEW CENTURY WOMAN.

She Is Much More Fortunate Than Were Any of Her Predecessors.

"We are twentieth century women at last, with the dower of privilege and responsibility which enriches woman in this wonderful era, and I have no hesitation in declaring that we are more fortunate than any of our predecessors," writes Margaret E. Sangster in the January Ladies' Home Journal. "Our grandmothers and great-grandmothers were handicapped in their girlhood by a thousand prejudices and cast iron traditional rules from which we are emancipated.

"They had neither our wide field of activity nor our possibility of thorough preparation for life. They had not our strong health nor our immunity from nervous irritation. The heroines of the past took cold if exposed to a shower. They could not walk over a frosty meadow because of their thin kid shoes and came into the house muddy and bedraggled after a morning's tramp which we would take without the slightest inconvenience in our short skirts and thick boots."

Jenny Lind Letters Found.

A large number of letters from Jenny Lind, according to the London News, have just been discovered in Rome, written to a lady friend resident in Italy and covering a period of 30 years, from 1845 to 1874. It is said that there are more than a hundred in all and are in the most intimate and unconventional terms, giving the great prima donna's candid opinion of much of the music and many of the musicians of her time. The letters have been purchased by an Italian publisher, who proposes to issue them to the world very shortly. It is hoped, however, that they will be judiciously edited. It will add a new terror to life if private letters, never intended for the public and probably written with a freedom adopted only in correspondence with an intimate friend, can be printed without suitable revision. In England it is assumed the copyright would be with the deceased singer's executor—namely, her husband, Mr. Otto Goldschmidt.

Dr. Sheldon Hopeful of New Century.

At a union watch meeting of church people in Topeka the other night sentiments were expressed about the twentieth century outlook, says the New York World. The Rev. Charles M. Sheldon, author of "In His Steps," said that the twentieth century would be a century of reform. "It will see," he declared, "the union of Christendom, the greatest hope. At no time in the history of the world was Jesus Christ more respected than now."

NEW HOUSES FOR SALE.

Just to remind you that I have another lot of houses nearly completed, I will list these three bargains:

Many were disappointed on the last lot so be on hand early if you would be in it.

Also, one of eight rooms and bath, Independence avenue; all modern improvements, bounds on two streets, can sell for $500 less than real value. This house is of the popular size to suit any business man, and is very roomy and convenient. I don't like to have other builders know how I am cutting prices, but $3,000 buys this one, look at it and compare with others you see building.

Another, and a money maker for some one with only an ounce of pluck. This is a two-family House, 5 rooms and bath each, and 60 foot lot, $3 000. Pay in $500 on this and I will guarantee you a twenty five per cent. investment for one year; who would dare invest in a twenty-five per cent. GUARANTEED investment.

Remember these houses are built by competent workmen, by the day, of the best material, and are personally superintended by the owner, are but four minutes to station, electrics pass, and everything is most desirable as a residential section. All houses are connected with sewer and cellars are perfectly dry.

Come and look them over and select one that suits you. Can be seen any day.

NOTICE TO PARENTS.

CITY OF QUINCY.

CITY CLERK'S Office, Dec. 31, 1900.

THE Record of birth in any city or town is always more or less unsatisfactory, owing to the fact that the canvasser finds difficulty in getting the necessary information. Names and dates are frequently given incorrectly. The importance of accuracy is shown in many cases where there is a question of descent, or inheritance of property, or collection of life insurance or pensions. The City Clerk's copy of the record is accepted as conclusive evidence in a court of law. While great pains are taken by this office to have the record correct experience shows that it is necessary that parents themselves should lend their assistance. In fact, the law requires that parents shall give notice to the City Clerk of the birth of their children, and provides a penalty for neglect to give such notice for the space of 40 days.

It often happens that only children or servants are at home when the canvasser makes his call, and the answers to his questions are open to doubt. I therefore request all parents in whose household a birth has occurred in the year 1900, to place upon a paper or card the required information, and keep it in a convenient place until the canvasser appears.

The canvasser will begin on Jan. 1, 1901.

ARMY BILL ARGUMENT

Hinges on Discretionary Power of the President

PLATT IS IN FAVOR OF IT

While Bacon Regards It as Productive of One Man Power—Hoar's Proposal Receives Its Quietus—Passage of Reapportionment Bill

Washington, Jan. 12.—Only 17 senators appeared on the floor at the opening of yesterday's session of the senate. The prevailing epidemic of grip and the inclement weather accounted for the absence of many senators. After settling down to business, a vigorous attack was made upon that portion of the army reorganization bill which confers upon the president discretionary power to increase the strength of the army to the maximum limit fixed by the bill. Mr. Bacon of Georgia and Mr. Platt of Connecticut made the principal speeches.

Mr. Bacon said he did not believe the president should have discretionary power to regulate the size of the army.

Mr. Platt said he had none of the fear that seemed to worry some senators as to the increase of the army to 100,000 men. Such an army could do the country no harm, and it could not be considered a menace. He feared the pending bill did not confer upon the president authority to increase the army from 58,000 to 100,000 at any time. That power, he thought, ought to be conferred upon the president, who ought to be regarded as conscientious, able and patriotic man.

Replying to Mr. Platt, Mr. Bacon said he thought the country had fallen upon an evil day when a senator could rise in this chamber and express views which he regarded as dangerous to the liberties of the people and productive of one man power, and it was an evil truly when the senator reflected the attitude of the dominant party.

"The passage of the bill," declared the Georgia senator, "will mark an epoch in the United States. It is the evident purpose of the bill to eliminate for all time the volunteer system from the military establishment of the country, and create for all time a great standing army. The issue is not to be evaded. Shall it be in the future the province of the president to raise armies or shall that be the province of congress? I would rather see the party I belong to condemned to universal and never-ending banishment from political power than to see such an authorization of power upon the statute books."

Mr. Hoar expressed the opinion that an army of 100,000 at present would not make the executive more formidable than he was made by an army of 25,000 when that limit was fixed. He did not regard an army of 100,000 as a menace, as that number, in his judgment, was far within the limit of domestic safety to liberty. The bill, in addition, authorized the president to reduce the number of the army still lower, but on account of the use to be made of that army he would have to vote against the bill.

Mr. Hoar formally offered the amendment of which he had heretofore given notice, providing that no further military force shall be used in the Philippine islands, except such as may be necessary to keep order in places in the peaceable possession of the United States, etc.

Mr. Carter moved that the amendment be laid on the table. The motion prevailed, 32 to 19.

Just before adjournment, Mr. Carter called up the bill apportioning the representatives of the United States among the several states. Without debate, it was passed precisely as it came from the house. It now goes to the president for his signature.

Not since the Fifty-first congress has the house passed as many private pension bills at a single sitting as it did yesterday. In all 170 special pension bills were passed. The most important was one to increase the pension of General Americus V. Rice from $36 to $100. General Rice made a gallant record during the rebellion. The senate had passed a bill to increase his pension to $60, and the house raised the amount to $100.

For Philippines Naval Station

Washington, Jan. 12.—The board of officers convened to select the most suitable site in the Philippines for a permanent naval station has fixed upon Olangapo, on Subig Bay. As a result of this recommendation, Mr. Long has sent to congress a recommendation that $1,000,000 be appropriated for beginning work on the proposed new naval station.

Cruiser Will Preserve Order

Washington, Jan. 12.—The navy department has been informed of the departure of the cruiser Philadelphia yesterday from Puerto Viejo, Salvador, for the port of Panama. The recent reports of renewed disquiet among the revolutionists in Colombia make the appearance of a United States vessel at Panama a timely event.

President Continues to Improve

Washington, Jan. 12.—The president continues to improve, and no fever or other unfavorable conditions have appeared. If the present rate of improvement continues, there is no doubt but he will be permitted to leave his bed early in the coming week.

Diamonds in British Guiana

Kingston, Jam., Jan. 12.—Advices from Demerara reports large finds of diamonds in the interior of British Guiana. A company has been formed in England to work the claims.

WEEKLY TRADE REVIEW

Satisfactory Conditions, With the Exception of Textile Industries

New York, Jan. 12.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s weekly review of trade says: Only in the textiles is special hesitation shown. Staple products are firm, iron and steel prices are held without trouble boots and shoes and wool are steady, and all with fair demand, so that manufacturers are busy. In textiles, however, the improvement which seemed to be promised with the new year is still delayed, and in cotton goods stocks are growing in some quarters, though still not oppressively heavy anywhere.

Throughout the country distribution of merchandise continues on a good scale, and collections are unusually prompt. January opens with an increase of 10.2 percent over last year in railroad earnings thus far reported.

Construction of bridges and buildings crowds the capacity of all concerns making structural shapes of iron and steel. Orders for locomotives, cars, rails and all forms of railway equipment are also abundant, and there is no sign of reaction in the industry. Plate and sheet mills have large business, and merchant steel is in brisk demand.

Investment of Wall street capital was rumored as supporting cotton and wheat, but the effect was not permanent. Cotton advanced temporarily, only to react when Liverpool cables failed to respond. Meanwhile port receipts continue to largely exceed last year's figures, at prices 30 percent higher. Wheat was agitated by reports of a corner in the May option, and for a time exhibited strength. A sharp reaction followed, holders parting readily with their contracts.

Wool has ceased to decline. Manufacturers purchase with extreme caution, and domestic fleeces suffer by increased competition of cheap wool from Australia and China.

Makers of boots and shoes insist on full prices, and as a result shipments from Boston have declined 5450 cases for the week. Sales of leather increase, with hemlock sole fairly held, although concessions are made in upper stock. Heavy union backs are scarce.

Failures for the year were 324 in the United States, against 274 last year.

Chancellor MacCracken Objects

New York, Jan. 12.—Chancellor MacCracken of the New York university declined to allow the students of the university to participate in the inaugural parade in Washington on March 4. Among other reasons Chancellor MacCracken says that "the 1800 young men of New York university can serve the United States far more effectively at less expense of time, muscle and money, than by merely appearing in an inauguration demonstration. The quiet students cannot shine amid the gold lace and feathers of military pomp. It is better for them to choose their own field in which to pay honor to the chief magistrate of the country and to the grandeur of our nation. I trust the universities in the country will continue to stand for a noble economy of time, talent and money, in the future as in the past, and that the nation's government will be leavened by their influence."

Trying to Win Over Insurgents

Manila, Jan. 12.—The civil officers of several towns in Zambalee province have signed an ultimatum, notifying the insurgents that they will be paid 30 pesos for rifles and liberated if they agree to keep quiet, and announcing that if the insurgents do not return to their homes by Jan. 30 they will be considered enemies of their people, who will then assist the Americans to pursue them.

The Grip Is Spreading

New York, Jan. 12.—The epidemic of grip now raging throughout Greater New York has been favored by weather conditions. An idea of the extent of the sickness is furnished by the fact that 420 members of the police force are off duty on account of sickness. Unless there is a marked change for the better, it may be necessary to use the armories for hospital purposes.

Howard's Relatives to Testify

New York, Jan. 12.—Miss Howard of Boston, a sister of George W. Howard the alleged bigamist, and her brother, John Howard, who lives in New York, were taken before the grand jury yesterday. The nature of their testimony was not learned. Later the district attorney served them with subpoenaes to appear at the trial of Howard, which has been set for Jan. 22.

Possible Carrying Out of Threats

Omaha, Jan. 12.—A small blaze occurred in the basement of E. A. Cudahy's mansion last night. An investigation is in progress, the expectation being that the fire will be proven of incendiary origin. The threats received by Mr. Cudahy through the mails since the abduction of his son are the basis for the belief as to incendiarism.

Rathbone's Property Worth $156,650

Hamilton, O., Jan. 12.—The property of Estes C. Rathbone, formerly director of posts in Cuba, which is to be re-sold, was re-appraised yesterday, the total valuation being fixed at $156,650. The property was recently sold for $113,000. An offer considerably in excess of this price has been made for the property.

Weather Conditions and Forecast

Almanac, Sunday, Jan. 13.
Sun rises—7:12; sets, 4:34.
Moon rises—12:39 a. m.
High water—5:15 a. m.; 5:30 p. m.

The disturbance has slightly increased in energy, and is central over southeastern Virginia; another disturbance is central over the Canadian northwest. Snows have fallen in New England and will continue, with brisk to high northeasterly winds, shifting to northwesterly on the coast. Storm warnings are displayed from Hatteras to Eastport.

MATRON AND MAID.

Mrs. Jane Elizabeth Waggoner died at Lockhaven, Pa., recently of paralysis, aged 70 years. She was the great-great-granddaughter of John Quincy Adams.

Mme. Sanson's granddaughter of the composer Boieldieu has bequeathed her country estate and 900,000 francs to establish a retreat for musicians and men of letters.

Mrs. Agnes Adams of Racine, Wis., who is in poor circumstances, has been notified that she is heiress to the estate of her deceased brother in London, estimated at $500,000.

Mme. Jean Pommerol, the French explorer, is about to start on another expedition. This time she will penetrate the Sahara and write a book about the customs of the natives.

Angela Anderson, the young pianist who recently returned from Paris, is a niece of E. Ellery Anderson of New York and a great-granddaughter of Da Ponte, who wrote the text of "Don Giovanni" and other Mozart operas.

The year 1900 would have been Mary Anderson's "silver" year as an actress had she remained in active service in the profession. Her first appearance was made on Nov. 27, 1875, in Louisville in the character of Juliet.

A portrait of Mrs. Lon V. Stephens has been hung in the executive mansion at Jefferson City, Mo. Portraits of former governors are there in plenty, but there were none of their wives or female relatives, so that Mrs. Stephens' is the first to be hung there.

Mrs. Blanche Ellen Burlingame of Chicago, a descendant of the aristocracy of England, Ireland and France, says she has just inherited $5,000,000 from her uncle, Sir Martin Cary, one of the wealthiest and most philanthropic lords of western Ireland.

Mrs. L. M. N. Stevens, the re elected president of the W. C. T. U., is a native of Denver and began her work as a teacher of that city. She met Miss Willard at Old Orchard in 1875, and from the friendship which then begun sprung her interest in temperance work.

Mrs. Caroline Clark Quantrell, mother of the famous guerrilla Quantrell, has been sent to the state Odd Fellows' home at Springfield, O. She has drifted about among poorhouses, and finally the Ohio grand lodge of Odd Fellows took the matter up and had her provided for.

Rosamond Rodkinson, a native of Vienna, only 24 years of age, is assisting her father, Dr. Michael L. Rodkinson, to give the world the first complete translation of the Babylonian Talmud ever prepared. Miss Rodkinson is said to be the only woman living who has a thorough knowledge of the Talmud.

THE PAST CENTURY.

When the wars of the closing years of the past century are mentioned, it must not be forgotten that during the same period arbitration has taken the place of war in several notable instances, among them those of Venezuela, Portuguese East Africa and Brazil.—Kansas City Star.

At the beginning of the past century the English language was spoken by 21,000,000 people, and now it is spoken by 130,000,000. Moreover, nearly three-fifths, or considerably more than half of the whole number, speak it to the music of the American Union.—New York Mail and Express.

Barge Had Too Large a Freight

Pittsburg, Jan. 12.—Twenty-six men were precipitated into the Monongahela river while loading a barge with steel rails at Braddock. Two men were drowned, and another injured so badly that he died a short time later. The accident was cause by the collapsing of the barge, owing to the heavy cargo.

Castle Square Theatre.

An elaborate production of Steele Mackaye's drama "Paul Kauvar," is to be the attraction at the Castle Square theatre the coming week and a most enjoyable presentation of this notable play can be safely anticipated. The period of the action, the days of the French revolution, has been dealt with by the author of the drama in a most realistic fashion and he has used the two characters about which the action moves, Paul Kauvar and Diane de Beaumont, with tact and discretion bringing out their characteristics in a most facinating way and making them to awaken ennobling thoughts in all who see the play. The scenic surroundings will be in keeping with the reputation of this theatre in this class of productions and fully one hundred extra people will be introduced in the groupings and tableaux. The principal characters have been assigned as follows: Paul Kauvar, John Craig; Honore Albert Maxime, J. L. Seeley; Marquis de Vaux, Edmund Breese; General Delaroche, Charles Mackay; General Kleterre, Lindsay Morison; Colonel La Hogue, Edward Wade; Diane de Beaumont, Lillian Lawrence; Nanette, Leonora Gnito. The usual distribution of boxes of choice chocolate bonbons will be made at the Monday matince.

Keith's Theatre,

The programmes at Keith's are of such even excellence nowadays that no one of them can be truthfully said to take precedence of another. Among the entertainers who will appear the week commencing Monday, Jan. 14, are the following: Mlle. Lotty, one of the most beautiful and graceful French women who has ever been seen in this country, in a series of poses plastique, with elaborate light, color and figure effects; Davenport brothers, acrobatic comedians and burlesque bag punchers, in a novel and laughable act; the celebrated Todd-Judge family of acrobats, in a wonderful exhibition of tumbling, equilibristic feats, etc.; Max Ritter, blackface humorist, singer and dancer, and Latina, a wonderful contortionists.

Good Boys

Are the bad boys very often. The boy that's good for anything is generally pugnacious. He's a healthy animal, and the healthy animal will always fight for his rights.

When a boy shuns the rough sports of his companions he is apt to be a weakling, and to be conscious of the fact.

A TARGET For 10,000 Eyes.

Of course you do not want to be a target yourself, but not so with your "Ad." You want it seen. An "Ad." in the Ledger will be a daily target for over Ten Thousand Eyes.

If you can attract the eyes of over 5,000 people, day after day; know that you're reaching intelligent, thoughtful people who have money to spend, there is no question but an "Ad" in the Daily Ledger is money well expended and in fact indispensible, especially at the Holiday season.

An "Ad" in Ledger does more than attract, it holds the attention of the shopper.

DANIEL WEBSTER

said the most inspiring words ever spoken to him came from a farmer, after his greatest speech: "You never did your best yet!" This didn't mean that Webster was weak; it meant that he had never used the power that was in him. When we criticize your methods we don't mean that they are weak. We mean that you are not getting the most possible out of your business. Experience has proved that advertising pays. Resolve to be a big advertiser in 1901, and increase your business. Better still; begin now and get the Holiday Trade.

While the Warships Are Building

The Daily Ledger hopes to become the Target for 20,000 Eyes. The publishers have improvements constantly in mind, and with the encouragement of Quincy people will print as large and newsy a daily as they are willing to support.

MOSQUITOES AND FEVER

Significant "Yellow Jack" Tests Made Near Havana.

SOME DANGEROUS RISKS TAKEN.

Dreaded Disease Certainly Conveyed by Mosquitoes—A Question Whether This Means of Contagion Is the Only One—Female Insect the Mischief Maker—Verification of Details.

Between the still incomplete sanitary conditions of Havana, the exasperating and distinctly useless delay in the sewering and paving matter, the bacillus icteroides of Sanarelli, and plain everyday mosquito, it looks like a long life and a merry one for the yellow fever germ in the city of Havana.

But el Senor Mosquito is just now receiving some very close and interesting attention, writes Albert G. Robinson, the New York Post's Havana correspondent. Perhaps it would be more accurate to say la Senora Mosquito, as it is said to be madame who is the mischief maker. Under the auspices of Drs. Finlay, Reed, Stark and others, a series of profoundly interesting and important experiments are in operation on the outskirts of Havana. Men have been found who are willing to risk comfort and life in the furtherance of these investigations. One group is domiciled in a room which is kept in the best of clean and wholesome conditions. These allow themselves to be bitten by mosquitoes that are practically known to be in the special condition requisite for inoculation. They are known to have drawn the blood of patients ill with unquestionable cases of yellow fever. The other group is held under the most insanitary of conditions, in contact with clothes and bedding which have been used by known cases of fever.

The latter group has persisted in retaining a state of sound health. Deduced argument—yellow fever is not contagious, is not a result of insanitary conditions and is not communicated through the medium of clothes, bedding or other attendants upon yellow fever sickrooms. The other group—that of the mosquito inoculation—has developed in all of its members an illness asserted to be yellow fever. Deduced argument—yellow fever is only communicable through the medium of female mosquitoes of certain species and under certain conditions.

It is beyond doubt or question that these experiments are of great importance and that the result is significant if not determinate. The gentlemen conducting the experiments are, with ample reason, most highly gratified with the results attained, though possibly unduly sanguine, regarding the definiteness of their conclusions. Without desiring to detract in any way from the remarkable work and its seemingly remarkable success, it is to be noted that there is a lack of completeness about the tests. It may now be regarded as well determined that the mosquito can and does convey yellow fever. A doubt still remains as to its being the only medium of communication.

The theory that it is the only medium finds contradiction in various facts which are known in the history of the disease. For instance, several nonimmune nurses in the principal fever hospital here (Las Animas) have escaped the disease, though it is a fair presumption that they must have been mosquito bitten during their experience. One of these nurses left the hospital to nurse a case in an infected house, took the disease there and died. In this connection it is to be noted that the subjects who were exposed to contagion from clothing, bedding, etc., were in a building which was not infected.

It is the contention of many competent authorities who concede the mosquito as a medium that infected premises are also a medium, though clothing and generally insanitary conditions are not necessarily so. A more acceptable determination might be obtained by the exposure of nonimmune subjects to similar insanitary conditions in some house known to be infected from which mosquitoes were absolutely excluded.

A more definite determination of the force of the mosquito theory might also be attained by the transportation of properly loaded mosquitoes to some vicinity where yellow fever from any other source was a manifest impossibility, and there allowing them access to proper subjects. There are a number of objections to Havana as a point for the unquestionable determination of the matter. While the findings of even these recent tests are still to be regarded as somewhat negative rather than absolutely positive it is not to be questioned that results of immeasurable value have been obtained. The work has the fullest support of the authorities and medical officials, and will be continued. The reliance placed upon these experiments by the local authorities is indicated by the issuance of the following order:

"The chief surgeon of the department having reported that it is now well established that malaria, yellow fever, and filarial infection are transmitted by the bites of mosquitoes, the following precautions will, upon his recommendation, be taken for the protection of the troops against the bites of these insects:

"First.—The universal use of mosquito bars in all barracks, and especially in all hospitals, and also in field service when practicable.

"Second.—The destruction of the larvæ or young mosquitoes, commonly known as 'wiggle tails' or 'wigglers,' by the use or petroleum on the water where they breed.

"The mosquito does not fly far, and seeks shelter when the wind blows; so it is usually the case that each community breeds its own supply of mosquitoes in water barrels, fire buckets, postholes, old cans, cesspools, or undrained puddles. An application of one ounce of kerosene to each 15 square feet of water, twice a month, will destroy not only all the young, but the adult females who come to lay their eggs. The water in cisterns or tanks is not affected for drinking or washing purposes by this application, if only it is drawn from below and not dipped out.

"For pools or puddles of a somewhat permanent character, draining or filling up is the best remedy. The medical department will furnish oil for the purpose above mentioned."

GREAT HONORS FOR BOBS.

Highest British Order of Knighthood Conferred on Lord Roberts.

The coferring of the Order of the Garter on Lord Roberts by Queen Victoria is a far higher honor than his elevation to the earldom, says the New York Times. The Garter is the most ancient and highly prized of all the British orders, and the number of persons who can hold it is strictly limited by law. The majority of the holders consist of reigning sovereigns and members of the English royal family. The rest of the orders are divided among the most prominent of the noblemen of the United Kingdom. The late Duke of Argyll and the late Duke of Westminster were both "K. G's.," and it is one of the Garters made available by their deaths that has been conferred on Lord Roberts.

An earldom is the third highest of the British titles to nobility, dukes and marquises taking precedence of earls. The provision that Lord Roberts' new peerage is "with remainder" to his daughters is very rarely made. The technical definition of a "remainder" is a provision for the passage of a patent of nobility to a special successor or line of succession in default of male issue on the decease of a present holder.

In this case the provision means that the title can descend through the female line, and it is evidently designed to mark Queen Victoria's sympathy with Lord Roberts over the loss of his only son, Lieutenant F. H. S. Roberts, who was mortally wounded while gallantly attempting to save the guns at the Tugela river and died on Dec. 17, 1899. Before he died Lieutenant Roberts was recommended for the Victoria cross, and the queen, as a mark of appreciation of the young man's valor and the services rendered by Lord Roberts to his country, took the occasion, when Lady Roberts visited Windsor castle a few days before she sailed for the Cape, to hand her a small parcel, saying:

"Here is something I have tied up with my own hands and that I beg you will not open till you get home."

Lady Roberts found that the parcel contained the Victoria cross won by her dead son.

Genuine Indian Corn.

G. W. Dean, one of the state lecturers of farmers' institutes of Illinois, exhibited recently an ear of corn which was raised in 1900 from seed recently found in a piece of pottery in an Indian grave in Arkansas and which is supposed to be fully 2,000 years old, writes the Carbondale (Ills.) correspondent of the St. Louis Globe-Democrat. The corn was raised by J. B. Turner of Christian county, Ills. The stalks are 15 feet in height and measure nearly ten feet from the ground to the first ear. The roots are many of them above the ground, and the brace roots strike the ground about four feet from the stalk, making it almost impossible to be blown over by the winds. The kernels are small and in color are a very deep brown.

Thorough Investigation Needed

Baltimore, Jan. 12.—The December grand jury, in its report submitted to Judge Phelps, declares that the female house of refuge is a place of horrors, where inmates are outrageously treated and where the innocent are morally corrupted and ruined. It is recommended that state and city aid be taken from the institution, that the inmates be taken away, and that magistrates be asked not to commit females to the place, pending the founding of a reformatory.

THE WHIRL OF FASHION.

Gowns made entirely of panne velvet are among the winter fancies.

Winter turbans are wide, as a rule, the brim rolling up some inches away from the crown.

It is quite a fad of the winter to have turbans or English walking hats made of velvet, with fur trimmings to match the costume or redingote.

The beautiful crepes de chine in cream, ivory or pearl white or any of the lovely evening tints are greatly favored among fabrics for full dress uses.

Combinations of cloth and corduroy are seen upon a number of the latest Parisian models, designed for walking, traveling and skating costumes.

Velvet costumes made by French ateliers with regular tailor finished skirts are the smartest and most elegant gowns that have appeared this season.

New hats for bridesmaids' wear are formed of white chiffon and ermine fur, with a bunch of shaded roses and a soft white aigret set at one side toward the front of the hat.

So many Russian blouses of baby lamb have been made to wear with skirts of cloth the furriers declare that the tailors and dressmakers have already nearly exhausted their winter supply of the uncut pelts.

Lace as a garniture is still greatly favored, but more in the form of beautiful half yokes at the edge of the low necked bodice or as oddly arranged appliques and insertions, jacket fronts, flat epaulets and revers rather than in full jabots, cascades or gathered ruffles.

Among other elegant creations of French dressmakers are long coats in empire style, formed of the leading shades of finest kid finished cloth, lined with white or very delicate mauve, blue or old rose satin, with standing and cape collars of panne, edged variously with sable, ermine, otter, mink or chinchilla fur.—New York Post.

BRITON AND BOER.

General Buller can point to the present conditions in South Africa to corroborate his declaration that he had a hard time down there.—Indianapolis News.

Every once in awhile something happens which causes one to wonder why emotional persons do not pass resolutions sympathizing with the British rather than the Boers.—Chicago Record.

A revolt on the part of the Cape Dutch at the present time would be a more serious matter to England than if it had occurred a year ago. Have Kitchener's methods brought on this danger?—Pittsburg Dispatch.

In distance and direction it is as if De Wet had moved from Buffalo to the Shenandoah valley, in Virginia, and was now headed for Harrisburg after escaping his foes on the Potomac at Harper's Ferry.—Philadelphia Press.

Lord Salisbury says the war in South Africa must continue until the burghers are whipped. Mr. Kruger says it must continue until his people get their rights. Both sides being willing, there is no apparent reason why the fight should not go on.—Louisville Dispatch.

THE KIDNAPERS.

Had the Cudahy kidnaping been shown on the stage people would have declared that it was too unreal to be believed.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

The kidnapers of young Cudahy should be captured at all costs, not because the boy was the son of a millionaire, but in order to prevent the future kidnaping of any child, rich or poor.—Pittsburg Press.

Unfortunately Nebraska has no statute against kidnaping, and the law against child stealing applies only to children under 10 years of age. That would not fit this case, as young Cudahy was 16 years old.—Rochester Democrat.

The kidnaping of young Cudahy is a matter which calls attention to an exceedingly serious condition of affairs. For some reason or another criminals have become emboldened, and crime of late is distinguished for unusual and shocking brutality.—Baltimore American.

THE JEWEL CASKET.

The pearl rope rides on the very topmost wave in le monde elegant. Where once it measured inches it now threatens to become yards.

A watch of new style appears to be coming in. Not only is the case perfectly flat on both sides, but the edge is also flat, the whole having the form of a thin section of a cylinder.

A new and taking style of collar consists of from three to five plain gold chains held in a bar at either end, while close to the lower edge of each chain are attached at short intervals pendants of garnets, turquoises or pearls.

Scarabs are bigger, more ubiquitous and more popular than ever. They are now introduced into belt buckles, brooches, pendants, rings and fobs and are cut in turquoises, opal and their respective matrices, chrysoprase, coral, agate, jade, amethyst, etc., and, latest of all, chalcedony.—Jewelers' Circular-Weekly.

FLOWER AND TREE.

Humboldt describes an oak tree which he saw in France which was 90 feet in circumference at the base and was estimated to be 2,000 years old.

The potato, hitherto grown as a tuber under ground, is now being produced like fruit from the stem of the plant. The flavor of these potatoes is excellent.

A few years ago there was on a farm near Stuart, Va., an apple tree which produced at one bearing 130 bushels. It shaded at meridian 90 feet of ground in diameter.

Cut flowers will last much longer in water if the stalk is peeled. This is especially true in the case of any shrub plant. Succulent stalks may be split up the ends. This process expedites the absorption of water and keeps the plant fresh.

KITCHEN HELPS.

To cleanse a frying pan pour in a little vinegar, heat it over the fire, and all odors will be removed.

If a saucepan after having milk boiled in it is filled with cold water and a small piece of soda and allowed to boil up the pan will clean quite easily.

Don't thrust dishes that have contained eggs, milk, flour or potato into hot water or turn hot water on them. Why? Because the hot water cooks any of them upon the dish, making it harder to wash off. Rinse off with cold water first.

The everyday expressions used by us are often puzzling to the little tots. A little girl was heard to ask her aunt if ministers always carried their pulpits with them when they went to preach in another church. "Why of course not, dear; where did you get that idea?" "Why, I just heard you reading the Patriot to mamma, a little while ago, and you said, 'Mr. Hardy of Bethany church and Mr. Norton of the Point church were going to exchange pulpits on Sunday."

The South Braintree ice polo team was defeated in a well played game at the Quincy reservoir, this week, by the West Quincy's, the score being 1 to 0. The local team was as follows: Rushers, Ripley and W. Simonds; centre, Joe Dunkerley; half back, C. L. Hollis; goal, John Kelley.

There was great joy manifested by the members of the Braintree club who went to Wollaston Wednesday evening. J. Frank Hobart was the star of the evening, being the first man to lower the colors of Dewson of the Merrymounts, the latter having won every game he has played until he met Mr. Hobart.

About five years ago a club was formed in town called the Batchelor club. The conditions were that when a member married, he should give a turkey supper to the remaining members. As Harry A. Simonds was one of the members, he prepared an up to date banquet, which he gave Thursday evening. Mr. Simonds was fortunate, however, in that Charles R. Richards of this town is the only surviving member of the club.

Another of those excellent concerts of the Pine tree club course under the management of Mr. C. E. Kimball was held in the Town Hall before an appreciative audience. The Myra Churchill Holmes Concert Co. was the attracion consising of Miss Myra C. Holmes, character artiste; Maud Gordon Roby, lyric soprano; Bertha C. Smith, zither soloist; Jennie H. The third rail electrics were handicaped by the storm Friday. As fast as the storm fell it froze, making the rails and trolley wire almost useless for the electrics.

At Wollaston last Wednesday evening the Braintree club contested with the Merrymount club at whist, billiards, bowling and pool. The contests were the most interesting that have thus far been played in the Norfolk County League. A large delegation went down from South Braintree, the chief interest centering in the billiard match between J. Frank Hobart of the Braintrees and Dewson the crack billiardist of the Merrymounts. The game was very closely contested, although at the start Dewson took a good lead, only to be overcome by Hobart who made a Garrison finish and won out by a score of 75 to 71.

GREAT GAME PRESERVE.

Steps to Establish One In the Southwest.

CONGRESS' FINANCIAL AID DESIRED

Proposed to Have a National Organization, With Subleagues In Each State and Territory—Meeting to Be Soon Held—One Suitable Tract of Land Found.

Steadily the hunting grounds of the American sportsman are growing more circumscribed and the game scarcer. While this is especially true of the eastern gunner, even the western sportsman is finding it more and more difficult to satisfy his desire. Fifteen years ago the last of the immense herds of buffalo which roamed the western plains practically disappeared. Today deer are becoming scarcer, mountain sheep have nearly disappeared, and only in remote localities can bears be found in numbers.

Such is the condition that has led to an effort to organize a great association of American sportsmen. Its purposes, as proposed by its projectors in the west, are to secure the enactment and enforcement of laws to protect the game animals from useless slaughter in season and out and to provide for the establishment of a great preserve where can be gathered and protected from the pot hunter enough game to furnish amusement for all true lovers of sport, writes the Phenix (A. T.) correspondent of the New York Sun. To that end a meeting will be called at Denver or Chicago early in the year. It is proposed to have a national organization, with subleagues in each state and territory. The chief difficulty will be in the establishment, stocking and protection of a preserve. It is hoped by the promoters of the plan that the financial aid of congress may be secured. The selection of the site of the preserve will not be easy. Several regions in the Rocky mountains offer certain advantages for such a purpose, but probably no tract large enough could be found there. For several months an investigation has been in progress, and only one suitable tract of land has been found. Along the lower end of the Colorado river and the upper part of the gulf of California lies a long and wide strip of land, partly in Arizona and California, but largely in Mexico, which is admirably suited for the purpose.

Despite its proximity to a well settled region, the land has only recently been carefully explored. A party sent out by the promoters of the preserve plan returned a few days ago from a trip through that country. They say that for 200 miles down the coast, between the lower Colorado on the north and the settlements of Quitovac, Vasura and Alamo on the south, lies a strip that could easily be converted into the finest game country in the world. The land is fairly well watered and by comparatively inexpensive irrigation could be made productive of all the vegetation necessary to the sustenance of great herds of game, while the rough nature of parts of the country would harbor mountain sheep and goats as well as the bear species. Along the Colorado they found large numbers of wild pigs, a large type of the peccary, many deer in the hills and on the smaller streams and ponds enormous flocks of ducks and geese, while grouse and quails are very plentiful. Only the Indians, members of the Seris tribe, and a few Mexican settlers ever hunt there, while in the higher mountains across the Arizona line an occasional party of hunters seek the mountain sheep, which are there to be found in small numbers. Much of the larger game has been driven south by the encroachments of the settlers, while the great flocks of migratory birds resort there on their return from their northern haunts in the winter.

According to statements of members of the party, there is no other place so well adapted to the propagation of the game animals and birds, and their assertions are corroborated by Professor W. J. McGee of the Smithsonian institution, who has just returned from a trip along the coast in an investigation of the Seris Indians. The result of the investigation of the game preserve will be brought before the convention and steps taken to obtain concession from the Mexican government for the use of the strip for a term of years at a nominal rent. At present Mexico is endeavoring in every way to put to use her millions of acres of unoccupied land. She is offering every inducement for colonization and settlement, and it is believed that the desired strip for the game preserve can be obtained at reasonable terms.

Commercialism Gains In Japan.

Japan has a very complete school system, the work mainly of the emperor. There are some 30,000 schools, with 100,000 teachers, in the country. With regard to commercial enterprise a very good sign of the times is that, whereas young men of good and even noble families some years back aspired to serve only in the army, the navy or the government offices, they now incline toward trade, says the London Daily Mail. Many of them come to Europe, chiefly to England, and to the United States to study trade and commerce. The result will be making itself apparent in a few years.

For a Fleet of Peruvian Steamers.

There is a project in Peru to start a line of ships that will connect with San Francisco. The chamber of commerce of Lima is agitating the matter, says the New York Journal. It is proposed to begin with four steamers, costing in all $584,000, for the coasting traffic between Africa and Guayaquil.

Was the Ceremony at the Vanderbilt-French Wedding

EPISCOPAL CHURCH RULES

Followed In the Tying of the Nuptial Knot—Reception at Home of Bride's Mother After the Conclusion of the Religious Function

Newport, R. I., Jan. 14.—Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt and Miss Elsie French were married her today. Never has the city, in winter, at least, had an event of such social importance, and rarely has a wedding in the height of the summer season created so great interest.

ALFRED GWYNNE VANDERBILT.

The prominence of the groom, as head of the younger generation of the Vanderbilt family, and heir of the Cornelius Vanderbilt millions, gave a touch to the ceremony and the attendant festivities, which has made them not only the talk of the city, but of the world at large.

The ceremony took place at noon at the Seabriskie Memorial Church of St. John the Evangelist, in a secluded section of the city, commonly known as the point. The church is a favorite place of worship for many of the summer residents.

The bridal party, as it entered the church, was headed by the vested choir of the church, which sung "Tender and True," as the organist rendered the bridal chours from "Lohengrin." The ushers followed the bridesmaids and maid of honor and the bride and her brother.

ALFRED G. VANDERBILT'S BRIDE.

As the ushers and bridesmaids approached the altar rail they separated, forming on either side, and the bride proceeded to the rail, there meeting the groom, who was accompanied by his brother, Reginald Vanderbilt, as best man.

The ceremony was of a simple character, following the rules of the Protestant Episcopal church. The officiating clergyman was Rev. Charles F. Beattie rector of the church assisted by Rev. George B. Morgan of Christ's church, New Haven.

The nuptial vows were given at the chancel rail before Rev. Mr. Morgan and when these were concluded the groom and bride advanced to the altar, where the local clergyman pronounced them man and wife, the laws of Rhode Island requiring a resident clergyman to perform this important part of the ceremony.

After the ceremony, as the organ pealed forth the "Mendelssohn Wedding March," Mr. and Mrs. Vanderbilt passed down the aisle, followed by their attendants in reverse order from that in which they entered.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the residence of the bride's mother. The guests at the reception included only the members of the immediate family, the bridal party and the more prominent families among the friends of the two families.

The house was more elaborately decorated than the church. Mr. and Mrs. Vanderbilt received congratulations in the drawing room, which was trimmed with a profusion of pink and white roses. The guests were received upon their entrance by Mrs. French, Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, Mrs. General Eaton and Mrs. Harry P. Whitney.

The bridal breakfast was served by Delmonico of New York, and the dining room was embellished with red roses, the bride's table being adorned with white roses.

Death of Edwin G. Walker

Boston, Jan. 14.—Edwin G. Walker died last night, after an illness of several weeks. He was one of the best known colored men in the country. He was a strong advocate of the rights of his race. He was born in Boston in 1833. The anti-slavery agitation was started through David Walker, his father, who a number of years before had escaped from slavery in North Carolina, and made Boston his home. After being engaged in the leather business for a few years, Edwin G. passed the examination for admission to the Suffolk bar. As he progressed in life, his practice increased, and he attained prominence in the courts. In 1866 Mr. Walker was elected to the general court from Charlestown. He had been prominent in some very important events in the history of Boston, and received many local honors. He always believed in the possibilities of his race, if given a fair field.

Rebel Descent Upon Panama

Kingston, Jan. 14.—The British steamer Texan, Captain Lund, from Colon, Colombia, represents that heavy fighting began outside Panama Jan. 10, and continued fiercely throughout Jan. 11, when the rebels were making a desperate attempt to get within the city. The government troops were strongly contesting the advance of the insurgents when the Texan left. Captain Lund says the losses on both sides had been considerable, though without advantage either way.

Steamer Strathleven Abandoned

London, Jan. 14.—The crew of the British steamer Strathleven were landed at St. Michaels, Azores, yesterday by the German ship Ardgowan, after having been rescued on Jan. 6 from their ship, which was abandoned in a sinking condition. The Strathleven sailed from Pensacola on Dec. 20 for Barcelona. She was an iron, screw steamer of 1588 tons net.

Field For Temperance Workers

Albany, Jan. 14.—According to the annual report of the state commission on prisons, during the year ending Oct. 1 last there were 32,859 committments to the penitentiaries, jails and workhouses of the state for drunkenness. This makes no account of many thousand other convictions for the same offense punished by fine, which was paid before commitment.

Two Hundred Persons Quarantined

Central Falls, R. I., Jan. 14.—Another case of smallpox was discovered in this place last night. The victim is Ulvorie Plouffs, an unmarried woman, 37 years old, who lives in a tenement house. This makes the fourth case of smallpox in this city, and over 200 persons are subjected to quarantine regulations.

Hub May Be In American League

Chicago, Jan. 14.—The Times-Herald says: President Johnson of the American Baseball league announces that the American league circuit may be made of 10 clubs. Nine cities already have franchises in the league, and it is intimated that Boston may possibly be chosen for the 10th.

President Able to Go Out

Washington, Jan. 14.—President McKinley is so much improved in health that he was able to go out doors in a carriage for a short time yesterday. It is expected that a few more days will see him again able to attend to business as usual.

COLDS

The quickest relief, for a cold, is by Scott's emulsion of cod-liver oil.

We all have colds, you can try it and see. You will find the edge taken off in a night; and, in three or four days, you'll be wondering whether that cold amounted to anything anyhow.

That's relief. If you tackle it quick, the relief is quick and complete, if you wait till the cold is in full possession of head and lung, why, of course, the relief is quick if it comes in a week.

A little emulsion won't clear and restore your whole breathing-machine in a minute; don't be looking for miracles.

We'll send you a little to try, if you like.

NOTE SIGNED AT LAST

Prince Ching and Li Hung Chang Affix Their Signatures

THE LATTER IS VERY SICK

But His Advice Is Thought by Chinese to Be Absolutely Essential—Envoys Receive Word That Negotiations Must Be Conducted In Pekin

Pekin, Jan. 14.—Prince Ching signed the joint note of the powers on Saturday, and Li Hung Chang, who is better, signed it yesterday.

It is understood that the malady from which Li Hung Chang is suffering is Bright's disease. He was feeling worse Saturday, and therefore postponed the affixing of his signature, but Prince Ching was hopeful that he would be able to sign yesterday, which proved to be the case.

Prince Ching has protested to the court against the appointment, said to be contemplated, of Viceroy Chang Chih Tung as a plenipotentiary, in the place of Li Hung Chang. He thinks the latter's advice absolutely essential, although he believes it might be advisable to appoint a third plenipotentiary for China, and reiterates his desire for the appointment of Sheng, who would be acceptable to the foreigners.

So far as Chang Chih Tung is concerned, the foreign envoys who know him personally say that, while he is strongly anti-foreign and has never made any secret of his likes and dislikes, they believe he would be a satisfactory representative of the Chinese, and there would not be any objections to him on the score of his recent utterances. Indeed, some of the ministers think it would be wise for China to make Chang Chih Tung a plenipotentiary.

Most of the envoys have received word from their governments that the negotiations must be conducted in Pekin, on the ground that for various reasons other places suggested would be objectionable.

The Russians say they will formally turn over the railroad to the Germans immediately.

M. De Giers, the Russian minister, objects to the British attitude in refusing to permit the Russians to distribute rice and wheat to destitute Chinese in the British section.

Modifications Suggested

Shanghai, Jan. 14.—Liu Kun Yi, viceroy of Nankin, has formulated modifications of the peace conditions, including a reduction of the indemnity, a reduction of the strength of the foreign troops in China, and the preservation of the right to import arms and ammunition. There are indications of a belief among the Chinese that one or two of the powers will support these modifications.

Emperor's Brother Visits Germans

Pekin, Jan. 14.—Prince Chun, brother of the emperor, paid a visit to the German legation yesterday, where he had a satisfactory interview with the German minister. His appointment as Chinese envoy to Germany, to make apoiogies for the murder of Baron Von Ketteler, has been approved. It is probable that Prince Su will accompany him.

Italian Consul Explains

Shanghai, Jan. 14.—The Italian consul at Shanghai, in explaining the presence of Italian warships at San-Mun bay, says they went there for target practice.

Frye Won't Tell Why He Resigned

New York, Jan. 14.—Transport McPherson arrived yesterday from Matanzas and Havana. Among the passengers was Alexis E. Frye, who, when seen at quarantine, said: "It is true that I have resigned my position as superintendent of schools of Cuba. However, I must decline to make any statement at present, or go into the reasons which brought about the resignation. I promised Governor Wood that I would say nothing concerning the matter at present."

Five Persons Trampled to Death

Chicago, Jan. 14.—The four persons who were reported missing Saturday night, after the panic in the Twelfth Street Turner hall, caused by a false cry of fire, during which five persons were trampled to death, are accounted for. Though there were more than two score persons badly hurt, the list of dead is not increased, and it is thought now that none of the injured will die. In the Jewish quarter it is repeatedly asserted that the panic was started with malicious intent.

General Grant Reports Progress

Manila, Jan. 14.—General Grant, who is endeavoring to finish the latest insurrection in his district, reports that he encountered a number of bands south of Buloc mountain, all of which retired up the hills. In the opinion of General Grant, his district is now fairly pacified, with the exception of the locality south of Buloc mountain, and the province of Pampanga is ready for civil government.

Lived In Three Centuries

Pender, Neb., Jan. 14.—No Knife, the last chief of the Omaha Indian tribe, died at the home of his son, Matthew Tyndale, on the reservation, at the advanced age of 115 years. He is believed to have been the oldest resident of Nebraska. He had never been ill, at least within the memory of any living relation or acquaintance.

Good Afternoon.

By the new apportionment bill Massachusetts will have fourteen Congressmen, a gain of one. As near as possible each district will have a population of 200,382, and the bill requires that the districts laid out must be composed of contiguous territory and compact. At present five of the thirteen districts contain wards of Boston, while no district is made up wholly of Boston wards. One of these districts, the 7th, takes in Middlesex and Essex towns; the 8th includes Middlesex towns; the 9th goes outside only to take in the town of Winthrop; the 10th includes Quincy and Milton of Norfolk county; while the 11th reaches way out and includes not only Norfolk and Middlesex towns, but Bristol and Worcester county touching Rhode Island. The latter is almost a gerrymander district.

The population of Boston by the new census is 560,892, almost enough to entitle her to three Congressmen at the ratio of 200,382 each, without going outside. If the city of Cambridge with 91,886, or Somerville with 61,643, were added, the total would be too large, but then East Boston with 45,756 might be dropped.

The following summary shows the population of the district in 1890:

	1890.
District No. 1,	170,297
District No. 2,	173,951
District No. 3,	171,484
District No. 4,	170,221
District No. 5,	172,178
District No. 6,	169,418
District No. 7,*	174,866
District No. 8,*	161,614
District No. 9,*	132,403
District No. 10,*	204,712
District No. 11,*	193,196
District No. 12,	171,535
District No. 13,	173,068

* Contain Boston wards.

The 10th or Quincy district is at present the largest, and on the 1890 population is too large under the new ratio. Besides it has been one of the most rapid growing districts of the State and probably has today over 260,000 population. It is very evident that either Quincy and Milton will be dropped or else the South Boston wards, as the 10th must be reduced about 60,000.

It is very probable that Quincy and Milton will be put back into the 12th district, including Weymouth, Braintree, Brockton, Taunton and other towns of Norfolk, Plymouth and Bristol counties; or else added to the 11th district which includes Hyde Park, Dedham and other Norfolk, Middlesex, Bristol and Worcester towns to make up for the loss of large Boston wards. Norfolk county with 151,539 population is almost large enough for one Congressman.

The 12th is represented by William C. Lovering of Taunton, and the 11th will be represented in the next Congress by Samuel L. Powers of Newton.

If any attempt is made to seize any part of Quincy as a new town, or for annexation to another town, it will be sure to meet with hot opposition from our city government and people generally, and is practically sure of defeat at the outset.

Blessed be that householder who sprinkleth his sidewalk with ashes, for he shall receive the thanks of his neighbor.

Drift of Opinion.

☞The Merchants association of New York is protesting against the ship subsidy bill, because it contemplates the building of American owned ships abroad. On the ground probably that induced the tailor to put up the sign in his window, "Don't go out of town to be cheated, come in here."—Beverly Times.

☞The dropping of five committees of the City Council of Lynn, and substituting a new one, to be designated as the Committee on Public Works, is calculated to put the legislative body of the government in touch with the new board of Public Works, which is an executive department. The work under the new rule can be carried forward systematically. All petitions referring to public work will be referred to the committee, and after consultation with the Board of Public Works the committee will report to the City Council for final action, after which the execution of the order will devolve on the board. The dropping of five committees relieves the members of the City Council of burdensome duties and at the same time greatly simplifies the work to be done. —Lynn Item.

☞If one were to trust the rumors and expressed opinions about religion in the church, in society, and in the press, one might decide that religion pure and undefiled no longer attracted the attention of the people. The religious editorial, we are told, is gone. The day of the religious newspaper is passed. Preaching no longer holds the interest of the people. If the church is to have any future, it must do something. In short, works, and not faith, are now in demand. So runs the superficial judgment of many. But, judging by the many periods of ebb and flow in the tides of social sentiment, one who looks both backward and forward may see that society is preparing itself for a rising tide of religious feeling. Religion, defined as faith, trust, dependence upon a power which holds all our fortunes in its keeping, is the deepest need of human society. It would be an act of supreme folly to make any plans for the twentieth century which should not include religion as the one subject which will engage most attention when we get a little further on.—Christian Register.

BAPTIST PASTOR SURPRISED.

The Best Wishes of Church People and Citizens Go With Rev. David Kerr to Ellsworth, Maine.

The Rev. David Kerr of the Calvary Baptist church, who accepted a call to Ellsworth, Maine was on Friday, Jan. 11, the recipient of a gift in money which represented in a small way the hearty appreciation of many of Mr. Kerr's well wishers in the church and out of it.

Deacon Johnson, who presented the gift in suitable manner, echoed forth the words of Rev. W. W. Dornan at a previous meeting held in the United Presbyterian church on Thursday evening, that Mr. Kerr's departure would mean not only a loss to the Baptist church in Quincy but to the whole community.

Mr. Kerr in a few chosen words thanked Deacon Johnson for his kind remarks and Mrs. A. Henderson and Mrs. C. Kidder, the collectors, with all the generous subscribers who gladly responded to their call out of esteem for Mr. Kerr.

Mr. Kerr was born in Scotland and before he prepared himself for the ministry he studied for the musical profession and is a member of the Tonic Sol Fa College, London, and holds certificates with theory honors which qualified him to teach and examine for certificates in both the Tonic Sol Fa and Staff Notations. After serving a few years as choir conductor he entered the Edinburgh University and the Divinity college, Edinburgh

During his student days he did missionary work in the slums of the city in connection with Wm. Lindsay Alexander's church the reverend Congregational preacher and theologian. It was here Mr. Kerr got an insight into different sides of life and living which have helped to make him what he is today. His work as a missionary was most successful so much so that at the jubilee of the mission held a few years ago Mr. Kerr's work in the mission among the poor and the needy stood highest among the long honorable role of missionaries during the fifty years. From the missionary field Mr. Kerr received a call for the Baptist church Leslie Fife and was ordained to the ministry on November 19th 1893.

Here he labored for four and one-half years with gratifying results in the church and out of it, as he was instrumental in the formation of a Boys Brigade of which he was captain until he left for America. Quincy was the next scene of Mr. Kerr's labors, and, here in spite of the fact the field is a most difficult one, the church being at a very low ebb when he began his ministry, he has largely increased the attendance and the financial interest, and also the activities in the church and workers to carry them on, so that he leaves the church in a much better condition every way to do good than he found it.

Mr. Kerr carries with him the best wishes of the church and community for his future success in the work of preaching the gospel.

Funeral of Fr. Mundy.

The officers of the mass were Rev. Thomas Scully, PR., the venerable pastor of St. Mary's, celebrant; Rev. Fr. Phelan of Springfield diocese deacon; Rev. Fr. O'Neil of Springfield diocese sub-deacon, the two latter classmates of Fr. Mundy; Rev. Dr. Francis Dolan master of ceremonies. Rev. Butler and Rev. Father Barry were the acolytes. The impressive office of the dead was chanted by about 70 priests. These included Rev. Walter A. Fegan of Quincy, Rev. J. J. Garrity, formerly of Quincy, and well known clergymen. LAW IS ALL WRONG.

Charles Francis Adams Attacks Street Railway Act.

An attempt will probably be made at the State House this year to have a new draft of the new law relative to street railways. The following comment is made in the Legislative letter to the Lynn Item:

"A few days ago Charles Francis Adams appeared before the Railroad Commissioners to oppose the petition of a street railway company for a location on a street highway in Lincoln. He devoted very little attention to the case in hand but rather to the astonishment of his audience handle that street railway law—which left his hands and those of Messrs. Crapo and Hayes his associates, less than three years ago—without gloves.

Mr. Adams says that law is all wrong and that a commission should at once be constituted to draw a new one. He went further and said he had very little doubt that he would be selected to draw the instrument. The writer joins with all Massachusetts in respect and regard for the grandson of John Quincy Adams but respectfully submits that it is not a recommendation for him that he now candidly confesses that he never considered particularly the question of the carriage of freight by street railways or whether or not they should have the right to run on the private land

Both of these questions were certainly discussed and at some length in the hearings which this committee held. The trouble was that Mr. Adams was simply possessed with a desire to beat into the heads of his audience and also into the heads of his associates that the street railway car was the legitimate successor of the omnibus. The omnibus traveled through the streets; therefore an electric car must travel through the streets and Mr. Adams never thought of its traveling anywhere else until his own toes got stepped on—that is to say, until he considered what it meant to have an electric car whirled through the State highway in Lincoln. Then he awakened to the fact that an electric car runs faster than an omnibus and that in the suburban districts it is something in the nature of a railroad at grade. So he asks that they be put off the highway, or else that the highways in the suburbs on which they run be closed to all other travel. All this is very interesting and doubtless the law will be changed eventually.

LATE MARRIAGES.

Should People Marry Earlier? Asks the Globe.

Rev. Edward Anderson was one of those who wrote for the Globe symposium — in answer to the question "Should people marry earlier?" and his reply will be of local interest:

"Among people who come to me to be married I think there are about as many youthful persons as there ever were and I do not believe that I could count today any more 'late marriages' so called than I could count 40 years ago. It is my own opinion based wholly on observation and unsupported by statistics that people generally are marrying at about the same ages that they always married. The great majority surrender to Cupid before they are out of their 20s and it is usually the most wholesome rule for people to get married in the decade between 20 and 30.

"Whether people should marry earlier is a question that I cannot answer, but that people do marry early, and in the majority of cases early enough, is, I believe, a matter of fact. There are, however, supposable conditions under which early marriage would be worse than indiscreet. Much must be left to the judgment of the individual. Any law or custom compelling all people to marry early might work incalculable hardship.

"While my own observation does not lead me to think that there is any appreciable increase in the age at which people marry, I am convinced that the ratio of marriage to the population is declining. It appears that more persons are choosing not to marry at all. Marriage once was an almost imperative social duty, but the rigor of this custom has sensibly subsided, and an increasingly large number of persons, men and women alike are preferring to live unmarried.

"One reason for this, perhaps, is the development of social and educational interests and diversions outside of the circle of domestic environment. Probably there are many other reasons not immediately discerned, but the fact is sufficiently patent."

A Presentation.

Mr. Herbert Marshal, who has been for twenty-five years, the faithful and efficient treasurer of the Sunday School of the Wollaston Congregational church, was presented on Sunday morning with a fine edition of Stoddard's lectures. Mr. A. A. Lincoln, the first superintendent of the Sunday School, made the presentation speech in behalf of the school. Mr. Marshall accepted the gift in a few fitting words.

GOOD COASTING.

Hills Should be Reserved---Some Now in Use Dangerous.

Coasting on many of the streets is dangerous business and too much care cannot be exercised by young people who participate in this sport. Especially should care be taken at street crossings and junctions. Every year there are more or less serious accidents resulting from this sport, and on Saturday the first was reported. Both of these cases happened to youngsters coasting on Smith street at Brewer's corner. One was a young son of Oscar Djerf of Nelson street, who had a long gash cut in his knee and was otherwise injured and the other was to a boy naned John Solander of Centre street who had a deep gash cut in the back of his head. Both cases required the services of a physician to sew them up. Goffe street which runs into Granite street is particularly dangerous as coasters find it almost impossible to turn the corner. As the coasting is very limited however a few streets should be reserved for the sport. These might include the hill on Revere road, if travel could be diverted from the street and also from Mechanic street which is but little used.

Signs by day and red lanterns by night would do the business. Every ward has some such street that might be set apart, and the Mayor would be justified in furnishing police protection for the young people say from 3 P. M. to 10 P. M.

Nurses Directory.

The Weeks-Hill pharmacy has undertaken a work which has long been a necessity, and which many will appreciate, especially when sickness enters a family and one desires a nurse. It is a directory for nurses, whose objects are well set forth in an advertisement today. The pharmacy makes no charge either to nurse or to patient, and therefore, should receive hearty cooperation of nurses and the people generally. The Quincy Hospital is unable often to supply the calls for nurses, and doctors are puzzled where to get assistance promptly. The directory is not wholly for hospital nurses, but others may register when recommended by physicians, and will therefore be of mutual benefit to those seeking employment and the afflicted.

In Bethany Pulpit.

Rev. Edward Norton the pastor emeritus of Bethany Congrattional church, was greeted by a very large congregation on Sunday morning, it being the first time which he has occupied the pulpit since his resignation some years ago. Many of the older people who seldom go to church nowadays made a special effort to be present, and also several who usually attend other churches. Mr. Norton was in good voice and delivered what might be termed an up-to-date address on "The forward movement of the world's life," taking his text from Exodus 14: 15. At the close nearly the whole congregation pressed forward and for awhile Mr. Norton held a happy informal reception.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

by local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflamation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars; free.

Walking to church Sunday morning was a hazardous undertaking. A liberal coating of sand on the Wollaston sidewalks would have been highly appreciated by the residents.

The meetings at the Wollaston M. E. church last week have proven very helpful to all who attended. There will be other meetings Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday of this week at 7.45 P. M.

The annual reunion of worshippers at Bethany Congregational church will be held on Wednesday evening. There will be a social hour from 5.30 to 6.30, and banquet at 6.30, followed by the annual meeting at 7.45.

Miss Grace Isaac, formerly leading soprano of Bethany Congregational church, was again in the choir Sunday evening, and as of old pleased the congregation with a solo. It was a coincidence that Miss Isaac and Rev. Mr. Norton should have come back the same day.

James Mahoney received a bad fall Sunday at Tirrell's carriage manufactory. He was on a ladder getting sleighs from a loft when he slipped and fell to the ground, striking heavily on the ice. He was rendered unconscious for a few minutes. He, however, escaped with cuts about the lip and head.

Mrs. N. S. Billings has been confined to the house almost ever since her arrival in Quincy with a severe cold. She is in her old quarters the Lunt house on Goffe street, where she has spent her winters for the past few years. Her many friends are always glad when she returns to Quincy and will be glad to see her in her usual good health. She has been gaining the past week.

At the Wollaston Congregational church, Sunday the services were largely attended and much enjoyed. In the morning, Rev. Mr. Chase preached a scholarly sermon on the subject, "The Bible as literature, early lyric poetry." The vesper service at four o'clock attracted a goodly number who heard a forcible sermon by the pastor on the theme "The thirst of the soul for God.

The young people at Quincy Point miss the skating pond on South street this year. For several years the meadow off South street has been flowed and an excellent pond secured. There was no danger as it was so shallow, and for this reason more of the children were able to participate in the fun. It is yet hoped that the objections to flowing this meadow may be overruled and a place of skating procured.

Kennel Club.

Teams from the New England Kennel Club and the Boston Athletic Association held a twenty-five bird shoot at Braintree, Saturday, which was won by the Kennel club team by five birds. The match was the first in a series for a handsome silver trophy offered by Howland Russell. The second match will take place next Saturday at the B. A. A. trap at Riverside.

The New England Kennel club has made plans for extensive improvements of its equipment at Braintree by the addition of a new kennel house. It will be located on high ground back of the club house and will have kennels for 51 dogs. Each will have a separate run and all will be kept in the very best hygienic condition. There will also be a quarantine and hospital in connection with the new kennels.

Punishment Said to Have Been Inflicted Upon Three Peace Delegates

London, Jan. 14.—Lord Kitchener reports several skirmishes at different points, with trifling British losses, and adds: "Three agents of the peace committee were taken as prisoners to De Wet's laager, near Lindley, Jan. 10. One, who was a British subject, was flogged and then shot. The other two, burghers, were flogged by De Wet's orders."

The brief report of the fate of the three members of the peace committee excites the deepest indignation on all sides. One or two papers express a hope that Lord Kitchener has been misled by false Kaffir reports, but it is generally felt that he would not have reported the matter to the war office without undoubted evidence.

The Daily Mail heads the report with the word "Murder," and declares against any further attempt to coax the enemy into submission. "De Wet has placed himself outside the pale of humanity," says The Daily Mail, "and not proclamations, but large reinforcements must be our watchword."

The Morning Post says: "This marks the point where the guerilla phase ends and the bandit phase begins."

All the papers appeal strongly to the government to hurry forward reinforcements, since it is evident that the Boer leaders have now become desperate and conciliation is quite useless.

The Pretoria correspondent of The Daily Mail announces the return to Pretoria of Mr. Pretorius, a former president of the late South African republic, from a futile endeavor to persuade the Boer leaders to surrender.

But there's more to do for dear

A COLD-BLOODED CRIME

Farmer Moshier of Gorham, Me., Is Pounded to Death

HIS MOTHER IS ASSAULTED

White Man and a Negro Were Participants In the Crime — The Latter Is Arrested, but the Supposed Chief Actor Is Still at Large

Portland, Me., Jan. 14.—A most atrocious crime was committed at Gorham Saturday evening, when Thomas C. Moshier, a farmer, aged 25, was murdered, and his mother, Mrs. Rufus Moshier, aged 72, was brutally assaulted, by two men, who forced an entrance into the Moshier residence with the evident intention of robbery.

The house is situated some distance from the road. After completing their ghastly work, the men ransacked the house, taking what valuables they could find, ate a hearty meal in the kitchen and left, walking along the Portland and Rochester railroad tracks in the direction of Portland.

One of them was a negro, and a fairly accurate description of him was obtained from Mrs. Moshier, who revived sufficiently to make a statement to the officers. The officers of surrounding towns were notified, and about noon yesterday William Hands, a negro, 25 years old, was arrested at Scarboro by Constable Newcombe. In his possession were found a blood stained razor marked with Moshier' name, $40 in money, consisting chiefl of bills, which were also stained with blood, and a watch.

His hands and clothing were soiled and bloody. The man admits having been at the Moshier farmhouse, and says he left his companion near th Union station in Portland, about mid night on Saturday. Hands was brought to this city and lodged in Cumberland county jail.

The story of the crime, as told by Mrs. Moshier, is as follows: She and her son had eaten their supper and were seated by the kitchen stove when a knock was heard at the door. No attention was paid to it as Mrs. Moshier thought the caller might be John Mc Lean, who formerly worked on th Moshier farm, and who, it is said, left under somewhat unpleasant circumstances. The pounding was repeated however, and soon after the kitchen windows were forced in with a crash and two men, one of whom was a negro, jumped into the room. Moshier sprang from his chair and grapple with the white man, and the negr rushed on the woman and knocked he down, striking her a terrible blow on the head with a stick which he carried. After striking her again, the negro went to the assistance of his comrade, wh was engaged in a fierce struggle wit the farmer. Together they dragged Moshier into the front room. Mrs. Moshier fled to her room, locked the door and hid in a closet, listening to the sounds of the fight going on in the adjoining room.

In a few minutes the noises ceased, and the men returned to the kitchen, going from thence to the cellar for food. Mrs. Moshier then fled to the second floor. Shortly afterwards she heard them rummaging about, opening drawers and overturning furniture. The terrified woman sat for a long time listening to these noises, and when it became evident that the men had gone she made her way along the drifted roads to the house of Freeman Richardson. She was exhausted and weak from loss of blood, but succeeded in telling her story.

Coroner Perry and the police of this city went immediately to the Moshier farm. The body of young Moshier was found in a corner of the parlor covered with blood and with the head beaten almost to a jelly. Moshier was an unusually powerful man, and evidently made a desperate fight for his life. In the house were found two heavy fence stakes, one of which had apparently been used to kill Moshier. The house had been completely ransacked, and everything of value was missing.

Mrs. Moshier's injuries, while serious, are not considered necessarily fatal. She has two bad scalp wounds and is almost prostrated by the shock, but physicians attending her say she will probably recover. Her description of the white man tallies with that of McLean.

Frozen to Death In Woods

Concord, N. H., Jan. 14.—Joseph Ormsbee of Penacook, 18 years old, lost his way in the woods Saturday while hunting rabbits, and was frozen to death. His body was found yesterday in a swamp. From tracks in the snow, it was evident that Ormsbee had lost his bearing, and had travelled around in a circle.

Alleged Fugitive From Justice

New York, Jan. 14.—Louis Mentz, a travelling salesman, with offices in Maiden Lane, was held in $3000 bail yesterday by Magistrate Mayo for further examination. Mentz is said to be wanted in Pittsburg for alleged complicity in a recent jewelry robbery there. He furnished bail and was released.

"SPORTS" GATHERED IN

Deputy Sheriff Probably Fatally Shot as Result of a Roundup

Washington, R. I., Jan. 14.—Kent county officers made a descent on t West Greenwich roadhouse, 1½ miles south of this village, at 3 o'clock yesterday morning, and surprised over 100 men, who had just completed arrangements for a cocking main. The first pair of birds had been prepared to fight, when the officers entered the house and announced to those present that they were under arrest. The officers barred exit by the only door. A rush was made for the windows and many escaped in that way. The names of 75 men were taken, and 58 of them were permitted to go on condition that they would appear in the district court of East Greenwich and settle. The other 17 were taken to the county courthouse, where they were forced to pay $22 each for their interrupted fun.

Some of the officers, who had remained outside the house during the raid, opened fire on the fleeing sports. One of the latter was shot in the leg, but managed to escape, and Deputy Sheriff Fish was struck on the head with a club. The deputy sheriff and another officer continued the hunt for the men during the forenoon.

Three of them were located in a roadhouse on the New London pike, and one of the three shot Deputy Sheriff Fish in the abdomen, and it is believed the officer cannot recover. Another officer was at the roadhouse when Fish was shot, but the man who did the shooting is still at large.

When the fines and costs are paid, the captured sports will have contributed $1650 to the treasuries of the state and the Anti-Cruelty society.

Dowie Talks to Bostonians

Boston, Jan. 14.—Rev. John A. Dowie, "general overseer" of the Zion City colony that is about to be established near Chicago, yesterday began a three days' series of meetings here. He said that he constantly received large numbers of requests for prayers from sick people. He asked his congregation to join him in prayer, and then referred to a number of specific cases in his prayer. He said he believes that storms come from the devil. He attacked Christian Science, the saloon and the tobacco habit. At the afternoon meeting he assailed the Roman church.

Hotel Had Secret Barroom

Portland, Me., Jan. 14.—Deputy sheriffs made a very thorough search of the Hotel Temple for liquor, and were about to give up the investigation when Deputy Plummer thought one side of the cellar wall looked rather suspicious and began sounding it. Finally he touched a spring, and a door opened in the wall, showing a room brilliantly lighted and stocked with liquor valued at $800. The liquor was seized. No arrests were made.

Shock Felt Eight Miles Away

Burlington, Vt., Jan. 14.—Nearly 1500 pounds of dynamite exploded at Colchester Point, along the line of the Rutland Canadian railroad, about eight miles from this city, in a storehouse where it was being heated by steam. No one was near the building, as the workmen were all at dinner. The shock shattered windows over a mile away. It was distinctly felt and heard in this city.

Brockton, Mass., Jan. 14.—Albert E. McAdams, 22, William A. McAdams, 28, and their father, John, who is 64 years old, were arrested here last night on a warrant charging breaking and entering and larceny. The crime which the men are alleged to have committed occurred in Bridgewater, where $250 worth of watches and jewelry were stolen.

Accomplished His Purpose

Chelsea, Mass., Jan. 14.—Richard Learson, who tried to commit suicide by shooting on Jan. 1, died yesterday as a result of the injuries received. Learson was formerly employed on the Boston Elevated railroad. He was laid off because he reported late for work, and he became despondent. He leaves a widow and several children.

Block Burned to the Ground

Calais, Me., Jan. 14.—Eaton's block was burned to the ground yesterday. On the second story of the structure the rooms were occupied by the St. Croix club, which loses $4000. H. F. Eaton & Sons suffer a loss of $7000 on the building, and $1000 more by the burning of office furniture and pianofortes and organs.

Husband as a Jailor

Bangor, Me., Jan. 14.—In the supreme court, in the divorce case of Mrs. Josephine Cota of Oldtown against her husband, Joseph Cota, the wife declared on the stand that her husband had kept her locked up in a room not much larger than a closet from August, 1899, until April, 1900. The divorce was granted.

WORK BEFORE CONGRESS

Two Much-Discussed Measures Will Be Disposed of This Week

Washington, Jan. 14.—The army reorganization bill will continue to engage the attention of the senate at least during the first days of this week. The opinion is quite generally expressed among senators that the bill will be acted upon by the middle of the week, although many phases of the question involved in the bill remain to be considered.

Senator Allison intends to call up the legislative, executive and judicial appropriation bill when the army bill is acted on, but whether this and other appropriation bills to follow it shall occupy the exclusive attention of the senate so long as they are on the calendar is a question which has not yet been absolutely determined. The present indications are, however, that the appropriation bills will be considered in advance of all other measures whenever they are before the senate.

When there are no appropriation bills to be taken up, the ship subsidy bill will be discussed. There are still numerous speeches to be made upon this measure, and already there is talk of night sessions for its consideration when it is taken up.

A program of miscellaneous matters will occupy the attention of the house during the week. Although the river and harbor bill was criticised very severely during the debate last week, it is in no danger of failure. Most of the attacks came from members who were disappointed in what the bill grants their localities, and the actual opponents of the measure will be overwhelmed when the final vote is reached.

A Duel With Bank Robbers

Cumberland, Md., Jan. 14.—Officer Goss of the city police force surprised a gang of men who were attempting to rob the German Savings bank yesterday morning. He engaged in a single-handed battle with four of the men. Goss is sure he hit two. He emptied his revolver from a vantage point behind the shadow of a telegraph pole. The gang escaped, terrorizing the few persons they met by indiscriminate firing. Nothing was stolen at the bank.

The Outcome In Doubt

Harrisburg Jan. 14.—The result of the struggle for United States senator still is in doubt, with both sides professing to be confident of victory. Mr. Quay says there is no doubt of his election. William T. Creasy, house leader of the Democrats, says Quay cannot get a single Democratic vote, and without the Democrats he cannot hope to be elected. James M. Guenay will be nominated for senator by the Democratic caucus.

Skull Fractured by Robbers

Lexington, Ky., Jan. 14.—Rankin Clements, a farmer of Fayette county, whose estate is valued at $500,000, was brought to a hospital here with his skull fractured. Robbers visited his house, called him to the door, and broke his skull with a hay fork. They attempted to force their way into the house, but the women within barricaded the doors. Only a small amount of money was secured from the man's pockets. He will probably die.

An Ice Barrier

St. John's, Jan. 14.—Northern ice floes drifting along the Atlantic coast now threaten to block St. John's. They are already within sight of the port. Incoming steamers report that the floes are sweeping outward toward the track of the trans-Atlantic steamers, and are likely to reach the latitude of Cape Race next week.

Keeping an Eye on Carlists

Madrid, Jan. 14.—The Spanish government has decided to send warships to watch the coast of the lower provinces, in order to prevent the importation of arms by the Carlists, who are still agitating.

Salem Has Quite a Blaze

Salem, Mass., Jan. 14.—Fire damaged the Glover block on Lafayette street early this morning to the extent of about $5000. The fire started in a fruit store from an overheated stove.

A Japanese Catastrophe

Yokohama, Jan. 14.—It is officially reported that 400 fishermen are missing, and that they are supposed to have perished in a storm Jan. 10, off the west coast.

Had an Unenviable Reputation

London, Jan. 14.—Samuel Lewis, the notorious money lender and ursurer, who has been called the "greatest and meanest of modern Shylocks," is dead.

While Army Reorganization Bill Is Under Discussion

BUT TELLER DOESN'T CARE

And Insists on Full Discussion of the Measure—General Egan and the Administration Come In For a "Roast" From the Colorado Senator

Washington, Jan. 15.—Mr. Teller of Colorado, speaking to an amendment he had offered, delivered a sensational denunciation of General Egan, former commissary general of the United States army, his statement including also the administration, at the close of a day of dreary discussion of the technical details of the army reorganization bill.

Mr. Teller's amendment referred to that section of the bill which authorizes the president to retire any officer who has been suspended from duty either by sentence of court-martial, or by executive order in mitigation of such sentence, striking out the words "has been" and substituting therefor "shall be hereafter."

After saying that the section had been incorporated in the bill for the purpose of enabling the president to retire General Egan, Mr. Teller declared it was retained in the bill in order that an officer of the army, Major Joseph W. Wham, might be got rid of. "He cannot be gotten rid of in any other way," said Mr. Teller, and "he ought not to be gotten rid of in any circumstances."

In the course of his remarks Mr. Teller adverted to the case of General Egan at some length. Mr. Teller denounced General Egan in sensational language. "As an officer of the United States army," said the senator, "he made an exhibition of himself and showed himself to be a miserable blackguard."

Referring to General Egan's denial of General Miles' charges as to "embalmed beef," Mr. Teller declared "his language was brutal and low, and so bad it could not be overlooked, although there was a very evident desire to overlook it."

Mr. Teller made a stinging attack upon the president for having retired General Egan, asserting the "retirement in the circumstances was a decoration and a reward for his attack upon the general commanding the army. At considerable length, Mr. Teller then discussed the case of Major Wham.

At the conclusion of Mr. Teller's statement, Mr. Carter, one of the members of the military committee, addressed the senate in an appeal for the passage of the pending measure at an early date. "I think the senate ought to know," said Mr. Carter, "that each day's delay in the passage of this bill will involve an additional expenditure of at least $500,000."

Mr. Teller declared that he would object at this time to any date being fixed for a final vote. He said the provisions contained in it were of such a character as to demand full debate. "I do not care if this delay does cost $500,000 a day. It involves the creation of a great standing army that will cost this government millions upon millions of dollars after we are dead and gone."

No progress was made with the measure during the day, not a single amendment being disposed of finally.

The house postponed District of Columbia business, which was the regular order for yesterday, until next Monday, and proceeded with the river and harbor bill. General debate closed at 2 o'clock, and the bill was read under the 5-minute rule for amendment. Good progress was made, 59 of the 97 pages being completed. Many amendments were offered, but all of them failed.

Attempt at Train Wrecking

Batavia, N. Y., Jan. 15.—An attempt was made to wreck a fast train on the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western road near here. The train was rounding a curve when the engineer saw a pile of ties on the track, and an instant later the engine struck them, scattering them and breaking the engine's pilot. Railroad detectives are working on the case.

Chances Are In Favor of Quay

Harrisburg, Jan. 15.—There is every indication that the bitter struggle for United States senator will terminate with the election of M. S. Quay, the nominee of the joint Republican caucus. The Democrats will vote for James M. Guffey, and the anti-Quay Republicans are expected to distribute their votes.

Colombian Situation Improved

Washington, Jan. 15.—The navy department has been informed of the arrival of the Philadelphia at Panama. Press reports have it that a serious revolutionary movement in the vicinity of the Colombian capital is afoot, but official reports state that the situation has improved much of late.

Plague Aboard Ship

London, Jan. 15.—Four deaths from bubonic plague occurred on the steamer Highland Prince, which arrived in Shields harbor yesterday from the river Platte.

REPORTERS' VIGILANCE

Boston Newspaper Says Newly Wedded Vanderbilts Are In That City

Boston, Jan. 15.—Mr. and Mrs. Alfred G. Vanderbilt are believed to be stopping at the Hotel Somerset, although no one at the hotel will admit that they are there.

The Post says: The bridal couple came here in a special train, were unobserved at the terminal station when they left the train, and were unattended. From the rear car two trunks were handed out. One bore the initials E. F., and the other A. G. V. This was the only baggage carried. Calling one of the public carriages, the husband called out "To the Touraine."

However, Mr. Vanderbilt soon changed his mind, and was driven to the Westminster. Again a change in the program was made, and, instead of alighting here, fresh orders were given, and the carriage rapidly drove to Commonwealth avenue, and finally halted in front of the Hotel Somerset. The clerks were surprised when Mr. Vanderbilt presented himself and asked that his presence at the hotel be kept a secret.

The General Miles suite, so-called, was assigned to Mr. and Mrs. Vanderbilt. Dinner was sent to the apartments. It is understood that they were to attend the theatre, and a carriage was ordered, but this was later countermanded.

Montgomery's Side of It

Leominster, Mass., Jan. 15.—James A. Montgomery of this place, who is accused by Mrs. Lucretia McIninch of Great Pond, Me., with having exerted hypnotic influence over her for 15 years, thus keeping her away from her family and making her mind practically a blank, says that he does not know anything about hypnotism, but that he does know that he is glad to get rid of this woman, who has dogged his steps all this time, and was never willing to leave him alone a minute. He says she has not lived with him as his wife, but as his housekeeper, and that he has paid her wages.

Not Terrified by Cold Weather

Danielson, Conn., Jan. 15.—The tribe of Magyars, who landed in Boston some weeks ago, en route from Russia to the southern states, last night encamped in the fields here, sleeping on the snow-covered ground. They are destitute and have caused considerable consternation by their persistant and sometimes threatening begging. A child was born to one of the women last evening, and mother and infant spent the night in the fields, with no other roof than the winter sky.

Police Looking For McLain

Portland, Me., Jan. 15.—The only definite development in the Gorham murder yesterday was the arraignment of the negro, Hands. There have been a number of false reports as to the whereabouts of the fugitive confederate of the prisoner, whom the police are now firmly convinced is John McLain, but not in a single instance has a clue to the man's whereabouts materialized.

Needs New Windlass Cylinders

Boston, Jan. 15.—The two windlass cylinders of the torpedo boat Foote are badly cracked, and new ones will have to be substituted before the anchors can be hoisted by steam power. The Foote has been at the Charlestown navy yard for repairs since Christmas. The cost of replacing the broken cylinders will not be great, but it will take about two weeks' time.

Bailey Murder Before Grand Jury

Salem, Mass., Jan. 15.—The Bailey murder case was considered yesterday by the Essex county grand jury. The man under suspicion in this case is John C. Best, who was held for the grand jury on the charge of murdering George E. Bailey, with whom he conducted a farm in Saugus. The jury has not finished hearing the witnesses in the case.

City Business Held Up

Lawrence, Mass., Jan. 15.—The nine Republican councilmen refused to attend the meeting of the common council called for last night. Mayor Leonard will apply for a writ of mandamus to compel the Republican councilmen to attend the meetings, as all city business is held up pending the organization.

One Acquitted and One Fined

Boston, Jan. 15.—Patrick Lordan, who turned state's evidence in the East Cambridge fraudulent naturalization case, was discharged by Judge Lowell yesterday. William Corcoran, another one of those indicted for fraudulent naturalization, pleaded guilty, and Judge Lowell imposed a fine of $300.

Sentence Shortened by Seven Months

Portland, Me., Jan. 15.—Sheriff Pearson has received a telegram from Attorney General Griggs stating that Fred E. Mitchell, the Portland letter carrier sentenced to jail for 18 months for robbing the mails, has been pardoned by the president. Mitchell has served 11 months of his sentence.

Another Arrest In Riegel Case

Philadelphia, Jan. 15.—The police yesterday recovered the broken pieces of the bottle which is believed to have contained the poison administered to Father Riegel, who is alleged to have been murdered and robbed. "Kid" Hartman, 16 years old, told Coroner Dugan that after the phial had been shattered he buried it in the yard in the rear of the house where the murder is supposed to have been committed. The boy was committed as a principal in the alleged crime, to await the action of the coroner.

DOWIE GIVES HIS VIEWS

On Ministers, Congressmen and Denominational Papers

LITTLE FAITH IN FORMER

Who Are Declared to Be Fossils of High Degree—Acts of Congress Not Made With Skill—He Has No Use For "Blow-Fly" Religious Publications

Boston, Jan. 15.—In an address here last night Rev. J. A. Dowie assailed the members of congress, declared that the devil was responsible for charity extended by the lodge of Masons, and put in a number of good words for women. The ministers came in for a share of the speaker's attention, and he referred to them as being fossils of high degree.

The hall was crowded, women predominating, although there were some male auditors who frequently interrupted the speaker with loud amens.

"I don't care much for some ministers," said Dr. Dowie. "They get on a platform and talk and talk and say nothing. When I talk I say something, and when I stop there is nothing more to be said. I don't carry a sermon in my pocket, like a majority of ministers, and then get up and ask God to give me something to talk about and something I knew I already had. About the only thing some of you people can do is chin, and get things said in your blowfly papers. You pitched into me for years, but if I should get hold of you and give you a shaking there wouldn't be a hair left of you. The cheap penny-whistles of your denomination; they are no good."

After saying a few words about money, he suggested that the collection be taken. "Don't put in a cent, and look as if you had done something. Keep your old cent. I don't want it; I won't take it. Let us sing," and then every one sang "Jesus, Lover of My Soul."

On the platform back of the preacher there was a chart pitched on a tripod. It read like this:

GOOD.	EVIL.
Jesus.	Satan.
Salvation.	Sin.
Health.	Disease.
Life.	Death.
Heaven.	Hell.

Among other things Dr. Dowie said: "Two chains are binding humanity to an anchorage; hell is on the one hand, heaven on the other. There are but two armies marching on in this world; one is to heaven, the other is to eternal damnation. I used to think a preacher couldn't tell a lie, but that was before I had lived very long in the west. When I went to Chicago I found out the difference. In that city there isn't a thing a minister won't do, and lying is his strong forte. The devil tried to keep me out of Boston and was going to do his work through one of the city officials, but I knocked them both down, and here I am."

Without catching his breath, Mr. Dowie commenced an attack on congress. He said in part: "The acts of congress are not made with very much skill. Did you ever see congress?

"I've seen them sitting with their feet on their desks, smoking and drinking and talking. I called at a committee room there when I tried to get my lace workers into this country, and when I went back to my hotel my wife said: 'You've been smoking.' I said: 'No, I've been smoked; I've been up to the White House.' "

Then he went back to the woman question again. He declared that the wife is the head of the husband, because when she turns the neck has to, and he thought in most cases the husband was the neck. In his church he has many women deaconesses, and he takes a great interest in their work, much more than that accomplished by the male portion.

Coquard Holds the Fort

Troyes, France, Jan. 15.—An enormous crowd gathered at Saint Savine yesterday, near the house of the man Coquard, who, last Friday, when pursued by the police, shut himself in the garret with arms and ammunition, and threatened to kill any one who approached. The house is now cordoned by troops and gendarmes. The killing by Coquard of a citizen, who, on his own responsibility, attempted to make terms with the fugitive, has terrorized the spectators.

Matter Concerns Public Safety

Chicago, Jan. 15.—The city council last night adopted an ordinance closing all theatres, halls and other places of amusement or gatherings in Chicago until such buildings have been inspected by the building department and pronounced safe. The step was taken in consequence of the panic in Turner hall last Saturday, when five persons were killed, and nearly 40 injured.

Good Afternoon.

While the report of the Tax Collector in this issue makes an excellent showing, the fact remains that less than 56 per cent. of the taxes assessed are paid in the year in which they are assessed, a total of $216,680.88 out of levy of $386,297.85 in 1900. For street sprinkling the percentage is still smaller, being less than 51 per cent., or a total of $1,616.32 out of $3,201.39 It is because of these small percentages that the Mayor in his inaugural address urged the prompter payment of taxes. For the good of the city, and the tax payers themselves, taxes should be due Sept. 1, and if all, or 90 per cent., were paid before Jan. 1, the city finances would be in a better condition. It is true the collections of 1900 included interest of $5,468.89, but the temporary loans in anticipation of taxes in 1900 amounted to $275,000 00, and if the city paid but three per cent., it would require $8,250.00 for a year's interest on said loans.

The Massachusetts electors of President and Vice President honored a brave soldier of the Civil war, in the election of Andrew Jackson of Brockton as messenger to carry the vote to Washington. Upon motion of John Shaw of Quincy the choice was made unanimous.

All is not so roseate in the rich city of Newton, which is so often held up to Quincy as an example, as some people imagine. The gross debt of the city is $5,824,013, and was increased during 1900. The Mayor objects to "adding to the burden" for support of schools.

The children will find a corner of the Ledger today devoted to them. It is in an out of the way place but we venture it will be found. It will be a daily feature of the Ledger, and short contributions of cute sayings, etc., are invited.

Drift of Opinion.

☞Had Mr. Harmsworth consulted one of the standard almanacs issued by our established patent medicine concerns he could have seen that his ideal of journalism is nothing very new.—Detroit Journal.

—Al Whitten has entered on a new venture at his place on Plain street, Stoughton, where he has fenced off an enclosure and has gone to propagating skunks. He has now some eight or ten of the fragrant animals and hopes to make it a profitable and successful business.

☞Most men need all the obstacles with which they contend; some would be better if they had more. In general, it may be safely affirmed that God does not put any more obstacles in any one's path than are necessary to prevent his merely strolling through life.—Zion's Herald.

☞Perhaps the most surprising feature of the inaugural addresses delivered this week is the spirit with which the mayors of Massachusetts advocate, or predict, or at least tolerate, the municipal ownership of public utilities. This principal no longer identifies the socialist. It is now assumed by the republican, the democrat, the liberal and the conservative. Nobody shies at it, and the public is evidently reconciled to the experiment. The public sentiment which inspires these inaugural addresses will one day make an impression upon the general court, and legislation will follow which will remove the present prohibition upon a trial of municipal ownership under circumstances which will permit a fair experiment.—New Bedford Mercury.

☞The contemporary that says law and order leagues have had their day in Massachusetts appears to be telling the frozen truth. We seem to have outgrown that sort of thing. With city police, State police, private detectives, Watch and Ward, and law and order agents, etc., what a lot of people it takes to keep us reasonably good!—Brockton Enterprise.

☞Prof. Charles Eliot Norton does not like small boys. They steal his apples and when he tells them that it is naughty they swear at him. Then he goes to his study and broods over the degeneracy of the times and evolves a lecture which he inflicts upon some long suffering audience. Verily the lot of the Cambridge philosopher is to be pitied.—Haverhill Gazette.

☞Small pox is looked upon with great repugnance from the nature of the disease, but as a matter of fact medical science is thoroughly able to cope with it and in its possible results it is not nearly so much to be dreaded as diphtheria and scarlet fever, or even the grip, that has managed to get a decided hold upon this country for the past half dozen years or so.—New Bedford Standard.

☞To maintain the asphalt pavement in Boston as a fit surface for travel under all conditions is found to be next to impossible, and they are having a great old time trying to make it as presentable as the circumstances will permit. Considerable attention is being given the asphalted streets by a detachment of the highway forces, and with all the pains taken and expense gone to, which will make the expenditure for maintenance no small item, the annoying features cannot be removed and but partially remedied. Those surfaces require more care and dandling than a new-born babe.—Lynn Item.

NEW MAIL WAGON.

Carrier Dunham Has Something New and It Is a Dandy.

The Tirrell & Sons' Carriage company has turned out from their shops this week a very handsome wagon for Arthur H. Dunham, who will use it in the collection and delivery of mail. The wagon is a new idea for Quincy, and will immediately attract attention, as well as advertise the kind of work turned out by this company.

The wheels of the running gear are small and the body sets low on patented springs. The body of the wagon is narrow and is entirely entirely enclosed, so that if necessary the driver and contents are perfectly shielded from the weather. Entrance to the wagon is made from a door in the rear. The front is enclosed by two windows, which are so arranged that can be let down out of sight in warm or pleasant weather. There two canvas curtains on either side of the front, which can also be rolled up when desired. At the door in the rear is a step which, when the team is loaded, will be but a few inches from the ground.

The running gear and body are painted white. The trimmings are of gold and brown. On either side of the lower panel in an oval are the letters "U. S. Mail."

As stated above the wagon was built for and will be used by Arthur H. Dunham in his collection and delivery of mail, the territory covered by him being such that it would be impossible for him to do it without a team. His special district is Houghs Neck and Germantown, but he also assists materially in Quincy and South Quincy. In the early morning he makes the collection at Houghs Neck, Germantown, Quincy and South Quincy, 35 boxes in all. He makes one delivery a day at Houghs Neck and Germantown, and two deliveries in Ward One east of Hancock street between Coddington and Elm streets.

Installment of Officers.

The regular meeting of Clan McGregor, No. 5, held in Doble's hall, Monday evening was very largely attended by clansmen. In addition to the ordinary business, the newly elected officers for the ensuing year were installed. The ceremony was performed by Grand Chief Haliday, of Hyde Park, and staff, assisted by the retiring chief, William Soudan.

The post of honor was awarded to clansman Robert Findlay, who succeeds William Soudan, as chief; D. T. Drummond sits in second chair as "Tanist," Alexander Smith wears the badge of senior henchman, and George Robertson that of junior henchman; as senschal clansman, William Beattie will carry the white rod; Alexander Birnie will stand as warder, and James Milne as sentinel; the duties of general secretary will be attended to by William Ross, and the financial affairs of the order will be safe and efficiently handled by John Russell, as secretary, and Alexander Russell as the treasurer; Robert C. Allan continues as chaplain.

After the officers were duly installed the reception committee announced hot coffee and rolls. Then clansmen made merry with song and story until nearly the midnight hour. Those who assisted in the musical program were Messrs. John Clark, Alexander Kemp, George Bowman, Robert Duthie and William Kelly, and Robert C. Allan in his inimitable manner, recited, "Her Anuity." The speeches of Grand Chief Haliday and his staff were complimentary to Clan McGreogr, and the healthy and prosperous condition of the Order of Scottish Clans."

The wedding was a very simple affair followed by a large and brilliant reception. The home was prettily decorated with palms and other greens and a large bunch of American beauty roses formed an effective centerpiece in the dining room.

Mrs. Fairbands was beautifully attired in black net with garnishings of black and gold; Mrs. John T. Wood in black grenadine with point lace; and Miss Wood in white muslin over pink.

The guests were received from eight until ten o'clock ushered by Mr. Philip Clifford of Portland, Maine; Mr. Fred Howe of Wollaston; Mr. Alfred Levensaler of Thomastown, Maine; and Mr. Joseph Bell of Andover, Mass.

HERE AND THERE.

Local Brevities of the City of Presidents.

Just a little more snow arrived today.

The Tawasentha club meets this evening.

Bradford Boyden is seriously ill at his home on Botolph street.

Are you going to see the Saw Mill scene in Uncle Josh Spruceby?

Sponges and chamois skin are leaders today at the pharmacy of C. C. Hearn.

The Street department did good work in Ward Five Monday sanding the sidewalks.

Poles have been erected on De Moines road by the Electrics Light and Power Co.

Harry Caldwell of Washington street has gone to Keene, N. H., on a two weeks' vacation.

Many Wollaston young people enjoyed coasting Monday evening, while others went sleigh riding.

Eaton Ice Co. is harvesting some ten inch ice. The prospects of a good crop are decidedly favorable.

A nine-pound girl blessed the family of Dr. and Mrs. William G. Curtis of Wollaston on Friday, Jan. 11.

An old fashioned "Husking Bee" is one of the interesting scenes in Uncle Josh Spruceby. Some red ears are found too.

The coasting on Butler's hill at Atlantic has been excellent the past few days and thoroughly enjoyed by the young people.

The Gleaner's circle of King's Daughters met at the home of Mrs. George Litchfield, Warren avenue, Monday afternoon.

Work has been commenced by Commissioner Knowlton filling up Teel pond at Atlantic, to abate the nuisance that has long existed there.

A few inches more of snow would result in good sleighing. The foundation ice is hard, so that a light coating of snow would make smooth slipping.

Commissioner Knowlton is widening Centre street near Capens bridge. The street at this point is being constantly overflowed and to overcome this it will be filled up.

C. L. Prescott is cutting ice at Flat Ledge pond, Quincy Neck, for the Quincy Beef Co. The ice is of excellent quality and from six to seven inches thick.

The rummage sale held in the old Post Office at Atlantic last Saturday afternoon was largely attended, and as a financial result $40 were netted. The sale continued Monday.

There is a new light on Botolph street which is much appreciated by the residents of the street. It has long been needed as that street and Atlantic street were two of the darkest in town.

The officers of the Guild of St. Perpetua of St. Chrysostom's church for the ensuing year are as follows: President, Verne Fowler; Vice President, Abbie Baker; Treasurer, Mira Brown; Secretary, Lucy Seward.

The Meadow Brook Ice Co. has marked off its ice pond and work housing crop will be commenced in a few days. The pond is remarkably free from foreign growth this year and they expect to get some of the clearest and purest ice this year ever cut from the pond.

The attractive estate of Benjamin J. Weeks is advertised for sale at auction, and also the household furniture. The many friends of Mr. and Mrs. Weeks will regret to learn that they are to move from town. Mr. Weeks was recently superintendent of the Quincy & Boston street railway and has accepted a position as superintendent of a street railway and electric light plant at Tacoma, Washington. He will leave Quincy, Jan. 29, to assume his new office.

ST. CHRYSOSTOMS.

The Annnal Church Meeting—Progress of Society Reviewed.

The annual meeting of the parish of St. Chrysostom's church, Wollaston, was held Monday evening. The attendance was the largest in the history of the parish and perfect harmony prevailed. The officers elected are: Warden, George H. Paige; Treasurer, William G. Rose; Clerk, Percy L. Davidson; Vestrymen for one year, Charles J. Hennigar; Vestrymen for two years, Edward A. Lyman and Charles G. Lee; Lay delegates to Archdeaconry of New Bedford, W. G. Rose.

Rev. C P. Mills rector of the parish read parts of a history of the parish from its earliest days prepared by him during the year. He spoke of the meetings held by Rev. Mr. Cotton in 1884, and of the revival of the work in 1892 under Mr. Arthur Bumpsu, then lay reader. The present church building was erected in 1894, through the efforts of some few earnest workers assisted by Christ church, Quincy. Rev. Mr. Mills became the permanent rector in 1895, from which time until the present the church has prospered greatly and the outlook for greater work in the future is very promising.

After the adjournment of the business meeting a social hour was enjoyed during which light refreshments were served under the direction of Mrs. W. H. Godfrey.

Distinguished---Extinguished.

An editorial of the Herald rather reflects on the action of Presidential Elector Shaw of this city. It says: "The meeting of the electors of the President and Vice-President at the State House yesterday was in all respects but one characterized by a proper dignity. The choice of ex-Gov. Brackett, in place of ex-Gov. Wolcott deceased, made the number full. The manner in which this was accomplished was fit and becoming. The result of the ballot was the expected one, for it has come to pass that the duties of electors are no longer deliberative but purely formal. The one violation of the dignity of the proceedings was the action of Mr. Shaw of Quincy, one of the electors, in nominating himself as the messenger to carry the vote of the state to Washington, and asking for a recess to permit him to make personal appeals to members, for that is what the term "conversation" plainly meant. It was an exhibition of indecorum which will be remembered long. The immediate consequence was hardly what might have been expected. That one should have voted for him is a surprise. Mr. Shaw has certainly distinguished himself. He has also extinguished himself."

A Familiar Falsehood.

When a customer seeks to purchase some well-known, widely advertised, standard article, and the dealer tries to sell him something else claiming the offered substitute to be "just as good," that dealer is guilty of flagrant falsehood.

If the substitute were just as good it would sell on its own merits and would be called for by customers instead of having to be unloaded upon them by means of falsehood and deceit.

When the dealer says "just as good," ask yourself "just as good" for whom? You will find in the answer to that question the motive of substitution, which is the extra profit paid the dealer by the sale of the substitutes and imitations of standard wares. Practically the dealer says, when practicing the gentle art of substitution, "This is 'just as good' for you, because it is a great deal more profitable for me, and anything is good enough for you which increases my profits."

Hall Wanted.

A small hall suitable for entertainment purposes is one of the necessities of Quincy Point district. Several organizations connected with the ship building plant are now on the look out for suitable quarters, but so far, their efforts have been in vain. Organizations, which now meet in Weymouth would prefer to meet at Quincy Point, thereby saving time and car fare. They hesitate to move their headquarters at Quincy as the same objections apply there.

—"Jonnie Tripp, come here. Don't you understand that when I tap this bell I want you all to sit down promptly?" "Yes'm. But I got to take my time." "What do you mean by that?" "Why, you see, ma'am, the last time my mamma patched these trousers she forgot to take the needle out of the patch."

In Holland a law making vaccination of school children compulsory went into effect in 1873. Prior to that time the average death rate from smallpox was 89 in every 100,000. For the ensuing 16 years the average was 7 in 100,000.

NEW HOUSES

FOR SALE.

Just to remind you that I have another lot of houses nearly completed, I will list these three bargains:

Many were disappointed on the last lot so be on hand early if you would be in it.

First—A six room Single House, bath and set tubs, with hot and cold water, papered to suit purchaser, large lot $2100, $300 down; balance at low rate of interest. Just the place for some street railway employee.

Also, one of eight rooms and bath, Independence avenue; all modern improvements, bounds on two streets, can sell for $500 less than real value. This house is of the popular size to suit any business man, and is very roomy and convenient. I don't like to have other builders know how I am cutting prices, but $3,000 buys this one, look at it and compare with others you see building.

Another, and a money maker for some one with only an ounce of pluck. This is a two-family House, 5 rooms and bath each, and 60 foot lot, $3,000. Pay in $500 on this and I will guarantee you a twenty five per cent. investment for one year; who would dare invest in a twenty-five per cent. GUARANTEED investment.

Remember these houses are built by competent workmen, by the day, of the best material, and are personally superintended by the owner, are but four minutes to station, electrics pass, and everything is most desirable as a residential section. All houses are connected with sewer and cellars are perfectly dry.

Come and look them over and select one that suits you. Can be seen any day.

Children's Corner.

The Ledger's walks lately have been among children, and happening into a school of grade 3 last week we saw more than 50 girls and boys working together. The way they twisted number 14 was a caution to dunces. Addition, substraction, multiplication, division and fractions with and without remainders were quickly solved, but the marvel to our old heads, was, that the whole big class seemed one pupil, as each pair of eyes and ears acted as one with the teacher.

Then a story was read, when all joined in laughter, a nice little bit of poetry recited, a song, and all were rested by simple physical exercises in gymnastics.

A teacher with us from a school near the State House, said, "there is no use talking, Quincy schools do have better teaching than many others," but Supt. Lull said the teachers work hard and are not over paid in our city.

IS FOREIGN TERRITORY

Decision Rendered by Supreme Court as to Cuba

CASE OF EMBEZZLER NEELY

As to His Offense Being Extraditable Decided In the Affirmative, Thus Upholding the Ruling of the Circuit Court—Justices Were All In Accord

Washington, Jan. 15.—Secretary Root says that he is glad to hear that the supreme court decided that Neely could be extradited, for the reason that the failure of the United States to return Neely to Cuba for trial for the embezzlement of Cuban postal funds would give American justice a black eye in Cuba, especially as the United States was doing all it could to reform and purify the administration of justice in that island.

The court held that Cuba is foreign territory, our only purpose in the war with Spain being to free the Cubans from Spanish domination. The decision was based upon the act of June 6, 1890, which act was held to be constitutional.

Justice Harlan handed down the court's opinion, which was unanimous, an immediately after the opinion was concluded an order was issued requiring that the mandate in the case be issued at once.

The case came up on appeal by Neely from the judgment of the circuit court for the southern district of New York, remanding him to the custody of the marshal of that district to await transportation to Cuba on a warrant of arrest issued under the provisions of the new law. The facts in the case were reviewed by the justice, and the ground upon which Neely attacked the constitutionality of the law. The first question discussed was whether or not Cuba was a foreign country. This, Justice Harlan said, was not difficult to answer:

Cuba was, under the resolution authorizing the president to use the United States forces to free it from Spanish dominion, the terms of the treaty of Paris of December, 1898, the action of the military powers of the United States subsequent to the ratification of the treaty, foreign territory. It could not be considered in any legal or international sense as part of the United States. The island, he continued, was none the less foreign territory because it was under a military form of government.

The results of the Spanish war could not have been avoided by the United States under international law, even if it had been desired to do so, and the government was compelled to hold Cuba in trust for the people of the island until the people there had formed a government for themselves, and to pacify it in the meantime. The act of June 6, 1900, was in execution of the terms of the treaty, so far as they applied to persons in Cuba. It was competent for congress to provide by legislation for carrying out the guarantees of protection of life and property in Cuba made by the United States in the treaty.

Neely's citizenship did not give him the right, said Justice Harlan, to set it up as a protection against extradition to a country where he had committed a crime in violation of its laws, to be punished there for his acts.

The contention of Neely that the military occupation of Cuba was unwarranted by the constitution and an invasion of the rights and territory of a friendly territory, the justice said, was without merit. The war against Spain was conducted jointly, and the resolutions of congress authorizing its prosecution did not commit the United States to the recognition of any government in Cuba until after one had been set up, after the island had been wrested from the control of Spain, the territory pacified and a condition of tranquility assured.

The judgment of the circuit court remanding Neely to the custody of the marshal, thus affirming the validity and constitutionality of the extradition law, was affirmed, and by an unanimous court.

As soon as the war department is officially informed of the decision of the supreme court, steps will be taken to secure the prisoner's removal to Havana for trial. Neely is now in custody in the Ludlow street jail at New York, pending the hearing of civil proceedings against him on the charge of having brought stolen goods into the state of New York.

American Association's Circuit

Washington, Jan. 15.—W. H. Watkins, owner of the Indianapolis Baseball club, reached Washington last night from a conference in New York with members of the National League circuit committee. As the outcome of this gathering, Mr. Watkins made the positive announcement that the circuit of the proposed American Association of Baseball clubs will include Boston, Philadelphia, Baltimore and Washington in the east, and Chicago, Milwaukee, Indianapolis and Detroit or Louisville in the west.

Automobiles For Mail Collection

Boston, Jan. 15.—Postmaster Hibbard has received authority from Washington to carry into effect his plans for using automobiles in the postal service. Three such vehicles, of a special design, suitable for the work, are to be built. Only the collection of mail is to be made with these vehicles.

HOAR IS RETURNED

Massachusetts Republicans Satisfied With His Course at Washington

Boston, Jan. 15.—The members of both parties in both branches of the legislature, contrary to the usual custom, held separate caucuses yesterday afternoon to nominate a United States senator to succeed Mr. Hoar. The Republicans of both house and senate were unanimous in their choice of the venerable senator to succeed himself, notwithstanding his antagonistic attitude on some party measures. But the house Democrats, although considerably in the minority, engaged in a spirited half hour's debate over the question of a candidate, and finally agreed on former Secretary of State Richard Olney. Four Democratic senators and four members of the house voted in their respective caucuses for Senator Hoar.

Each branch balloted today and Senator Hoar was elected. Both houses will convene in joint session tomorrow to compare votes, at which time the result will be formally announced by President Soule of the senate.

Invention Worth a Fortune

New York, Jan. 15.—The Herald says: According to the statements of Professor Pupin of Columbia university the American Bell Telephone company has paid him, instead of the $200,000 originally stated, nearly $500,000, for his recent invention of a system by which ocean telegraphy is made possible. This is in addition to the annual royalty of $15,000 a year during the life of the patents. Professor Pupin says that it will be perfectly possible to telephone to San Francisco and London, and to send cable messages to Europe at far less cost than at present.

A Setback For Lomasney

Boston, Jan. 15.—Without the aid of Martin M. Lomasney, Democrat and chief political figure of the party at present, the Boston board of aldermen organized yesterday by choosing Alderman James H. Doyle as chairman. Doyle was opposed by Lomasney. Alderman Stewart, Republican, contributed the necessary vote to elect Doyle. City Clerk Donovan, Clerk of Committees Dever and City Messenger Leary were each re-elected, and so the Democrats get both the chairmanship and city officers.

England In Need of Troops

London, Jan. 15.—"Owing to the drain for South Africa," says the Calcutta correspondent of The Times, "the India army is now 9000 below its normal strength, and contains 15,000 men who ought to have been relieved and sent home. There are also 5000 others who will soon be in the same position." The Times, referring to the dispatch editorially, suggests that if recruits could be obtained to fill their places, an offer might be made to these 15,000 whose time has expired to serve in South Africa.

Liquor and Cigarets at West Point

West Point, N. Y., Jan. 15.—The congressional investigation held three sessions at the West Point academy yesterday, in the course of which they elicited the fact that the upper class men carry intoxicating liquor into the reservation, and consume quite a considerable quantity of it. Another stringent rule seems to have been broken with impunity. This is the regulation prohibiting smoking. It was acknowledged that the majority of the cadets were cigaret smokers.

Definite Proposals Wanted

St. John's, Jan. 15.—Joseph Chamberlain has applied to the colonial ministry to renew for the present year the modus vivendi respecting the French shore question, in order to enable negotiations to be conducted with France during the coming summer for a settlement of the question. The cabinet is not willing to agree to this suggestion, unless some definite proposition is made.

CHURCH AND STATE

French Premier Declares That the Rights of Both Will Be Respected

Paris, Jan. 15.—In the chamber of deputies yesterday the government was interpellated by Marcel Sembat, Radical Socialist, on the "interference of the pope in the domestic affairs of France," as shown in the recent letter of the pope to Cardinal Trichard, the archbishop of Paris, dealing with the proposed bill known as the law of associations and aiming at the suppression of religious communities, in which the pontiff defended the religious orders. M. Sembat asked the government to protest against this letter.

M. Ribot, the former premier, defended the pope, who, he said, was entitled to raise his voice when he thought religious interests were in peril.

The debate closed with a declaration by Premier Waldeck-Rousseau, who said that the government saw no threat in the pope's letter as to missions in the east. "The letter of his holiness," continued the premier, "simply said that, if the French missionaries disappeared, they would be replaced by foreign missionaries. The government will not tolerate the organization of resistance against the laws of the country. No interference on the part of the pope will be allowed in the law of associations, when it is voted upon. The pope has rights as the spiritual head of Catholics, but the state also has rights written in the concordant, which it will see respected."

This declaration rallied around the government all the Leftists and Centralists, who voted approval of the premier's declarations, by 429 to 95, and confidence in his firmness to assure the defense of the rights of the state. The chamber then adopted a resolution embodying both paragraphs.

Other extremist motions, one proposing the separation of church and state, and another proposing to denounce the concordant, were rejected by overwhelming majorities.

The result has greatly elated the Ministerialists, who declare that it presages victory for the law of associations.

Hackman Tells Story of Murder

Paterson, N. J., Jan. 15.—The trial of Walter L. McAllister, Andrew Campbell and William A. Death, three of the four men accused of the murder of Jennie Bosschieter, a mill girl, commenced yesterday before Judge Dixon. George J. Kerr, the fourth man under indictment, has been granted a separate trial. Of the four witnesses who testified, the testimony of Gus Schulthorpe, the driver of the hack during the horrible midnight ride, was the most important as well as the most startling. He graphically described the taking of the almost unconscious girl from the saloon to the hack, of the ride out of the city and the unspeakable incidents attendant on the climax of a night of crime.

Commander Delgado Gives Up

Washington, Jan. 15.—General MacArthur cablegrams to the war department as follows: "Delgado, commander-in-chief, Iloilo province, Panay, surrendered Jan. 11, to Robert P. Hughes, brigadier general volunteers, with four officers, 21 men and 14 rifles. His command much scattered. Other surrenders expected during the next few days; important; signified end organized armed resistance Iloilo province, Panay." The assurances for the end of "organized armed resistance" indicates that there is considerable of the unorganized marauding still in progress.

Terrible Experience In Snowdrifts

London, Jan. 15.—The Odessa correspondent of The Daily Mail, giving later details of the experiences of the railway passengers who were snowbound while on the way to Odessa, says: "The drifts have hardened to a consistency of ice, and in one case a tunnel had to be cut through a drift 400 yards wide and 38 feet deep. Many passengers who had attempted to walk here were found by sleighing parties, frozen to death. Advices from many points tell of packs of wolves killing and devouring travelers.

Miss Jeschke the Champion

Chicago, Jan. 15.—The individual championship in the women's bowling tournament went to Miss Elizabeth Jeschke, who rolled 701 points for five games. In addition to winning the honor of being the best woman bowler in the United States, Miss Jeschke received a silver cup valued at $100.

Scaffolding Gave Way

Jamestown, N. Y., Jan. 15.—Eight men were at work on a scaffolding over a deep reservoir at the pumping station here, when the framework gave way, and they fell 30 feet into the shallow water of the reservoir. Nearly every one had broken bones and bruises, four being fatally injured.

Invented Bicycle and Folding Bed

New York, Jan. 15.—Townsend Saxton, 70 years old, who invented one of the first bicycles ever used in America, died yesterday at his home in Babylon, L. I. Mr. Saxton later invented the first folding bed.

ONE WOMAN

With two faces; one face bright with health, the other face pinched and drawn by illness. Many a woman can take the portrait of herself made but a few years ago, and holding it by her face in the mirror realize a similar change.

Behind this change in form and feature is always disease, and generally disease which affects the womanly organism. The backache and bearing-down pains put a heavy strain on the nervous system. There is loss of sleep, lack of appetite, and, as a natural result, loss of strength and flesh.

Doctor Pierce's Favorite Prescription cures diseases of the womanly organs. It establishes regularity, dries enfeebling drains, heals inflammation and ulceration and cures female weakness.

"Words cannot tell what I suffered for thirteen years with womb trouble and dragging-down pains through my hips and back," writes Mrs. John Dickson, of Grenfell, Assiniboia Dist., N.W. Ter. "I can't describe the misery it was to lie on my feet long at a time. I could not eat nor sleep. Often I wished to die. Then I saw Dr. Pierce's medicines advertised and thought I would try them. Had not taken one bottle till I was feeling well. After I had taken five bottles of 'Favorite Prescription' and one of 'Golden Medical Discovery' I was like a new woman. Could eat and sleep and do all my own work. I would entreat of any lady suffering from female weakness to give Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription a fair trial, for I know the benefit she will receive."

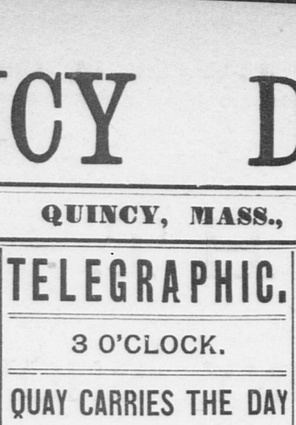
QUAY CARRIES THE DAY

Pennsylvania Sends Him Back to United States Senate.

RESULT OF GROSS PERFIDY

In the Opinion of Those Who Opposed Him — Senator Frye Is Returned by Republicans of Maine — Senatorial Contests In Other Parts of Country

Harrisburg, Jan. 16.—Colonel M. S Quay, regular Republican nominee for United States senator, was elected yesterday by the Pennsylvania legislature to fill the vacancy created by the expiration of his term on March 4, 1899 His combined vote in the senate and house was 130, or three more than the number necessary to a choice.



SENATOR QUAY.

The house and senate met jointly at noon today, and canvassed the vote, and declared an election. Mr. Quay's commission has already been signed, and he will take it to Washington this afternoon.

The anti-Quay Republicans last night gave out a statement, in which they say that at their meeting, held on Dec. 31, 65 members of the legislature signed or had previously signed a pledge that they would not, under any circumstances, vote for the election of M. S. Quay for senator, nor would they enter any caucus called and controlled in his interest or in his behalf.

"Without any change, however, in the present situation," the statement says, "these men broke their solemn pledges and voted directly for M. S. Quay for United States senator on the first ballot.

"No language could suffice properly to characterize perfidity so gross. The pledge was voluntarily taken, and it has been openly and unblushingly broken.

"Pennsylvania has been doubly disgraced by the return of M. S. Quay to the senate. First, because a majority of the electors of the commonwealth selected representatives opposed to his election, and, second, because of the means employed by him and his agents to secure the votes necessary to reimpose him as a senator upon a cheated and humiliated commonwealth."

The statement bears the signatures of 58 senators and representatives, who opposed Quay to the last.

Frye From Pine Tree State

Augusta, Me., Jan. 16.—The principal work of the session of the legislature yesterday was the election of a United

SENATOR FRYE.

States senator. In the house William P. Frye received 107 votes, and Swasey M. Staples 13. In the senate Mr. Frye received 24, and Mr. Staples 1.

Clark Is One Vote Short

Helena, Mont., Jan. 16.—William A. Clark of Butte lacked one vote of the number required to elect him to the United States senate yesterday. Had the vote been in joint session Clark would have been elected, as he received a majority of the votes cast. A joint ballot will be taken today.

The Nebraska Contest

Lincoln, Neb., Jan. 16.—The first vote on the two United States senators to be elected was taken yesterday by the two houses of the legislature separately. The leading candidate for the long term was Meiklejohn, who received 16 votes.

Jerry Simpson Defeated

Topeka, Jan. 16.—At a caucus of the fusion members of the legislature last night, David Overmyer of Topeka was nominated for United States senator, defeating Jerry Simpson.

Dubois to Be Returned

Boise, Ida., Jan. 16.—The legislature ballotted in separate session for United States senator yesterday. The vote in the senate ensures the election of former Senator Fred T. Dubois.

AID FOR KITCHENER

Indications That British Government Has Acted None Too Soon

London, Jan. 16.—The government has decided to send large reinforcements to Lord Kitchener, and the war office, in carrying out this decision, has determined to enlist 5000 yeomanry volunteers. At a meeting held at the war office this plan and others for securing more men were discussed and approved.

The casualty list shows that there has been a severe engagement, with a loss of 6 killed, 17 wounded and 5 missing, at Murraysburg, where the Dutch are said to have been joining the invaders. Murraysburg is 16 miles west of Graaff Reinet.

Indications are not wanting that the decision of the government to send reinforcements has not been taken a moment too soon. Colonel Colville's mobile column, which has been pursuing the Boers, has been obliged to rest at Greylingstad, to erect a blockhouse, and to cease operations until reinforcements of mounted troops arrive.

General Paget has taken his force to Pretoria to refit. Many of the men are suffering from enteric fever.

Three hundred Boers captured a small British convoy at Bronkhurstspruit, near Pretoria, but made off after liberating the prisoners.

General Brabant, while addressing a conference of mayors at Cape Town, said the authorities were anxious to keep the war away from Cape Town, if possible, but that the only hope of doing this lay in sending 1000 men to the front. He urged that no precaution should be omitted to prevent the enemy from advancing further south.

Roberts Appreciates the Situation

London, Jan. 16.—Lord Roberts yesterday further emphasized the unsatisfactory condition of South Africa in a letter to the mayor of Portsmouth, postponing the presentation of a sword of honor from that city. He says: "It is most distasteful to me to be honored and feted and called upon to rejoice while so many are in bitter grief, and before we can properly return thanks that the cloud is being rolled away which has for more than a year darkened the homes and crushed the hearts of so many in our country."

Knife and Chair For Weapons

Malden, Mass., Jan. 16.—Daniel Sullivan was arrested last night on the charge of assault with a dangerous weapon, while his wife was locked up for drunkenness, after two cuts in her body and left arm had been attended to by physicians. Police officers found Mrs. Sullivan at her home in a defensive attitude, with an uplifted chair ready to strike her husband, whom she claimed had stabbed her. Her dress was covered with blood. Sullivan had a pocket knife in his hand when the officers arrived.

Gotham May Become Kruger's Home

London, Jan. 16.—The Daily Express says: John E. Mulholland, who arrived in London last week, bearing an invitation from a number of well-known New York citizens to Mr. Kruger to proceed to the United States, has been to see him, and has offered him a palatial residence in New York city. In the course of an interview, Mr. Mulholland said that he was quite sure Mr. Kruger would accept the invitation and would go to New York about the middle of next month.

BRONCHITIS

may mean a mere cold or a chronic incurable inflammation of wind-pipes.

The quickest relief, for a cold, is also the most effectual balm for the worst condition of wind-pipes and lungs.

It takes the edge off a cold in a night, and relieves it progressively—one forgets it after a little.

An old bronchitis, however, is obstinate. Nothing restores the tissues, when once destroyed; and an old bronchitis has gradually impared and partly destroyed the lining of those small pipes between throat and lungs.

Scott's emulsion of cod-liver oil is the balm; it sooths if it cannot restore.

We'll send you a little to try, if you like.

"ONLY TRUE BAPTISM"

Administered to Thirty-Three Shivering Converts

MEN WERE ROBED IN BLACK

Some of the Women Wore Nightgowns, of Which They Appeared Ashamed—First Woman Balked and Had to Be Pulled Into the Font by Dowie

Boston, Jan. 16.—Baptism was administered to 33 converts yesterday by John Alexander Dowie, founder of the Christian Catholic Church of Zion. No white Baptist church would lend him a font, so Mr. Dowie promptly went among the negro brethren. They lent him the Church of the Morning Star, an edifice once used as a Hebrew synagogue, in whose halls the tablets of the law, graven in Hebrew characters, still hang.

When the doors at the back of the church first swung open the first notes of a hymn startled the ears of a few waiting spectators in the pews. The men candidates marched down one aisle and the women down the other. At least three of them knew the hymn they sang. The men were not without a certain dignity, clad in long black cassocks, and led by a young, clear-voiced enthusiast, they bore themselves without sheepishness. But the women were arrayed in more motley garb.

Though Dowie himself, in big rubber boots, strutted at their head, they huddled along as if frightened at this ordeal. Some were robed in black, like their brethren; others wore long, white night gowns, and seemed ashamed of them. They all took seats in the front of the church, and one noticed that most of them were past middle life—men and women who looked as though they had tried the religion of many evangelists, and were still looking for something new. There were gray haired women, not many years from the allotted three score and ten, and baldheaded, tottering men—one, tall, clean-shaven and fresh, who towered above his wrinkled and faded companions—and three or four golden-haired little girls.

The leader of their sect stood before them and read from Matthew's gospel the story of John the Baptist, explaining that the triune baptism he would administer was the only true baptism, and necessary for salvation. Then, with an assistant, he stepped down to the font.

Despite the efforts of a negro janitor clothed in dirty white, and a white deacon clad in shiny black, who had poured steaming water from a dozen tin washboilers into the tank, and attempted to temper the chill with red hot pokers, Alexander, Nicholas and the two Daniels who followed first into Jordan, shivered with cold. But Mr. Dowie clasped each man, in his turn, about the waist, and dipped him three times under the water. The penitent came up dripping and ran down stairs.

The first woman balked. She had to be pulled into the font, and when there began to cry. For a long time she would not tell her name, thinking in that way to cheat the leader of her faith, but he reasoned with her, and at last dipped the struggling Matilda her full three times under the flood. Almost the last group to go down consisted of five aged dames, bent and tottering. But they stood the test more valiantly than their younger sisters. The oldest of them all, in fact, was the only one who went down smiling and came out smiling. She alone did not screw her face into a frightened grimace before she went under.

Then Dr. Dowie came out of the tank, and, raising one shiny rubber glove above his head, pronounced a benediction. The ordinance was finished.

Detectives Waiting For Him

New York, Jan. 16.—Acting under instructions from Chief of Detectives Titus, Scotland Yard officials have been instructed to arrest today at Liverpool, as he steps off an incoming steamer, the defaulting confidential clerk of a large wholesale house of this city, who is said to have carried with him at the time of his flight $50,000 of the firm's funds, and to have embezzled nearly $200,000 before he was even suspected. No further details are made public.

For Street Car Injuries

Boston, Jan. 16.—Verdicts were returned by a jury in the third session of the superior court in the suits brought by Jeanette and Marcus Haley of Newton against the Boston Elevated Railway company. Mrs. Haley sought $25,000 damages for personal injuries sustained by reason of being thrown to the ground while alighting from a car. She was awarded $6000, and her husband, who sued for medical expenses, etc., was given $2000.

Won't Fight Over It

London, Jan. 16.—The Daily Telegraph, which assumes that the cabinet council will soon discuss the Hay-Pauncefote treaty amendments, expresses the opinion that, if the United States government presses for the abrogation of the Clayton-Bulwer treaty in the "usual diplomatic manner," it will not find the British government difficult to deal with.

Good Afternoon.

Something will have to be done very soon to provide more room at City Hall. Many of the officers are cramped for room and it would not be surprising if the City Council was soon asked to make some changes.

The growth of High schools noted in the annual report of the State Board of Education, is exemplified to a remarkable degree in the Quincy High. We doubt if any High school in the State can show such a marvelous development in a few years. A fine building, generous appropriations, able and popular teachers, and the cooperation of the citizens and the press are some of the reasons in Quincy.

It is not every winter that a Houghs Neck man could be depended on to collect mail from boxes in Quincy at 6 A. M. Mr. Dunham starts from Houghs Neck every morning and reports at the corner of Liberty and Centre streets, South Quincy, at 6 o'clock. He then collects from all the boxes at South Quincy and from all boxes between the residence of W. B. Rice on Adams street and the post-office, about 35 boxes in all, before 7 A. M.

There is but little enterest over the appointments of Mayor Hall, as the general impression seems to be that there will be but few changes if any from his official family of 1900. Henry H. Faxon is out after the scalp of Chief Ripley and the air is full of rumors, but they are rumors and that is all. Mayor Hall is keeping his own counsel and when the proper time comes, will let the citizens know who he has selected for the numerous offices which he has to fill.

Drift of Opinion.

☞Matters have come to a sorry pass if a Republican of unquestioned legal ability cannot make public so often as he pleases his conclusions concerning a Constitutional question of grave moment, or concerning the moral phases of that question, which may appeal to him profoundly, without being accused of party disloyalty for doing so or having improper motives attributed to him.—Chicago Tribune.

☞The biggest lobby in Washington is composed of free traders and foreign representatives opposed to the ship subsidy bill. If the welfare of the United States is considered, this European loppy will be disappointed and the bill passed in the most effective form.—Milford Journal.

☞Only a few of the American people believe that the anti-canteen bill was honestly interpreted; and had there not been one actual and one possible war on hand, other serious questions in dispute and fierce personal dissentions in the opposition, no one can tell how far that feeling would have influenced the result. People will endure being squarely voted down for a long time, but to see the plain and obvious intent, as understood by all members of the house and senate on both sides, and by the president when he signed the bill, and by all opponents of the bill in the country, overthrown by a construction conceived as the fruit of long meditation under the influence of a powerful prepossession in favor of the interests involved, is something harder to endure than a long succession of square defeats in open combat.—New York Christian Advocate.

Col. Dyer Criticised.

It seems that others beside Mr. Shaw are being criticised. The Post said editorially on Tuesday:

A badly false note was struck by Colonel Dyer in his speech at the meeting of the Massachusetts electors yesterday when seconding the nomination of Sergeant Andrew Jackson for messenger to carry the vote to Washington. "The Democrats," he said, "have always claimed to be friends of the working people. Let us give them the lie by recognizing this man."

This is altogether too patronizing. Here in Massachusetts where every man who amounts to anything is a working man, no such class distinction as that which Colonel Dyer assumes is admitted to exist. Why, in that august electoral college to which he appealed to "recognize the working people," the members themselves are working men. Sergeant Jackson, whom they "recognized," makes shoes; but there is Mr. Whiting of Holyoke who makes paper, and Mr. Story of Essex who makes ships, and Mr. Anthony of Fairhaven who makes newspapers, and so on all through the list. They are all working men. Even General Blackmar we venture to say, would not hold his high position at the bar if he did not put in more solid hours of work over his cases than any shoemaker of Brockton passes at his bench.

It is foolish and unseemly, in this community, for any man to set up an arbitrary division of our people into men who work and men who are not "workmen," and assume that the latter confer a favor upon the former when they "recognize" them. No such discrimination can be made; and Mr. Shaw of Quincy, who we believe makes chemicals, was entirely right in theory when he offered himself as a candidate against the man who makes shoes. Each is an honorable occupation, each exacts hard work of the man who follows it, and neither of them gives the right to look down upon or patronize the man who follows the other.

The choice for messenger to the electoral college is notably excellent. Sergeant Jackson is one of the real heroes of the Civil War and a good citizen. It is hardly fair to couple this honor with the intimation that he is chosen because he represents a class that must be recognized in order to "give the lie to the Democrats." This belittles the whole affair.

IT IS SAID

That the Public Is Waiting for Another Quincy Neck Sensation.

That the new town will pan out like the Little Italy colony.

That the battleship contracts may also pass Quincy by.

That the Fore River Company is not anxious to be incorporated.

That it was reported that it would be incorporated a fortnight ago.

That this is why real estate moves slow in Ward Two.

That possibly the number of men to be employed has been overestimated.

That the total now is only 300.

That the Fore River Company would like to be a voluntary association like the Massachusetts Electric Co.

That there are too many of these associations which are not incorporated.

That incorporations usually have a better financial standing.

That they often get more credit than they should.

That the Hanley defender will never be built.

That the Quincy boat builder has received considerable free advertising.

That he has built some speedy yachts.

That the Genesee was all right.

Hanley Watched.

A dispatch from Bristol, R. I., Tuesday, says:

It was learned today that Designer Herreshoff has modelled and ordered plans for a centreboard sloop in order to be in readiness to meet the proposed Hanley boat creation, in case it is constructed. Matters coming to the surface relative to the Hanley centreboarder are watched pretty closely at Bristol. It is understood here that a syndicate, of which August Belmont is the head, is back of the scheme to build a centreboard boat here.

New York Stone Law.

The Granite Cutters' Journal for January says editorially: Details of the recent decision in the Appellate Division of the New York Supreme Court on the case of Contractor Treat vs. Bird A. Coler, comptroller, etc., have not reached headquarters in time to appear in this issue, but a carefully prepared statement on same will be printed next month. It will suffice at present to state that the validity of the stone-dressing law has not been impaired or nullified. The decision, about which there was so much publicity on the part of the daily press, affected the payment of a stone cut in New Jersey and which had been inspected and accepted by an inpector of street work without knowledge on his part that the stone had been cut outside of New York State. Thereafter a contractor entered a protest to the comptroller of New York city against payment for the stone in question, and on the strength of the protest payment was refused, hence the suit in court. The details will make interesting reading, the more so as some of the men indirectly involved for lending aid to the court case were very much directly interested if the law had been declared illegal. As it is, the status of the law remains intact; and there are two dissenting judges from the decision directing the comptroller to pay the contractor, so the case will go to the Supreme Court, on appeal, and for the time being those interested in the defeat of the law will find little solace in the outcome of the plot they had secretly worked up during the past twelve months.

Less Births in Barre.

During the year 1900 there were 260 births and 173 deaths in the city of Barre. The number of marriage licenses issued during the same time was 102.

These figures, says the Times, are not so pleasing as were the figures for 1899 as the death rate shows a considerable increase while the number of births has decreased. During 1899 there were 316 births and 123 deaths.

—Don C. Forbes came to Sioux City, Ia., and sold some wheat for $75. On his way home he was waylaid by masked men, who searched him and only found 5 cents While the hold-up was in progress a woman drove up and made as if to come to the rescue. One of the highwaymen held her at bay with a revolver until Forbes's pockets were thoroughly explored, and then the rascals made off. The woman was Forbes's mother, who had the $75 on her person.

—Wild deer are increasing in all parts of Connecticut, and they are occasionally found feeding with domestic animals. They are more numerous in the State than at any time for 150 years.

In Development of the Public School System.

The Growth of the Public High Schools.

Proposed Increase in School Fund of State to $10,000,000.

"The most notable educational movement of the century has been the remarkable development of the public school system," said the State Board of Education in its 64th report of the Legislature today. Continuing the report says: The Commonwealth has been foremost in carrying on this movement and placing within the reach of all classes the means of the broadest possible training.

The most notable feature in the development of the public school system is its growth of the public high schools. Under the fostering care of the State their number has so increased and their influence extended that every child may now secure the advantage of a high school education. These institutions have become the people's colleges, and in them the leaders of the future are to be nurtured. The arbitrary attitude of the colleges towards the high schools, which formerly existed, has been changed to a spirit of friendly co-operation.

The application of the elective system in high schools should be carefully guarded, lest it become the means of avoiding education rather than obtaining it. Every course of study should be sufficiently flexible to permit easy adaptation to individual needs, but the choice of studies should not be determined by the caprice of boys and girls. No pupil should be deprived of the opportunity to secure the toughness of mental fiber which is the result of prolonged and strenuous effort.

Evening school courses of study offer the widest possible scope and liberty of selection. Most of the evening high school pupils are mature; hence, as a rule, their choice is discriminating and judicious. The amount of good these schools are doing is inestimable.

The results already accomplished by the introduction of manual training in high schools abundantly justify the expenditures which have been made. The personal relation of the teacher to the pupil is considered, and the effects of departmental teaching, when carried to the extreme in large high schools, both on teacher and pupils are noted.

The Board recommends that provision should be made for the proper supervision of normal instruction. The direction of the special department of normal work requires that the Board should be in closer touch with the educational and administrative methods of the schools.

A sketch of the origin and growth of the Massachusetts school fund is given, together with the different methods of distribution of the income which at different times have been adopted. The proposed increase of the fund to $10,000,000 is considered at some length, and it is stated that:—

"With an increase of the school fund such, that the amount to be distributed to the towns, under existing legislation is no: far from double the amount hitherto available, legislation in the direction of a State tax for the purpose of maintaining a uniform standard of schools in the State would be, in the opinion of the Board, neither necessary nor desirable in this Commonwealth.

"From the beginning the burden of the schools has been borne almost entirely by the cities and towns. It was never the intention that the income of the school fund, or any form of State aid, should be so employed as to diminish, render unnecessary, sacrifice any effort on the part of the people. Any considerable sum, whether the income of a fund or produced by the irritation and uncertainty of an annual State tax, distributed generally to the towns would tend to weaken rather than to strengthen, to paralyze rather than to stimulate, the interest and effort of the people in the organization and care of the schools. The local control within certain general requirements of the State has been one of the elements of strength of the system. The municipalities have grown to be self-reliant and independent. As the local autonomy of the towns is the fundamental principle upon which the civic structure which we know as the Commonwealth is founded, so the voluntary self-sacrifice and self-denial of the people in the maintenance of the public schools lie at the foundation of the intelligence, the virtue and the humanity that are the proudest traits of New England character."

Dr. E. H. Capen joins the Board in its recommendations relative to the school fund, but dissents from the reasoning and conclusions of the two paragraphs above quoted, contending that, if the municipalities should fail "in providing the necessary facilities in all the different grades of public instruction, . . . no argument as to the importance of leaving these matters to local control will avail. The Constitution of the Commonwealth, drafted by John Adams, will summon the Legislature to its duty."

NEW HOUSES
FOR SALE.

Just to remind you that I have another lot of houses nearly completed, I will list these three bargains:

Many were disappointed on the last lot so be on hand early if you would be in it.

First—A six room Single House, bath and set tubs, with hot and cold water, papered to suit purchaser, large lot $2100. $300 down; balance at low rate of interest. Just the place for some street railway employee.

Also, one of eight rooms and bath, Independence avenue; all modern improvements, bounds on two streets, can sell for $500 less than real value. This house is of the popular size to suit any business man, and is very roomy and convenient. I don't like to have other builders know how I am cutting prices, but $3,000 buys this one, look at it and compare with others you see building.

Another, and a money maker for some one with only an ounce of pluck. This is a two-family House, 5 rooms and bath each, and 60 foot lot, $3,000. Pay in $500 on this and I will guarantee you a twenty five per cent. investment for one year; who would dare invest in a twenty-five per cent. GUARANTEED investment.

Remember these houses are built by competent workmen, by the day, of the best material, and are personally superintended by the owner, are but four minutes to station, electrics pass, and everything is most desirable as a residential section. All houses are connected with sewer and cellars are perfectly dry.

Come and look them over and select one that s its you. Can be seen any day.

HERE AND THERE.

Local Brevities of the City of Presidents.

Did you see the parade today?

The genial Uncle Josh holds forth at Music Hall tonight.

The light rain Tuesday made the sidewalks that have not been sanded very slippery.

Uncle Josh deserves a warm welcome tonight. A particularly good performance is expected.

The Republican City Committee will probably meet next Tuesday evening for organization.

Plainly lettered signs have been placed on top of the street cars giving their destination.

Rev. Dr. Todd will preach in the First United Presbyterian church, Fort Square, tonight at 7.30.

Matinee whist at the Granite City Club this afternoon, and members tournament this evening.

Judge Humphrey is still confined to his home by illness. Judge Pratt is officiating during his absence.

Harry O. Parker has sent the Ledger an interesting illustrated pamphlet of Southern Pines, North Carolina.

J. N. White is putting in a gasoline engine at his plant on Miller street. This will operate pneumatic tools and his derrick.

Deacon Bros. have recently equipped their plant on Centre street with pneumatic tools, which are operated by an electric motor, which also furnishes power to operate their large derrick.

Business in the granite line is a little quiet just at present, as it is between seasons. A lot of orders have been received for spring delivery, but most of them are for medium sized work.

The Twentieth Century whist club met Tuesday afternoon with Mrs James Richards on Centre street. Prizes for the best scores were awarded Mrs. E. Frank Mitchell and Mrs. George W. Brooks.

The class of 1901, Thayer Academy, is making every effort to surpass the class of 1900 which presented last year "The Private Secretary." They will present "The Magistrate," a popular college play.

Messrs. Elisha Packard, John W. Hersey and W. W. Adams attended the 25th annual meeting and banquet of the survivors of the 44th Massachusetts regiment of the Civil War, held at the Exchange club Tuesday evening.

Team D Won.

Team D won two games from Team C at the Merrymount alleys on Tuesday evening, and led 34 on the grand total. The third string was very close as the score shows:

TEAM C.	1	2	3	Total.

Granite Street Folly.

The Sewer department will probably be turned over to the Commissioner of Public Works as soon as that piece of folly on Granite street is completed. If more rapid progress is not made in the future than in the past it will be some time yet before the transfer. It looks as though the job is being made to last as long as possible. The trench that is being opened is a mass of ledge and considerable blasting is necessary. Aside from this it was necessary to burn wood along the surface to work out the frost. All of this work and additional expense is to connect one house with the public sewer, and the chances are ten to one that the owner of the building will not connect the house before spring, and a month from now would have been early enough to have commenced work laying the pipe.

Loyal Ladies.

At a regular meeting of the daughters of John Adams, Ladies' Loyal Orange lodge, held in Orange hall on Tuesday night, the following officers were installed by Supreme Grand Mistress, Mrs. Graham of Woburn:

A LESSON IN VALUES.

DOLLAR for dollar, pound for pound, there is more in Ivory Soap than in any household soap. It is easy to find a cheap soap; but to find purity and low price in a single soap is not easy. They combine in Ivory Soap. You can afford to use it in the laundry; you can not afford not to use it elsewhere. It is vegetable-oil soap, in the cheapest form in which it can be procured. You pay nothing for a fancy box, wrapper or perfume. It is all in the soap! It floats.

A REMEDY FOR THE GRIPPE.

A remedy recommended for patients afflicted with the Grippe is KEMP'S BALSAM, which is especially adapted for the throat and lungs. Don't wait for the first symptoms of the disease! get a bottle today and keep it for use the moment it is needed. If neglected the grippe has a tendency to bring on pneumonia. KEMP'S BALSAM prevents this by keeping the cough loose and the lungs free from inflammation. All druggists sell KEMP'S BALSAM at 25c. and 50c.

Children's Corner.

The Ledger happened in one of our Sunday Schools last Sunday morning, and a practical lesson on perserverance was being taught by a drawing on a board of some children pulling their sleds up a steep icy or snowy hillside. Perhaps this teacher had in mind a mite of a girl near Goffe street who, only just four years old, tugged at her little sled all Friday and Saturday but made no headway.

Finally, the little lady taking the rope over one wrist, got down on all fours, and crawled up the little hill, and eventually got to the top and came down bravely, alone, getting about one slide in six to that of her older companions.

That little girl will succeed in life, we thought, and the Sunday School picture marked, "perscverance," and "I'll try," was a good one to the children.

The sliding down and pulling up hill, strengthens more than one set of muscles too.

Teller Tyler Loses His Case

Boston, Jan. 16.—The United States circuit court of appeals sent down a decision affirming the judgment of the circuit court in the case of Joel G. Tyler, who was convicted of abstracting funds of the Safety Fund National bank of Fitchburg, of which he was teller. After his trial Tyler was sentenced to five years in the Worcester jail. His exceptions were to the method of challenging jurors and to the admission of certain evidence.

Money Was Hidden In Attic

Greenwich, Conn., Jan. 16.—Mrs. John Brennan died at Sound Beach Monday in the utmost destitution. Yesterday her 8-year-old daughter, in rummaging among some goods stored in the attic of the house, found a satchel containing $320. The Brennan family has lived in such poverty for a number of months past that they would have suffered from actual starvation had it not been for the good offices of the neighbors.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address.

REDISTRICTING PLANS

How the Bay State Is Likely to Be Affected

CHANGES IN HUB DISTRICT

Will Make One Portion More Republican and One More Democratic — Action In Regard to Lowell and Lawrence Appears to Be Unsettled

Washington, Jan. 16.—Plans for the redistricting of Massachusetts under the terms of the new Burleigh law, so far as understood here, are nearly completed. Most of the changes will naturally come in Boston, where the additional district allowed by this bill is to be carved out.

This will be made a safely Republican district, so that Boston will have, while this apportionment stands, at least one Republican member. Winthrop and ward 1 of East Boston will be taken off the Fitzgerald-Conry district and put into the Roberts district, which will give in exchange two strongly Democratic wards in Charlestown. This will make the Ninth district more strongly Democratic than now and the Seventh district more Republican.

It is the present plan to take Woburn from Knox's district and put it into McCall's, in part compensation for the Boston wards which will go from McCall's to the new district. It is the intention of the powers that be to shear McCall of most of his mugwump constituency in the Back Bay.

What will be done with Lowell and Lawrence sems to be an unsettled question. It would be the part of prudence to put them in different districts, as Knox has had two very close races, in both of which he was saved by the country towns. The rapid growth of these cities will leave room for a smaller country population, and whether the districts be made safely Republican by the selection of country towns with heavy Republican majorities is an open question.

Mr. Thayer's district, while but slightly changed, will be made a little harder for him to carry than now.

The western districts, Lawrence's and Gillett's, will remain substantially as at present, nor is there any purpose to make changes in the southern end of the state.

Congressional Proceedings

Washington, Jan. 16.—Some progress was made by the senate yesterday in the consideration of the army reorganization bill. Mr. Bacon's amendment, which has created much debate, was disposed of, and a tacit agreement has been reached for a "vote very soon." Mr. Bacon's amendment was to strike out of the bill the discretionary authority conferred upon the president to increase the size of the army. It was laid on the table.

While the senate was in executive session an effort was made to secure confirmation of the nomination of James S. Harlan, son of Justice Harlan of the United States supreme court, to be attorney general for Porto Rico, but action was prevented by the objection of Senator Pettigrew. There was no quorum present, and the senate adjourned without action.

The house spent another day on the river and harbor bill, without completing it. The friends of the bill successfully resisted all attempts to load down the bill with new projects, and only one or two unimportant amendments were adopted. The western members labored unsuccessfully to secure an entering wedge for the reclamation of arid lands, but received only very limited support.

Collector Abused His Office

Washington, Jan. 16.—E. T. Hatch, the collector of customs at St. Michael, Alaska, has been summarily removed by the president. He had held the office for several years. The collector had accepted bribes from steamboat captains in consideration of allowing them to overload their vessels with passengers during the rush of miners to Nome.

FOUND IN EMPTY HOUSE

Alleged Assailant of a Lynn Woman Captured by Big Squad of Police

Lynn, Mass., Jan. 16.—The police of this city and Saugus arrested Philip Francis, colored, aged about 33 years, early this morning, and they are confident that they have the man who attempted an assault on Doty Peterson, a Swedish domestic, aged 30 years, on Sachem avenue, on the night of Jan. 8. At the time of the assault, Miss Peterson was thrown to the ground and choked, her assailant having thrown a heavy ulster over her head. Her screams were heard, and neighbors appeared on the scene, and he made his escape.

The officers of this city learned that during the past week Francis has been seen around a logging camp in North Saugus, but a visit to that locality failed to locate him. City Marshal Burckes, with eight policemen, and several officers from Saugus again visited North Saugus this morning, and surrounded an unoccupied house on the Newburyport turnpike, where he was supposed to be in hiding. The door was broken in, and Francis was found in one of the rooms, where he had been sleeping.

After he was taken to this city and locked up, he admitted he was in Lynn on the night Miss Peterson was held up. He says he had some trouble during the evening and jumped over a fence in making his escape. He remembers that officers shot at him, and admits many details of the affair, but denies making an assault on Miss Peterson.

They also voted to reiterate their compromise proposition to advance wages for all book and job men and women to $16 a week.

Result of Lawrence Deadlock

Lawrence, Mass., Jan. 16.—This city practically committed an act of bankruptcy yesterday when City Treasurer Bailey refused to honor the pay vouchers of the city employes. Treasurer Bailey's claim is that in consequence of the deadlock there is no committee of accounts to approve the bills. The departments affected are the police, fire, street, health, sewer, water, cemetery, city hall and minor departments.

THOUSANDS LOOKED ON

Negro Bound to Stake and Roasted, Though He Protested Innocence

Leavenworth, Kan., Jan. 16.—Fred Alexander, the negro who on Saturday attempted to assault Eva Roth, and who was supposed to have assaulted and killed Pearl Forbes in this city in November last, was taken from the sheriff's guard by a mob yesterday and burned at the stake at the scene of his alleged crime, half a dozen blocks from the centre of the city. Probably 8000 people witnessed the lynching.

Alexander was brought to the city from the penitentiary at Lansing at 4:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon, and placed in the county jail. The citizens gathered in great numbers, and finding peaceful entrance to the jail impossible armed themselves with railroad irons. The jail doors were battered down, and Alexander dragged to the scene of his crime, followed by hundreds of howling, frenzied men and boys. Arrived at the scene, a railroad rail was stuck into the ground and the negro fastened to it with chains. Then coal oil was poured over his body and set afire. The wretch protested his innocence to the last.

Topeka, Kan., Jan. 16.—Governor Stanley condemns Sheriff Everhardy of Leavenworth in unmeasured terms. He says the sheriff should be made to make suitable retribution, if such a thing is possible. "The sheriff is either a despicable scoundrel or a despicable coward," said the governor. "There was no reason in the world why the negro should not have been protected to the last. The whole militia power of the state would be devoted to that effort, and the sheriff knew it all the time."

CHUMS DEAD IN BED

A Double Tragedy For Boston Police to Unravel

MAY HAVE BEEN ACCIDENT

But There Is Talk of Murder and Suicide as a Possible Motive In Revenge For Disappointment In a Love Affair

Boston, Jan. 17.—Everett Hall, 36 years old, who had been employed at a barber shop in the Quincy House, and Arthur Avery Pettengill, 23, of Belfast, Me., who was employed as a clerk by a well-known Tremont street drug firm, were found dead in bed at the lodging house at 39 Dwight street yesterday afternoon, and between the theories of the police that death was due to asphyxiation, and of others that it was a case of murder, followed by another suicide or accidental death, there is room for a searching official investigation.

Hall had lodged in the house for the past two years, while Pettengill is known to have been a friend of his. When the room was broken into it was full of illuminating gas and gas from the stove and the windows were all shut tightly, while on the floor were two whisky bottles, each containing a small quantity of liquid of some kind.

The police are inclined to the belief that the men came to the house early in the morning so intoxicated that they had not sense enough either to turn off the gas or open the windows; that they threw themselves upon the bed and were quickly killed by the poisonous fumes.

On the other hand, it is said that Hall had at one time paid attentions to Pettengill's sister; that the latter discarded him, and that Hall had been heard to declare that, in revenge, he would either kill her or some of her family. This is given as a possible motive for his making way with young Pettengill. Then, too, it is asserted, that although the liquid found in the two bottles had the appearance of whisky, it is believed to have contained some kind of a poison, which they drank (in Hall's case, unwittingly), with fatal result.

The two bodies were taken to the morgue and an autopsy will be held, while the contents of the bottles will be subjected to a chemical analysis.

Conditions In Southern Mills

Charlotte, N. C., Jan. 17.—Sixty North Carolina mill owners, said to represent over 100 cotton mills, met at Greensboro yesterday, and considered the question of reduction of hours and child labor. An agreement was signed by 40 of those in attendance that a week's work shall not exceed 66 hours; no child less than 12 years old shall work in a cotton mill during a school term, provided this does not apply to children of widows or physically disabled parents, and that 10 years shall be the lowest limit at which children may be worked.

Vast Fortune For Lewis' Widow

London, Jan. 17.—Samuel Lewis, the money lender and usurer, who died Sunday, left $20,000,000, all of which goes under his will to his widow, with the exception of $1,000,000, which is divided among relatives. In his will he expresses a desire that his widow should give in her own name $2,000,000 to provide dwellings for the poor of all creeds, $1,250,000 to the Prince of Wales' hospital fund, $500,000 to the Jewish board of guardians of London and $1,000,000 to various hospitals.

Ex-Governor Mount's Sudden Death

Indianapolis, Jan. 17.—James A. Mount, who retired last Monday from the office of governor of Indiana, died very suddenly from heart failure last night in his apartments at the Denison hotel. He had attended a reception given by Mrs. Mount during the afternoon and had made a speech before the Indiana State Wool Growers' association, and was elected president of the association. Three children, besides Mrs. Mount, are the surviving members of the family. The oldest child, Mrs. Charles Butler, who lives on a farm; Mrs. John W. Nicely, who is now at Beirut, Syria, and Rev. Harry M. Mount, pastor of the Presbyterian church at Connorsville, are the other children.

James Atwell Mount was born in Montgomery county, Ind., March 3, 1843. His father, Atwell Mount, was a native of Virginia, and moved to Indiana in 1828. At the breaking out of the Civil war he enlisted in the Indiana volunteers. At the close of the war he settled on a farm in Montgomery county. Governor Mount was a Republican, and one of the most distinguished men of the party in the state.

Useless to Attempt Prosecution

Topeka, Kan., Jan. 17.—Governor Stanley has decided that he will not issue an offer of reward for the arrest of the perpetrators of the negro burning in Leavenworth, on the ground that if the guilty persons were arrested they would necessarily have to undergo the first trial in Leavenworth county, and on account of the present condition of public sentiment there it would be useless to attempt to prosecute anybody there for the crime.

WHY FRYE RESIGNED

Says He Was "Written Out of Cuba" by New School Law

Boston, Jan. 17.—Alexis E. Frye, a week ago superintendent of schools in Cuba, said to General Wood just before he left Havana on his way to the United States, with his bride:

"You have made a school law which has written me out of Cuba. The law was compiled in March, while I was in the United States, and passed in July, while I was in Cambridge. I have waited eight months for the changes you promised to make in it, but there has been no change. It leaves me a leader without authority.

"That statement," said Mr. Frye at the Parker House, where he arrived with Mrs. Frye, "gives my reasons for resigning my position as superintendent of schools in Cuba. By the present school law my position was simply that of presiding officer over a board of six superintendents, heads of several school districts in the island. I had no other authority over the superintendents; no power to direct their actions, to suggest methods of teaching, to organize the forces; no explicit authority, even, for a casting vote in their deliberations.

"Here is the effect the law has had. With the exception of some of the teachers, it has deadened school enthusiasm all over the island. In 60 days—the first two months of my work in Cuba—I brought the school attendance up to nearly its present strength, but since May the attendance has not increased. There are now about 143,000 school children on the island; there ought to be 360,000. The schools are naturally largely unorganized. Under the present law, fully enforced, organization is impossible."

Milk Producers Will Fight Trust

Boston, Jan. 17.—The New England Milk Producers' union yesterday elected A. B. Ward of Westboro its president after a hot fight. J. C. Bartlett of Newmarket, N. H., last year's president, and representative of the element of the union which favors the 2-cent concession to the milk contractors, was defeated by a vote of 47 to 39. Ward is a leader in the Westboro movement to hold back milk from the Boston contractors (the so-called milk trust), unfil the full 4 cents extra per can demanded by the union be paid by the contractors. His election is a virtual defiance of the contractors by the Milk Producers' union.

Notorious Crook In Custody

Boston, Jan. 17.—John F. Lynch, one of the "sewer gang," which escaped from the Charlestown state prison several years ago by crawling through a sewer, and who was subsequently captured in England and brought to Charlestown, where he served out an additional term, was arrested last night for breaking and entering a liquor store. This crime will bring Lynch under the habitual criminal act, and makes him liable to a term of 25 years in state prison.

Smallpox Spreading at Manchester

Manchester, N. H., Jan. 17.—The smallpox situation does not seem to greatly improve here. The cases are scattered throughout the city. Four cases were found Tuesday in the Notre Dame orphanage, where there are nearly 400 children, who have all been exposed to the disease. Seven cases were brought to light in the institution yesterday. Several cases are among operatives who have been until recently working in the shoe shops or in the mills.

A Disbeliever In Doctors

Lawrence, Mass., Jan. 17.—Lena Sherman, aged 40 years, died suddenly yesterday. She had been sick for months, but was content to accept the treatment of Christian Scientists. A hemorrhage resulted in her death. Neighbors feel indignant because a doctor was not called to attend Mrs. Sherman in her dying moments.

Charged With Intent to Kill

Montpelier, Vt., Jan. 17.—The grand jury having reported an indictment against Arturo Bernacca, identified with the attempt to assassinate Chief of Police Brown of Barre, the prisoner was arraigned yesterday for assault with intent to kill. McLain Not Yet Found

Portland, Me., Jan. 17.—This is the fifth day in the search for John McLain, the suspected companion in crime of the negro, Hands, and the officers do not seem to be any nearer a capture than when the hunt started.

Strike In Shoe Factory

Lynn, Mass., Jan. 17.—The cutters in Morse & Logan's factory have voted to strike. A week ago the Cutters' union put a new price list in the factory, that called for a general increase. The firm agreed to all but two of the items, which it refused to concede.

Grip Spreading at Concord

Concord, N. H., Jan. 17.—The ravages of the grip in this vicinity are becoming noticeable. Governor Jordan and more than 30 members of the legislature are absent from the capitol. There are several hundred cases in this city.

Mrs. Roxana Sylvester Carver.

Mrs. Roxana S. Carver, daughter of Capt. Thomas O. Sylvester, formerly of Quincy, passed to her eternal home on Jan. 3, at Marshfield Hills, aged 84 years. Her young days were passed in Quincy. She was married there, and ever entertained the most pleasant recollections and associations with her former life.

Since Quincy became a city she has visited here and taken several trips on the different lines of electrics, that she might better see the improvements of the place she loved so well. It was a treat to her to relate to those younger than herself the many pleasures and enjoyments of her youthful days. To her few correspondents she was deeply attached, one of whom she had written regularly to for over twenty years receiving regular replies.

She retained her mental faculties to a remarkable degree and her language was ever pure, correct and applicable to her subject. She had been an invalid for several years and her sufferings were quite acute at last.

She leaves a husband, one daughter, two sons, one grandchild, three sisters and a large circle of relatives to moan her departure. The Quincy Patriot was a welcome paper in her father's household and not long since. She had in her possession one of the first issued from the office.

Wollaston Glee Club.

The boys singing class held the second meeting of the year Tuesday evening in the vestry of the Wollaston Congregational church. Under the direction of the leader, Mr. Follett, several new pieces were tried. By the next meeting Mr. Follett hopes to have the voices suitably arranged for part singing. The interest shown by the boys is gratifying to the promoters of the scheme, and is a compliment to Mr. Follett, who is an inspiring leader. There will be fortnightly meetings.

Ladies' Aid Supper.

The supper and entertainment given by the Ladies' Aid society of the Park and Downs Congregational church, Wednesday evening was one that will remain in the memory of all who attended. At 6.30 an oyster and meat supper was served. About 8 o'clock the attention was called to a short program, which was opened by a vocal by Mrs. Ernest Shay, followed by a reading by Miss Clark, vocal solo Mrs. Hill, and reading by Miss Morton. The program closed with a cornet solo by Mr. Clarence Seamen, accompanied by Miss Alda Shay.

THE SCHOOL ARMY

Total of 474,891 Attending Public Schools of State.

12,290 Teachers Required in 1900.

Thirty Six Cities and Towns Have Public Kindergartens.

The school census taken for Sept. 1, 1899, found 320,979 children within the compulsory age limits of seven and fourteen years, and 457,917 children between five and fifteen.

The number of children within the compulsory age limits attending the public schools was 88,625,—an increase of 42,897, most of which is due to changing the limits from eight and fourteen years to seven and fourteen.

The number of pupils of all ages attending the public schools was 474,891, of whom 9,895 were under five and 44,754 over fifteen. The average membership was 399,423 and the average attendance 366,136, or 92 per cent. thereof.

The number of different teachers for the year was 13,575 of whom 1,196 were men and 12,379 were women, the proportion of men to women being 1 to 10.2 as against 1 to 9.5 ten years ago. This is a questionable trend, not that women do not make excellent teachers, but that the schools cannot afford to dipense so fully with the services of men. The public schools required last year 12,290 teachers, the excess of teachers employed over positions to be filled being 1,285, making the ratio of the number of positions to the number of teachers filling them 1 to 1.10, as against 1 to 1.15 ten years ago. In other words, there is an increasing permanency of the teacher's tenure. The lower the salaries, as a rule, the more uncertain the tenure. Of the teachers employed, 5,831 have attended normal schools,—43 per cent., as against 35 per cent. ten years ago; and 4,905 are graduates thereof,—36 per cent., as against 29 per cent. ten year ago. The average of men's wages per month is $136.54—an increase of 31 cents; of women's wages, $52.50, an increase of $1.09.

There are 261 high schools, with 1,487 teachers and 40,592 pupils, the latter number being nearly 9 per cent. of the total enrollment of the public schools, and indicating that nearly 30 per cent. of all our children reach the high school.

There are 49 towns and cities maintaining evening schools, of which, if a single class room is taken as the unit for counting, there are 783, with 1,263 teachers and 30,508 pupil. In regularity of attendance they cannot, of course, equal the day schools,—their percentage of attendance being only 53.

The public kindergarten is found now in 36 towns and cities. There are 220 of these kindergartens, with 423 teachers and 14,257 pupils, each year since 1898, when the first data were gathered, showing an increase in each detail over the preceding.

Fifty-three academies with 6,090 pupils, and 366 private schools with 73,205 pupils, were returned. The ratio of private school pupils to public school pupils is 1 to 7, as against 1 to 7.6 a year ago and 1 to 7.4 ten years ago. School registers are now available for private schools as for public, and it is hoped that their returns may ultimately be as satisfactory as those of the public schools.

Big Eaters.

The question of large eaters was agitated Wednesday evening at a little gathering in Atlantic, and each man told how much or how little would satisfy his hunger. Alarming truths were laid bare, and one man, believing he had the bomb shell, said he knew a friend who thought nothing of eating seven or eight eggs for breakfast. Then it was a long lean fellow became interested and remarked: "That's nothing. If the eggs are fried, twelve are a mere nothing to me." And eggs are 40 cents a dozen, too!

Meadow Golf Club.

The annual meeting of the Meadow Golf club of Wollaston was held Tuesday evening at the home of H. H. Albee. The new by-laws were accepted. The following officers for 1901 were elected: President, G. H. S. Soule; Vice President, Miss Katherine Sibley; Secretary, William E. Howard; Treasurer, Walter F. Blake; Executive committee, the above officers, ex-officiis, and Rev. Carlton P. Mills, Charles W. Bailey and Carroll E. Bates.

APPOINTMENTS.

Who for Chief of Police the Quandary.

As the time draws near when Mayor Hall will announce the appointments of his officials for 1901, there is considerable speculation as to who will be appointed to certain positions. It is quite generally understood that the offices of Commissioner of Public Works, City Clerk, City Treasurer, Tax Collector, City Solicitor, Chief Engineer and Overseer of the Poor will be the same as last year.

In the Board of Assessors there must be a change. It is generally believed that Principal Assessor Thompson will be reappointed, and rumor has it that Messrs. Johnson and Nash will be the other two members of the board. The remaining members of the board will continue as clerks in the field work, so says rumor.

In the matter of Board of Health the general impression is that the board will have at least one new member upon it. Who, rumor does not say.

The only other office, and the one about which there seems to be the most talk, is Chief of Police. There are certain people who are after Chief Ripley's scalp, but they do not seem to advance any reason why he should not be returned. Taking into consideration what the department has to do with, Chief Ripley has done as well as any one could. There has been remarkably little crime and many of the wrong doers have been apprehended, and a very large portion of property has been recovered. One of the mistakes of Chief Ripley's administration was the removal of Daniel R. McKay as special officer. Several names have been mentioned as looking for a chance to run the department this year, but of those mentioned there are none who could do any better than the present official. It is rumored that ex-Chief Hayden has a petition in circulation, that ex-Chief Litchfield would like another year, and that one of the Burkes would like the position.

Cantara—Glover.

There was a very pretty wedding at St. Joseph's church at Biddeford, Me., Monday morning, the contracting parties being Mr. Simon J. Cantara, formerly a conductor on the Q. & B. street railway, and Mary P. Glover of Boston formerly of Quincy. The ceremony was performed at 8.30 o'clock, the officiating clergyman being Rev. Fr. B. E. Dupont, pastor of the church, who also celebrated a nuptial mass.

There was a large attendance at the wedding, the bride being presented by Mr. Michael Plaradis, and the groom by his father, Mr. Joseph Cantara. The singing at the mass was by the children of St. Joseph's parochial school.

At the conclusion of the ceremony at the church the wedding party was driven to the home of the groom at 3 Hazel street, where a wedding breakfast was served and the couple received the congratulations of their friends.

In the evening there was a reception given for the young couple which was largely attended. There were about 25 couples present and a very enjoyable time was had, the evening for the most part being devoted to vocal and instrumental music, many of the guests contributing to the pleasures. During the evening refreshments were served and it was a late hour when the festivities terminated.

The wedding gifts were displayed in one of the rooms and excited general admiration. The bride was handsomely remembered in this particular, receiving a large number of beautiful gifts, including a complete dinner set, a number of articles of silver ware, gold band wine set and china dishes.

Mr. and Mrs. Cantara will leave Thursday for South Boston, where they will reside.

CITY BREVITIES.

A Local Budget With the News in a Nut Shell.

The Whist club met last night with Mr. and Mrs. George W. Morton.

The wire pullers continue to hang about City Hall looking for scalps.

The present week has been unusually quiet thus far. Perhaps it is the quietness that precedes a storm.

Mr. and Mrs. Fryer of Edison street are receiving congratulations on the birth of a daughter; born Tuesday.

Pat Crowe has been reported as being almost everywhere except Quincy. Who knows but what he may be here?

The date for the annual meeting of the Quincy Granite Quarry Co. at New Jersey is Jan. 23, instead of today as announced.

The mild weather Wednesday night resulted in clearing the sidewalks of most of the ice with which they have been covered.

Joseph C. Morse and Warren H. Rideout secured the prizes at the Granite City club whist tournament on Wednesday evening.

That singing heard nightly near the Norfolk Downs depot is the members of the North Quincy club rehearsing for their minstrel show.

Someone is evidently of the opinion that E. D. Gourd should not sport such a valuable cane, for he was mysteriously relieved of it Monday evening.

The Ward Three Republican Committee has organized, with Councilman William T. Spargo as chairman, James W. Young as secretary, and Councilman Harry S. Nicol as treasurer.

Mayor Hall has established new office hours at City Hall. Hereafter the several offices will be open from 8 to 12 A. M., and 2 to 5 P. M. Saturday the hours will be from 8 to 12 A. M.

The reception and social at the Wollaston Congregational church this evening promises to be a delightful affair. The young ladies of the church will usher, and Rev. and Mrs. Edward A. Chase will receive.

The lecturers in the West Quincy M. E. course will be Rev. W. W. Dornan, on "Napoleon Bonaparte;" Rev. A. A. Nazarian, on "The Home of Adam;" and Rev. N.T. Whitaker on "America, her mission and destiny."

A pleasant surprise party was given to Mrs. William E. Cain, Washington street, last Saturday evening by friends from Brockton, Randolph and South Braintree. The event was commemorated by the presentation to Mrs. Cain of a very handsome dinner set.

Wollaston Golf Club.

The Wollaston Golf club held its annual meeting Wednesday afternoon at Young's Hotel, Boston. Twenty members were present. The secretary reported the membership as 260, of which twenty are women.

The officers elected are as follows:
President, Richard R. Freeman.
Vice-president, James S. Russell.
Secretary, Elbert H. Brock.
Treasurer, Everett S. Litchfield.
Directors with above ex-officiis, Frank Brewster, W. Prentiss Parker, C. H. H. Johnson and Charles A. Price.

The green committee were instructed to admit visitors once in fifteen days. An effort to raise the price of admission on Sunday and holidays was voted down.

The secretary was instructed to apply for the admission of the club to the Woman's Golf Association of Boston.

February Fashions.

In the February number of The Delineator, a very careful and fully illustrated description of mid-winter dress materials is given. This is in addition to the usual number of fashions shown for women, girls and little folks. Special attention is also given to confirmation wear, and in the dressmaking article, to the matter of fitting in sleeves. The Delineator is a thoroughly practical all round magazine for women, and has reached a circulation of over half a million a month.

TODAY'S COURT.

James C. Kingston was arraigned for drunkenness at Quincy. Case continued until Jan. 24.

The continued case of Thomas F. Lundergan for the larceny of a horse and team at Weymouth was called and he was discharged on payment of costs.

THE VERDICT.

Congress can take its time. This isthmus won't run away. It is there to stay.—Chicago Times-Herald.

It will be some time before the seats for the French invasion of England are placed on sale.—Washington Post.

Those who are waging a war against smoke production in cities will be encouraged by the alleged discovery that electricity can be used to purify the atmosphere.—Philadelphia Press.

It is in the air that China is on the verge of a great awakening. It is not possible for any one part of the earth to hold out longer against the changes that affect the rest of it.—Brooklyn Eagle.

England has followed the United States in pressing the claims of some of its citizens against the government of Turkey. If this thing keeps up, the Turk is likely to acquire the habit of paying his debts.—Omaha Bee.

The commerce of the west, especially of the lake region, requires a great waterway to the seaports. If New York will not furnish such a channel, western commerce will adopt the route provided by the Canadian canals.—Chicago Chronicle.

The remark of the London Daily Mail's year book that there is no man of "conspicuous merit" in the United States makes it proper to ask, "What statesman is there in Great Britain who is up to the standard of the year book?"—Kansas City Star.

THE ROYAL BOX.

The emperor of Germany drinks nothing but Mexican coffee, and a year's supply is sent to him regularly after each harvest from a plantation in Michoacan.

The king of Denmark has finally abandoned his long expected visit to England. Instead he is to visit the Duke and Duchess of Cumberland at Gmunden, whither he will be accompanied by the empress dowager of Russia.

The czarina has the greatest difficulty in speaking her husband's language, and the words come out slowly and laboriously despite the many lessons given her by the czar. Privately the czar and czarina speak frequently in English, but their conversation is generally carried on in French.

It appears that Queen Olga's long stay in Russia last summer was to arrange a marriage between Prince George of Greece and the Grand Duchess Helena Vladimirovna. This plan fell through, and negotiations are now in progress for the hand of Princess Alexandra of Schaumburg-Lippe, grandniece of the late queen of Denmark and sister of the queen of Wurttemberg.

ANNUAL CHURCH REUNION.

Bethany Congregational Society Has Much Reason for Rejoicing.

Pastor and People United and Doing a Great Work in His Name.

Benevolences of the Year Large and Also in Excess of Other Years.

From 200 to 300 worshippers at Bethany Congregational church assembled at the church Wednesday evening for the annual reunion. The number would have been fully 100 larger, but for the prevalence of the grip which is more extensive in Quincy than people have thought.

There was a social hour from 5.30 to 6.30, during which time the people assembled in the church auditorium, and divested themselves of street wraps and mingled socially.

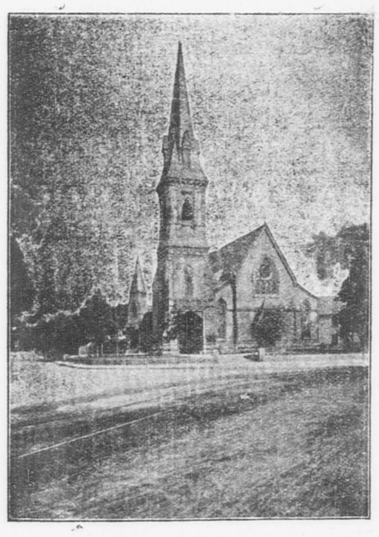
It was nearly 7 o'clock before the announcement came that supper was ready, and upon passing to the commodious chapel it was found crowded with bountifully laden tables.

The blessing was asked by Rev. Edward Norton, the pastor emeritus, and was a model of its kind.

The good things included: Turkey with cranberry sauce, ham, escalloped oysters, rolls, assorted cakes, oranges, bananas, apples, coffee, etc.

The napkins for the occasion were furnished by the Weeks-Hill pharmacy.

At 7.45 the annual business meeting of the corporation was held with F. W. Crane as moderator and E. D. Gourd as clerk. Prayer was offered by Rev. E. N. Hardy, the pastor, and all united in singing "Blest be the tie that binds."



The report of the clerk of the society shows a church membership of 363.

The report of the Church committee says: "In reviewing our work for the past year we believe that there is much reason for rejoicing. One does not fully realize the extent of the work and influence of Bethany church till he considers in detail the various objects for which the church is working and making her contributions. Every local call of need has been met with liberal response, and at least two of the foremost advance movements of our city, No-license and the Young Men's Christian Association, through men and means supplied by our church have been largely sustained, while outside objects which might be named by the score have received most generous treatment from our various organizations.

Indeed this is the banner year of Bethany church in respect to her benevolent contributions. For strictly missionary objects—home and foreign, $894 has been raised and distributed. A sum nearly $100 larger than the church ever gave for a similar purpose before.

In addition to this $121 has been raised and expended for other charitable objects, local and institutional. Making the largest gross amount for benevolence the church has ever given as far as can be judged from the financial statements of other years.

Considering the facts that the various organizations indicate a goodly balance on hand and also that the running expenses of the whole work has been in excess of former years, and that the granite strike was severely felt by many connected with the church the benevolence for the year is remarkably large.

These facts indicate a growing interest in all forms of charitable and missionary enterprises. All the various organizations have worked with great harmony and unusual efficiency, indicating that there is an increasing unity in our work which is an omen of good for the future.

The religious services of the church have been well attended and sustained in spite of the fact that an unusually large number of our worshippers moved from the city during the year. Strangers have come among us to take their place, and while we lament the departed we rejoice in the fellowship of those coming among us. An unusually large number of strangers are coming to us in the last few months.

The roll of the church was revised in the early part of the year, many of our absentees were advised to take letters from us to other communions. This has reduced our number slightly but with no loss to the strength of the church.

Spiritually, the year opens auspiciously, with a large accession at New Year's on confession with every promise of many to follow. Surely the Lord's blessing has been with us. We can not conclude this report without mention of those of this household of faith who have gone to their reward: Mrs. Annie Nightingale, Mr. George Newcomb, Mrs. Harriet Curtis, Mrs. Abby Spear, Mrs. Annie Wason, Mrs. Mary Worster Ryder, Mrs. Augusta Anderson and Mrs. Lydia Trask. Though dead they still live and we rejoice in the sweet memories which cluster about them.

The unpaid pledges will more than meet all unpaid bills.

The report of the auditor followed and was accepted. Also, the report of Finance committee, submitting a budget for 1901; the report of Prudential committee recommending painting the outside of the church and some repairs; the report of the Music committee, desiring a larger appropriation and the report of the Bible school, recommending an assistant pastor whose special charge should be the Bible school. The average attendance of the Bible school has been about 300, the largest attendance being 357 and the smallest 40.

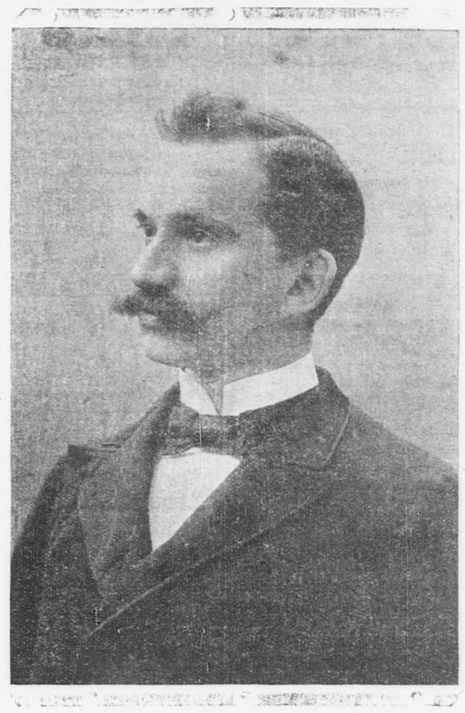
An effort was made to increase the budget recommended that the music appropriation might be $800 instead of $500; the Bible school item $200 instead of $150; and to include $1,000 on chapel debt.

The pledges already received would not warrant the increase, and additional pledges could not be secured then and there for the amount, so it was voted to adopt the budget as reported, and that a committee of twenty be appointed by the Finance Committee to canvass for additional pledges, and if successful the money would be appropriated as above.

Reports were also made by the numerous organizations connected with the church, which include: The Harmony Circle, Ladies' Foreign Missionary Society, Ladies' Home Missionary Society, Mother's Meeting, King's Daughters, Brotherhood of Andrew and Philip, Y. P. S. C. E., Daughters of the Covenant, Back-Log Club, Junior Christian Endeavor.

Officers of the corporation for the year 1901 were elected by the Australian ballot which contained a double list, resulting as follows:

Moderator, Delcevare King.
Clerk, E. D. Gourd.
Treasurer, C. W. Miller.
Auditor, H. E. Crane.
Supt. of Bible School, E. W. Branch.
Prudential Committee for three years, S. Seammell.



REV. E. N. HARDY.

Deacons for three years, E. W. Branch and R. D. Chase.

Deaconesses, Mrs. Annie W. Badger, Mrs. Mabel Badger, Miss A. L. Bumpus, Mrs. H. H. Hill, Mrs. Maria McPhail, Mrs. H. M. Tanner.

Finance Committee, W. E. Blanchard, H. E. Crane, E. D. Gourd, T. King, E. W. Sheppard.

Music Committee, J. O. Hall, Jr., Mrs. Albert Hayden, A. L. Melcher, Dr. Cyrus T. Sherman, Mrs. J. F. Welch.

HERE AND THERE.

Local Brevities of the City of Presidents.

Spring-like weather again.

Mrs. T. C. Berry and daughters of Boston visited friends in Atlantic on Wednesday.

Master Aubrey Maxim of Wollaston Park is a convalescent after having a touch of the grip.

Richard Stephenson of Newbury avenue, is home again and his friends have welcomed his return.

The financial result of the rummage sale at Atlantic was $65. The proceeds go to Memorial Congregational church.

The North Quincy club has decided to give their minstrel show in Music hall, Atlantic on Feb. 6, after giving it at the Downs Jan. 30.

Wollaston people appreciate the new schedule of the street railway. The cars are being run with almost clock-like regularity. Let us hope the change is permanent.

Prof. Floyd's fame as a prestidigitateur is widely known, and with the assistance of Mrs. Floyd and the Lord Family an enjoyable entertainment is promised tonight at Bethany chapel.

There was a good attendance at Music hall Wednesday evening to see Uncle Josh in "Way Down East." Everybody laughed and the entertainment was one of the best given this year.

Annie M. Perry, the missing Weymouth girl, was located in Charlestown where she was at work in a family.

A little more attention should be given to the walks at the public library. The southerly walk is hardly passible, the water being over rubbers in many places.

Supt. Parlin and Miss Mabel E. Adams will read papers on "The Public Schools" at the meeting of the Quincy Band Literary Society this evening.

—A novel club is being talked of in North St. Joseph, Mo. It is to be called the President's Message club, and its members are to read and discuss the message by sections at weekly clubs.

Just to remind you that I have another lot of houses nearly completed, I will list these three bargains:

Many were disappointed on the last lot so be on hand early if you would be in it.

First—A six room Single House, bath and set tubs, with hot and cold water, papered to suit purchaser, large lot $2100, $300 down; balance at low rate of interest. Just the place for some street railway employee.

Also, one of eight rooms and bath, Independence avenue; all modern improvements, bounds on two streets, can sell for $500 less than real value. This house is of the popular size to suit any business man, and is very roomy and convenient. I don't like to have other builders know how I am cutting prices, but $3,000 buys this one, look at it and compare with others you see building.

Another, and a money maker for some one with only an ounce of pluck. This is a two-family House, 5 rooms and bath each, and 60 foot lot, $3,000. Pay in $500 on this and I will guarantee you a twenty five per cent. investment for one year; who would dare invest in a twenty-five per cent. GUARANTEED investment.

Remember these houses are built by competent workmen, by the day, of the best material, and are personally superintended by the owner, are but four minutes to station, electrics pass, and everything is most desirable as a residential section. All houses are connected with sewer and cellars are perfectly dry.

Come and look them over and select one that suits you. Can be seen any day.

How to Make Snow-flakes.

Primary Education for January prints the following from an exchange: Last winter we accidentally discovered a method of making snowflakes. We had a piece of ice of which one side was excavated. The shape was something like that of a small pumpkin. On a very cold day this piece was laid outside until it became so cold that a wet piece of cloth or paper would freeze against it immediately, as though placed against a very cold piece of iron. A paper was moistened with warm water and kept warm, then wrapped quickly around this piece of ice, with the hand held against the paper over the cavity. When the paper was torn away in a few minutes several beautiful snowflakes or frost crystals were seen in the bottom of the cavity in the block of ice.

The explanation doubtless is that the warm hand held against the damp paper caused the moisture to evaporate, but the vapor was at once congealed into the feathery crystals by the intense cold of the ice. The experiment was afterwards successfully repeated several times.

This is the month, rather than next, to perform the experiments of freezing the bottle of water, freezing wet and dry clay, freezing muddy, turbid, or inky water, freezing salt water, and other experiments requiring a low temperature.

Poor Opinion of British Workmen

London, Jan. 17.—The Daily Mail publishes an interview with Francis Clergue, a Canadian financier, who represents an American syndicate for the development of Algoma, West Ontario. Mr. Clergue, who sailed for the United States yesterday, said the syndicate expected to get the greater part of the colonists from Scandinavia and north Germany. "The British workman's idea," he remarked, "seems to be to do as little work for his pay as possible, and he must have rum or whisky before breakfast."

WEST POINT SITUATION

Vigorously Assailed by Senator Allen In Debate on Army Bill

CADETS FROM CIVIL LIFE

Said to Have Been Forced Out to Make Room For Army Officers' Sons—Vote on Army Bill Comes Tomorrow—River and Harbor Bill Passed

Washington, Jan. 17.—At the opening of yesterday's session of the senate two immense floral pieces—a large basket of roses and ferns and an urn of roses—occupied places on the desk of Senator Hoar, who was re-elected to the senate by the Massachusetts legislature.

A final vote upon the pending army reorganization bill will be taken by the senate at 4 o'clock tomorrow, under the terms of an agreement reached late yesterday. The feature of the debate on the bill was the denunciation of the practice of hazing at the West Point military academy. Mr. Allen, Mr. Money and Mr. McCumber declared it to be an evidence of brutality and cowardice.

In the course of his remarks, Mr. Allen described vigorously the situation at West Point, as brought out by the pending investigation. He declared that brutality had been developed at West Point which ought not to be expected to exist among barbarians. "This thing called hazing," exclaimed Mr. Allen, "why, the prize fighter is a gentleman compared with some of those young ruffians at West Point. Indeed, life has been lost recently."

As a brief review of the Booz case, Mr. Allen declared that the first thing a fourth class man met at West Point was brutal assault and humiliating indignity. "And these things," shouted Mr. Allen, "take place within the knowledge of the officers of the institution These new cadets are compelled to eat soap; they are compelled to get down on their knees and jump like frogs and they are compelled to endure other indignities which I would not dare in this presence to mention.

"Some of the regular army officers say that hazing cannot be helped—that it cannot be prevented. You place one of the old volunteer officers at the head of that institution, and in six weeks he will put a stop to it, or there will be some dead cadets there.

"I have information which leads me to believe that hazing at West Point is resorted to for the purpose of forcing out of the institution cadets appointed from civil life, in order to make room for the sons of army officers. And if they cannot force out the cadet by humiliation and intimidation they prescribe a course of examination which is in their own hands, and which they could not pass themselves, and thus force the prescribed cadet from the school."

Continuing his discussion of the action of the cadets at West Point, Mr. Allen said: "Those cadets carry hazing almost to the extent of taking life and in one instance recently they have taken life, and the senator from Mississippi (Money) says they have taken life in several instances."

Mr. Money declared that the hazing never had been warranted, and that he knew of some cadets who had been hazed to the point of danger. "They were hazed to a degree," said Mr. Money, with deep feeling, "that would have warranted the hazee in killing the hazers."

"They ought to have been killed," interjected Mr. Allen.

"And I want to say," continued Mr. Money, "that if I were a cadet at West Point and was hazed in so cowardly and brutal a manner, I would kill the hazers if the opportunity did not come for a hundred years afterwards."

Mr. McCumber (N. D.) argued in support of the pending bill. Incidentally he vigorously handled the practice of hazing at West Point. "That practice," said he, "creates the worst character of brutality and the worst character of cowardice. Any bully who is guilty of attempting to punish one who is physically unable to meet him is such a coward that he should be discharged from the service."

Mr. Hawley asked for unanimous consent that a final vote be taken on the bill and amendments at 3 o'clock today. Upon objection being offered, Mr. Hawley modified his request to fix the time for final voting at 4 o'clock on Friday. To this no objection was entered, and the agreement was announced formally.

Another effort was made in the executive session of the senate to secure the confirmation of James S. Harlan to be attorney general of Porto Rico, and, as on Tuesday, the effort failed because of the absence of a quorum.

The river and harbor appropriation bill was passed by the house. The bill has been under consideration for over a week, and has been assailed from many quarters. The bill passed practically as it came from the committee. It carries slightly less than $60,000,000, of which $23,000,000 is in direct appropriations. The section empowering the president to negotiate with Great Britain for the maintenance of suitable levels on the Great Lakes was broadened so as to provide for a joint commission to conduct the negotiations.

A Half-Hour Session

Washington, Jan. 17.—The cabinet meeting yesterday, which was held in the private parlor of the White House and which was the first one held since the president's illness, lasted about 30 minutes. No business question was brought before the meeting. The president still shows that he has not yet fully recovered his usual vigor.

ALVORD SENTENCED

Gets Thirteen Years at Sing Sing, With Large "Rebate" For Good Behavior

New York, Jan. 17.—Cornelius L. Alvord, Jr., the defaulting note teller of the First National bank, was yesterday sentenced to eight years in Sing Sing under that count of the indictment which charged him with making false entries in the books of the bank, and five years under the count which charged him with falsifying the clearing house sheet. The five years' sentence is to begin at the expiration of the eight years. Alvord was taken to Sing Sing yesterday afternoon.

CORNELIUS L. ALVORD, JR.

Alvord, on reaching Sing Sing, was at once taken to the state prison. After his pedigree had been recorded, he was taken to the state barber shop, where he was given a bath, a shave, his hair cut and his clothing exchanged for a striped suit. He was weighed, and tipped the scales at 202 pounds. He is now in cell No. 451, gallery 24, where he must remain for 10 days' in quarantine against disease. He will have to serve eight years and three months if he behaves himself, as he will be allowed four years and nine months for good conduct.

Defense Rests In Bosschieter Case

Paterson, N. J., Jan. 17.—Counsel for the defense in the Jennie Bosschieter murder trial yesterday closed their case. The plea set up a general and specific denial of all the accusations made against the men. The counsel for the defense attacked the moral character of the dead girl, and claimed that the prisoners were in no way responsible for her death. McAlister, Death and Campbell were each on the stand. The story as told by each appeared plausible, explanatory and reasonable, but conflicted with the testimony of the backman and the alleged confessions of Death and Campbell, as introduced by the state and admitted as evidence.

"Worked" the Upper Ten

Berlin, Jan. 17.—George Manolesco, alias "Prince George De La Hawardi," who was arrested yesterday in Genoa, was at one time an officer in the Roumanian army. He fled from Roumania on the discovery that he had committed forgery, going to European and American cities, still keeping up the character of a prince, and practicing the arts of a sharper. Ultimately, he secured entree into some of the most exclusive clubs in Berlin. Finally he stole a diamond necklace worth 40,000 marks. His arrest in Genoa was at the request of the Berlin police.

Bucksport, Me., Jan. 17.—The brickyards of Orland and Penobscot are receiving offers from the New England Brick company for the sale of their property under the usual trust procedure. These yards come in direct competition with trust bricks in Boston markets. Final surrender seems inevitable.

PACKED IN A TRUNK

Body of a Jewelry Salesman Found by New York Police

MURDER WAS COMMITTED

Victim Was Possibly Alive When Placed In the Trunk—Identified by Papers In His Pocket—Police Think It Was a Tenement House Crime

New York, Jan. 17.—The police yesterday picked up on pier 11, East river, a trunk in which was found the body of a man, with his throat cut from ear to ear, and showing other marks of violence. It was identified two hours later by a woman as the body of Michael Weissberger, an East Side Hebrew, employed to sell jewelry on the instalment plan. The name of the woman who identified the dead body, and the address at which the victim of the murder had resided, the detectives refuse to disclose.

The trunk was pointed out to the police where it had been placed within 50 feet of the rear end of the Old Slip station house and in a busy thoroughfare. It was painted a dark green, tied lengthwise and crosswise with a piece of ordinary clothes line. There were marks of bloody fingers on the clothes line, and a spatter of blood on the front.

When Patrolman Reilly opened the trunk he found the body on its left side, and with knees doubled up. The upper part was completely drenched in blood. An examination of the body showed, in addition to the terrible gash in the throat, a number of bruises on various parts of the body and head. Three of the victim's teeth had been knocked out. The overcoat, coat and vest had been removed, and were laid in the trunk. The hat and shoes were missing. Underneath the heap of clothing was found a cheap, oilcloth table cover.

The table cover and bottom of the trunk showed that the victim possibly was yet alive when the body was put in.

In one of the pockets of the coat Captain Titus found a number of bills and other papers, from which he got the address of the woman, who identified the man. She was brought to the place by the officers. Twenty minutes later she went away with the detectives.

After his interview with the woman, Captain Titus announced the identity of the murdered man. Speaking of the case he said:

"I believe that the crime was committed in a house—probably a tenement—and that the murderers knew that Weissberger carried jewelry about him. I have learned that neither the table cover nor the trunk was the victim's property. I have also ascertained that he left the place where he was employed at 9 o'clock Tuesday morning, and was seen alive at noon. He had $200 worth of jewelry with him at the time—watches, small diamonds and other articles—which he carried in bags. He was a married man, and had a large family."

Captain Titus said that the woman who identified the body was not the victim's wife, but was one of his customers. Detectives are at work on every end of the case.

Weissberger was employed as a salesman by Siff & Alexander, jewelers. The body was removed to the morgue. No arrests have yet been made.

Lasles Showed the White Feather

Paris, Jan. 17.—The Figaro publishes this morning an amusing sequel to the recent declaration in the chamber of deputies by M. Lasles, Nationalist, that he would give 1000 francs for a photograph showing Premier Waldeck-Rousseau conversing with Pere Du Lac M. Waldeck-Rousseau sent to the deputy a snap shot taken by Mme. Waldeck-Rousseau on the occasion of the visit of the celebrated Jesuit to their country seat, with a polite request that the money be given to charity. M. Lasles, who was much disconcerted, refused to comply, saying that he had only spoken figuratively.

Emma Abbott Provided For Parents

Chicago, Jan. 17.—A contest over the control of the estate of Seth Abbott in the probate court brought out the fact that the late Emma Abbott, the famous singer, had set aside $100,000 for the maintenance of her father, Seth Abbott, and had made like provision for her mother, who lived apart from Seth Abbott for several years prior to her death. The contestants in court are Fred M. Abbott and Mrs. Lizzie Clark, children of Seth Abbott. The father of the contestants became insane last summer. He is now at the home of Mrs. Clark, and is said to be recovering.

Neil Thinks His Estimate Correct

New Orleans, Jan. 17.—The Times-Democrat publishes a letter from Statistician Neil, in which he says that his estimate at the beginning of the cotton season, that the crop would not exceed 9,750,000 bales, is substantiated by the season's receipts, the present visible and future outlook.

Another Big Coal Order

Halifax, Jan. 17.—The steamer Evelyn has been chartered to bring a cargo of soft coal to Halifax from Norfolk for the naval dock yard. This is the second large order for American coal from the naval authorities.

CONSUMPTION

Is like the constrictor which drops its coils around its victim and slowly tightens them until life is extinguished.

Once the coils are drawn tight there is little chance of escape. The one hope of safety is to break loose at the beginning of the attack.

Those who are showing symptoms of lung disease should instantly begin the use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It will cure obstinate coughs, bronchitis and bleeding of the lungs. It increases the nutrition of the body, and so restores the emaciated form to health and strength.

There is no alcohol in "Golden Medical Discovery," and it is entirely free from opium, cocaine, and all other narcotics.

"I feel it my duty to give my testimonial in behalf of your great medicine," writes Mr. John T. Reed, of Jefferson, Jefferson Co., Ark. "When I commenced taking Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery I was very low with a cough, and would at times spit blood. I was not able to do any work at all, was weak and my head was dizzy. The first bottle I took did me so much good that I had faith in it and continued until I had taken twelve bottles. Now I do not look like nor feel like the same man as I was a year ago. People were astonished and said they did not think that I could live. I can thankfully say that I am entirely cured of a disease from which had it not been for your wonderful 'Discovery' I would have died."

is like the constrictor which drops its coils around its victim and slowly tightens them until life is extinguished.

Once the coils are drawn tight there is little chance of escape. The one hope of safety is to break loose at the beginning of the attack.

Those who are showing symptoms of lung disease should instantly begin the use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It will cure obstinate coughs, bronchitis and bleeding of the lungs. It increases the nutrition of the body, and so restores the emaciated form to health and strength.

There is no alcohol in "Golden Medical Discovery," and it is entirely free from opium, cocaine, and all other narcotics.

"I feel it my duty to give my testimonial in behalf of your great medicine," writes Mr. John T. Reed, of Jefferson, Jefferson Co., Ark. "When I commenced taking Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery I was very low with a cough, and would at times spit blood. I was not able to do any work at all, was weak and my head was dizzy. The first bottle I took did me so much good that I had faith in it and continued until I had taken twelve bottles. Now I do not look like nor feel like the same man as I was a year ago. People were astonished and said they did not think that I could live. I can truthfully say that I am entirely cured of a disease from which had it not been for your wonderful Discovery I would have died."

POPULARITY OF QUAY.

Attested by Remarkable Demonstration In the Senate

WAGON LOADS OF FLOWERS

Occupied So Much Space That They Could Not All Be Displayed In the Senate Chamber—Further Discussion of Hazing at West Point

Washington, Jan. 18.—As a demonstration in honor of the seating of a single senator and as an elaborate and beautiful floral spectacle, the return of Matthew S. Quay to the senate was unique in the history of the body. Within the memory of the oldest senators nothing approximating yesterday's scene ever was witnessed in the senate on a similar occasion.

Mr. Quay had been assigned to the second seat in the back row on the Republican side, the desk formerly occupied by Mr. Hanna of Ohio. An hour before the senate convened elaborate and beautiful floral pieces began to be piled on and around the senator's desk One of the handsomest pieces was a huge keystone arch of white immortelles, the keystone being of deep red immortelles. It was several feet in height. The flowers came to the Capitol literally by the wagon load, and it was found impossible to display all of them in the senate chamber. Many of them were allowed to remain in the senate corridors.

Just before the senate convened, Mr. Quay entered the chamber. As he was recognized tremendous applause swept over the crowded galleries. It was prolonged for full half minute. Meantime Mr. Quay was receiving the cordial congratulations of his colleagues on the floor of the senate.

The brief ceremony of administering to him the oath of office passed without special event.

During the day's session the army reorganization bill was discussed at length. Mr. Money adverted vigorously to the practice of hazing at the West Point military academy, declaring that it must be stopped or the institution must be abolished. He said nobody could induce him to believe that the way to make a good soldier was to "set a great big bully" upon a small man to beat him. It was not the way to make soldiers, and it was not the way to make gentlemen. He did not refer, he said, to horse play and practical jokes, but to mob violence and cowardly brutality.

"I cannot understand," said Mr. Money, "the motives of a lot of young men, all of them scholars of charity, who are paid for taking their education, who get together and mob another young man whose only crime is that he arrival at West Point two or three years later than they." He declared that the man who hazed others at the military academy would be a tyrant and a despot with the men of his command after he received his commission. He did not believe the cadets realized the contempt in which their actions were held by the American people. The practices there, he declared, ought to be and must be abated."

"I think the senator will be satisfied," interjected Mr. Proctor, one of the members of the military affairs committee, "when he sees the West Point bill, which will be reported in a day or two."

Mr. Money expressed the hope that the committee's bill would favor decisive action. "I do not want to stop at the boys," said he. "Any officer or instructor at West Point who countenances or winks at this practice of hazing ought to be dishonorably discharged from the service."

Senator Foraker made another effort to secure the confirmation of James S. Harlan as attorney general of Porto Rico, but, on account of the want of a quorum, made no progress.

It was an exceedingly dull day in the house. The entire day was spent upon the bill to revise and codify the postal laws, which is to be the continuing order, not, however, to interfere with appropriation bills or conference reports, until disposed of.

To Curtail Southern Yarn Product

Charlotte, N. C., Jan. 18.—At a meeting of the Southern Hosiery Yarn Spinners' association held here yesterday, at which 150,000 spindles were represented, an order for a curtailment of production was passed. This means an entire stoppage of night work. All present list prices of the Southern Hosiery Yarn Spinners' association are abandoned, as prices are expected to increase as production is decreased.

AMERICA'S PURPOSE

Will Endeavor to at Once Clear Up Minor Matters Regarding China

Washington, Jan. 18.—So far as the state department can influence the negotiations now about to begin at Pekin between the ministers and the Chinese plenipotentiaries, on the basis of the agreement just signed, it will seek to clear the way of all minor matters and of points upon which there is no disagreement whatever between the allies before undertaking the solution of the more difficult problems involved in the settlement of the questions of indemnities, guarantees and commercial treaties.

It is fully expected that the Chinese representatives will offer opposition at almost every point, in order to secure more favorable terms. It is believed here that, if the powers preserve a united front in opposition to any change of the conditions laid down in the agreement, and notify the Chinese that no changes are to be permitted, and that the points are not even subject to discussion, the way soon will be cleared for the consideration of the other topics upon which it is feared the powers themselves will find great difficulty in coming together.

Still, if it should come to pass that agreement is impossible upon the important matter of commercial treaties, for instance, and a dissolution of the concert of the powers should follow, there will have been at least some substantial achievement, for it is part of the purpose to have the points adjusted regarded as beyond reconsideration as they are settled, and, therefore, as binding upon the principals. Then, under this program, it is feared that the negotiations must consume much time and it is scarcely expected that any conclusion can be reached within several months, and certainly not before the opening of navigation, next spring, makes Pekin again accessible from the sea.

It is said at the state department that Mr. Rockhill has signified an intention to return to the United States about that time. He has not been recalled, but returns voluntarily.

The Friary Isolated

Hull, Eng., Jan. 18.—In spite of the reports that the postmortem examination of the remains of the three members of the crew of the British steamer Friary did not reveal that they were stricken with the plague, the authorities have ordered the Friary not to dock, but to anchor in the harbor. Two more deaths among her crew have occurred, with strong symptoms of the plague.

Bailey Acted In Good Faith

Austin, Jan. 18.—The legislative committee which has been investigating the charges against Congressman Bailey regarding his connection with the issuing of a permit to the Waters-Pierce Oil company to do business in the state, in violation of the state anti-trust law, closed its sessions yesterday. The committee will fully exonerate Mr. Bailey.

Little Fellow Burned to Death

Springfield, Mass., Jan. 18.—Mrs. Anne Nystrom went out to a grocery store, leaving her son, Carl, 2 years old, alone in the house, and on returning found the child lying dead on the floor and the woodwork ablaze. The boy had evidently been playing around the kitchen stove, and set fire to his clothing.

Suncook Fears Smallpox Outbreak

Suncook, N. H., Jan. 18.—The state board of health discovered a case of smallpox in this town yesterday, and it developed that one family has had eight cases of the disease since Thanksgiving day and has not reported them. It is feared that a general outbreak among the mill operatives may result.

Crushed to Death

Farmington, Me., Jan. 18.—John O. Webster, a farmer of this place, was instantly killed by falling under a hay press, which was being hauled over the road between Farmington and Temple.

HOW TO GAIN FLESH

Persons have been known to gain a pound a day by taking an ounce of Scott's emulsion. It is strange, but it often happens.

Somehow the ounce produces the pound; it seems to start the digestive machinery going properly, so that the patient is able to digest and absorb his ordinary food, which he could not do before, and that is the way the gain is made.

A certain amount of flesh is necessary for health; if you have not got it you can get it by taking Scott's Emulsion.

You will find it just as useful in summer as in winter, and if you are thriving upon it don't stop because the weather is warm.

If you have not tried it, send for free sample its agreeable taste will surprise you.

"TAKE NO PRISONERS"

Kitchener's Alleged Order to Pursuers of De Wet

AN APPEAL FROM ROBERTS

To Hurry Enlistment of Five Thousand Yeomanry — Nearly All Cape Colony Under Martial Law — Rations of Wives of Fighting Boers Reduced

London, Jan. 18.—The "stop the war" committee yesterday passed the following resolution:

"Orders which a British officer reports he personally received reveal the adoption by Lord Roberts and Lord Kitchener of a policy having for its aim the extermination of a heroic nationality by starving its women and children, and the deliberate massacre of unarmed prisoners."

The latter clause alludes to General Kitchener's alleged secret orders to General De Wet's pursuers to take no prisoners. Copies of letters from an unnamed British officer, containing these and other charges, will be sent by the committee to Lord Salisbury, Lord Roberts and others.

Lord Roberts, who was entertained privately at dinner last evening by the United Service club, the guests including the Prince of Wales, the Duke of York, the Duke of Cambridge and some 300 officers, has issued from the war office a stirring appeal to the country for a prompt response to the call for 5000 yeomanry, whose past services in South Africa he highly commended to the gratitude of the nation.

The authorities continue to hold a hopeful view regarding the South African situation, but they seem to recognize that vigorous measures are necessary.

Boer families and their stocks are being systematically brought into convenient centres from all over the country. They are kept in camps and fed. Those who surrender voluntarily are supplied with full rations, and those whose husbands are still in the field are provided for on a reduced scale, which is raised, when the husbands surrender, to a full allowance.

Martial law has now been proclaimed in every part of Cape Colony, except the districts of Cape Town, Simonstown, Wynberg, Port Elizabeth and East London. It has also been proclaimed in Tombuland, Griqualand East, and in East and West Pondeland.

It has been proclaimed unlawful for any person in the Cape peninsula, except officials and regular or irregular troops, to possess arms and ammunition or either.

British offensive operations have ceased for the present. It is supposed that Lord Kitchener is collecting his strength for a final effort to crush or to capture the commandoes and by a repetition of the tactics which caused the surrender of General Cronje and Generdl Prinsloo.

Writ Ready For Presentation

Washington, Jan. 18.—The mandate of the United States supreme court in the Neely case was issued yesterday and will be forwarded to the district attorney for the southern district of New York. If no further steps be taken in Neely's behalf before the writ is presented to the New York court, Neely will be sent to Cuba in compliance with the court's decision.

Satisfactory Conditions In Samoa

Washington, Jan. 18.—Commander Tilley of the United States steamer Aberenda reports to the navy department, under date of Auckland, N. Z., Dec. 26, that he has concluded a visit to all the islands of the Samoan group under the control of the United States and found affairs in a very satisfactory condition.

Found Dead In Lumber Shed

Waltham, Mass., Jan. 18.—The body of William Murray, aged 35 years, was found in a shed owned by the Barker Lumber company last night, and, although an examination will be made, it is believed that death resulted from natural causes. Murray was employed by the lumber company as one of its drivers.

Turkish Students Starving

Berlin, Jan. 18.—The Berlinger Tageblatt asserts that the Turkish students here, who number more than 100, and are wholly dependent upon the sultan's stipends, are starving, as they have been without money for a year. The Turkish legation professes to be unable to render any assistance.

Walcott Lost on a Foul

Good Afternoon

In connection with the copious abstracts from the report of the State Board of Education printed this week, and the papers on "Public Schools" before the City Band Literary Society Thursday evening, the opinions of an Englishman will be timely and of interest. Editor Harmsworth says:

"On the mechanical side of everyday life you enter upon the twentieth century so far ahead of the world that I doubt whether we will ever catch up with you. In the great matter of surface transit, surely one of the most important features of modern life, you are leading the universe.

"You gave us the Morse telegraph, the telephone, the phonograph, the incandescent lamp, the Maxim gun, the Hoe printing press, the linotype typesetting machine, the electric automobile, the typewriter, the sewing machine, the model office building, the Westinghouse brake and motor and numberless improvements on existing inventions which testify in every way to the forcee of American genius.

"You are giving your young people an education which, in my opinion—was expressed freely in my own newspaper at home as well as in this—is altogether more suited to the requirements of the twentieth century than that we provide. Your public school system is the admiration of the world."

Drift of Opinion.

☞ The great possessions even of this world are not for sale to the highest bidder. They cannot be bought with money.—January Ladies' Home Journal.

☞ The unanimous re-election of Colonel Albert Clarke to be Secretary of the Home Market club does not look as though the stories told by interested and prejudiced parties about his relations with the club last fall had the slightest justification. Why will men so utterly disregard truth a s soon as they get into politics?—Waltham Free Press.

☞ Mrs. Lillie Devereaux Blake has made a discovery that may produce a revolution in masculine circles, one of these days, should the Congress of Mothers think it not too late to act upon the suggestion. "No greater wrong has been done to man," she says, "than not teaching him to sew. He has nothing to do in the evening. That's why he smokes too much. Now if he had only been taught embroidery, think of the difference."—Lynn Item.

☞ The new chief of police at Taunton seems to be in danger of getting himself much disliked if he attempts to enforce some of the Sunday blue laws. It is one of the most remarkable things in the world to see a police chief, with so many opportunities to do real work and prove himself really useful in the world, giving his attention to little quibbles about the sale of newspapers and drugs and cigars on Sunday. The main object of such police work seems to be to make the police cordially hated on all sides, and that's about all that results in a permanent way from these attempts to annoy and bother people who have no intention at all of doing harm in the world.—Brockton Enterprise.

—Nine Italians have been indicted at Montpelier, Vt., in connection with the assault on Chief Brown of Barre, Vt.

GRANITE CUTTERS.

Moving for Back Pay for Work Thirty Years Ago.

A dispatch from Barre to the Boston Journal says: About 50 granite cutters and tool sharpeners met here Thursday night, to take action toward pushing their claims for back pay, for work done in the service of the United States Government, nearly 30 years ago. Besides those who reside in Barre, there are many others about the country, interested in this matter. At the meeting a committee was appointed, and every effort will be made to carry the project through to success.

The claims arise out of the building of the Boston and New York Post Offices, the Government work on Dix, Hurricane and Fox Islands, and work in the Navy Yard. The claimants worked ten hours a day, instead of eight, and they are now trying to collect pay for the extra two hours a day. The claims vary in amount from $100 to $6,000. The Navy Yard men succeeded in getting their pay about two years ago, and the other claims have been before Congress three times during the last 20 years. Congressman Littlefield of Maine has charge of pushing the claims in this session, and it is hoped that Senator Proctor will assist him.

THE SINGLE CROSS.

Bill Introduced to Amend the Ballot Law.

Representative Dowse of Malden introduced the following bill in the Legislature on Thursday:

Section 1. In addition to the requirements of chapter five hundred and forty-eight of the Acts of the year eighteen hundred and ninety-eight and the acts amendatory thereof and supplementary thereto, every ballot to be used at a State election shall contain a list of the party names of the political parties represented upon the ballot, arranged in alphabetical order, and at the right of each party name there shall be left a clear square, measuring not less than one-half inch each way.

Sect. 2. Any voter desiring to vote for all the candidates of any political party named in the list described in section one of this act, may, if he so desires, make a cross (X) in the square at the right of the party name, and any ballot so marked shall be counted for all the candidates of that political party whose names appear upon the ballot. This section shall in no way prevent a voter, if he so desires, from marking his ballot in accordance with the provisions of law heretofore existing, but it is to be regarded as an alternative method of marking ballots used at a State election.

Sect. 3. The term "State election" shall apply to any election held for the choice of a national, state, district or county officer by the qualified voters, whether for a full term or for the filling of a vacancy.

Sect. 4. All acts and parts of acts inconsistent with this act are hereby repealed.

Reception at Wollaston.

The prettiest and most sociable reception of the season was held in the vestries of the Wollaston Congregational church on Thursday evening. The rooms profusely decorated with ferns and plants wore a homelike cozy look. The floor was covered with handsome rugs and banquet lamps shed a soft light on the scene. The guests were received by Rev. and Mrs. Edward A. Chase.

After the reception the entertainment began. Miss Edith Webber of South Boston pleased all by her reading of several interesting selections; Mrs. A. T. Leavitt played a selection on the piano forte, and Mrs. Ralph Saxe sang a few songs that were much enjoyed by her many friends.

Ice cream and cake were served by the following young ladies, who also acted as ushers at the reception. Miss Harriet Bates, Miss Edith Crowell, Miss Sadie Wiley, Miss Grace Patterson and Miss Carolyn Bates.

The affair was very informal and the evident success reflects great credit on the committee in charge, of which Mrs. A. A. Lincoln was the chairman.

—The business of distributing free apples among the poor has even reached across the Atlantic this year, as a number of barrels of rosy Baldwins were sent by the boys and girls of the Barnard Memorial church, Boston, for distribution among the poor children of London. The recipients were delighted with this thoughtful gift and have sent messages of thanks and good will to the children of Boston. It is pleasant to see these little evidences of hands stretching across the sea to the old mother land.

—The Connecticut woman who left her entire fortune of $7,000 to two yellow dogs, has shocked her adopted daughters and several cousins who were disinherited thereby. Will there be a law suit? the Rockland Free Press wants to know.

PICKWICK DINNER.

The Quincy Club Nearly a Generation Old.

The Menu and Program in Full.

A Prediction as to the Dinner in the Year 2000.

The history of literary organizations in Quincy shows many which have had their periods of existence longer or shorter, and have passed away. One, however, the Pickwick club, has had a continuous life of nearly a generation and every year since its institution in 1873 its members have enjoyed and taken active part in its most interesting and varied program. The special meeting of each year, which may be said to be the marking milestone in the club's career, is the annual dinner, Thursday evening to the members and guests met at Hotel Essex in Boston and held the twenty-eighth annual dinner, and spent the evening in merry making.

One of the excellent suppers for which this new hotel is becoming so favorably known was served at seven o'clock, and for one hour and a half the following menu was enjoyed:

Lynnhaven Bays
Cream of Chicken a la Reine.
Olives. Radishes.
Smelts a la Hoteliere
Potatoes Dauphine
Small Patties, Fresh Mushrooms in Cream.
Mignons of Beef Tenderloin a la Marietta.
Asparagus a la Polonaise
Cardinale Punch
Roast Quail, Bread Sauce.
Romaine Salad
Fancy Creams. Assorted Cakes.
Bon Bons. Coffee.

The president of the club, Arthur W. Hall presided and when the tables had been cleared, a very pleasing musical and literary program was announced. Miss Louise Holbrook, contralto, and Mrs Jennie Hocking Hunt, pianist, who were guests of the club, furnished the music, while the literary and speaking parts were given by members.

The program:

Songs, "Forbidden Music," Gastaldon
"Celeste," Newcomb
Miss Holbrook.
Reading, "A voice from the tombs."
Mr. W. E. Simmons.
Piano Solo, "Waltz," Mattei
"Romanza Appassionata," Orth
Mrs. Hunt.
"The Secret of the Club's Long-continued Activity."
John O. Hall.
Songs, "An Open Secret," Woodman
"Good bye, Sweet Day," Varnah
Miss Holbrook.
Original Poem, "A Pickwick Dinner in the Year 2000."
Mrs. Wilson Marsh.

According to the poet, the dinner then, served in a forty-eight story hotel, where the guests were shot about in pneumatic tubes, after alighting from flying-machines and welcoming guests from Mars, — consisted largely of various sorts of condensed food pellets, which were distributed without the aid of waiters. All present were united in declaring that the dinner as served at Hotel Essex in 1901 appealed to them much more than did his fancied feast of the far future.

After the rendering of the formal program everyone gathered about the piano, and joined in singing until the clock said Train-time." Nineteen members and four guests were present, and the good fellowship of the Pickwickians, of which Mayor Hall, in his speech, attributed much of the long-continued success of this organization, was never more marked.

—The project of erecting a statue or some other public memorial of the late Roger Wolcott in expression of the appreciation in which his character is held by his fellow citizens has taken form promptly. A number of gentlemen, headed by Eben S. Draper and Henry L. Higginson, issue an appeal for subscriptions, addressed to "the many thousands of men, women and children of Massachusetts who held him in affectionate esteem, who reverence his memory and desire to participate in this expression of their regard." So great is the interest manifested in the proposition that the committee has no doubt of its ability to easily secure a sufficient sum, but it is particularly desirous of receiving small subscriptions from those whose hearts are willing but whose means are more limited than those of the wealthy. It is felt that the larger the number of subscriptions the more representative the tribute will be of the people of the State as a whole.—Boston Courier.

— There are now a much smaller number of prisoners at the House of Correction in this county than usual—only 62.

THE HORSE SHOW.

C. W. Williams has changed the name of his stallion Mazatlan to Infact.

Mexican Boy, 2:20¼, by Poem, is now owned by Rush Logan of Wabash, Ind.

G. W. Ford of Santa Ana, Cal., owns a sister to Neeretta, 2:09½, that is said to be threatened with speed.

Managers of tracks in Oregon, Washington, Idaho and British Columbia have already arranged dates for 1901.

Al Thomas is estimated to have ridden 600 miles in showing horses at the Madison Square Garden sale in New York.

Temper, the little trotting mare which was first to pull a wagon below 2:10 at a matinee, will be shifted to the pace in the spring.

The finances of the National Trotting association are in excellent condition. During the past year the expenditures were $8,059, and the balance on hand is $16,577.

Many remember the stallion Domestic, 2:20½, by Volunteer, that James H. Goldsmith brought out in 1887. He now has his first comer to standard speed in Brady, bay gelding, 2:25½.

T. Licalzi's horses were barred from the New Orleans track the other day as the result of Donna Rita's running. Subsequently Licalzi was restored to good standing, but his trainer, Hurley, was kept on the ground.

There was an interesting race on Blue Hill avenue in Boston recently between Bonnets o' Blue and Hazlewood. The former won the first, third and fourth heats, while the second was a head heat. The time was 32s., 32⅛s., 32¼s., 32s.

PUBLIC SCHOOLS.

Methods of Education Discussed by Miss Adams.

Supt. Parlin Tells What is Necessary in Pupil.

At Meeting of the City Band Literary Society.

The City Band Literary Society was fortunate, Thursday evening, in having thoughts in connection with "The Public Schools" presented by Miss Mabel Adams of the School Committee, and Supt. Parlin. Mr. Alex. Cowe presided.

Miss Adams said at the outset that it was a mistake for Quincy people to think that their public schools were a little better than any other city. There were many as good, and many poorer. However, it was a fact, that the schools in most of the suburban cities were better than those of Boston.

Parents nowadays had very little knowledge of the methods of teaching as very few indeed investigate for themselves. Conclusions should not be reached from what children say. If children are asked,—what have you learned today—they may be unable to tell. So with some adults, after they have heard a good sermon, they are unable to give an abstract of it. No teacher of today can afford to teach in the good old way, for they would be back numbers.

Miss Adams confined her talk mainly, to the methods of teaching. She illustrated how children and adults apperceive with the words "sewer" and "fence." Each lesson must have something new. In turn Miss Adams took up reading, language, geography, arithmetic and physics, and injected many illustrations which emphasized her points. Reading should become a study of literature. Rules were not the main thing in language, but ability to describe, and pictures and excursions were a great help. It was time wasted to learn geography word for word from a book, to bound States, etc. Now children study the people first. Again excursions were necessary. In arithmetic, it was lucky for the children that they don't have to learn rules and the multiplication table. They now get enough to carry them through life satisfactorily. She claimed very little arithmetic was necessary. Labratory taught physics were by far superior to book physics.

Supt. Parlin said he was told by the School Committee that all might become Presidents. He had been looking for the job ever since, but had concluded he must settle down and work.

There was no demand now for Presidential timber from Quincy.

Our schools must prepare people for life.

In old days children had home work before and after school, outside of their studies. It was not so, only to a limited extent, now, and it was to be regretted. Now parents seem to want children prepared for soft snaps—easy jobs.

They should be trained for a busy life. Not until farming was introduced among Indians was progress made. So with the Negroes of the South; they need manual training, which is being introduced.

Mr. Parlin told why health was necessary; also character, ability, and play. He would sacrifice education rather than health. He queried if it was fair for parents to shirk the character training, and expect teachers to do it all. He would teach ability by developing powers. Not through books alone, but by teaching children to adapt themselves to circumstances. A street training was injurious; rather encourage some fad of a child. Pupils should have manual training, and they need it before they reach the High school. Not to learn a trade but for a training. Boys working together develop sympathy for each other, and might lead to a solution of differences between labor and capital.

Play is necessary. People are in too much of a hurry to get children into school. Eat, play and sleep were better. It was not best for a child to be in school at five years. They should be taught plays. Manual training is less expensive than Greek and Latin, and of more benefit.

The question was then opened for debate, but few cared to take issue with the educational experts.

Mr. Cowe said foreigners upon their arrival in this country were forcibly struck with the large number of big boys in school and idle out of school. They found a big difference in the system, but were forced to admit that this country was far ahead of the old countries, and that the people were very observant.

Frank F. Prescott of the Daily Ledger quoted from a recent speech of Editor Harmsworth of London, which paid a great tribute to the public schools of America.

MILTON.

The annual meeting of the Unquity club was held Monday evening. The reports of the officers for the year showed that the club now numbered 74 members, that all bills had been paid, and that there was a balance of $175 in the treasury. The following officers were elected: President, E. E. Carlton; Vice President, John Graham; Secretary, Harry F. Brierley; Treasurer, A. A. Brackett; Board of Managers, the above officers, with William Churchill, Frank Kemp, James Gibbs, A. M. Gardner, Joseph Mullen, Herbert Boutin, J. E. Quimby.

Jan. 20, on Islands of the Pacific, John C. Paterson; Jan. 27, Africa—"The Martyrs of Uganda;" Feb. 10, China, "The Martyrs of China." The talks are illustrated by map.

A pretty wedding took place on Wednesday evening at the home of the bride on Pleasant street, when Mr. Arthur Homer and Miss Stella Beattie were united in marriage. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Mr. Rogers. The reception which followed the ceremony was attended by many young people.

Ladies' night was observed by the Unquity club Wednesday evening. There was an exhibition game of billiards between Charles Eaton and E. E. Carlton, which was won by Mr. Eaton by a score of 200 to 68. Mr. Eaton's largest run was 44 points. There was also singing by Miss Emily Baxter, whist and a collation.

The massive granite columns, thirty-two in number, for the new Cathedral of St. John the Divine, now in process of erection in New York city, are being quarried at Vinalhaven, Me. Each column is 54 feet long, six feet in diameter and weighs 160 tons. They are being turned and polished in a monster lathe, specially constructed, which contains 135 tons of metal and is driven by a 50 horse power engine.

COLONIAL COTTAGE.

Designed to Combine Beauty With Utility—Costs $3,200 to Build.

[Copyright, 1900, by George Hitchings, architect, 1000 Flatbush avenue, Brooklyn.]

This attractive colonial design is very conveniently planned, with a large reception hall ornamented by a platform staircase with carved newels and turned balusters. The parlor has four large windows and an open fireplace fitted up with a hard wood mantel and with tile hearth and facings.

The dining room is, as it should be, the lightest and pleasantest room in the house. It is circular on one end, is lighted by six large windows and has an open fireplace. This room is trimmed in antique quartered oak. The walls are covered with burlap of a deep maroon shade, and the ceiling is tinted in colors to blend nicely with the side walls. The floor is a neat design of parquet flooring. The pantry is provided with a china closet of good size. The kitchen has all the mod-

The second floor is nicely arranged with a large hall, three large bedrooms and a bath, which is neatly fitted up with open nickel plumbing and tile floor and wainscoting. There is also ample closet room on this floor.

The attic has three large finished rooms and an open attic.

The cemented cellar is provided with coal bins and a furnace. The underpin-

Boys' Belongings.

There are numerous possessions that are very dear to a boy's heart—his bats and balls, his fishing tackle, his tennis racket, his tops and marbles, his—well, who can name all the possessions that are dear to a boy's heart?

When the boy has no place in particular in which to bestow his belongings, says a writer in The Ladies' World, he is apt to pre-empt quarters wherever it suits his convenience, often to the no small disturbance of orderly housekeeping.

Now, give the boy a chance to be orderly and see if he won't live up to his opportunities. It will be much better for the habits he is forming and considerably better for the one who is trying to keep her house orderly.

Make the boy a locker, where he can keep all his possessions, and locate it in the laundry, the back hall or in some other place so that he won't have to tear through the house every time he wants one or another of his playthings.

Woman's Cozy Corner.

If you cannot afford a really good couch, says a writer in the Boston Globe, with the best springs and upholstering, I should advise you to purchase a regular cot bed, with woven wire springs and a good mattress. This cot bed, with the legs sawed off a little to make it stand lower and two light boards nailed on either side to keep the mattress from slipping, makes really the best foundation for a cozy corner that I know of. Purchase a bagdad to throw over it for a spread. Some people object to the cot because it has no back. This difficulty may be removed by making several (two or three) quite large pillows of strong ticking and stuffing stiffly full of excelsior. Stand them up at the back against the wall to serve as a back. Pile the rest of the pillows you should have been at work upon ever since you first thought of having a cozy corner.

Home Matters.

To clean unvarnished black walnut rub it with a soft flannel cloth which has been wrung out of either sweet or sour milk.

Upon opening the house in the fall every drain should be flushed thoroughly with water, and hot water should be allowed to run freely.

To remove any dish from a mold when cold wrap a hot cloth about the outside of the mold for a minute or two. To remove a hot dish wrap a cold cloth about it.

HOLIDAY SWEETS.

How to Make Several Popular, Simple and Pure Candies.

Cocoanut Candy.—Use a good sized thick bottomed kettle or saucepan. Put in it one cupful of sugar, one cupful of molasses and a piece of butter the size of an egg and boil until a little, dropped into cold water, can be rolled into a firm ball. Take from the fire and stir into it as much grated cocoanut as possible. Mold into balls or cones and stand on a buttered plate till cold.

Peanut Brittle.—Put one cupful of molasses, six cupfuls of brown sugar and one cupful of water in a deep kettle and boil until, when dropped in cold water, it can be rolled to a hard ball between the thumb and fingers. Add three pints of shelled and broken peanuts, boil five minutes more, then add two heaping tablespoonfuls of butter; take from the fire and stir till the butter is melted. Add one teaspoonful of baking soda and stir quickly. As the candy begins to rise pour at once on well greased pans, spreading as thin as possible.

Chocolate Caramels.—Boil slowly together one pound of brown sugar, half a cupful of molasses, a quarter of a pound of grated chocolate, half a cupful of cream and one tablespoonful of butter until it is like very thick molasses. Take from the fire, add one teaspoonful of vanilla and pour into straight sided buttered pans, marking in squares when partly cold.

Sugar Caramels.—Boil together one pint of granulated sugar and one and a half cupfuls of rich cream. Have a steady, rather slow fire and stir occasionally until a spoonful dropped into ice water can be rolled by the thumb and fingers to a hard ball. Take from the fire at once, add one teaspoonful of vanilla or any kind of flavoring and pour into well buttered tins. When partly cooled, mark off in squares.

Pulled Peppermints.—Boil together three cupfuls of granulated sugar, one and a half cupfuls of water and a quarter of a teaspoonful of tartaric acid until on trying in cold water it will almost crack, but if held a moment can be rolled into a hard ball. Do not stir, but pour into a buttered dish to cool. As soon as it can be handled add a teaspoonful of extract of peppermint and pull until it is white, then cut in sticks.

Cream Candy.—Boil together two cupfuls of granulated sugar, half a teaspoonful of cream of tartar, a teaspoonful of vinegar and a cupful of water until it will snap when dropped in cold water. Pour at once on a greased platter and pull when cool enough to handle.

Butter Scotch.—Boil together two cupfuls of granulated sugar, half a cupful of molasses, a cupful of butter, one-third of a cupful each of vinegar and water. Cook steadily until, when a little is dropped in cold water, it will snap. Pour at once into shallow pans; do not have it more than a quarter of an inch thick. Mark into squares before it hardens.—Table Talk.

up on rings or mounted with flat frames like the fascinating Aiglon purse of the illustration, which can be knitted or crocheted in silk and beads. As shown by the chain and hook, it is to be worn as a chatelaine. The making of purses is quite a fad with fancy workers, and the principal expense lies in having them properly mounted by the silversmith. Such a purse is one of the strong points of fashionable dress just now.

Lace For Trimming Flannels.

Use Shetland floss and coarse steel needles, directs The Ladies' World. Cast on 23 stitches; knit twice across plain.

3. Now take the long stitches made by dropping 2 loops and put them on the needle just knit out. Then commence next to the heading and knit all of the long stitches plain.

4. All knit plain.

5. Slip 1, knit 2, over, narrow, over, narrow, knit 16.

Plum Porridge.

Old fashioned plum porridge may be made either of wheat flour or Indian meal. When it is made of the meal, it will take a longer time to prepare, as it requires at least two hours to cook thoroughly. When the porridge is done, add the stewed plums. Stir the fruit in slowly to prevent it breaking and serve with sugar and cream.

HERE is a matter which touches your comfort. You want a clear, fair complexion. This is really nine-tenths a question of the treatment of the pores of the skin. Some toilet soaps are as nippy and keen as mustard. If you will only use the virtue you call your Judgment, it will tell you that any soap which leaves the hands habitually dry is robbing the skin of its natural oil. Free alkali is the robber's name. Ivory Soap has no free alkali. Try it! It floats.

George B. The annual meeting of the Merrymount Granite Co. was held this week and the following officers elected: Clerk, Michael B. Geary; Treasurer, John C. Kapples; Agent, Peter W. Driscoll; Directors, John C. Kapples, John Sullivan, Peter W. Driscoll, Enos S. Costa, Michael B. Geary, James H. Sullivan, Lemuel J. Myers and John McTiernan.

Isn't it about time those antiquated oil lamps on the steam railroad cars should be superceded by a more modern light. It is well nigh impossible to see to read by them. Only a few months ago several Wollaston ladies were badly frightened by the collapse of a lamp. To be sure the company paid for the ruined gown, but people dislike to have their nerves shaken. If people will read on the trains why shouldn't they have better lights?

Children's Corner.

Coin Collector.

While many children collect stamps, a few collect old coins, but none are more successful than the circus elephant. The American Boy for January says: When "Jumbo," P. T. Barnum's big elephant, was struck by an engine and killed at London, Ont., in 1885, Mr. Barnum telegraphed a Rochester, N. Y., taxidermist, employing him to superintend the saving of the skin and bones of the big elephant. It took five hours to remove the skin, and then for fifteen hours more the men worked cutting the flesh from the bones. In Jumbo's stomach the workmen found an assortment of odds and ends that would have gladdened the heart of a junk dealer. There were a lot of stones as large as hen's eggs, and a collection of coins that represented nearly every civilized country: French, German, Australian, English, American and other. There were half dollars, dimes and nickels. Besides, there was a large number of lead car seals. There was even an English policman's whistle in the capacious paunch.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Champions of Peace Are Killing Off Brave People

CLEVELAND AS SERMONIZER

In Dealing With Philippine Question—Conservatism In Which Our Constitution Had Its Birth Is Cast Aside—Sober Days For Thoughtful Citizens

New York, Jan. 18.—Ex-President Grover Cleveland was the principal speaker at the annual dinner of the Holland society of New York at the Waldorf-Astoria last evening. This is the 16th year in which the descendants of the Knickerbocker founders of New York have dined together, and have dwelt in loving remembrance on the deeds and virtues of their ancestors. Mr. Cleveland responded to the toast "Dutch Dikes and Dames." He said:

"It has been my lot to be much on the sober side of life, and to feel the pressure of great responsibilities. Besides, I believe it sometimes happens that an excess of light-hearted gayety creates a condition of popular thought and impulse that may profitably be steadied by sedate suggestions and the expression of conservative sentiment—even though it may be called sermonizing. At any rate, I am quite willing to take an humble place among the sermonizers in this time of headlong national heedlessness, and to invoke the cultivation our saving graces of Dutch conservatism. It is the kind of conservatism in which our constitution had its birth and which has thus far been the source of our nation's safety and strength—the conservatism of justice, of honor, of honesty, of industry, of frugality and of contented homes.

"In this assemblage of those who know so well the meaning of these things, the question is suggested whether in present circumstances this conservatism characterizes the conduct or guides the sentiments of our people. There can be but one answer to this question. Conservatism has in a great degree been jauntily cast aside, or condemned as opposed to our country's welfare and glory. A strange voyage has been entered upon, without count of cost and without chart or compass. The tried and sure foundation of our liberty and national traditions has been relaxed, and satisfaction with our country's mission has been undermined. The restraints and limitations of our constitution have become galling and irksome under the temptations of national greed and aggrandizement. Our old love of peace, honor and justice has been weakened and frugality and contentment are not now traits inseparable from American character.

"Thirty years after the war for the preservation of the Union a treaty of arbitration was formulated between the United States and Great Britain, which, if completed, would have gone far towards removing every pretext of war between the two countries. This treaty failed of confirmation in the senate of the United States. Less than five years passed, and these English-speaking champions of peace and arbitration are still operating in parallel lines—one in the Philippines and the other in South Africa—but no longer for peace and arbitration. Both are killing natives in an effort to possess their lands.

"This indicates a sad relapse, and in our case it is a most serious one. If England succeeds in her attempt in South Africa, she will but add another to her similar acquisitions; a brave people will be subjugated and, because of our enaggement in a similar venture in another quarter, they will miss the expressions of American sympathy which we are accustomed to extend to those who struggle for national life and independence.

"On the other hand, with success in our subjugating effort, a new, untried and exceedingly perilous situation will be forced upon us. We can conquer the Philippines, and after conquering them can probably govern them. It is in the strain upon our institutions, the demoralizing of our people, the evasion of our constitutional limitations and the perversion of our national mission that our danger lies. As a distinguished bishop has said: 'The question is not what we shall do with the Philippines, but what the Philippines will do with us.'

"Our country will never be the same again. For weal or woe, we have already irrevocably passed beyond the old lines. The republic will in some sort be saved. Shall it be only in name and semblance, with fair external appearance, but with the germs of decay fastened upon its vitals?. Or shall it through changes still survive in such vigor and strength as to remain the hope and pride of free Americans?

"The problem is a momentous one. Its solution depends upon the extent to which the old patriotism and good sense of our countrymen can be rescued from impending dangers. Thus these are sober days for thoughtful citizens—days for preaching—days for sermonizing. If we are to be saved from disaster, it must be through the cultivation and enforcement of that sort of conservatism that should find a congenial home in the Holland society."

Jordan Must Be Obeyed

Sanford University, Cal., Jan. 18.—The vacancies of Professors Howard and Spencer have been filled by the appointment of Professors Lapsley and Warren of Harvard. These men will take up their work next week. N. R. Brauner, acting president of Stanford, says that any professor who is unwilling to support Dr. Jordan will have to leave the university.

END OF DULL SEASON

Print Cloth Market Greatly Relieved by Heavy Buying by Borden

Fall River, Mass., Jan. 18.—Matthew C. D. Borden again came to the relief of local print cloth manufacturers yesterday by purchasing 150,000 pieces of regulars at the present price of 3 1-8 cents, thus breaking the almost unparalleled period of dullness and quiet through which manufacturers have been passing for the past four months. The sale should have the effect of causing the buying movement to set in.

The sale has improved the tone of the market very much, and probably marks the end of the dull season, and will have the effect of putting an end, for the present at least, to the talk of curtailing production.

Poor, but Stocked With Whisky

Barre, Vt., Jan. 18.—Officers raided the home of Dennis Keefe last night and seized 114 pints of whisky and a bottle of wine. On Oct. 23, 1899, Keefe was sentenced to the house of correction at Rutland for 792 days for selling liquor contrary to the law, but he was pardoned on account of his being very low with consumption. This time it was his wife who was arrested. There are several small children in the family, which is in poor circumstances, one of them now being at the point of death.

Boston May Have 25-Cent Ball

Boston, Jan. 18.—The "chutes" property on Huntington avenue, has been secured as a ground for the American league team. In area it is 100,000 feet larger than the National league grounds and it is considered to be in a far better location. If the National league carries out its purpose and puts a National association team here, Boston will have three teams and practically continual ball all summer. It may mean 25-cent ball.

Boston "Professor" Under Arrest

Boston, Jan. 18.—Evangeline Yale Davey, better known as "Professor Yale," wife of Thomas A. Devey, who says he is an astrologist, is charged with sending an obscene circular through the mail. She was held in $500 bail, and her case was continued until Jan. 24. According to Inspector Towlson, "Professor Yale" has done an enormous business with the young people of the country.

McLain May Have Crossed the Border

Portland, Me., Jan. 18.—It is now thought that John McLain is miles away from the scene of the crime at Gorham. While the officers are still completely baffled as to his location, they consider there is no longer any doubt that John McLain is the man wanted. As McLain belonged in the provinces, it is thought that he has more than likely crossed the border.

Must Undergo Two Hours' Test

Newport, R. I., Jan. 18.—Torpedo boat Bailey yesterday finished the runs necessary to enable the inspection board to plot her speed on the standardized screw plan, and made 30.8 knots on her speed trial. She will now get ready for a run in Long Island sound, where she must maintain for two hours a speed of 30 knots to meet the contract requirements.

Conference Without Result

Boston, Jan. 18.—A conference was held yesterday between Organizer McMahon of the International Typographical union and the executive board of Typothetae, relative to the demand of the printers for a wage scale of $18 per week in book and job offices. Nothing was accomplished because Mr. McMahon was not in a position to make a definite proposition.

Abbott Says He Was Misinformed

Fall River, Mass., Jan. 18.—The controversy between the mayor and the school committee in relation to asserted extravagance in the expenditure of the city's money in the purchase of text books for the local schools has ended by an explanation made public by Mayor Abbott, in which he states that he had been misinformed as to the facts in the case.

To keep us going—and so good-day.

A little trust that when we die
We reap our sowing—and so good-by!

The Cadets are not to have their usual theatricals this winter but the Bank Officers' association is busily at work on their play 'Miss Simplicity' which is to be presented for a whole week at the Tremont theatre, Boston. Mr. William S. Osborne is to have a star role.

The annual ball of the Cochato club of Braintree, the event of events on the club calendar, which was scheduled for Friday evening, February first, has been changed to Wednesday evening, January thirtieth, on account of the Home Science ball at Quincy Music hall. Society people of both towns are equally interested in both balls, so that it would have been a great pity to have had them come the same night.

QUINCY NO. 171 IN POPULATION.

But 170 Larger Cities in the United States than Our City---12 States with None Larger.

Thirty-Eight of These 170 Have Less Than 30,000 Population, and Several Not Increasing as Rapidly.

Quincy Has Passed Many in the Race Since the Census of 1890. When Her Number Was 198.

Quincy is not only growing fast in population, but the 1900 census shows that our city is gaining on the large cities of the country, and that in the last ten years we have passed several in the race. In 1890 there were in the United States 197 larger cities. Today, there are but 170.

This is a remarkable record for ten years, and certainly Quincy is taking rank in the country when she stands No. 171. In Massachusetts alone there are about 360 cities and towns, and in the United States they are almost without number, but certainly several thousand.

Quincy is the largest and only city in Norfolk county.

Quincy ranks 23 in the State of Massachusetts.

Quincy ranks 34 in the six New England states.

Quincy ranks 171 in the United States.

The following twelve States and Territories have no cities as large as Quincy.

Arizona
Idaho
Indian Territory
Mississippi
Nevada
New Mexico
North Carolina
North Dakota
Oklahoma
South Dakota
Vermont
Wyoming.

There are also twelve States and territories with only one city larger than Quincy, viz:

Arkansas with Little Rock.
Delaware with Wilmington.
Dist. Columbia with Washington.
Florida with Jacksonville.
Maine with Portland.
Maryland with Baltimore.
Montana with Butte.
New Hampshire with Manchester.
Oregon with Portland.
South Carolina with Charleston.
Utah with Salt Lake City.

Quincy, Mass.,	10,570	16,711	23,899

Only 13 of the 38 made a larger actual gain since 1890 than Quincy, the following not gaining as many: Joliet, Sacramento, Lacrosse, Williamsport, Newport, (Ky.,) Pueblo, Bay City, Fort Worth, Lexington, Gloucester, New Britain, Council Bluffs, Jackson, Wichita, Meriden, Aurora, Orange, Zanesville, Newburg, Kingston, Kalamazoo, Poughkeepsie, Hamilton, Cohoes and Oshoksh.

But 16 of the 38 made a larger gain in the 20 years but 5 of these are in the list which did not gain as fast in the last five years, viz: Joliet, Lacosse, Pueblo, Fort Worth and New Britain.

Ledger readers who are interested in the growth of cities and towns will soon have an opportunity to make a study of the figures, as we propose to print a list of all cities which in 1900 had a population of 3,000, and give the populations of 1880 and 1890 for comparison.

A REMEDY FOR THE GRIPPE.

A remedy recommended for patients afflicted with the Grippe is KEMP'S BALSAM, which is especially adapted for the throat and lungs. Don't wait for the first symptoms of the disease! get a bottle today and keep it for use the moment it is needed. If neglected the grippe has a tendency to bring on pneumonia. KEMP'S BALSAM prevents this by keeping the cough loose and the lungs free from inflammation. All druggists sell KEMP'S BALSAM at 25c. and 50c.

Freedom Party.

Wednesday evening the attractive residence of Mrs. Emma Lark on Granite street was the scene of a very sociable party, it being the 21st anniversary of the birth of her son Harry, who was surprised by many friends. Mr. Frank Craig presided at the piano and rendered some very choice selecselections; there were also vocal and instrumental solos, etc.

The beautiful rooms were decorated profusely with flags and bunting and a bountiful spread was served by the young ladies of the party. The table was beautiful with cut flowers.

Mr. Field in behalf of those assembled presented Mr. Lark with a diamond ring. Harry was very much surprised but recovered enough to respond in a fitting manner.

In the small hours of the morning the party wended their different ways home, everyone voting that they had a highly enjoyable time.

Among those present were: Councilman Craig, Councilman and Mrs. Nicol, Mr. and Mrs. James F. Allen, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Knight, Mr. and Mrs. George Prout, Sr., Mr. and Mrs. William Prout, Mr. and Mrs. James Dunstone, Mr and Mrs. Edward Sandberg, Mr. and Mrs. Edward H. Sears, Mr. and Mrs. Shirley F. Nutting, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Prout, Mr. and Mrs. George Prout, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Richard Rundle, Mrs. Ross, Messrs. John Thompson, George H. Field, Frank Brewer, L. G. Murray, Frank Craig, George H. Van Iderstine, Thomas H. Edes of Charlestown, Herbert Robinson of Somerville, John Knight, Alfred Knight, Adolph Sandberg, Oscar Sandberg, Charles Mullen, Clark of Norfolk Downs, Herbert Greene of Boston, Miss Lilly Weatherspoon, Miss Mabel Ross, Miss Nora E. Keniley Vs Bates.

The case of the Inspector of Plumbing against Gustave B. Bates which has been hanging fire before the district court since last November has not been settled yet. Every time the case was called one side or the other asked for a continuance. It looked as though the desire was to postpone it until after the Municipal election, but that has long gone by, and still the case hangs. It was called again this morning when another continuance was asked and the case was put over for a month.

And now the Board of Health has asked Mr. Keniley to resign, and Mr. Keniley respectfully declines, and is doing his work just the same. As far as known, publicly, the Board of Health are making no move to oust him. However, perhaps they are preparing a bomb to explode in his camp. It would appear that the only thing the Board of Health can do is to prefer charges against him, give him a hearing, find him guilty and out he goes. Mr. Keniley, however, does not propose to go out without a fight and there may be fun ahead.

A GARDEN IN TUSCANY.

The white magnolia opens with the day
To look upon a wonder world of bloom,
As if the rainbow met its earthly doom
Beside its namesake iris and must lay
Imprisoned bars of flame and blossom gay
Half hid beneath the olive's mournful gloom.
The ilex branches weave a shadow loom
Across the marbles, where the fountain's spray
Drips slow, like cool and unsung melodies,
And through the grass the little lizards glide,
Dazed with the drowsy fragrance of the trees,
And love and life lie sleeping side by side,
For where still Eros lures the honey bees
A dark young lad dreams through the hot noontide.

The Devil's Inn.

BY M. QUAD.

COPYRIGHT, 1900, BY C. B. LEWIS.

If you have ever visited the city of Zacetacas, Mexico, you have heard the story of "The Devil's Inn" and been mystified over it. If you have not heard the story by word of mouth, you will be interested in it.

On the highway to San Luis, about four miles out of Zacetacas, are the ruins of the inn. They have been ruins since 1884. For ten years previous to that the inn was unoccupied and gradually falling into decay. The name given it when it was built and opened for business was "The Holy Rest." The name had no peculiar significance. If holy men ever came that way, they found the place full of sinners. The landlord and most of his customers were a hard lot, and during the four or five years the place flourished it had a bad name. The authorities had about determined to close the inn up when it was suddenly abandoned by the owner. The most that could be learned from the servants was that a stranger came there one night and had a long and confidential conversation with the landlord, and next morning both were missing. The place was overhauled, but no traces of murder were found. The servants scattered, the doors were nailed up, and "The Holy Rest" was left to darkness and the bats. Of course it soon had the reputation of being haunted, and after a couple of years an incident occurred that gave it a still worse name. A young man belonging to one of the best families of Monterey, who happened to be in Zacetacas on a visit, made a wager that he would pass a night alone in the inn. He rode out before dark, well armed and provided with lights, and was seen to enter the place by a window. Next day his naked body was found on the highway in front of the house. He had been terribly dealt with. His ribs had been crushed, his face bitten as if by a dog, and his clothing had been clawed off his body. He had been dead for hours, and it was the opinion of the doctors that he had been attacked by a wild beast.

A company of 50 soldiers went out and searched the inn. The search was a thorough one, but no trace of man or animal could be found. It was discovered that the young man had been attacked in a particular room, and, after being killed and stripped, his body had been carried out, but the facts stopped there. A man, unless a lunatic, would not have shown such ferocity, and a man must have left traces behind him. If a wild beast, where was his lair? How did he manage to carry the body out? There was no manner of wild beast in Mexico who could have done such a thing.

I was one of the four American civil engineers employed by the local government of Zacetacas in the year named to make surveys for a drainage canal, and of course I heard of "The Devil's Inn," as it had long been called. That the people were earnest and sincere in their talk made no difference to me. I had no belief in haunted houses, and my sarcastic reflections made me enemies. Perhaps things would not have gone as far as they did but for the chief of police of Zacetacas. He called on me one day in serious vein and said:

"I want to warn you against making any foolish move in connection with 'The Devil's Inn.' The place is surely haunted and dangerous to life, no matter what you may think. Don't be silly enough to pay it a night visit, as I hear you contemplate doing."

I had contemplated nothing of the kind, but the chief had scarcely finished when I was resolved to take that very step. My chum was named Clark, a young man from Chicago, and I had no sooner broached the subject to him than he was ready for the adventure. For fear that the authorities might stop us we let only a few people into our plan, and one Saturday afternoon, equipped with everything deemed necessary, we were driven out to the inn. After shaking hands and bidding farewell with those who had accompanied us we entered by an unguarded window, and the carriage drove off. It was a rambling one story building containing 14 rooms. There was an office or bar room, a dining room, a kitchen, and the remainder were sleeping rooms. There was a cellar under the kitchen only. All the furniture had been left, and everything was mold and decay. Our first step was to carefully inspect every room and the cellar, and we did not find so much as a rat. We looked for secret panels in the partitions and for hidden traps in the floors, but we made no discoveries.

The dining room was about 16 feet square, with a long table in the center and a dozen stools about. There were three windows in this room, but all strongly boarded up. One door opened from the office and another from the kitchen. We lighted candles, braced the doors securely and started a bit of a fire in the open fireplace to drive out the dampness. We had brought our pipes, wine and a luncheon, with a pack of cards to divert ourselves, and neither of us had the slightest idea of anything occurring to alarm us. As we sat down to the cards our revolvers were laid on the table, and we laughed and joked without restraint. We had braced the doors shut with stout boards, and our first alarm came when one of these boards fell down and the door swung wide open so that we could look into the kitchen. The fall of the board looked like an accident, but there was something curious in the way the door swung clear back. Both of us were a bit mystified, but we arose and secured the door again and went on with our game. This incident happened about 10 o'clock. Three-quarters of an hour later the door leading to the office was tried from the far side. We not only heard it creak and give, but we could see the brace quiver under the strain. There was no sound of footsteps or whispering. Rising with the utmost caution, we grasped our revolvers and tiptoed to the door. When we reached it, we suddenly jerked the brace away and sprang back. The door flew back with great violence, but there was nobody on the other side. We entered the office with our candles, but the spiders in their webs were the only living inmates. Some one had tried that door. Some one had flung it wide open as the brace was removed. Clark and I laughed at each other, but we both felt awed and mystified and a bit afraid.

When the door had been secured as before, we returned to our game and spoke in whispers and kept very quiet. After half an hour we abandoned the cards and sat listening. I think it was half an hour after midnight and we were both probably nodding in sleep when both doors were suddenly burst open, with a crash, our candles were blown out by what seemed a strong wind, and next instant I was seized, lifted off my feet and carried to the broken window of the office and flung out. While I yet lay on the ground Clark followed me, and we heard a queer sort of chuckling from the window above. We both scrambled up and ran for our lives and in time reached the city. Neither of us was much hurt, but we had received a great fright. What had attacked us we could not say; but, whatever it was, it had the strength of three average men.

We went at once to the police, but even as we told our story we saw a red glare on the sky and knew that "The Devil's Inn" was on fire. Next day, as we visited the place with a strong detachment of police, we found nothing but the walls standing. The unknown something that had flung us out had fired the place by accident or design, and the smoke stained adobe walls are yet there for you to see and wonder over.

Thought He Grasped the Idea.

In the fifth grade of a grammar school not many miles from the statehouse the following story was read by the teacher and the class told to write it from memory: "A farmer planted a field of corn and placed a net over it as a protection from the birds. Next morning he found a number of cranes and a stork caught in the net. The stork begged the farmer to release him, saying, 'I am a bird of excellent character.' The farmer laughed and said, 'You were caught in the company of these robbers, and with them you must die.'"

Great stress was laid upon the word "character," the teacher explaining that a boy, girl or bird found in bad company showed great lack of character. The following is a copy of one of the papers actually produced and handed in by one of the pupils, a boy of 11:

"A farmer went out in the farm one day and he saw character and between them was a stork.

"He caught the stork and the character. The stork begged the farmer to set him free. But the farmer said you were in there company and you must die with them.

"The stork said he was not like character. I am bird of freedom."—Boston Transcript.

"Charley" and "Jack."

"There was Mr. B.," said Mr. Spurgeon; "he was a big man in his way and seemed very anxious to make me his friend. He was very hospitable and generous. I was friendly and agreeable with him. Then he began to call me 'Charles.' I looked at him. I did not mind it much, but had he been my father or brother he could scarcely have done more. I thought I would let him see how it looked, so I called him 'John.' He did not see my purpose and so went on to call me 'Charley.' Then I called him 'Jack.' That cured him, and he dropped it. But I could see he had little of the sense of propriety." Undue familiarity with men of position, especially with ministers of the gospel, calling them "Tom" or "Bob" or "Dick," is unworthy, and ought not to be indulged in.—Spurgeon's Biography.

Not Too Far Away.

Robert Barr relates that once, speaking with Bret Harte, he upheld the rigid life Henry Thoreau had led at Walden Pond, as compared with the luxurious surroundings of many modern authors. Barr advocated a return to the simpler habits of our ancestors. "Yes," Harte replied, "living on parched peas sounds very fine in a book. When I visited Emerson, I was astonished to find how close Walden Pond was to the Emerson homestead, and I commented on this. I had imagined that the pond was away out in the wilderness, miles from any human habitation.

"Before Emerson could reply Mrs. Emerson spoke up in the tone of a woman exposing a humbug, 'Oh, yes, Henry took good care not to get out of hearing of our dinner horn!'"—Argonaut.

Nachtwandler.

Ein bedeutender Nervenarzt äußerte sich kürzlich, daß die Krankheit des Nachtwandelns in der Zunahme begriffen sei. Er betonte, daß er vor 10 oder 15 Jahren viel weniger Fälle dieser Art behandelt habe, und andere Nervenärzte werden dies vielleicht bestätigen können. Es ist in der That eine recht ernste Krankheit, denn die Nachtwandler sind sehr häufig großen Gefahren ausgesetzt; andererseits bestehen sie im schlafwandelnden Zustand mancherlei Prüfungen und vollführen waghalsige Künste, mit denen sie wachend, mit allen Geisteskräften ausgestattet, kaum zurecht kommen würden.

So hatte zum Beispiel ein englischer Nervenarzt einen Patienten zu behandeln, welcher sehr häufig zur Nachtzeit aus seinem Bette zu steigen pflegte, um Ausflüge zu machen. Um ihn vor Gefahren zu schützen, ließ man einen Wärter in seinem Zimmer schlafen. Eines Nachts schlief aber dieser sehr fest, und der Patient konnte sich ungestört von seinem Lager erheben und sich ankleiden, um wieder auszugehen. Als er nun aber die Thür verschlossen fand, stieg er durch's Fenster und ließ sich am Regenrohr hinab, um schlafwandelnd durch die Stadt zu streichen. Bald darauf wurde seine Abwesenheit bemerkt, und man sandte nun nach verschiedenen Richtungen Boten aus, von denen einer den Nachtwandler zurückbrachte. Dieser Vorgang war deshalb besonders merkwürdig, weil das Regenrohr nicht vertikal abwärts geführt war, sondern in verschiedenen Bogen und Windungen verlief, so daß es schon einer katzenartigen Geschicklichkeit bedurfte, um daran abwärts zu klettern.

Als ich noch die Schulbank der Quarta drückte, so erzählt der betreffende Arzt weiter, hatte ich selbst einen kleinen Kameraden, der schlafend durch die Zimmer wanderte. Er schlief mit seinem Vetter in einem Zimmer, und dieser hatte es zwei- oder dreimal beobachtet, ehe er seinen Eltern davon Mittheilung machte. Der kleine Nachtwandler wurde zur Rede gestellt, er glaubte jedoch, daß man sich einen Scherz mit ihm mache und behauptete, sein Bett oder vielmehr sein Sopha, auf dem er schlief, nicht verlassen zu haben. Man stellte ihm nun einen schweren Tisch vor sein Lager und glaubte ihn dadurch von seinen Exkursionen zurückhalten zu können. Auch der Vetter war beruhigt und schlief besser als zuvor. Eines Nachts wurde er jedoch durch ein kleines Geräusch geweckt; er richtet sich auf und bemerkt mit nicht geringem Schrecken, daß sein kleiner Kamerad leicht und behende über den Tisch springt, um dann wie früher seine Wanderungen durch die Zimmer zu unternehmen. Neugierig, was nun geschehen werde, verhielt er sich ganz still. Der Patient kehrte zurück, stützte die Hand auf den Tisch, schwang sich hinüber, um darauf ruhig seinen Schlaf fortzusetzen.—Ich will noch bemerken, daß der Knabe keineswegs krankhaft aussah, aber ungewöhnlich lebhaft war, was sich auch in der hastigen Sprache kundgab.

Es ist natürlich bekannt, daß viele Schlafwandler ihre gewöhnliche tägliche Beschäftigung fortsetzen, während sie fest schlafen; am anderen Morgen sind sie sehr erstaunt über den bedeutenden Fortschritt, den ihre Arbeit während der Nacht gemacht hatte, während sie fest schliefen. Einer dieser Fälle ist ziemlich drollig. Ein bemittelter Herr machte gern Holzschnitzereien, und hatte sich eine beträchtliche Geschicklichkeit darin erworben. Einmal war er mit einer riesigen Truhe beschäftigt, die er zu einem bestimmten Datum vollenden wollte. Als er eines Morgens in seine Werkstatt ging, war er erstaunt zu sehen, daß während der Nacht irgend Jemand ein großes Stück seiner Truhe geschnitzt hatte, und genau nach seinem Muster. Da er nicht einen Augenblick vermuthete, daß er Schlafwandler wäre und selbst die Arbeit im Schlaf ausgeführt hätte, machte er einen schrecklichen Lärm darüber, daß Jemand so dreist gewesen wäre, sich in seine Arbeit zu mischen, und drohte, alle Dienstboten zu entlassen, wenn der Schuldige nicht gestehen würde. Keiner gestand jedoch, und die Dienstboten erhielten ihre Kündigung. Als er am nächsten Morgen seine Werkstatt betrat, war die Truhe ganz vollendet, und zwar drei Tage früher, als er berechnet hatte; diesmal war die Arbeit des geheimnißvollen Schnitzers nicht so gut, wie die seinige. Sie wurde aber trotzdem an denjenigen abgesandt, dem sie zugedacht.

Am folgenden Morgen war das Haus in Aufregung. Die Diener entdeckten in der Werkstatt des Herrn eine massive Kommode, welche unbarmherzig nach dem Muster der Tags zuvor weggeschickten Truhe ausgeschnitzt war. Das ging natürlich über alle Begriffe. Ein zuverlässiger Diener sollte die Nacht hindurch wachen. Er entdeckte nichts. Der Herr glaubte, dieser Mann könnte eingeweiht sein, und beschloß eine Nacht lang selbst zu wachen. Aber er hatte zu gut gespeist, und schlief auf seiner Wacht in der Werkstatt ein. Nach einiger Zeit schlich einer der Diener herab, um den geheimnißvollen Schnitzer bei der Arbeit zu überraschen. Seine Erwartung erfüllte sich. Da stand der Hausherr in Hemdsärmeln und schnitzte an seiner Kommode mit allergrößtem Fleiß. Seine Demüthigung am nächsten Morgen kann man sich leicht vorstellen.—Er begab sich sofort in die Behandlung eines Nervenarztes und wurde auch schließlich vollständig geheilt.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Topic For the Week Beginning Jan. 20—Comment by Rev. S. H. Doyle.

Topic.—Abiding influence.—Heb. xi, 4; Math. xxvi, 13.

"The evil that men do lives after them. The good is oft interred with their bones." Thus writes the great poet, but it is not always the case. Good has an abiding influence as well as evil, and the good that men do often lives after them, and they being dead yet speak. The fact is that both good and evil remain after we are gone and exert an influence, and this fact only makes it the more important that our lives should speak for good instead of evil. How long and how farreaching the influence of a life is to be no one can know. Eternity alone can reveal the length and extent of the influences of our lives. What an inspiration this should be in favor of a good life! What a hindrance in the way of an evil life!

In the topical references we have two illustrations of abiding influence, and in both cases for good.

1. Abel's abiding influence, Heb. xi, 4, "By faith Abel offered unto God a more excellent sacrifice than Cain, by which he obtained witness that he was righteous, God testifying of his gifts, and by it he being dead yet speaketh." Abel's life and this particular act in it speak for faith, for the true spirit of worship and for the sacrifice of the best to God. The man who believes and shows his faith by his works has a great influence, and his influence not only lasts during his lifetime, but it is an abiding influence. Abel's faith has been an inspiration to thousands of worshipers and has directed them aright in their worship. Abraham's faith in God, shining out brightly in the days of the grossest idolatry, has been a beacon light in every generation of the world since he lived and has kept multitudes true to their faith in God. So it has been with all the worthies of the past who have believed and who have kept the faith. A life of faith in God has an abiding influence.

2. Mary's abiding influence, Math. xxvi, 13, "Wheresoever this gospel shall be preached in the whole world there shall also this that this woman hath done be told for a memorial of her." These are Christ's words of eulogy upon Mary for anointing Him with the alabaster box of ointment. His prophecy has been fulfilled. It is fulfilled today. For 2,000 years this beautiful story has been told and has had an abiding influence. This act of Mary's speaks for good deeds and illustrates the fact that not only faith has an abiding influence, but also good deeds. Simple, humble, loving, unselfish deeds of kindness live forever and bear eternal fruit. This should inspire us to fill our lives full of such good deeds. No one wants to be forgotten, and, that we may not, let us imitate the faith of Abel and the service of Mary, and then throughout all time—yea, throughout all eternity—we shall be remembered for what we have believed and for what we have done. Though we are dead, our faith shall speak, and our deeds of loving service shall be remembered.

THE PRAYER MEETING.

Have a testimony meeting. Let each one try to tell what have been the words and deeds of others that have influenced their lives most. Thus we may learn what will influence the lives of others.

BIBLE READINGS.

Ps. xv, 1-5; cii, 24-28; Prov. xxii, 6; Eccl. i, 4; Math. vi, 19, 20; xxiv, 35; Luke xvi, 1-10; John xv, 1-10; Rom. xiv, 7; I Cor. xv, 58.

Judged by His Chosen Work.

The character of one's work is not determined altogether by its social status. Whatever is necessary is honorable. The mind worker and the physical worker meet upon the same platform. The hand and the brain are always in partnership. One's ability to do tests the divinity of his call. No one was ever called to preach who cannot learn how. Preaching and plowing go on within the same fences. Sometimes we get confused in our missions. We turn the wrong furrows, and because of this turn short ones. A successful plowman and a successful preacher get to the end of their furrows at the same time. Success is always determined by the triumph of one's own vocation. The minister who fails as a preacher is a total failure. He may write books or make fortunes, but the ministerial scales are the ones in which society will weigh him. So with every vocation.—Presbyterian Journal.

Help Me Also.

Forgive us our trespasses as we forgive them that trespass against us. It is not sufficient to banish hatred from our hearts. We must also efface every painful recollection. O my God, what happiness is it if Thou wilt forgive me as I forgive! I have been offended by words; I forget. By actions; I forget it. By omissions; I forget it. By unkind thoughts; I forget. I also have offended Thee in all these ways, O my God, and Thou hast forgiven and forgotten all. Help me also to forgive and forget.—Catholic Universe.

Come to Jesus.

O soul, alone and weary,
With burdens hard oppressed,
Come lean thy fainting heart tonight
Upon the Saviour's breast.

A refuge safe and quiet
In Jesus thou shalt find;
The calmness of his changeless love
Will heal thy troubled mind.

O soul, grown sick of sinning,
Bowed low with shame and grief,
Christ waiteth to receive thee now;
His mercy brings relief.

O heart, oppressed and weary,
Thy rest thou'lt never find
Until thou find it in the arms
So strong and true and kind.

A TARGET For 10,000 Eyes.

Of course you do not want to be a target yourself, but not so with your "Ad." You want it seen. An "Ad." in the Ledger will be a daily target for over Ten Thousand Eyes.

If you can attract the eyes of over 5,000 people, day after day; know that you're reaching intelligent, thoughtful people who have money to spend, there is no question but an "Ad" in the Daily Ledger is money well expended and in fact indispensible, especially at the Holiday season.

An "Ad" in Ledger does more than attract, it holds the attention of the shopper.

DANIEL WEBSTER

said the most inspiring words ever spoken to him came from a farmer, after his greatest speech: "You never did your best yet!" This didn't mean that Webster was weak; it meant that he had never used the power that was in him. When we criticize your methods we don't mean that they are weak. We mean that you are not getting the most possible out of your business. Experience has proved that advertising pays. Resolve to be a big advertiser in 1901, and increase your business. Better still; begin now and get the Holiday Trade.

While the Warships Are Building

The Daily Ledger hopes to become the Target for 20,000 Eyes. The publishers have improvements constantly in mind, and with the encouragement of Quincy people will print as large and newsy a daily as they are willing to support.

TOO GREAT A STRAIN

War Events Have Borne Heavily Upon Queen Victoria

IS CONFINED TO THE HOUSE

And Must Abstain From Transacting Business — News Comes as a Great Shock to England — Eighty Years Since Similar Condition Has Existed

London, Jan. 19.—Queen Victoria is seriously ill. The reports have become so serious as to cause public alarm, and to have adversely affected the stock exchange. The following official announcement regarding the queen's health has been made from Osborne, Isle of Wight, where her majesty is staying:

QUEEN VICTORIA.

"The queen, during the past year, has had a great strain upon her powers, which has rather told upon her nervous system. It has, therefore, been thought advisable by her majesty's physicians that she should be kept perfectly quiet in the house, and should abstain for the present from transacting business."

Although it is fully understood that there is no cause for alarm beyond what would naturally be felt at the indisposition of any one of the queen's age, the official announcement last evening has caused a shock to the country, the effect of which it will be difficult to exaggerate. The novelty of having to face the possibility of a regency alone suffices to create unnecessary apprehension.

It is necessary to go back to a date prior to 1820 for a similar situation. Since that time there has never been an interruption of the smooth working of the constitutional machine. No one, not even the Prince of Wales, can act for the queen without the authority of parliament, and, as no steps have been taken to summon parliament, it may be taken for granted that her majesty's physicians have only adopted measures of precaution, and that she is still able to sign any absolutely imperative documents, though relieved of the worries of routine affairs.

It is understood that the arrangement for the queen's visit to the south of France are proceeding on the lines originally laid down, and it is quite likely that rest and abstention from work will enable her to undertake the journey earlier than was originally intended.

All the morning papers comment upon the unlooked for possibilities of the situation, but they do not regard it as alarming. The Daily News says: "We fear it cannot be doubted that her majesty's health is precarious, but it seems impossible to believe that she should be ill. We must hope and trust that a short period of repose will restore her strength of mind and body. The fact that the Prince of Wales attended the banquet to Lord Roberts given by the United Sercive club may serve to dispel an alarming view of the case."

The Graphic, commenting upon the queen's "untiring self-sacrifice," says: "We hope it is only a passing warning to her to spare herself in the future."

The Times, which takes a similar view, remarks that it is only since Tuesday that the queen has intermitted her drives and points out that today she attains an age one day greater than that of George III, thus having not only reigned the longest, but also lived the longest of any British sovereign.

Up to midnight no change had been made in any of the plans of the royal family. The chaplain of the archbishop of Canterbury said the movements of the primate had not been affected by any rumors regarding the health of the queen.

Three Baseball Clubs For Boston

Boston, Jan. 19.—It is taken for granted by those nearest to the baseball situation that three clubs will make Boston their home the coming season. The present discussion is over the make-up of the three teams and the distribution of players who are prominent from work in the National league in past seasons.

Castellanes Sued For $377,000

New York, Jan. 19.—Justice Fitzgerald signed an order yesterday directing that a mandamus be issued in the suit brought by Anton J. Dittmar to recover $377,000, and be served on Count Boni De Castellane and his wife, Anna Gould, by publication.

MENTAL HEALTH RESTORED

Case of Mildred Brewster, Who Killed Her Rival and Attempted Suicide

Montpelier, Vt., Jan. 19.—One of Vermont's most interesting murder cases comes to public attention again by the recommendation for discharge from the insane hospital at Waterbury of Mildred Brewster, who shot and killed her rival for the affections of John Wheeler, Miss Anna Wheeler, on Memorial day, 1897.

The Brewster trial, while not lengthy, was keenly watched, owing to the unusual incidents connected with it. Miss Brewster, who put a bullet into her own head after shooting Miss Wheeler, was adjudged insane, and her commitment at Waterbury dates from September, 1897.

It was shown that jealousy had much to do with the trouble between the girls, MissBrewster going to walk with Miss Wheeler, and killing her with a revolver when they were some distance out on the highway.

State Attorney Hoar, who has been informed of Miss Brewster's recovery to health, mentally, will call up the case in court next term.

Used Wrapper For a Noose

Boston Jan. 19.—The distorted face of a woman in the throes of strangulation hanging herself to her cell door, was the startling sight that confronted a patrolman of station 6, in South Boston, shortly before midnight. The woman was Grace Timmons, aged 40. At 11:15 o'clock last night she was arrested for drunkenness, and locked up in one of the women's cells in the basement of the station house. She had taken off her wrapper and tied it around her neck, attaching one end to the steel bars of the cell door. She was revived after some time, but she seemed scarcely to realize how narrow her escape from death had been.

Divorce and Alimony of $15,000

Boston, Jan. 19.—The divorce case of Joseph F. Reynolds and Helen A. Reynolds, which has been on trial here for several days, was decided yesterday favorably for the wife on the ground of cruel and abusive treatment. Reynolds is a money lender. Each party in the case sought a divorce from the other. The court ordered Reynolds to pay to his wife in bulk the sum of $15,500. Until that amount is paid he was further ordered to pay $85 a month to his wife for support and maintenance.

The Lawrence Municipal Imbroglio

Lawrence, Mass., Jan. 19.—Wages of the city department laborers are held back by City Treasurer Bailey for the alleged reason that there is no committee on accounts to pay the bills. If today is allowed to pass without these laborers having been paid, the weekly payment law relative to cities will have been violated. Chief Wade of the district police announces his intention of finding out who is responsible for the violation, and of taking immediate action.

A $25,000 Fire at North Adams

North Adams, Mass., Jan. 19.—W. H Turner's carriage manufactory, carriage house and salesroom, and one tenement structure were burned to the ground last night, entailing a loss of about $25,000. The fire raged for four hours, and the firemen suffered greatly from exposure. The electric light, telephone and telegraph wires were torn down, and the entire city was plunged into darkness. The cause of the fire is a mystery.

Former Decision Reversed

Boston, Jan. 19.—According to a statement given out at police headquarters the deaths of Everett Hall and Arthur A. Pettengill were caused by "suffocation from lack of oxygen." Hall and Pettengill were the two young men found dead at a lodging house Wednesday. It is stated that the announcement that the victims had died "from alcoholism" was made by Dr. Draper before an autopsy was held.

Change In Voting System Favored

Boston, Jan. 19.—The committee of members of the Republican state committee appointed to consider election and caucus law revision met yesterday and had before them samples of the ballots used in about 30 states of the Union. Most of the committee were of the opinion that such a modification of the pure Australian system as exists in other states is desirable in preference to the system now in vogue here.

Insane Man Wandered Away

Clinton, Mass., Jan. 19.—Severely frostbitten after nearly five hours of exposure in zero weather, clothed only in his underwear, Thomas McGinnis, an insane inmate who escaped from the Worcester city farm, was recaptured yesterday by officers who started in pursuit of the fugitive. He was in a pitiable condition when the officers came upon him.

To Investigate Railroad Problems

Gorham People May Offer Reward

Portland, Me., Jan. 19.—Gorham citizens have concluded to call a town meeting to determine the matter of offering a reward for the capture of the fugitive murderer of Clifford Moshier. Nothing new has developed regarding the missing John McLain.

THE BOSSCHIETER CASE

Three Men Guilty of Murder In Second Degree

FOR KILLING A MILL GIRL

McAlister, Campbell and Death Appeared Unmoved by the Verdict, Which Calls For a Maximum Punishment of Thirty Years' Imprisonment

Paterson, N. J., Jan., 19.—Guilty of murder in the second degree was the verdict rendered in the case of Walter C. McAlister, Andrew L. Campbell and William A. Death, three of the four persons indicted for the death of Jennie Bosschieter, a mill girl. According to the New Jersey law the maximum penalty for the prisoners is 30 years' imprisonment.

In charging the jury Judge Dixon dwelt at some length on the question of assault, drawing attention to the testimony of the hackman and the circumstantial evidence of violence used on the girl while in the woods, and charged the jury in this connection that the guilt of one of the defendants fixed also guilt upon the others who were present at that place and time. The fact that the girl had become insensible as the result of voluntary drinking and that an assault was then committed would not make the defendants the less guilty. On the question of murder the judge pointed to the preparations made in Saal's saloon, the finding of the bottle, the symptoms of the girl and the finding of chloral hydrate in the intestines.

At the conclusion of the charge, the jury filed out of the court room, under the escort of the court officers. The prisoners sat for a time talking with their counsel. McAlister still appeared the calmest of the three, but there was a tenseness about his face which indicated the strain he was under.

The jury took 14 ballots, and returned to the court room at 8:14 o'clock, having been out four hours and 29 minutes.

The prisoners when brought in appeared very nervous. McAlister seemed more excited than any of the others. He sat biting his lips while waiting. Campbell thrust his hands into his trousers pockets, and clinched his fists in them. Death looked anxiously about the court room for a moment, and then assumed the same attitude as Campbell. The prisoners heard the verdict without any show of emotion.

Judge Dixon thanked the jury, and said he believed the verdict was a just one. He then dismissed the jurors until Monday morning at 10 o'clock, and the prisoners were taken back to jail.

The verdict leaves a wide margin to the judge in the matter of punishment. He may let them off with a five-year sentence to be shortened by good behavior. He may impose a sentence of 30 years.

There was practically no demonstration when the verdict was announced outside the courthouse. Paterson people had not expected any other verdict. Counsel on both sides expressed themselves as satisfied with the result.

At the jail, Kerr, who was anxiously awaiting the news, received it and walked quickly away from the other three men, who were placed in their cells for the night.

Seven Lives Lost In Railroad Wreck

Bethel, Me., Jan. 19.—A freight wreck occurred on the Grand Trunk railroad two miles south of this place, and as a result seven men were killed and several others injured, four engines were demolished and 13 loaded cars with their contents were destroyed. The wrecked cars contained a large quantity of explosives and took fire soon after the collision. The trains came together just at the point where two grades meet, on a curve, and both trains were running at a high speed.

Gallant Captain and Part of Crew Safe

Tacoma, Wash., Jan. 19.—A thrilling story is told by the crew of the German ship Flottbek, which arrived in port yesterday, after a perilous time amid the breakers off Ozette island. The first mate and 11 of the crew took to a life boat, but were dashed upon the rocks. Captain Shoemaker refused to leave the ship, and remained with 13 men until rescued.

Plan to Solidify Socialists

The convention will be held at Indianapolis on the second Tuesday in September and a final effort will be made to solidify all the Socialists of the United States in one party.

Irresponsible For Her Actions

Wichita, Kan., Jan. 19.—The county attorney has dismissed the charge against Mrs. Carrie Nation, W. C. T. U., who was in jail her for breaking saloon fixtures in a temperance crusade. The county attorney said: "The defendant labors under a delusion to such an extent as to be irresponsible."

War Against Mosquitos

Havana, Jan. 19.—The sanitary department is taking measures to destroy mosquitoes as a preventative against yellow fever. Inspectors have been ordered to pay particular attention to breeding places. They have also been instructed to advise the general use of mosquito netting.

WEEKLY TRADE REVIEW

Retail Business Has Not Declined as Much as Usual After Holidays

New York, Jan. 19.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s weekly review of trade says: In most directions the condition of general business has improved slightly this week. Prices of staple commodities are steady, as are most manufactured goods. Orders to manufacturers are sustained in volume, and that pronounced ease in money in the interior is still stimulating business is shown by bank exchanges at leading cities outside of New York.

Retail trade has not declined as much as usual since the holidays. Textiles show more life. A small but steady improvement in the demand has appeared, and in the cotton goods division it is the more noteworthy because of the weakness in the raw material. Sellers of both staple and fancy cottons are able to maintain a position of independence.

Steadiness is the chief characteristic of the iron and steel industry. The past week has brought no new developments of striking importance, and quotations are unchanged.

Another moderate increase occurred in sales of wool at the three chief eastern markets. There is still a heavy loss compared with preceding years. Manufacturers stocks are generally considered low; nevertheless they buy only for immediate needs and continue to take mainly cheaper goods.

The raw material for the other leading textile industry has been in less satisfactory position, owing to depression in the yarn market, which caused the association to recommend reduction in output by one-half. Larger estimates of the cotton crop also assisted in the decline.

Boot and shoe shops are, as a rule, well occupied, but business is unequally distributed. While some markets have booked sufficient orders to occupy them for some months, others depend on current sales to keep their force employed.

Getting After Astrologers

Boston Jan. 19.—Alfred Morse of Somerville was arrested yesterday on the charge of sending obscene matter through the mail. He was held in $500 bonds. The complaint against Morse is the same as that against Evangeline Yale Davey. Both are astrologers, and it is charged that in sending out horoscopes they enclosed a circular advertising a certain book. It is held by the United States officers that the circular is obscene.

Said to Have Drank Real Poison

Providence, Jan. 19.—Miss Mildred Holland and Mr. Leonard, of the "Power Behind the Throne" company, figured in an oxalic acid poisoning affair last night. The glasses from which they drank a poison draught contained something besides water. Dr. Mohr found Miss Holland in a state of collapse. Leonard was only slightly affected. How the poison got into the glass is not explained.

To Talk It Over In London

St. John's, Jan. 19.—The British government agrees to give the colony important concessions in return for the renewal of the French shore modus vivendi for the current year. It is understood that Mr. Chamberlain has invited Premier Bond to visit London to take part in a conference between the British and French representatives for the settlement of the whole French shore question.

A "Strictly Private" Funeral

New York, Jan. 19.—Under the cover of darkness, and when it was believed its removal would be unnoticed, a coffin containing the body of Murray Hamilton Hall, a woman who successfully masqueraded as a man for more than 40 years, was removed from 145 Sixth avenue, last night, to an undertaking establishment. From there it was taken to Mount Olivet cemetery this morning.

British Protest Heeded

London, Jan. 19.—The Pekin correspondent of The Daily Mail, wiring Thursday, says: The British protest has proved effectual, and Russia has expunged the obnoxious conditions from the contract to restore the Shan-Hai-Kwan railroad to the British bondholders. Count Von Waldersee will sign the revised convention tomorrow.

Called to Stanford University

Boston Jan. 19.—Dr. Gaillard T. Lapsley and Joseph P. Warren, the two Harvard instructors who were appointed to fill the vacancies caused by the resignations of Professors Howard and Spencer of the Leland Stanford, Jr., university, departed last night for California, to assume their new positions. Both are graduates of Harvard.

Alleged Theft of $49,000

Bowling Green, Ky., Jan. 19.—The grand jury of this county has returned an indictment against Luthur R. Porter, cashier of the Warren Deposit bank, charging him with embezzlement. His alleged misappropriation is placed at $49,000.

Good Afternoon.

The Daily Ledger gives its readers today something entirely new — a column in German type. We do not expect that a majority of our subscribers will read it, but we are catering to all, and there are probably some who will appreciate it. It will be a regular feature of the Saturday eight-page Ledger for a few weeks. Kindly let us hear from you if you appreciate the feature.

The statement of the City Auditor for the year 1900 will be found in this issue, and shows the expenditure and balance on each appropriation of the year. The balances aggregate $52,932.39, which is made up of small sums, but it speaks well for the administration of 1900 that there are balances on 69 of the appropriations. Those entirely exhausted were the exception, while in other cases, like salaries, they were figured so that there would be no balance.

Drift of Opinion.

☞Why shouldn't the Massachusetts legislature have a mind of its own about the rearrangement of the congressional districts? — New Bedford Standard.

☞Newport is experiencing the novelty of merchants closing their stores in order to enable their clerks to attend a revival meeting. Maybe they look upon the movement as an improvement on the cash register.—Lynn Item.

☞We pretend to not the slightest knowledge of affairs in that particular Massachusetts city that has elected the witty Hurley, but it is true of any place that those who engage in public service are subject to criticism that is 75 per cent thoughtlessness, and the other 25 per cent. rash foolishness.—Woonsocket (R. I.) Reporter.

☞The Boston Herald has taken to printing lists of the "prominent people present" at theatrical first nights in Boston. This is a retrogression. What do the most of us care if some wealthy merchant or lucky State street gambler in stocks was in the same building with us? This sort of thing is snobbery.—Brockton Enterprise.

☞With our wider outlook, our tremendous advantage our crowding opportunities, we should not fall short of the women of past centuries. Here we are at the gateway of a new epoch. How shall we meet its claims?—Margaret E. Sangster, in the January Ladies' Home Journal.

☞The place of the daughter in the home is as large or as small a place as she is able to make it. It is really a creative place, one in which she can be the brightest, happiest, most helpful influence in the home, or simply a partaker of the comforts and protection of the home, with no thought of any return on her part.—January Ladies' Home Journal.

☞The English medical journals now come out with statements to show that the "brand new" salt cure, which was supposed to be able to revive almost inanimate humanity and brace the weakest heart, is not new at all and is not all that is claimed for it. It aids in cases of loss of blood, but as a cure or a permanent helper of the dangerously ill, salt is out of the running, along with the other marvelous "cures" of the century. Humanity, it appears, must still be prepared to die some day, regardless of all the wonders of medicine, surgery, etc., etc.—Brockton Enterprise.

Reception and Cotillion.

The beautiful and spacious Faxon homestead on Adams street was thronged with guests on Thursday afternoon from four to six, when Mrs. J. Franklin Faxon and her daughters, Mrs. Charles Atkinson Price and Miss Faxon, received their friends the occasion being the introduction into society of Miss Patty.

Over five hundred attended and congratulated Miss Faxon, who looked charming in a gown of pure white, the favorite color of the debutant. She was showered with flowers of every description, a table being banked with them, their sweet fragrance filling the air.

Daggett's orchestra played continuously, and in the dining room Weber of Boston served refreshments. Chocolate and coffee were poured and served by Miss Faxon's intimate friends, among them Miss Marion Swazey of Beverly, Miss Carol Pitkin of Braintree, Mrs. Harry Elliot Russell, Mrs. Walter Burke, Miss Jane Reed, Miss Sara Whicher, Miss Theodora Hayward, Mrs. Henry M. Faxon, and several out of town friends.

It was the largest and most brilliant affair of the kind ever given in Quincy, rivaling many wedding receptions in attendance and enjoyment. The gowns were many of them exquisite. Not only was there a large attendance of Quincy people but Boston and neighboring towns also contributed to swell the number.

But the best was yet to come at least so thought the young people for they had been bidden to a cotillion from eight until eleven. This was a smaller party composed of school mates and intimate friends of Miss Faxon.

Dancing was enjoyed by fifty or more couples, and nearly as many more, relatives, neighbors and friends enjoyed looking on.

At ten Weber served supper after which a German and a waltz brought to an end an evening's pleasure seldom equalled in a private home.

Special carriages were in waiting to convey the out of town guests to the station and private carriages were soon filled with happy young people who after again congratulating Miss Faxon, hied them home to dream of the good time she had given them.

Prosperous Church.

The financial report of St. Chrysostom's church shows a gratifying gain in all departments of the parish. Several gifts have been given for the choir room. The contributions for missions and charities have been very generous this year, and many boxes and barrels have been prepared for worthy objects. The parish statistics show a real growth during the year, ten persons having been confirmed and eleven baptized. There are one hundred and twenty-five pupils in the Sunday school, with nine teachers. The outlook for the coming year is very promising.

Home Again.

A few days ago a valuable cat belonging to a family not far from Howard avenue, suddenly disappeared. The search was given up by all except Harry, who is quite a detective, and he said nothing, but kept his eyes open. In looking about the neighborhood he soon discovered his cat with a beautiful green cross painted on his forehead. He took him home and there was great rejoicing. Although he probably took the first degree in the A. O. H., he will probably not have an opportunity to take the second.

EEL BED DISCOVERED

Quincy Men are Making Extraordinary Catches Nowadays.

Tales of big catches of fish by hook and net are told every day. At Philadelphia this week two men caught ten thousand pounds of German crab and perch at a single haul of the net and in the spring thousands of shad will be gathered in with one cast of the seine. Right here in Quincy, however, catches of eels have been made during the past month, the like of which the oldest inhabitant has never seen.

About Christmas time the eelers discovered a unique method of obtaining their spoil. It is a well known fact that eels in the autumn leave the sea, swim up the rivers and brooks and hibernate in the mud until spring. The method employed by fishermen to obtain the eels, is to prod the mud with an eel spear, which consists of steel hooks bound together in such a way that the eel is held, without being injured, this contrivance being secured to the end of a long pole.

The fisherman's Klondike has been that portion of Black's brook lying south of Second hill, Wollaston. The unique method above mentioned is simple. The eels had made their beds back of the stone walls that line the banks of the brook. The fishermen discovering this, cut away the banks with shovel, axe and crowbar, disclosing to view hundreds of squirming eels. Then with the hand it was easy to land the eels high and dry.

Some of the catches were as high as 250 pounds in a forenoon. One haul was so large it was carried home to West Quincy in a wagon. The story goes the wagon broke down under the weight of the fish.

News of the eel beds spread quickly and every day for two weeks dozens of men and boys from West Quincy and Milton flocked to the spot. Every one carrived home a big bag of eels which made good meals for many a poor family.

Down at Scituate reports came of big hauls of eels, one man caught eighty pounds in one day, but they are not in it with Quincy.

Birthday Surprise Party.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Harold A. Harris, the popular station agent at Norfolk Downs, was the scene of much gaiety and pleasure on Thursday evening.

It being Mr. Harris' 27th birthday about forty friends from Quincy and Boston called on the young couple and completely surprised them. Mr. Harris had just settled down in his favorite chair for his evening smoke, when he was called to the door by the bell. His friends pounced in and after presenting him with a Morris chair and Mrs. Harris with a beautiful silver pitcher they took possession of the house until the wee small hours. Music was brought along from Boston, and Caterer Johnson had been engaged to care for the inner man, so nothing was left for the happy couple to do but join in the fun.

Songs and dancing in the vacant store on other side took up most of the evening. At a late hour Mr. Harris who has a beautiful tenor voice, sang by request, "Auld Lang Syne," as the party broke up and started for home in the first real snow stom of the year.

County Finances.

The annual report of County Treasurer Smith just issued shows a larger balance in the treasury than one year ago. Deducting the cash on hand at the beginning of the year, and the amount raised by taxation and loans, the receipts amounted to $43,965.46. The expenditures, minus the payments for debt and loans, and cash on hand at the end of the year, were $178,418.27. The amount raised by taxation was $165,000. Exactly the same amount was expended for debt and loans, but $150,000 of this was for temporary loans in anticipation of taxes. The County Commissioners appraise the assets of the county at $750,700.00, the Court House and fixtures be estimated at over one-half, viz. $377,000.00. The report is very satisfactory. In 1904 the last note for remodeling the court house will be paid.

—According to a correspondent, one of the mission premises in Pekin is in charge of a woman, who performs the duties of a District Magistraite. It is a common thing to see one or two Boxers tied up in this lady's yard to await her judgment. She also cares for 300 native Chinese coverts in her compound. The citizens all say it is not the proper work for a woman, but admit that she is doing it remarkably well.

SCHOOL FINANCES.

Total Expenditures of State for Support $10,677,485.74.

Expenditure for Buildings $3,148,757.67.

Cost per Child for Support and Buildings $33.92.

The total expenditure for public schools naturally divides into two groups,—that for support and that for buildings. The Legislature of 1900 so extended the statutory definition of support that now it includes (1) teachers' wages, (2) conveyance of pupils, (3) fuel and care of school premises, (4) school committees, clerks and truant officers, (5) superintendents of schools, (6) text-books and supplies and (7) school sundries. Previous to 1900, items 5, 6 and 7 were not included in the legal definition of support, and previous to 1896, item 2 was not included. Towns, cities and school committees should note what items appropriations or support now cover.

The total expenditure for support was $10,677,485.74, distributed as follows:

1. Teachers wages,	$7,891,478 80
2. Conveyance of pupils,	141,753 84
3. Fuel and care of school premises,	1,287,540 80
4. School committees, clerks and truant officers,	140,823 31
5. Superintendent of schools,	281,887 51
6. Text-books and supplies,	616,975 21
7. School sundries,	317,046 27

Of the total expenditure 74 per cent. is for teachers' wages 12 per cent. for fuel and care 6 per cent. for text-book and supplies 3 per cent. each for superintendent of schools and school sundries and 1 per cent. each for conveyance of children and supervision by school committees. This means that 96 per cent. of the total expenditure goes directly to the schools and only 4 per cent. to the supervision thereof.

Deduct from the total expenditure $267,505.58 the amount derived from other sources than local taxation and the amount raised by local taxation for support is found to be $10,409,980.16.

The total expenditure for public school buildings was $3,148,757.67, distributed as follows:—

1. New schoolhouses,	$2,200,193 16
2. Permanent improvements,	614 003 80
3. Ordinary repairs,	334,560 71

Of the total expenditure for buildings, the amount raised or to be raised by local taxation is $3,140,415.62.

The grand total of expenditures for support and buildings is $13,826,243.41, which is $63,594.80 less than a year ago, the expenditure for support having increased by 390,957.73 and that for buildings having decreased by $454,552.53. Of this grand total, the local taxation burden is $13,550,395.78, which is 74,418.29 less than a year ago.

The averages representing the cost per child of the public schools vary according to the bases assumed for estimating them. The following averages are the most useful ones:—

1. Average taxation cost of support for each child in the average membership,—$26.06, or 43 cents more than a year ago.

2. Average taxation cost of support and buildings for each child in the average membership, — $33.92, or 9 cents less than a year ago.

The State valuation May 1, 1899, was $2,876,021,222: the total municipal tax for all purposes, $45,038,672; the average rate of taxation, $15.66 on each thousand dollars of valuation; the average tax for support of schools $3.62 on each thousand dollars, which was the same as the year before; and the average tax for support and buildings was $4.71 on each thousand dollars or 21 cents less than the year before. Twenty-three per cent. of the municipal tax was expended for support and 30 per cent. for support and buildings, as against 23 per cent. and 31 per cent. respectively a year ago, and as against 21 per cent. and 27 per cent. respectively ten years ago.

Novel Experiment Being Tried In War Secretary's Office.

ELABORATE SYSTEM ESTABLISHED

How Chance Callers Are Prevented From Gaining Admittance Into the War Department—Accurate Secret Code Invented on the Lines of the Morse System.

Department officials are watching with considerable interest the progress of a new experiment in the office of Secretary Root, writes the Washington correspondent of the New York Times. The latter has been busy for some time trying to discover a way of preventing the consumption of his time by calls from people outside the war department, congressmen included. His new experiment is an attempt at a solution of this problem.

An hour before the time for closing the war department all doors leading to the secretary's office are shut and locked. This does not mean that the office is closed. On the contrary, work is going on as busily as ever. Inside the main room of the office are three or four sturdy colored watchmen who remain behind the locked doors to let out people who were in before the place was closed up and to see that nobody slips in. People come and try the doors and go away disappointed. All through the rest of the big department there is every sign of life. Doors are swinging open, and clerks are constantly passing in and out, typewriters are clicking, and messengers are bustling about. Only the doors leading to Mr. Root's sanctum are locked and guarded, and there a stranger will see no sign of life.

So strictly is this carried out that even the door leading from Chief Clerk Schofield's room is locked, although this door does not open on the hall, and no ordinary man would think of gaining entrance through it. But it was concluded that some one very intent on seeing the secretary might get into Mr. Schofield's room on some pretext and then, watching his chance, steal through the door into the main room. Even then the stranger would have to pass over the dead bodies of the three lusty colored men before he could penetrate to the next room, which contains Private Secretary W. S. Coursey and Confidential Clerk F. C. Squires. He would then have to overcome Coursey and Squires before he could get into Mr. Root's room. It was decided, however, to take no chances, and Mr. Schofield was locked out.

But it was necessary to devise a way by which Mr. Schofield could get in to see his chief. It would also be a disagreeable predicament if one of the colored messengers passing out on an errand should be unable to get in on his return. There were also others in the department who must find a way to get in and see the secretary. They could not do it by trying the door or knocking, because the garrison was instructed to pay no attention to such primitive methods of getting in.

This problem was grappled with and a solution found. A secret code was invented, comprehensive and accurate. When Mr. Schofield or any of the other persons in the secret wants to get in, he delivers a peculiar series of knocks on the door, built, it is believed, on the lines of the Morse system. This cipher knock means, "I want to get in." It is instantly recognized by the garrison, and one of them advances to the door. He does not open it, however. It occurred to the deviser of the system that some lurking congressman or visiting New Yorker or other nondepartmental person might by dint of hanging around the door and listening for some time acquire the secret of the code and after committing it to memory deliver an imitation which would deceive the very elect.

The sentinel therefore advances to the door and delivers a peculiar knock, which means, "Advance, friend, with the countersign." He listens, and if the person outside is really one of the initiated and not one of the general public he "comes back" with the next number on the code, which is the countersign. This satisfies the sentinel, and the door is unlocked and instantly closed again behind the new arrival.

The new system works to the secretary's satisfaction. The other cabinet officers are aware of it, but none of them has yet recognized its advantages to the extent of initiating it. Among the clerks in the other departments it is customary to "guy" those in the war department since the new system came into vogue. Those in the secretary's office are known as the "Masons" and are frequently greeted with cries of "Thirty-second degree" and "Admit the brother."

Fore River Engine Co.

A large force of men is at work tearing down the buildings of the old Fore River Engine works on Quincy avenue. All the windows frames and lumber suitable for building purposes are being moved to the new works at Quincy Point.

The building formerly used for a pipe and boiler shop has been taken down the river on one of the new scows owned by the company.

On Tuesday next the lightship No. 72, which was launched at the old works, will make her trial trip preparatory to making her voyage to Cape Hatteras, where she will be turned over to the government

The office building which was floated down the river has been thoroughly remodeled, and an addition of 60 feet has been built, making the structure when completed 109 feet on Howard street by 60 feet on Howard avenue. Two of the three large steam hammers have been put in operation during the past week. The company's dredger is to begin operations at once upon the slips to be used for the building of the two battleships, the contracts for which have been awarded the company.

A waiting room is being built at the corner of Quincy avenue and Shaw street for the benefit of the help, who are obliged to wait at the junction for cars to and from Quincy and Weymouth.

The only crane of its kind built in this country is in daily operation in the big forge shop. This crane is capable of picking up ingots of 27 tons each and keeping the same revolving while in the process of being drawn out by the big steam hammer.

The large restaurant run by the company is very convenient and is appreciated by the employes. During the past week the plant has been connected with the telephone system. Already, twenty-two instruments have been placed in position, connecting all the departments with the central station, which is located in the main office.

Master Builders.

A preliminary meeting of business men of the city who would be interested in the formation of a Master Builders' Association was held last Tuesday evening. There was quite an animated discussion of the matter and an adjournment was taken until next week. The Association, if formed, would include carpenters, plumbers, painters and every trade engaged in building. Such an organization would lead to the enactment of building ordinances by the City Council and would be of inestimabe benefit to reliable business men and the city. As it is now, Quincy has no building inspector, and any apology for a building can be erected and no question asked. Any one who has observed the skeleton frame work that has been put into some of the builings erected in Quincy during the past few years, will agree that the sooner the City Council establishes a building ordinance the better, and the Master Builders' Association is just the kind of an organization to hurry such matters along.

BILL OF THE PLAY.

Irving is 62 years of age.

Mark Twain's "Pudd'nhead Wilson" will be revived next season.

Rudyard Kipling has dramatized his story, "The Light That Failed."

John Oliver Hobbes (Mrs. Craigie) has completed an original comedy with the taking title, "The Wisdom of the Wise."

Miss Blanche Walsh is playing in "More Than Queen," the spectacular play in which Julia Arthur won success last season.

Beerbohm Tree has finally decided to come to this country and will bring "Herod" along as his chief attraction in the play line.

The horses in the chariot race in "Ben-Hur" in the interval they are seen by the audience run the equivalent to three-quarters of a mile.

The British play censor has refused to license a play called "Joseph of Canaan," although it was written and submitted by a clergyman.

A rumor that Harry Woodruff is to star in the English version of "L'Aiglon," succeeding Maude Adams at the end of the present season, is denied by Charles Frohman.

Marie Corelli writes to an American friend that she has so safeguarded her new novel, "The Master Christian," that its stage representation will be absolutely impossible.

There is a vacancy announced in the Forest Home For Actors, and the name of Mme. Janauschek has been suggested for it. It is not known that the distinguished actress is ready to relinquish her active work upon the stage that she has honored with her art.

FOWL AND THEIR FRUIT.

Use pure bred cocks always.

Keep the dust bath always ready.

Always plan to have the nests movable.

Generally fowls that feather early and mature early are good layers and good mothers.

It is believed that the practice of discarding the hens and keeping the pullets may easily be carried too far and result in a degeneracy of the stock.

If there is any difference between the feeding of young ducks and of young chickens it is in the fact that young ducks require more bulky food than the chickens.

There is one economical result in keeping poultry on the farm that is often lost sight of. It is the large amount of waste food that the fowls pick up if given a free range.

It is hardly a good plan to depend for ventilation upon the air that is admitted by the cracks. On the contrary, batten these up tight so that the hens need not roost in a draft.

Corn burned on the cob and the refuse, which consists almost entirely of the grain placed before the fowls, is readily eaten by them with a marked improvement in their health.—St. Louis Republic.

THE DEACON.

James S. Bitler, the Methodist evangelist who hopes to build in Chicago the largest evangelistic church in the world, is 48 years old, a native of Lancaster, O., and a graduate of Wesleyan university, class of '78.

The archbishop of Canterbury has just entered on his eightieth year, having been born on St. Andrew's day, 1821, at Santa Maura, in the Ionian islands, though it is generally stated that he was born in Sierra Leone, of which his father, Major Octavius Temple, was governor.

The slim figure, kindly, intelligent face and fluttering white locks of the late Dr. Cyrus A. Bartol of Boston gave rise to the affectionate, half bantering characterization of him as a "moth eaten angel." He was also described as a "reverent radical, an acute and wayward conservative, standing aloof with his church from all ecclesiastical entanglements," and "by the flag of individual freedom in religion."

TALES OF CITIES.

There are 150 square miles of streets in London. Each square mile averages 120 streets and each street 100 houses.

Twenty years ago the city of Toronto began the erection of a city hall which was to cost $500,000 by the original estimate. The outlay on it to date has been $2,345,000, and it is not yet finished.

New York city still retains an occasional landmark. At present the oldest public building in New York is St. Paul's chapel, at the corner of Broadway and Fulton street. It was built in 1760, ten years before the Declaration of Independence.

NAVAL NOTES.

The French torpedo boat Audacieux is the smallest ironclad in the world. She carries an armor belt over her machinery an inch or so in thickness, proof probably against anything smaller than a 6 pound projectile.

New buildings at Annapolis are progressing as rapidly as the material can be supplied, and it is safe to say that before another winter the plans of the architect will begin to develop on the lines which have been approved by the navy department. The new armory will be one of the notable buildings in the country.

OUR REPRESENTATIVES.

If the demands for a house of 400 members are granted now, a bad precedent will be strengthened, and after the next census the pressure will be for an increase to 450 members. — Chicago Times-Herald.

The objections to increasing the size of the house of representatives are many, and they should have full consideration. But these objections are neither so numerous nor so important as to outweigh an equable distribution of representation and political power among the states.—Philadelphia Press.

THE NURSERY.

Bedclothes fasteners are a necessity with little children who are apt to catch cold from their restlessness at night. Clips to hold the coverings over them are now made and are said to answer their purpose perfectly.

Baby's mouth should be washed every morning with tepid water in which a pinch of borax is dissolved. This simple lotion keeps the mouth fresh and sweet and prevents the uncomfortable affliction, a sore mouth, with which so many babies are troubled.

NEW HOUSES
FOR SALE.

Just to remind you that I have another lot of houses nearly completed, I will list these three bargains:

Many were disappointed on the last lot so be on hand early if you would be in it.

First—A six room Single House, bath and set tubs, with hot and cold water, papered to suit purchaser, large lot, $2100. $300 down; balance at low rate of interest. Just the place for some street railway employee.

Also, one of eight rooms and bath, Independence avenue; all modern improvements, bounds on two streets, can sell for $500 less than real value. This house is of the popular size to suit any business man, and is very roomy and convenient. I don't like to have other builders know how I am cutting prices, but $3,000 buys this one, look at it and compare with others you see building.

Another, and a money maker for some one with only an ounce of pluck. This is a two-family House, 5 rooms and bath each, and 60 foot lot, $3,000. Pay in $500 on this and I will guarantee you a twenty-five per cent. investment for one year; who would dare invest in a twenty-five per cent. GUARANTEED investment.

Remember these houses are built by competent workmen, by the day, of the best material, and are personally superintended by the owner, are but four minutes to station, electrics pass, and everything is most desirable as a residential section. All houses are connected with sewer and cellars are perfectly dry.

Come and look them over and select one that suits you. Can be seen any day.

Quick Trips Around the World.

Class trips and excursions are recommended as necessary for the education of children. Few will ever take a trip around the world but many will be interested in tracing these routes and noting the time required between points. Around the world in 33 days is the possible pace set by Prince Hilkoff, the Russian Imperial Minister of Ways and Communications, now officially studying American railway methods says the Popular Educator. To make the circuit in this time modern fast ships and railway trains are alone considered, but with these available on the routes specified he gives the time as follows:

Bremen to St. Petersburg by rail, 1 1-2 days.

St. Petersburg to Viadivostock, by rail at 30 miles an hour, 10 days.

Viadivostock to San Francisco, via. Hakodate Straits, 10 days.

San Francisco to New York, 4 1-2 days.

New York to Bremen, 7 days.

The present shortest time for circuiting the globe is given as follows:

New York to Southampton, 6 days.

Southampton to Brindisi via. Paris, 3 1-2 days.

Brindisi to Yokohama via. Suez, 42 days.

Yokohama to San Francisco, 10 days, and San Francisco to New York, 4 1-2 days, or 66 days in all.

WOE FOR BOWSER.

TREASED TROUSERS MANAGED TO SPOIL A HAPPY EVENING.

Everything Was Going Along Splendidly Until Mrs. Bowser Made an Innocent Remark That Was Followed by Unforeseen Consequences of a Dire Nature.

[Copyright, 1900, by C. B. Lewis.]

No fireside could have been more peaceful and happy than that of the Bowsers' at 7 o'clock the other evening. Mrs. Bowser had a book in her hands, Mr. Bowser the evening paper, and the family cat lay on the hearth rug and purred and chuckled and decided that she had a soft snap for the winter. Without cold winds blew and snowflakes fell; within were warmth and cheer and contentment. By and by Mr. Bowser felt the influence, and he looked up from his paper and said:

"Well, now, but this is home! What reasonable man could ask for more than this?"

"Yes; it is cozy," answered Mrs. Bowser.

"How a man can leave a fireside like this to hang out at a club is more than I can make out. If all men had homes like this, there would be nothing but happiness in married life. Why can't all wives be like you?"

Mrs. Bowser took the alarm at once. Every wife knows that her husband is dangerous when too good. She started to say something about a neighbor's child being sick, but he interrupted her with:

"Yes; I suppose so, but it is probably owing to the mother's carelessness. I was thinking today that I was not half thankful enough for the blessings that surround me. Do you know that if I hadn't married just the right sort of wife I might have turned out a bad, bad man?"

"I am glad and satisfied that you are happy," she replied, "but don't you think it dreadful the way some of the coal cart men use their poor horses? One was going past here today when"—

"I know nothing about coal cart horses," he chipped in, "but I do know that I have the nicest little wife in all the world. Where would I be tonight but for you and this scene of comfort and happiness? Put away your book and let's talk. I presume you think there are times when I don't fully appreciate you, but even when I get mad and storm around I never lose sight of your many good qualities. And, too, you know I am always sorry for giving way to my temper. It is awfully good of you to overlook my failings."

Mrs. Bowser was in for it, and there was no escape. She couldn't faint away, and she could think of no excuse to get out of the house. She therefore smiled and replied:

"We get along as well as most folks. What is the news from China today?"

"Yes; you are always willing to overlook my faults," he continued as he reached out his foot and toyed with the cat, "and I want you to know that I appreciate it to the fullest extent. Didn't you say something about a new dress the other day?"

"If I did, I can wait for a month or two more."

"There is no need of waiting a day. In the morning I will give you $50 for a new dress. As you may need other things I think I'll make it $75. Never be afraid to ask me for money. I've been thinking we ought to go out more. What is to prevent us from going to the theater twice a week this winter?"

"I should like to go at least once a week."

"It shall be twice or three times, and we'll get up card parties for the other evenings. Would you like to keep a second girl?"

"Oh, no. You see, there is so little to do, and the cook has lots of time to help up stairs."

"If you want one, just say so. I don't want you to think you are tied to the house. And how about new carpets and furniture?"

"We don't need any."

"Thanks to you, and I appreciate it. By George, but when I remember how many rows I have raised over nothing at all I wonder that you haven't been driven to get a divorce. I expect there are plenty of women who would have brained me with the poker. Can you ever forgive me?"

Mrs. Bowser was determined to change the subject and avert the calamity, and a bright thought came to her.

"You took a pair of trousers to the tailor the other evening to be pressed," she said as she rose up.

"Yes, and has he sent them home?"

"They came up this afternoon and are in that bundle over there. I wonder if there are any buttons missing?"

The package was untied, and Mr. Bowser held them up to view. He had taken them to the tailor to have the creases renewed, and the tailor seemed to have made an excellent job of it. Mr. Bowser was about to lay them aside, with a nod of satisfaction, when he gave a sudden start of surprise, and the smile his face had worn during the last half hour was replaced by a look of sternness.

"What is it?" she asked.

He took the leg of the trousers and stretched it out at arm's length and squinted along the crease like a man looking along the edge of a board.

"You took this package in?" he asked as he finished squinting along the leg.

"Yes."

"And you knew they were my trousers?"

"Of course. What is wrong with them?"

"What is wrong with them?" he repeated as his neck began to grow red. "If you were the sort of wife you ought to be, you'd know what was wrong with them. You'd have known it hours ago and brought that tailor to book instead of assisting him in his chicanery."

"But what is it?"

"Can't your own eyes tell you? Look along these creases. Do they follow a straight line or do they wabble and crook?"

"They seem to be straight," replied Mrs. Bowser after squinting.

"But they are not, and I believe you have known it for hours. See there. These creases are at least three inches out of true at the bottom, and what will be the effect when I put the trousers on? I will look to be a bow legged man, of course, and of course that was the plot. By thunder, woman, but things have come to a pretty pass!"

"Mr. Bowser, how silly you are!"

"Oh, yes; oh, yes! Because I don't want to look like a man straddle of a barrel I am silly! How much did you have to pay the tailor to carry out this conspiracy with you? And when you had made me the laughing stock of the neighborhood what other scheme did you have to work? It would have been sweet music to your ears to hear the boys shouting, 'Old bow legged Bowser!' after me on the street."

"I wish you'd be reasonable," said Mrs. Bowser as she tossed the trousers on the lounge. "One minute you praise me, and everything is all right, and the next"—

"Never!" he interrupted as he kicked at the cat. "I have never praised you and don't mean to. There will be no theater and no card parties. A wife who'll conspire against her husband ought to be sent to state prison. I take my trousers to a tailor to be creased. You sneak down after me and bribe him to squeeze the creases so that I will be an object of ridicule. Why don't you poison my coffee? Why don't you murder me in my sleep?"

She passed him and went up stairs, and the cat held her breath and realized that a crisis was at hand. Mr. Bowser glared about him for a moment as he made ready to break loose, and then, with a yell, he seized the offending trousers, and, with a mighty wrench, he tore the back seam up and held a leg in either hand. There was nothing alive in the room except the cat. He jumped for her with a leg swinging about his head, and Mrs. Bowser heard a meow, a crash and a fall. He had struck a chair and fallen over it and plowed along the carpet with his nose, while the cat had escaped. An appalling silence followed, and it was a full quarter of an hour before she heard a voice hoarsely whispering:

"I don't wonder that husbands are driven to drink. I only wonder that they don't become murderers as well as drunkards!" M. QUAD,

MR. BOWSER SLIGHTLY VEXED.

These choices help to interpret the deepest interests and most significant movements of the century. They indicate that the century notwithstanding its scientific and material activity, has lived most deeply in spiritual interest, that it has been preeminently a century of spiritual liberation, no previous century could have given so full a meaning to "our neighbor." It would be interesting to consider what new thought each book named has represented, but space forbids the discussion here.

A study of the agreements and variations in these choices is interesting. The men named are among the most positive and influential persons at the close of the century; hence in their choices not only have they expressed their own rich full personalities, but they have epitomized the true life of the century.

While these choices interpret the character of these men, do they not also reveal the secret of their power? "It is significant that one rarely reads the life of a man or woman of real power and greatness "without coming, early in the story, upon a record of special service rendered at a critical moment in intellectual and spiritual development by some book or books of power." To live truly and deeply we "need contact with the finest spirits for inspiration and for nourishment." How important it is then, that young people should be taught to read and love great books.

President Eliot has said, "Ten minutes a day devoted affectionately to good books—indeed to one book of the first order like the English Bible or Shakespeare, or to two or three books of the second order like Homer, Virgil, Milton or Bacon—will in thirty years make all the difference between a cultivated and an uncultivated man, between a man mentally rich and a man mentally poor."

"Books, we know,
Are a substantial world, both pure and good;
Round these, with tendrils strong as flesh and blood,
Our pasttime and our happiness will grow."

BOUTWELL IS HONORED

On Occasion of Fiftieth Anniversary of His Inauguration as Governor

Boston, Jan. 19.—The Massachusetts Reform club had as its guest or honor last evening Hon. George S. Boutwell, a former governor of Massachusetts, it being the 50th anniversary of his inauguration, while other invited guests were former Governor Brackett and James J. Myers, speaker of the house of representatives. President Warren, in opening the speaking, paid graceful tribute to the chief guest of the evening, who, he said, had grown gray in his country's service, and whose record is unsullied.

"It required no little courage," he said, "and the deepest of convictions to separate from lifelong political friends and to leave a party with whose name his own had been connected from its origin, but Governor Boutwell was not a fair weather soldier, and he stands to his guns whosoever else may desert. I ask you to rise and drink with me to the continued health and many years yet of efficient service to George S. Boutwell."

The toast was responded to with unanimity, and as Mr. Boutwell arose to reply he was greeted with great enthusiasm. After expressing deep appreciation of the honor extended to him, he proceeded to speak in a reminiscent vein of the men and events connected with his earlier political life, and of the circumstances that led to his election as governor. During his remarks he alluded only casually to the doctrine of imperialism.

Thinks England Will Benefit

London, Jan. 19.—The Spectator, in an article discussing the Nicaraguan canal question, says today: It is a matter of business and not of manners. We hold that it is to the interest of the British empire that the canal should be made, provided, of course, it is a canal which shall be used on equal terms by all ships. We are the greatest maritime nation. Any and every increase in the waterways of the world must be to our profit. Whenever and wherever you facilitate ocean carriage you confer a benefit upon the British carrying trade.

Great Future For Porto Rico

San Juan, P. R., Jan. 19.—Governor Allen has returned here from his trip to Ponce, Coamo and their vicinity, where, for four days past, he has been inspecting the road work. The governor says the crop outlook everywhere is excellent, particularly in the case of tobacco and sugar. The governor praises the mountain scenery and climate, and predicts that in a few years Porto Rico will be a world-renowned winter resort, rivalling Bermuda and Florida.

License Vote Statistics

Boston, Jan. 19.—On authority of a statistical table on the vote of Massachusetts cities on the license question at the last annual municipal elections, issued by the New England temperance bureau, license was the loser. In 1898 18 cities voted "yes" on the license question, and in 1899 21 cities voted "yes." In the December elections 30 percent of the registered voters of 33 cities, or 102,331, either stayed at home or failed to vote on the license question.

Catechism Damns Liberals

Madrid, Jan. 19.—In consequence of the introduction into the schools of a Jesuit catechism, in which it is said the Liberals will be damned, and other books written in the same spirit, the minister of education has sent a circular to the rectors of the universities enjoining them to prevent the propaganda against the present regime and constitution. Several bishops have protested against the circular.

Much Evidence as to Hazing

West Point, N. Y., Jan. 19.—The congressional committee will probably finish the investigation at the military academy tonight. The congressmen have probed deep into the hazing which has maintained at the military academy barracks and camp for several years past, and have obtained a mass of evidence in excess of that adduced at the military court of inquiry.

Hitchcock's Turn to Be Ahead

Lincoln, Neb., Jan. 19.—The vote in the legislature on United States senator yesterday was without decisive result, as follows: Allen, 53; Hitchcock, 56; Thompson, 52; Crounse, 10; Currie, 19; Hainer, 6; Kincaid, 4; Henshaw, 16; Meiklejohn, 28; Rosewater, 15; scattering, 15.

Crew Not All Chosen

Boston, Jan. 19.—Captain Hank Haff came to Boston yesterday to talk over matters relating to the Lawson yacht. Captain Haff said that he had picked out a few men for the crew of the new boat, but that no articles had been signed.

Ship Workers Idle

New York, Jan. 19.—The strike at Nixon's shipyard at Elizabethport, N. J., is assuming serious proportions. All the painters, caulkers and joiners, and nearly all the carpenters are out. The strikers number about 200.

Found Dead In Snow

New Haven, Jan. 19.—Harry Ide Root, a Yale sophomore, was yesterday found dead in the snow, after being missing two days. It is thought to be a case of suicide.

Weather Conditions and Forecast

Almanac, Sunday, Jan. 20.
Sun rises—7:09; sets, 4:43.
Moon sets.
High water—11 a. m.; 11:30 p. m.

Local snows have fallen in the New England states, and the temperature has also generally fallen. Occasional snows, with rising, followed by falling, temperatures, will prevail in New England. Brisk northwestly winds, becoming southerly, are indicated for the coast.

Pretty

Is an adjective which seems to have become monopolized by the young lady at the typewriter. It is astonishing what an array of beautiful women are found in stores and offices. In fact, the typical American beauty will be found sitting at the typewriter rather than lolling in a carriage in the park.

And yet this pretty young girl needs always to be reminded that "beauty is only skin deep," unless it roots in health. When the health is undermined by womanly diseases, the luster soon passes from the eyes, the cheeks grow thin, the body loses its plumpness.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription cures diseases which weaken women and which destroy their strength and beauty. It establishes regularity, stops weakening drains, heals inflammation and ulceration and cures female weakness.

"Several years ago I suffered severely from female weakness, prolapsus and menorrhagia, and used Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription with splendid effect," writes Fannie Shelton, of Washington, Iowa. "Glad I have not needed it for a few years past, but if I should ever have any return of the old trouble would surely try 'Favorite Prescription.' I have recommended it to a number of my lady friends. I always tell them to try a bottle, and if they are not benefited by it I will pay for the medicine. In every case they have spoken in praise of it."

HERE AND THERE.

Local Brevities of the City of Presidents.

The High School Hocky Team expect to play Boston Latin at Butler's today.

Charles L. Prescott has resumed work filling the Quincy Beef Co., house with ice.

The Wollaston W. C. T. Union will met Friday, at three, in the Congregational church.

The two-year old daughter of James Moodie, Jr., of Liberty street died this morning of diphtheria.

It is hoped that every class will be represented at the Q. H. S. Alumni reunion on Friday, Jan. 25.

The street railway men who run vestibule cars consider themselves fortunate this kind of weather.

It is reported that the E. C. Hanley company contemplate building a large dry dock at their Quincy Point plant.

The new fire station at Wollaston is practically completed and will probably be turned over to the fire department the first of the month.

The usual four o'clock vesper service on Sunday at First church is to be omitted tomorrow, as Mr. Butler does not feel able to conduct it.

The Norfolk County W. C. T. U. will hold their winter convention Wednesday, Jan. 23, in the Baptist church, Harvard street, Brookline, services to begin at 10 and 2.

The Fore River Engine Co., sent an order to Pennsylvania yesterday for 12,000 tons of steel. This looks as though some business would be done in the near future.

The monthly supper of First church is to be held next Wednesday evening in the chapel. The supper will be in charge of the ladies whose names commence with P, Q, R, and S and Mrs. C. A. Price is chairman of the committee.

The Board of Sewer Commissioners will meet Tuesday evening. It is more than probable that they will turn that department over to the Commissioners of Public Works at that time. It is reported that Henry W. French is to have charge of the house connections under the new order of things.

Friday night was one of the most severe of the season. A sharp cutting wind prevailed all the afternoon and continued during the evening. It was one of those searching winds from which it was impossible to escape, and the only way to keep warm was to keep close to the stove. Late in the evening the wind died down, but the cold weather continued all night.

The Quincy branch of the Woman's Alliance connected with the Unitarian church held a neighborhood meeting—on Monday afternoon in the chapel. Invitations were sent to 19 Alliances and members were present from many of the surrounding cities and towns. Interesting reports were given by the visiting members, and a very able paper on Alliance work was read by Miss Phoebe Waldo of Salem. Tea was served at 4.30, Mrs. Frank S. Davis and Mrs. N. S. Hunting being in charge. They were assisted by Mrs. A. E. Sproul and Mrs. E. A. Dewson, Jr., who poured chocolate, and Mrs. Wilson Marsh and Mrs. Albert Parker, who poured tea.

DISPOSED OF AT LAST

Senate Favors the Army Bill by Twenty Majority

HOAR WITH THE MINORITY

While Four Democrats Voted With the Republicans—Hale Declares the Measure the Only Means of Preventing Serious Disaster

Washington, Jan. 19.—Just before 6 o'clock last evening the senate finally disposed of the army reorganization bill. The measure having originated in the senate, the final question was not upon its passage, but upon agreeing to the senate amendments. They were agreed to by a vote of 43 to 23. While party lines were drawn on the measure, four Democrats voted for it, Senators Lindsay, McLaurin, Morgan and Sullivan. Senator Hoar, who was detained at home by illness, was paired against the bill with Senator Spooner. The bill has occupied practically the entire attention of the senate since Jan. 31, when it was made the unfinished business.

With the exception of the elimination of the canteen clause, it is not widely different from that reported to the senate. Every effort to prevent the increased strength of the army was defeated by a decisive majority.

As the bill originated in the senate, it now will go directly to the conference committee appointed by the two branches of congress.

During the afternoon Mr. Hale made a striking speech, saying that for the first time in 40 years congress was confronted with the proposal to raise a permanent standing army of 100,000 men. Nobody should try to disguise this fact. It should have been frankly admitted by all senators who championed this bill, that this army was to be raised to subjugate the Philippine islands, that the conditions there were so serious as to require a long time to do this, and that the flowery periods of the president's message did not accurately describe the situation.

SENATOR HALE.

The 70,000 men who are now there have been unable to control the insurrection. If they are reduced on July 1 to 20,000 they will be driven into Manila by the insurgents, and will be very fortunate if not driven into the sea. As the senate had rejected the plan which the speaker would have been glad to see adopted, that of conciliating the natives, nothing remained but for those senators who, like himself, disapproved of the senate's course and of the Philippine entanglement but to face the alternative, and vote for the bill as the only means of preventing worse disaster.

The sole hope on which Mr. Hale relied for keeping the army within proper bounds as to numbers was the fact that Mr. Root was at the head of the war department. Indeed, it was going to be hard to recruit the necessary men to raise the army to the size contemplated by the bill; for at the rate at which enlistments had been going on during the last year it would be impossible to send more than 8000 or 9000 troops to the Philippines by June 30, when the disbandment of so large a number in the absence of further legislation must take place.

The house spent the entire day on the bill to refer to the court of claims the claims of the William Cramp & Son Shipbuilding company of Philadelphia for alleged damages due to the delay of the government in furnishing armor plate and material for the battleships Massachusetts and Indiana, and the cruisers New York and Columbia. The claims aggregate $1,307,244. The bill has been conspicuous at every session of congress for several years. It met with the strenuous and determined opposition of a portion of the minority. A filibuster was finally begun, but its advocates at length succeeded in having the previous question ordered upon the bill. The ordering of the previous question gives the bill a tactical advantage in a parliamentary way, which practically insures a vote upon it whenever it is called up.

Fire In Tenement Building

Westerly, R. I., Jan. 19.—A wooden building occupied by a number of Italian families and some small stores took fire last evening, and for a time there was a hasty exit of the occupants, several women rushing out of the building with naked babes, although the weather was near the freezing point. The loss was $1500 to building and occupants. No one was injured.

His subject on Sunday evening will be, "The Royal Line, or the Prince of the Scarlet Thread." This will be a continuation of the sermon on, "The Throne of David."

Boston Theatre.

The newspaper reports of enormous attendance throughout the country this season have demonstrated the loyalty in the Hanlons' admirers for their beautiful production of "Superba," which comes to the Boston Theatre next Monday evening, January 21, for a fortnight's engagement. "Superba" this year is said to be scenically magnificant. It is filled to the brim with novel mechanical tricks, odd illusionary effects, witticisms and pantomimic features for which the Hanlons are continentally famous. Their ensembles, added featurers and auxillary attributes show particular aptitude in compilation painstaking efforts and untiring research. The ballet, heretofore but a side issue, is this season the warp of a well constructed fabric of entertainment, and the specialties interpolated are said to be of the very highest order. The Hanlons are to be congratulated in their present season's aggregation, for the cast is perhaps the best they have had for many years. For specialties this season the most prominent are the Tiller troupe of English dancers, whose terpsichorean work is accounted the most wonderful ever seen on the American stage; the "three marvelous Merrells," twentieth century bicyclists, who do some novel and very clever feats; Lizzie N. Wilson, in a singing turn. During the fortnight's engagement of "Superba" at the Boston Theatre the regular Wednesday and Saturday matinees will be given. These matinees are especially designed for children.

Castle Square Theatre.

The grand production of Steele Mackaye's romantic drama "Paul Kauvar," will continue as the Castle Square Theatre attraction for the coming week. Unusual care has been taken in this production to realize to the fullest extent all the possibilities of the great stage pictures, planned by its author, and the regular stock company of the theatre has been materially enlarged to meet the demands of the cast. The play offers splendid opportunities for thrilling dramatic effects and the great tableaux incidental to the action are magnificent and imposing. The leading members of the Castle Square company have found the demands of their several scenes well suited to display their best abilities and many notable individual triumphs have attended the performances. The demand for seats for the second week of this attraction has already shown a widespread interest in the production. The usual daily matinee performances will be given during the coming week, and at that of Monday every patron will be given a box of choice chocolate bonbons.

Keith's Theatre.

For the week commencing Jan. 21 the program at Keith's will include the following well known entertainers: Sydney Grant, a clever mimic of other stage celebrities, and Miss Norton, a talented monologue comedienne; Smith and Campbell, the eccentric sidewalk conversationalists, who always have some new and ridiculously funny dialogue; Walt Terry and Nellie Elmer, in their bright comedy and dancing sketch, "The Human Top;" John E. Camp, a clever English comedian and vocalist; Francis Keppler, a juvenile singing and dancing soubrette, and the brothers Damm, acrobatic comedians. These are but a few of the score of interesting and mirth-provoking acts, but sufficient to indicate that the show, as usual, will be of the first-class in every department. For the special entertainment of the youthful patrons of Keith's Ad. Carlisle's canine wonders, the best troupe of dog actors in the country have been engaged, and will appear at an hour that will permit the juveniles to see them without interfering with their school studies.

Colonial Theatre.

It is quite evident that all New England intends to witness the great Klaw & Erlanger production of Gen. Lew Wallace's famous religious romance, "Ben Hur," at the magnificent new Colonial Theatre on Boylston street, Boston, on the site of the old public library, for not only is there all day a long line of ticket purchasers from the city and suburbs but requests for seats are pouring in from various sections of Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Rhode Island and Eastern Connecticut and every part of Massachusetts. The number of requests for seats, ranging anywhere from twelve to sixty, indicates that the formation of "Ben Hur" clubs for the purpose of seeing "Ben Hur" at the Colonial Theatre is becoming quite a fad throughout New England, and during the run of this great play in Boston its record will be marked, undoubtedly, by the largest attendance from suburban places that has ever been scored by any production presented in the city of Boston. Its present run is the only one that will be made in Boston for several years. The present, therefore, is the only opportunity Boston and New England people will have to see "Ben Hur" for several years to come.

QUEEN DYING

All Hope of Recovery Has Been Abandoned

Prince of Wales Is Almost Worn Out by Great Strain

All England Is Plunged In the Deepest Gloom

London Jan. 21, 8:30 a. m.—A special train left London this morning at 8 o'clock for Osborne House, with the Prince of Wales, Emperor William of Germany, the Duke of York and the Duke of Connaught on board.

The queen became unconscious at midnight and remains in a comatose condition.

If the queen lives until Tuesday she will surprise her doctors.

The members of the royal family are gathered in a room adjoining the queen's bed chamber. The end is expected at any moment.

This morning's newspapers threw off all pretense of any possibility of recovery, and sadly admitted that the end might come any moment. "While there is life there is hope" they said, but it was idle to deny that the danger was extreme. Therefore the papers proceeded to review her majesty's long and illustrious reign as though she were no more, and to dilate upon the wonderful influence she wielded in European politics for so many years.

A bright spot in the universal gloom was the unexpectedly prompt sympathy displayed by Emperor William in giving up important engagements to come to the death-bed of his grandmother.

The departure of the Prince of Wales for London, shortly after 12 o'clock yesterday, to meet Emperor William, was quietly accomplished. The queen had been informed of the kaiser's coming, and had signified her desire that the prince should go to meet him. Rather against his will, the man who for the moment was practically the King of England, obeyed his mother's wishes. It was rumored that the queen wanted the emperor to postpone his visit to Osborne House, as she did not wish to receive him in her present condition.

Throughout the United Kingdom yesterday was a Sunday of anxiety and suspense. No one in England, outside the circle of the court knew the real condition of the queen, nor the nature of her disease.

The bulletins threw but little light on the universal question whether death was imminent. The London newspapers had not learned that her majesty had suffered a shock of paralysis.

Crowds assembled to witness the arrival of Emperor William. Apart from such incidents, however, the customary quiet of a London Sunday was not disturbed.

In churches of all denominations prayers were offered at all the morning services, and in most of them the latest bulletins regarding the queen's condition was read. The chief rabbi requested special prayers. The following notice was read in the Roman Catholic pro-cathedral at Kensington:

"The prayers of the congregation are asked for her majesty, the queen, the condition of whose health is the cause of anxiety and sorrow to us all. We pray that, by God's help, her majesty's recovery may be speedy and complete."

The bulletin issued at midnight was too late to become known in London, except to a very few.

The Associated Press learned that the paralysis was chiefly evident in the face, one side of which appeared to have lost all nerve and muscular power.

Keenly sensitive of her affliction and appearance, the queen had absolutely refused to see anyone but her nurses and doctors; and it is understood that the Prince of Wales was the only exception to this rule, and that his interview with the queen lasted but a few moments.

Hence the exact nature of the malady was known only to a very few, and it was the royal wish that the people should not be informed of the existence of paralysis.

Much difficulty has been experienced in administering nourishment, for she appeared quite unable to masticate. To this weakness was probably due the long spells of unconsciousness through which she passed, although it was almost impossible to distinguish these from the insidious encroachments of paralysis.

According to The Daily Telegraph, Emperor William, who has expressed a desire to be received at Osborne House not as Emperor William, but as a grandson, said on hearing of the queen's illness: "I am my grandmother's eldest grandson, and my mother is unable from illness to hasten to her bedside."

VICTORIA'S REIGN.

Has Surpassed That of All Kings and Queens of the World.

The 24th of May, 1819, was a bright day at Kensington. In the palace there a princess was born. The spring flowers were peeping up in the gardens and along the country hedges of England.

They gave to the only daughter of the Duke of Kent the name of Alexandrina Victoria. At the first her prospects were not clerely foreseen, but they began to be revealed in her early girlhood. As soon as the royal horoscope was cast, she was rescued from the purlieus of the British court and was placed under the wholesome authority of the Duchess of Northumberland. By her mother first and by the duchess afterward, the education of the princess was principally directed. To them the future queen was ever indebted for the wholesome discipline of her youth.

At the middle of the fourth decennium of our century the Hanoverian dynasty was rapidly sliding off sideways into oblivion. The large family of King George III seemed to be on the verge of extinction. All the sons, with the exception of William, were dead, and William had no eligible heir. As he came to the end of his course the succession, now attenuated to a hypothesis, rested clearly on Victoria, daughter of Edward of Kent. When on the 20th of June, 1837, the final scene was reached and the king was dead, it only remained to acknowledge the princess as queen and have her crowned.

This was now the prevailing question in Great Britain: "Can a girl of 18 reform and save the house of Hanover-Brunswick?" Certainly the dynasty was in a state requiring speedy salvation. The fortunes of the Hanover princes were rushing down. The scene was rapidly closing with scandal, ignominy and childlessness.

In the midst of all this, destiny sent the young daughter of the Duke of Kent to see what she could do in the way of arresting the downslide of the dynasty. Her principal business as woman and queen was to trammel up the consequences.

Certainly the task imposed required the combination of her own character with another of equal soundness and a certain subjugation of her by him. Near the close of the second year of her reign she notified parliament of her purpose in a quaint address, in which the naivete of an innocent womanhood was curiously interwoven with the imperiousness of the youthful queen. She would marry, because she was in love with her cousin, Albert of Rosenau. She would marry because the exigencies of the monarchy required her to marry. She would do her duty very willingly, because she wanted to do it. The prince was three months younger than the queen.

ALBERT EDWARD, VICTORIA'S FIRSTBORN.

And the result? The result was that the old house of Hanover became a reminiscence in the very court where it had lately flourished and decayed; the new house of Saxe-Coburg and Gotha came in its place; the young queen entered the domain of royal motherhood. Her promises and prospects multiplied.

Even in the early years of the new reign the British empire was steadied on its course. The whole of the fifth decennium was a period of settlement and fixation, in which the sediment of war and civil commotion went to the bottom.

The young Victoria was happy in all her fortunes. A princess was born within the year to bear her mother's name, and after 48 years to become for 99 days, as the spouse of Der Weise Kaiser, the Empress of Germany, mother of Welhelm II. The hopes of the United Kingdom as to the dynasty were speedily fulfilled. Within the second year a Prince of Wales was born. Other princes and princesses came in procession.

The prince consort was a model lord. At the banquet of the mayor of London, in March of 1851, Albert concluded his address with a sugegstion for an international exhibition of arts and industries. Hence sprang the Crystal palace and the first great exposition of its kind in the world.

After Hyde park the next crisis with Victoria was the Crimean war. There was a time during the historical scrimmage in Asia when her majesty was greatly distressed.

A few years before the queen's widowhood came the shocking news of the Sepoy rebellion. Again her majesty's government must carry on a war in Asia. But out of the conflict rose the East Indian Empire of Great Britain and the significant ascendency of British authority in the east.

Meanwhile constitutional government in Great Britain became even more fixed as the order of state, and under the auspices of Victoria had taken that typical form which it now bears.

As Victoria became aged she became venerable in the esteem of her subjects, and in the esteem of the world. In 1887 she reached the jubilee of her reign, and the event was celebrated with as much enthusiasm as the British race can kindle. Two years afterward the 70th anniversary of her majesty's birth was observed with affectionate respect.

Great-grandchildren soon began to smile in the face of the aged empress, all unconscious of the destinies to which they had been born. Mary Teck's man-child and the boy baby of the British peasant are both alike on the wave of the universal flow.

The reign of Victoria now reached out until it surpassed not only the reigns of her contemporaries, but the reigns of all kings and queens whatsoever in the world. None of her own ancestral sovereigns from Alfred the Great, Henry the Lion, and Richard the Lion Hearted, had seen from under their crowned brows the immortal years wear away as had the illustrious daughter of the Duke of Kent. Louis XIV, if we measure from 1651, the year of his boyish assumption, to the date of his death, reigned 64 years, but if we count rationally, from his 18th birthday, his reign covered but 59 years. Henry VII kept the crown for 56 years. The great Edward clutched his scepter for 50 years. The rest are juniors to these

Good Afternoon.

All plans of the Boston dailies for these new apportionment of the Congressional districts seem to take in Milton and Quincy to make up the required population of Boston, but then fall about 15,000 short of the required 606,000.

Milton and Quincy almost to a voter object to further combination with Boston wards and it is not at all necessary that they should be included.

Suffolk county as a whole—Boston, Chelsea, Revere and Winthrop—come nearer to the necessary 606,000. If any town shall be included with Boston wards it should be Brookline with her 19,935 which is almost surrounded by Boston, and then there is Hyde Park with its 13,244, which together would add 33,179 to Boston's 560,892. Watertown with 9,706, or Dedham with 7,451 would make nearly the required 606,000.

It will be seen from the following summary that the 13th or Cape district, and the 12th or Plymouth district must be reduced, and the surplus with Quincy and Milton should make up for the losses to Boston in the 11th district to be represented by Samuel L. Powers of Newton.

The population by congressionrl districts at the present time as compared with that of 1890, is as follows:

	1900.	1890.
Basis,	203,000	173,000
District 1,	201,378	170,297
District 2,	203,378	173,951
District 3,	210,256	171,484

Drift of Opinion.

☞We suppose that the Hoar Republicans must be in good and regular standing now.—New Bedford Standard.

☞The Lieutenant Governor's definition of an independent in politics is worth preserving. It is a man who cannot be depended on. The more you think of it, the more firmly is the truth of the saying perceived.—Lynn Item.

☞Notwithstanding the warning of Gov. Crane, there is talk of an increase in the State tax. If we get this talk before the legislature is hardly in session what will the harvest be?—Beverly Times.

☞Essex county is fortunate in being out of debt. The County Treasurer reports that after every known possible liability has been met, there is a balance of some $20,000 on hand to begin the year. This is a good showing and the taxpayers will feel encouraged.—Lynn Item.

☞The railroad commissioners' suggestion that street railway companies be assessed a part of the cost of the separation of grades will find general commendation, except among street railway interests, and even the latter will, no doubt, find the suggestion that they be admitted to the rights of a petitioner for the abolition of grade crossings of some value to them. The interests of the street railways in many of these crossings are as vital as those of any of the parties now concerned under the statute.—Haverhill Gazette.

☞In Berlin the experiment of street car fares for a price equivalent to a quarter of an American dime is now under way. Our thrifty German friends will rejoice over the reduction in rates. It is not unlikely that before many years have passed the local coporations in New York, Chicago, Philadelphia, Boston and other American cities will be giving two rides for five cents at moderate distances. The number of miles of travel for a nickel has been increased so much that still further concessions from the companies may reasonably be looked for in the near future.—New York Tribune.

☞The tolerance and liberality of Massachusetts was never more fully exhibited than when on Monday the Republican Senators and Representatives, speaking for the people of the State, unanimously nominated C[illegible] Frisbie Hoar, [illegible] George Frisbie Hoar for a fifth term in the Senate of the United States. They do not agree with the senior Senator in his views concerning our island possessions, and they depreeate his course in encouraging resistance to our soldiers, but they recognize his great abilities, and the service he has rendered in the 32 years he has been in Congress, eight of which were passed in the House and 24 in the Senate, and they will continue to honor him in spite of his determined opposition to their beliefs. They believe he is sincere and they know he is courageous, and when the present cause of difference has been eliminated, as it soon will be, there will be plenty of opportunity for the exercise of his great abilities in the service of his State and the nation.—Lynn Item.

Wollaston Congregational.

At the Wollaston church Sunday morning, Rev. E. A. Chhse delivered a sympathetic sermon on "Lyric poetry in the time of David." In the evening Rev. Pitt Dillingham, of the Calhoun colored school, spoke of the work among the Negroes, illustrating his remarks by stereopticon views. The audience, which was very large for a cold evening, listened with close attention to the speaker's remarks. A collection was taken to further the good work.

Childrens Work.

Children's Missionary Sunday was observed Sunday afternoon at Christ church. The Sunday schools of St. Chrysostom's church of Wollaston, Trinity church of Weymouth, and the Mission of Our Saviour church of East Milton, were present. Missionary hymns were sung and an interesting talk on the missionary work of Bishop Rowe of Alaska was given by the rector of Christ church.

Sudden Death.

Elbridge F. Hayden died very suddenly Sunday at the Quincy farm. He ate his dinner all right and was apparently in his usual good health. He went out into the yard where he was seen to reel and fall. SAYS FAREWELL.

Secretary Hoehn Speaks at Bethany Church.

Asks Cooperation With New Y. M. C. A. Man.

Has Always Found Bethany Church a Friend.

Although Sunday was bitterly cold there was a fair attendance at Bethany church Sunday evening to hear the farewell message of Mr. W. F. Hoehn, the secretary of the Y. M. C. A., who is going to other fields. He said in part:

When the invitation was suggested to me to say a closing word in ending my work in Quincy tonight at this service, I again realized the zeal and earnestness of the people of this church, to whom I shall always feel the debtor for the many acts of co-operation received. At this time it seems but proper for me to make public acknowledgement of the willingness of this church to enter into all kinds of active Christian Endeavor—their faithfulness to an honest cause. To the pastor of this people, I bring my tribute, in humble acknowledgement of a forceful Christian character, always striving to the best of his ability to carry out the work of the Master and that must imply much in his relations—as I know him from the standpoint of an Association secretary. The Young Men's Christian Association of Quincy will always and must forever stand hand in hand with this church and any other church which reaches to the high ideals as exemplified in our union. So turning the leaves of my Bible for an expressive thought which I might leave with you, my eyes cast their attention to the fly leaf, where in 1896, Mr. Moody wrote his signature, and for its inspiration to me in service linked it with the reference to 84th Psalm and the 11th verse.

"For the Lord God is a sun and shield: the Lord will give grace and glory: no good thing will be withheld from them that walk uprightly."

This verse is full of meaning, its thoughts have been the petitions for the interest of our young men. If in the work of giving young men sound bodies, clear minds, moral force, and living souls, we have to any degree attained, it is because the Master has not withheld the good thing from us. I know the secretary who has dealt in our all-sided work, though with his limitations has been true to the desire to elevate the souls of men.

If to some young men my message, in word, or life, has not been clear let me tell you now, most impressively that God wants you as His own—in not only body and mind, but in spirit. He wants you to be a perfect man, because you need to be such. Let pride, selfishness, and jealously be placed aside, and let peace, unity and brotherhood reign. If this word shall be the last I may ever have the privilege of saying to you—be it remembered that in your four fold life God demands in words of the late Gough—"make your record clean."

Then there are some people in this church to whom I want to bring a special message. They have worked hard for the young men of this community in many ways. They have always been willing and ready to help and their courage and effort have stood as a bright star beaming in the darkened night to illumine and cheer the hearts of those who fail. I refer to the women of the Auxiliary. May their share be the grace and glory of the Lord, in the faithfulness demanded from them.

Quincy has presented a large field of work for young men and very difficult and complex. Its responsibilities have often made me shudder, but I can say of the trust which was committed unto us, that we have done the best we could, to the extent of our ability, along the lines which were acceptable to a harmonious constituency. I shall leave Quincy and its spheres of Christian activity with pleasant memories of our association together, and I trust that in the future it may be the source of renewed inspiration in the work for the Master.

For the new man who is to come, I bespeak your fellowship, your cooperation and your service. Give him the welcome hand: the open heart. Give the Young Mens' Christian Association of Quincy your earnest prayer, active effort, and all will move along successfully to the glory of God. In the salvation of young men—"No good thing will He withhold from them that walk uprightly."

—Dedham will have free delivery of mail Feb. 1.

COLD SUNDAY.

The Mercury Below Zero at Sunrise and Only 11 Above at Noon.

The weather Saturday afternoon and Sunday morning was the coldest on record for this winter. It began to grow cold Saturday noon and at 4 o'clock the mercury had fallen to 6 above zero. At that time a cool north west wind was blowing and it was bitter cold. It continued to grow cold as the night advanced and at 6 o'clock Sunday morning was 3 below zero. It was cold Sunday morning and at noon the thermometer registered only 11 above. From then on it continued to grow warmer, and at midnight Sunday it was 28 above.

Annual Meeting.

At the annual meeting of the Stockholders of the United States Hotel, Boston, last week, a new lease for a term of years was by unanimous consent made to Hon. Tilly Haynes, who has so successfully conducted the house for a quarter of a century. It is known that this is the largest and most valuable hotel property in Boston and as a result of the successful manner in which it has been conducted, the Trustees unanimously voted for a new lease for a term of years. The reputation of the hotel and its very liberal management have always given it a substantial, conservative clientage, who still cling to the good old-fashioned New England comforts and cooking, where quality and service are the prime consideration.

Death of Mrs. Everson.

Mrs. Ann M. Everson of Cottage street died this morning in her 83d year. She was the widow of William Everson, and lived for a number of years on Brackett street, moving to Cottage street about ten years ago. She leaves one daughter, Mrs. William W. Craig; a grand-daughter, Mrs. Fenton E. Lowe; and a great grandchild. Mrs. Everson was the last but one of a large family who lived to old age, the surviving member being Mr. Napoleon B. Furnald of Washington street. Mrs. Everson was born in Quincy in 1818.

Q. & B. Transfer.

There has been recorded at the Suffolk registry, as well as at the Norfolk county registry at Dedham, says the Herald, a deed conveying the franchise and all the property of the Quincy & Boston Street Railway Company to the Brockton Street Railway Company. The realty includes all lands, tenements, etc., owned by the grantor, the whole being valued at $211,468. Stamps for $211,500 are affixed to the papers. The transaction which has already been reported in this column, is in accordance with votes passed by the two companies last summer.

Vespers at Wollaston.

The vesper service at the Wollaston Baptist church, Sunday, was much enjoyed by those who braved the cold. Rev. Preston Gurney gave his concluding sermon naming the arches of the remodeled church speaking on the theme, "charity or love." This series of sermons, eight in all, have proven very interesting. The musical program was very rich and was well rendered by the quartette.

VICTORIA'S TRAI[illegible]

AN EX-ATTACHE WRITES OF CHARACTERISTICS.

She Outlived All the Friends of Her [illegible] and Happiness Went With Them[illegible] Sense of the Ludicrous—She [illegible] Missed the Throne—Reminiscences

Although it is impossible to say Queen Victoria outlived her usefulne[illegible] she may be said to have outlived he[illegible] piness. During her long and ev[illegible] reign—almost the longest on record [illegible] tending considerably over half a cen[illegible] she had seen all her oldest friends a[illegible] quaintances as well as numerous me[illegible] of her immediate family disappear in[illegible] grave, until at last she felt herself [illegible] alone in the world. Not a single one [illegible] former associates to whom she cou[illegible] burden her mind, discuss the earlier [illegible] of her reign, or with whom she could [illegible] congenial intercourse, was left.

"Mamma is so entirely alone," excl[illegible] her daughter, the Princess Christian, [illegible] hearing one day. "You can't imagi[illegible] sad it is for her. We all belong to a [illegible] er generation and have different the[illegible] and sentiments, many of which sh[illegible] neither understand nor appreciate. [illegible] one of her contemporaries and friend[illegible] passed away, and with them have va[illegible] all her old time associations. There [illegible] one remaining to whom she can really [illegible] about matters."

The Queen's Sense of the Ludicro[illegible]

This remark of Princess Christian[illegible] far toward explaining the unhappy [illegible] even morose expression that pervade[illegible] queen's features during the last 30 y[illegible] her reign, save when something ex[illegible] dinary occurred to excite her keen s[illegible] the ludicrous. On such occasions a[illegible] she would laugh with a degree of hea[illegible] and even violence that would have [illegible] pletely staggered those who had neve[illegible] her without that half sad, half sour[illegible] of the corners of her mouth.

I remember especially one case wh[illegible] laughed so much that she almost h[illegible] of apoplexy in consequence. The ir[illegible] which excited her risibility was the [illegible] venture of a photographer who ha[illegible] summoned from London to Wind[illegible] take pictures of her majesty and [illegible] children. It was the first time in h[illegible] that the man had ever found himself [illegible] presence of royalty, and he was ver[illegible] ous. So great indeed was his trep[illegible] that on putting his hand beneath th[illegible] for the purpose of getting the right [illegible] he suddenly upset the camera. The [illegible] of the latter, with its three legs stick[illegible] into the air, while the frightened p[illegible] rapher stood stock still, well nigh pe[illegible] with fear and with the black clot[illegible] hanging over his head and face, struc[illegible] the queen and Prince Leopold, duke [illegible] bany, as so intensely funny that they [illegible] burst into peals of the most immo[illegible] laughter.

The little great lady fairly shook [illegible] merriment as she lay back on th[illegible] where she was sitting, while Prince [illegible] pold threw himself on the floor and [illegible] shrieked with delight. The scene, ho[illegible] was brought to a sudden and som[illegible] tragical conclusion, for the prince la[illegible] so hard that he broke a blood vess[illegible] brought on a fit, from the effects of [illegible] he almost died at the time.

This sense of the ridiculous consti[illegible] remarkable feature of the queen's c[illegible] ter throughout her life and is not[illegible] moreover, in the books which she pu[illegible] concerning her life in the highlands.

Even in her childhood and girlho[illegible] vious to her accession to the throne [illegible] Queen Victoria seems to have giv[illegible] dence of this underlying current of [illegible] ment and fun in the constitution [illegible] character. True, everything was do[illegible] could be done to check it by her [illegible] the Duchess of Kent, whose sever[illegible] even harshness toward the young p[illegible] called forth on one memorable occa[illegible] a state banquet at Windsor, a viole[illegible] public rebuke from King William I[illegible]

Queen Victoria was small in statu[illegible] during the latter part of her life very [illegible] This, however, did not prevent her fr[illegible] taining a most remarkable grace and[illegible] esty of deportment. It was impossi[illegible] concesive anything more captivatin[illegible] winning than her smile. Always [illegible] and even shabbily dressed in black [illegible] that were often rusty, it was impossi[illegible] to feel when in her presence that th[illegible] old woman had ruled for more than [illegible] century over the greatest and most [illegible] sive empire of the civilized globe, a[illegible] all that a true, warm hearted wom[illegible] of tenderness, a broad minded, un[illegible] piety and sincere sympathy for all [illegible] in trouble or distressed, a thorough[illegible]

Coming to a throne tarnished by [illegible] moralities of her predecessors, Qu[illegible] toria completely reformed the mora[illegible] phere of the court, and to a certain [illegible] also of the entire British people, [illegible] withstanding all the epithets that are [illegible] against it British society is today in[illegible] superior in morals as well as in h[illegible] what it was previous to 1837. VICTORIA'S TRAITS.

AN EX-ATTACHE WRITES OF HER CHARACTERISTICS.

She Outlived All the Friends of Her Youth, and Happiness Went With Them—Her Sense of the Ludicrous—She Almost Missed the Throne—Reminiscences.

Although it is impossible to say that Queen Victoria outlived her usefulness, yet she may be said to have outlived her happiness. During her long and eventful reign—almost the longest on record and extending considerably over half a century—she had seen all her oldest friends and acquaintances as well as numerous members of her immediate family disappear into the grave, until at last she felt herself quite alone in the world. Not a single one of her former associates to whom she could unburden her mind, discuss the earlier events of her reign, or with whom she could enjoy congenial intercourse, was left.

"Mamma is so entirely alone," exclaimed her daughter, the Princess Christian, in my hearing one day. "You can't imagine how sad it is for her. We all belong to a younger generation and have different thoughts and sentiments, many of which she can neither understand nor appreciate. Every one of her contemporaries and friends has passed away, and with them have vanished all her old time associations. There is no one remaining to whom she can really talk about matters."

The Queen's Sense of the Ludicrous.

This remark of Princess Christian goes far toward explaining the unhappy and even morose expression that pervaded the queen's features during the last 30 years of her reign, save when something extraordinary occurred to excite her keen sense of the ludicrous. On such occasions as these she would laugh with a degree of heartiness and even violence that would have completely staggered those who had never seen her without that half sad, half sour droop of the corners of her mouth.

I remember especially one case where she laughed so much that she almost had a fit of apoplexy in consequence. The incident which excited her risibility was the misadventure of a photographer who had been summoned from London to Windsor to take pictures of her majesty and of her children. It was the first time in his life that the man had ever found himself in the presence of royalty, and he was very nervous. So great indeed was his trepidation that on putting his hand beneath the cloth for the purpose of getting the right focus he suddenly upset the camera. The sight of the latter, with its three legs sticking up into the air, while the frightened photographer stood stock still, well nigh pertrified with fear and with the black cloth still hanging over his head and face, struck both the queen and Prince Leopold, duke of Albany, as so intensely funny that they both burst into peals of the most immoderate laughter.

The little great lady fairly shook with merriment as she lay back on the sofa where she was sitting, while Prince Leopold threw himself on the floor and fairly shrieked with delight. The scene, however, was brought to a sudden and somewhat tragical conclusion, for the prince laughed so hard that he broke a blood vessel and brought on a fit, from the effects of which he almost died at the time.

This sense of the ridiculous constituted a remarkable feature of the queen's character throughout her life and is noticeable, moreover, in the books which she published concerning her life in the highlands.

Even in her childhood and girlhood previous to her accession to the throne in 1837 Queen Victoria seems to have given evidence of this underlying current of merriment and fun in the constitution of her character. True, everything was done that could be done to check it by her mother, the Duchess of Kent, whose severity and even harshness toward the young princess called forth on one memorable occasion, at a state banquet at Windsor, a violent and public rebuke from King William IV

Personal Traits.

Queen Victoria was small in stature and during the latter part of her life very stout. This, however, did not prevent her from retaining a most remarkable grace and majesty of deportment. It was impossible to conceive anything more captivating and winning than her smile. Always plainly and even shabbily dressed in black gowns that were often rusty, it was impossible not to feel when in her presence that that little old woman had ruled for more than half a century over the greatest and most extensive empire of the civilized globe, and with all that a true, warm hearted woman, full of tenderness, a broad minded, unaffected piety and sincere sympathy for all that are in trouble or distressed, a thoroughly human empress in fact, whose affections, thoughts and utterances were understood and appreciated at their true value by her subjects.

ALBERT EDWARD, VICTORIA'S FIRSTBORN.

Coming to a throne tarnished by the immoralities of her predecessors, Queen Victoria completely reformed the moral atmosphere of the court, and to a certain extent also of the entire British people, for notwithstanding all the epithets that are hurled against it British society is today infinitely superior in morals as well as in honor to what it was previous to 1837. Vice there is and always will be in a metropolis so large as London, in a society so elastic and accessible as that of England, but vice is no longer so rampant, so unblushing and so public as in days of yore.

That Queen Victoria fostered the fine arts is best shown by the fact that a large proportion of the former enormous imports of art objects from France into England have now ceased. Britain has learned to supply her own demand for art objects Her majesty's interest in such matters as these was only natural, for she was one of the most accomplished women of her dominions, being a painter of considerable merit, a musician of rare talent, a clever writer, as shown by her "Highland Leaves," and a remarkable linguist. Not content with knowing German, French and Italian, she set herself down when past the age of 60 to study Hindoo, and was able at the time to converse freely with her two or three Indian body servants.

Moreover, her long experience as a ruler and the profound knowledge which she possessed of international politics were almost without parallel among the European sovereigns and statesmen, and endowed her with great prestige and influence. The latter, exercised with much caution and foresight, proved sufficient on several occasions to avert continental wars, and it is no secret that Emperor William of Germany and Alexander III of Russia were restrained from fighting for years by nothing but the wise intervention of Queen Victoria.

EX-ATTACHE.

STORIES OF A SOVEREIGN.

Anecdotes About Queen Victoria From Various Sources.

Victoria used to sleep between woolen blankets or sheets woven especially for her use. They were made very soft and fleecy and thin, and as she never used them after they were washed she required about eight new pairs every month. When she had discarded them, they were sent to the hospitals. One firm supplied these blankets to her majesty for 40 years. In order to keep her feet warm she had queer little contrivances—fur lined bags or "foot muffs"—made by the same firm. This concern also regularly redraped her rooms with chintz (cretonne), always of the same design and coloring, which by royal order might not be duplicated for any one else.

The queen hated tobacco smoke with all her strength, and it was forbidden to every one to indulge in the fragrant weed within the walls of Windsor. It is not recorded that this rule was ever relaxed but once, and that was on the occasion of the visit of King Charles of Roumania to her majesty in 1892. Then the smell of Havanas was observable everywhere save in the apartments of the queen herself and the adjacent corridors. On one occasion a cabinet minister, who was devoted to his cigar, received a letter from the queen's private secretary, Sir Henry Ponsonby, saying that in future the monarch would be glad if the official would refrain from saturating his dispatches with tobacco smoke before sending them. He turned the royal snub to account by writing a note to each of his colleagues telling them that it was the royal order that in future they should not smoke when preparing dispatches for the queen.

Victoria always took most of her personal belongings with her when she went on a journey, and it was therefore no easy task for her household to make the change from one place to the other. The moving of the court from Windsor to Osborne is described by one who has helped in the moving as "worse than three fires and an earthquake all at once." Everything except the carpets and pictures had to be removed from the royal chambers after her majesty left them and set up in good order in the other palace before her arrival there.

Upon one occasion Victoria was ready to start, had donned her bonnet and seated herself in her carriage, when it was noted that the mistress of the robes, the late Duchess of Sutherland, was not in her seat in the carriage opposite her royal mistress. There was a row, but presently the missing woman appeared literally on the run, and in a drenching perspiration, and visibly frightened. The queen looked at her tardy subordinate, but instead of scolding her took her own watch from her belt and presented it to the duchess, saying, "Your watch must be a bad timekeeper—let me give you this one," whereat the duchess wept for joy.

The life of a maid of honor, lady of the bedchamber or other female member of the household at Victoria's court, while not at all that of a menial, was not in any sense a sinecure, but as service in the royal household confers great social prestige the positions in question have always been eagerly sought. Victoria's women used to take an early breakfast and await a summons from their mistress before venturing into her presence. The morning was usually passed in reading the newspapers to her majesty till near luncheon time. The queen partook of this meal with her own family, the women of the household eating apart at 2 o'clock.

From 3 to 4 p. m. the women accompanied their mistress on her daily drive, after which they read, arranged photographs or completed fancy work begun but not finished by royal fingers. This continued until the queen's dinner hour, about 9 o'clock. By this time all concerned were likely to be weary, and no one was ever heard to complain because the "waits" or terms of service rarely if ever exceeded five months in any one year. The pay of the ladies of the household varied from £300 to £500 per annum. Most of them were peeresses, or at least of noble blood. An untitled woman who was a member of the queen's household was privileged by reason of her service to use the prefix honorable before her name. Among the duties of the ladies in waiting during Victoria's reign was the repetition in her majesty's ears of all the court tattle of the day.

Victoria's appetite was good. Here is a menu of a luncheon served in 1892 at the home of her granddaughter, the Duchess of Fife, to which the royal grandmother is said to have done ample justice:

Minced venison, boiled capons, ox tongue, cold roast chicken and York ham, cold grouse, cold roast sirloin of Scotch beef, pastry, cheddar cheese and salad, 1884 champagne, dry biscuits and 30 years old dry port.

Victoria possessed a most remarkable memory. She rarely forgot a face, and to the day of her death she could recite the pedigree of almost every noble family in England, of all the German royalties, the exact arrangement of everything in a chest of drawers locked up a twelvemonth before, and every slight or civility offered to her consort, Prince Albert, during their 22 years of married life.

The queen was very fond of dogs, and her kennels at Windsor used to house about 50 of them. They were petted in life by royal hands, and at death received elaborate burial. The kennels at Windsor are elaborate affairs, the yards being paved with red and blue tiles and the "bed chambers" with white bricks, and contain sleeping benches covered with straw, hot water pipes, baths, etc. A tiled portico along the front of the kennels, where Victoria used often to walk, is known as "the queen's veranda."

Nearly 60 years ago an American visiting in London, and who saw the queen shortly before her coronation, described her thus: "She is a dainty little maiden, only 4 feet 10 inches in height, with a delicate figure, flowerlike face, a slender arm and exquisitely poised head. The face was a little pensive, but nevertheless mirthful, the corners of the mouth turning up decidedly. The tendency of the upper lip was to curl and like most English people she held her lips slightly open, allowing a mere suggestion of white teeth to appear. She wore a simple gown of soft white india muslin, bound around the waist with satin ribbon. Her waist was an English one, long and slender. The dress was embroidered with field daisies, and strings of pearls were around about her throat. Her arms were quite bare and without ornaments, and she wore no rings on her slim fingers." She retained her regal bearing to the last, but almost every other characteristic given in this discription disappeared many years before.

It is said that Victoria used to consider herself really at home in but one place, and that her private garden at Osborne, on the Isle of Wight. There she had a plot of ground—her own private property—on which no stranger was ever allowed to intrude. A Swiss chalet has been built there and fitted up as a sort of family museum, and in the grounds themselves the queen has exploited her personal taste in the matter of tree planting. Royal marriages were commemorated by planting slips from a myrtle bush.

Not far from this row of trees is the mourning row, all planted by her majesty. Of late years the younger members of the queen's army of descendants have done much of the tree planting, and the place is full of all sorts of trees in commemoration of all sorts of events. A feature of the garden is a wooden playhouse built nearly 40 years ago by Victoria's eldest son, Albert Edward, and his brother, the Duke of Edinburgh. In this structure the playthings of the queen's children are stored. There is also a miniature fortress built by these two under the eye of their father, the prince consort, when they were boys.

When the daughter of Sir Henry Ponsonby, the queen's private secretary, was married, the queen asked Lady Ponsonby if there were to be many present at the ceremony. "Far from it," was the reply. "The house in Embassador's court will not permit of a crowd. It is to be very select." "In that case," said the queen, "perhaps there will be room for an old lady among the guests—an old lady like me!" And then Lady Ponsonby went nearly mad with joy because of the distinction vouchsafed her daughter's nuptials.

When the queen went on a railroad journey, all traffic was stopped on that particular line for a quarter of an hour before the passage of the royal train and for 10 minutes afterward as well. She had an immovable prejudice against traveling faster than 20 miles an hour and was never content to travel at night.

In her younger years Victoria devoted much time to art, etching being her favorite form of expression. One of her earliest pieces of work was a portrait of her eldest daughter, Victoria, now the dowager Empress Frederick of Germany. A room in Buckingham palace was fitted up with all necessaries for etching and printing, and there the queen and the prince consort used to pass much of their time absorbed with the etching needle and the printing press.

DUKE OF CLARENCE, VICTORIA'S GRANDSON. [Deceased.]

A very commendable trait of Queen Victoria's character was her loyalty to her servants. Though exacting even to the point of severity in her demands upon them, few mistresses, royal or otherwise, have ever been as considerate of those who served her as was her majesty of England. When famous old John Brown died, she was so greatly affected as to cause ridicule on the part of some journalists as well as other folk, and there was even a suspicion of scandal in some of the gossip that got abroad. This died out long before Victoria's death and was doubtless without foundation.

The queen wrote much, but published little. The two volumes, "My Life in the Highlands" and its sequel, published shortly after John Brown's death, were singular productions. The first was intended as a vent to her feelings on the death of Prince Albert, and the other filled the same purpose after the decease of Brown. Both are dull, and both disclose as far as may be the daily life of an exalted personage, who was, after all, but a woman, and in some ways a very weak and foolish woman, but one who was of good heart, possessed of many noble qualities and of unquestionable purity of life.

The World's Progress During Victoria's Reign.

While Victoria was on the throne, serfdom was abolished in Russia and slavery done away with in the United States and Brazil. Russia lost some territory in Europe, but gained in Asia. Turkey sank from a first rate to a no rate power. Africa was largely explored, and the dark places on its map nearly all cleared up. The age of steam, only fairly begun when she ascended the throne, reached its highest estate apparently, and the age of electricity was ushered in before she died, the telegraph, the telephone, electric lighting and electric transportation all coming into being. The advance in science generally was marvelous. Literature and the useful arts flourished as never before. Education was more widely diffused, and the newspaper press became a factor in affairs. The cause of constitutional government progressed everywhere in the civilized world save perhaps in Russia. Even in faraway Japan the old forms of government were superseded. In short, the progress of the world in nearly every direction during Victoria's reign was greater than ever before.

THE SCHOOL FUNDS

Public Schools Assisted by State and Others.

Ninety-five Per Cent. Have Superintendents.

Normal Graduates Find Employment—Institute Work.

Continuing the abstract of the report of the State Board of Education:

There are local funds amounting to $1,287,826.56, whose income must go to public schools; and $2,566,316.33 whose income must go to private schools, the sums yielded last year by these funds being $62,046.61 and $123,386.79 respectively.

The State is directly aiding the public schools of certain towns in four ways: by means of (1) the school fund, (2) the reimbursement of high school tuition payments, (the reimbursement of advances in teachers' salaries, and (4) contributions to salaries of teachers and superintendents in superintendency districts.

The principal of this fund in January, 1900, was $4,370,548.14. The income for 1900 was $213,066.18, of which half goes to 250 towns and half for general educational expenses. In accordance with section 3, chapter 408, Acts of 1893, the excess of income from the Fitchburg Railroad securities loan sinking fund in any year shall be added to the income of the Massachusetts school fund for that year." As a result of chapter 466, Acts of 1900, this sinking fund now contains $10,000,000 of bonds, half at 3 per cent. and half now at 4, to redeem $5,000,000 of State indebtedness at 3 1-2 per cent., making the excess of income practically 3 1-2 per cent. on $5,000,000 or $175,000. The State indebtedness secured by this sinking fund does not mature until 1913.

Sixty two towns, all under a valuation of $500,000 have been reimbursed by the State for payments of high school tuition for 347 pupils in 42 high schools of other towns, at an expense of $11,819.53. The average expenditure per pupil was $34.06; the average tuition rate, $37.80. The State requires every town without reference to its ability, to furnish free high school tuition, and therefore deems it its duty to assist some of the towns in meeting this requirement.

Forty-seven towns, all under a valuation of $350,000 have been reimbursed by the State for advances in the salaries of 279 teachers, to the amount of $11,504.47. These towns are thus enabled to increase such salaries by a sum not exceeding $2 per week, so that teachers previously receiving from $5 to $8 per week may now receive from $7 to $10. Better qualifications are demanded by the State in return for the increase.

The amount paid by the State to each district superintendency is $1,250—$750 for half of $1,500 which the State fixes as the minimum salary of the district superintendent, and $500 for teachers' salaries. The number of districts last year was 51 for the full year and 1 for two months; and the amount paid them, or due to be paid, was $63,958.33. The number of districts has since increased to 57, containing 167 towns.

Two hundred and eighty-five towns, with 95 per cent. of all the schools and 96 per cent. of all the school children, have now come in a voluntary way under supervision by superintendents schools. Chapter 248, Acts of 1900, now makes it the duty of every town, after July 1, 1902, to employ a superintendent of schools, towns whose valuation is under $2,500,000 being required to form district superintendencies. Now that supervision by superintendents of schools is to be universal and permanent, the State requires the school committee to act for the town in all matters relative to the superintendent, as it requires the school committee to act for the town in all matters relative to teachers, leaving to the town in town meeting the general duty only of providing the necessary means for the employment of the superintendent, as to the teachers.

Five years have now elapsed since the raising of the standard of admission to the normal schools. Massachusetts is the only State in the Union that places all its normal schools above the high schools and in line with colleges. The average number of admissions during the five years of the new policy was 56 per cent., higher than during the last five of the old; the last year of the new policy, 79 per cent. higher than the first year of the new. In 1900, 950 candidates, including a few for their preliminaries, were examined, of whom 819 were admitted. The number of students last year was 1,712, the largest in the history of the schools; and of graduates, 537,—also the largest in their history. Nearly all the graduates find prompt employment.

During the year 27 institutes have been held, attended by 3491 teachers from 271 towns, at which 480 exercises by teachers, superintendents of schools, professors of pedagogy, agents of the Board and others were presented. Two of these institutes were held in July for two weeks each,—those at Northampton and Salem. The rest were for one day only. In addition, a summer session of the State Normal School at Hyannis was held for five weeks, and attended by 121 students, mainly teachers, whose average age was twenty-six years and whose average number of years in teaching experience was nearly five. Under this plan teachers in active service may in time obtain a normal school diploma.

Children's Corner.

A walk in the woods at this time of the year will reveal to the observer many interesting things. The buds are already formed waiting for the first warm wind from the South to expand their coverings. Here and there the green leaves of the skunk cabbage rolled up in tight folds may be seen in sheltered places coming up out of the mud. Traces of the mole and the field mice are evident in the brown grass and perhaps a glimpse may be caught of the white coat of a rabbit under a bush or of a muskrat as he swims down the brook. Overhead the impatient caw caw of the crow is heard or perchance you may disturb the day dream of the night heron as he dozes among the thick branches of a pine tree, causing him to fly awkwardly away to another roost, uttering his harsh "squawk squawk."

Every available storehouse of seeds is covered with sparrow and chickadees pecking vigorously at the tough seed vessels of the mullin plant or the pine cones.

Walking towards dusk along a path you may surprise a bevy of quail scattered through the grass or be in turn surprised by a sudden whirr of wings as the timid creature rise in the air and strike off all together for another field.

The progress of civilization has driven out many of our birds and animals, yet there are some left and an afternoon's walk even in midwinter will show to the observant lover of nature some bright glimpses of wild life.

WAS PLEDGED TO KILL

Anarchist Refused to Carry Out His Mission

COMRADES PERSECUTED HIM

And He Finally Sought Relief In a Police Court—Reveals an Alleged Plot For the Assassination of Prominent American Public Men

Yonkers, N. Y., Jan. 21.—A startling tale of a plot to kill prominent Americans was told yesterday by Elias Masuras, a Greek, the complainant in an assault case which came before City Judge Kellogg. Masuras would have told more had the court not stopped him and turned him over to the police that they might quietly investigate the case. Several arrests have already been made, and a number more are planned.

Masuras entered the police station yesterday and asked the officers in charge to order the arrest of his assailants. Masuras' face was covered with blood from a wound over the left eye. He was taken before Justice Kellogg, and as a result the justice issued several warrants. James Kipataukas, another Greek, living in Yonkers, was arrested. The prisoner was arraigned and Masuras was called as a witness.

On the stand Masuras said that in Greece he had been a member of an anarchist society. Sometime ago it fell to his lot to kill a public man in the United States, and he was ordered to come to this country and place himself under the orders of the American branch of the society. He never heard the name of the man whom he was to murder, and understood that, as in other cases, the man who was to be the victim was to be selected after his arrival in this country. After reaching America, Masuras, according to his own story, went to Yonkers and affiliated himself with a branch of the organization there, as well as one in New York. Finally, he became frightened, withdrew and refused to carry out the mission entrusted to him.

From the time he left the organization he claims he was annoyed and threatened by the members of the society. Saturday six of the men called upon him, and begged him to return. When he still refused, one of the six men attempted to drive a knife into his left eye. The blow was aimed too high, however.

Judge Kellogg adjourned the hearing and committed the prisoner to jail pending further examination. Masuras was examined by the police and, as a result, five more warrants were issued. During the day Joseph Kipatankas, a brother of the first prisoner, and Frank Hestaigus of New York city were arrested by the Yonkers police. One other Yonkers man and two New Yorkers are named on the other warrants, and the police are searching for them.

The police assert that they believe the story told by Masuras, as they say that the affair has led to the discovery of an anarchist band of a dangerous character.

"America" and "God Save the Queen"

New York, Jan. 21.—At Plymouth church, Brooklyn, yesterday, the organist, at the finish of the usual organ prelude, branched off into the hymn "America." The melody being the same as that of "God Save the Queen," several persons in the congregation arose and commenced singing the English national anthem. The whole congregation then stood up, and while the greater portion sang "America," the remainder sang "God Save the Queen."

Said to Have Been Despondent

Suncook, N. H., Jan. 21.—The family of Judge John B. Haselton, the presiding justice of the police court at Pembroke, have come to the conclusion that he committed suicide by jumping from the steamer Tremont, on the way from Boston to Portland. Several of Judge Haselton's effects were found in his stateroom. It is understood that Judge Haselton was despondent before he left here for Boston, because of financial losses.

Murderer's Courage Giving Way

Paterson, N. J., Jan. 21.—Andrew Campbell, one of the murderers of Jennie Bosschieter, is slowly breaking down in the county jail, his face showing unmistakable signs of collapse. It is said by those close to him that he would have broken down long ago but for McAlister, who has kept both Campbell and Death encouraged by telling them that they would escape with a very light sentence.

Jeremiah McAuliffe Charged With Causing Death of John Callahan

Peabody, Mass., Jan. 21.—Jeremiah F. McAuliffe, 35 years old, was arrested last night on a warrant which charges him with manslaughter in causing the death of John J. Callahan. The latter died yesterday from a fractured skull, and the police allege that the injury was caused by a blow from an umbrella delivered by McAuliffe.

According to the police, the blow which caused Callahan's death was given in Lynn on the night of Jan. 11. Callahan and McAuliffe were members of Peabody camp of the Massachusetts Catholic Order of Foresters. On Jan. 11 the local court went to Lynn as the guests of a court there of the same order, and both Callahan and McAuliffe were in the visiting party. At the lodge room in Lynn the men got into a quarrel. It is declared that at the climax of the quarrel, McAuliffe raised his umbrella and brought it down on Callahan's head, directly over the right eye. The men were then separated. All the way home, Callahan complained that his head was paining him. Callahan grew worse every day, and yesterday he died. He was 36 years old, and is survived by a wife and one child.

Lewiston, Me., Jan. 21.—The Pine Street Congregational church was gutted by fire yesterday. The loss is estimated at about $15,000. The cause of the blaze was an overheated furnace.

BABY'S BUSINESS

A healthy baby is comfortable; and that is enough for a baby. His business in life is to grow.

Aside from acute diseases, his food is the cause of most of his troubles. But Scott's emulsion of cod-liver oil delivers him from it.

He isn't sick; only a little hitch, somewhere, in his machine for turning food into growth.

It is a great thing to do, for a baby, to help him over a hitch with mere food—the emulsion is food that has the tact to get there.

The tact to get there is medicine.

CADETS TAKE ACTION

Voluntarily Pledge Themselves to Stop Hazing.

NO MORE "CALLING OUT"

General Dick Says It Sets an Example For All Educational Institutions—Health of Booz May Have Been Injured by Treatment at West Point

West Point, Jan. 21.—The congressional investigation of the West Point military academy has borne fruit rather unexpectedly. Saturday night when the congressmen were hurrying their inquiries to a termination, the cadets of all four classes held a meeting in Grant hall and unanimously decided to abolish exercising and hazing of every form as well as the practice of "calling out" fourth class men.

This action came as a surprise to the committee. It was nearly midnight when Colonel Mills, superintendent of the academy, handed a copy of the cadets' resolution to General Dixon. When the other congressmen learned the nature of it Mr. Driggs moved that it be read by Colonel Mills, and that afterwards it should be added to the record.

Cadets Bettison, Mahaffey, Gray and Atkins, who signed the document on behalf of their respective classes, were called before the committee. As soon as Colonel Mills read the resolution, General Dick, addressing Colonel Mills and the four cadets, said:

"This action, taken by the corps now at the national military academy, will be received by the country with signs of appreciation and approbation. What you did here today will be an epoch in the history of West Point, and, perhaps, in the history of all educational institutions in this country, for, when hazing no longer finds place at West Point, it will certainly not find lodgment in other educational institutions.

"A hundred years of history has has brought this institution, perhaps more closely than any other, to the hearts of the American people. What you have done for it today will leave it still higher in the good opinion that all true Americans have for it. It is with a design to add still greater lustre and fame to West Point that congress has endeavored, by a careful investigation, to find means for the eradication of anything which might seem to be out of harmony with its high purpose.

"Your voluntary action will be made permanent, congress will make permanent what you have done; but, in anticipating the action of congress, you have added to the great reputations already achieved here. In dismissing you, I hope you will carry to your classes the congratulations of this committee, its well wishes for their future success, and its thanks."

General Dick said he expressed the opinion of every member of this committee when he returned to Colonel Mills, for many courtesies, their sincere thanks. "We shall go back to congress," he said, "and through congress to the country, commending the excellence of your institution, and hope to convey to the people some idea of the sense of obligation the people should have for this excellent branch of our government."

Ever since the members of congress came here they have worked nearly 16 hours daily in public and executive sessions. The committee expect to make their report in about 10 days, and, it is said on good authority, they will recommend that the number of tactical officers at the West Point academy be increased. It is also reported that they will say that the deaths of former Cadets Booz and Breth were not caused by the hazing they received at West Point. In the case of Booz the testimony showed that he was not very strong at any time, and, it is said, the members of the committee believed that his health had been injured by his treatment at the hands of his fellow cadets at the academy.

At the same time it is claimed that the committee has failed to discover any connection between the swallowing of tobasco sauce and the subsequent death of Booz from tuberculosis.

Robbed Havana Postoffice

Havana, Jan. 21.—John Sheridan, who has been in charge of the money department of the Havana postoffice, was arrested yesterday for the theft of $1300. He confessed his guilt. Sheridan was appointed from the Boston postoffice, and has a salary of $1700. An investment in stocks in Boston first attracted suspicion to Sheridan.

Met Death Unexpectedly

Salt Lake, Utah, Jan. 21.—A special to The Tribune from St. George says that Martin Wright, late Socialist candidate for governor of Utah, who was en route to Los Angeles with his two sons, was instantly killed by the discharge of a revolver which accidentally fell from his pocket at their camp.

Again In Working Trim

Washington, Jan. 21.—President McKinley is convalescing rapidly from his recent attack of the grip. He went out for a drive yesterday, greatly enjoying the bracing air. Today the president will spend a short time in his office, and gradually will increase the period of active work.

Two Thousand Looked On

Atlantic City, N. J., Jan. 21.—Schooner A. P. Coleman went to pieces and sunk off here yesterday shortly after her crew of four had been rescued by the Atlantic City life saving crew. She was lumber laden. Two thousand persons witnessed the rescue of the seamen.

WORK BEFORE CONGRESS

Much of This Week Will Be Devoted to the Appropriation Bills

Washington, Jan. 21.—The senate took up the legislative, executive and judicial appropriation bill today. There is little in the bill that ordinarily would create debate, but it does not seem improbable that several days may be required to act on it, because of the desire on the part of some senators to postpone consideration of the ship subsidy bill as long as possible.

The shipping bill will be made the unfinished business whenever, in the opinion of the friends of that measure, it is wise to give it that place, but, in view of the fact that it will be displaced by appropriation bills whenever senators in charge of those measures desire to take them up, it is possible that the motion to give the bill the place of vantage will be postponed until after the disposition of the legislative bill.

Senator Aldrich will report the war revenue reduction bill and he will ask immediate consideration for that measure. The rules of the senate give preference to revenue bills as they do to appropriation bills, and no order of the senate will be necessary to make a place for that bill.

The house will devote most of its attention during this week to a series of appropriation bills, the District of Columbia, fortifications, naval, postoffice and agriculture being ready for consideration. At the outset, however, there will be a day or two given to other measures having right of way. The army reorganization bill will be reported back promptly from the committee on military affairs and sent to conference with a general disagreement to all senate amendments. It may be reported back during the latter part of the week, and a sharp contest is promised.

Mark Twain For Woman Suffrage

New York, Jan. 21.—The annual meeting of the Hebrew technical school for girls was held last night, and was attended by nearly 400 prominent Hebrews. The principal address was by Mark Twain, who said among other things: "I would like to see the ballot in the hands of every woman. Man made this city what it is, and it is a shame and a disgrace to civilization. If the women of New York city had a ballot, they would drive all the corruption out of it in short order. It is not the ballot that does the work, but the possession of it, and if it were given to women each party would be compelled to put up their best candidates to stand any chance of winning."

Almost Suffocated by Gas

Boston, Jan. 21.—Several persons narrowly escaped death from gas in a Cranston street house yesterday. Vernon King, awaking to find the danger to the family, reached a window and raised it. His wife was also overcome, and he had a severe struggle to get her to the window, being so weak from the effects of the gas himself. King then awoke Corbin Fitzgerald and Elizabeth Fink, who were both overcome. After working three hours, a doctor succeeded in restoring the victims. The leak was discovered in the cellar.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address.

NEW HOUSES FOR SALE.

Just to remind you that I have another lot of houses nearly completed, I will list these three bargains:

Many were disappointed on the last lot so be on hand early if you would be in it.

First—A six room Single House, bath and set tubs, with hot and cold water, papered to suit purchaser, large lot $2100. $300 down; balance at low rate of interest. Just the place for some street railway employee.

Also, one of eight rooms and bath, Independence avenue; all modern improvements, bounds on two streets, can sell for $500 less than real value. This house is of the popular size to suit any business man, and is very roomy and convenient. I don't like to have other builders know how I am cutting prices, but $3,000 buys this one, look at it and compare with others you see building.

Another, and a money maker for some one with only an ounce of pluck. This is a two-family House, 5 rooms and bath each, and 60 foot lot, $3 000. Pay in $500 on this and I will guarantee you a twenty five per cent. investment for one year; who would dare invest in a twenty-five per cent. GUARANTEED investment.

Remember these houses are built by competent workmen, by the day, of the best material, and are personally superintended by the owner, are but four minutes to station, electrics pass, and everything is most desirable as a residential section. All houses are connected with sewer and cellars are perfectly dry.

Come and look them over and select one that suits you. Can be seen any day.

STILL LIVING

Queen May Hold Her Own Until Thursday

Liberal Use of Stimulants to Prolong Life

Evidence of Universal Sympathy Toward England

London, Jan. 22, 9:03 a. m.—The Cowes correspondent of The Daily Express learns unofficially that the queen has taken nourishment freely since midnight.

A 7 o'clock bulletin from Cowes says that the queen is expected to live until Thursday morning unless unexpected complications occur.

A special train is held in readiness to convey the members of the cabinet to Osborne at any moment. Thus far it has not been required.

Emperor William spent the night at Osborne, where the accommodations are so severely taxed that the royal yachts at Cowes are being fitted up for the accommodation of visitors.

Another day in the Victorian era, now so rapidly drawing to a close passed without any great change in the condition of Queen Victoria. The slight improvement so frequently mentioned in the official bulletins merely indicated a postponement of the inevitable.

The most noticeable feature of yesterday was the satisfactory portion the queen spent in consciousness, which she regained early in the afternoon and still retained at 10 p. m. At that hour she had not seen Emperor William, local rumors to the contrary notwithstanding. Royalty at Osborne thus had a chance to recuperate from the terrible ordeal undergone during the early hours of Monday.

The correspondent of the Associated Press is informed that the members of the royal family were called to a room adjoining the queen's bed chamber no less than four times yesterday morning, and were kept in momentary expectation of being summoned to witness the end up to 5:30. Her majesty's physicians then had only a vestige of hope that they would be able to keep the queen's feeble life in existence until the Prince of Wales arrived.

To secure this result they resorted to the frequent use of brandy and champagne. These stimulants, used to an extent which only the greatest emergency justified, worked their process, and when the Prince of Wales and Emperor William entered the castle grounds, at 11:30 a. m., they found the queen a trifle better than had been expected.

The desperate remedies employed Monday morning to enable her majesty to live until her eldest son's arrival will not be used again to the same extent, for the doctors are fearful that the remedy might be almost worse than the disease. They trust to prolong life by a moderate application of stimulants, combined with as much nourishment as can be assimilated. Such expedients as were employed during Sunday evening and Monday morning are not considered justifiable.

The queen's rally astonished no one more than her physicians, and when at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon they heard her ask for chicken broth their amazement almost equalled their delight. Privately, however, they build no false hopes upon these fading signs of what has been one of the strongest constitutions with which a woman was ever endowed.

Despite the favorable afternoon, the doctors dreaded greatly the period between 6 o'clock and midnight. When that was safely passed they seemed hopeful of her majesty's living at least through another day, although the memory of the previous night's relapse kept their anxiety at high tension.

The news of the death, when it comes, is likely to be publicly announced in London before it is announced here, as, according to the present arrangements, the first telegram is to be sent to the lord mayor of London.

There is an entire absence of local excitement. Cowes has settled down in patience and sadness to await the inevitable. Never has Emperor William arrived at any place in England with as little eclat. No salutes were fired, no cheers were given. The men of the guardship Australia silently manned her sides. The crowd was equally undemonstrative, the people contenting themselves with baring their heads. It was a greeting given to the grandson of a dying woman, rather than to the ruler of the great ally.

After luncheon at the castle, the Prince of Wales, Emperor William and the Duke of Connaught strolled around the grounds and visited the local sailors' home. Meanwhile most of the ladies at Osborne House snatched a few hours of sleep.

The Daily Chronicle observes: "In the United States the nation and the government display once again the irrepressible sentiment of a cognate people. The strain of common blood which flows in British and American veins has been rarely more manifest or more warmly recognized."

This evidence of universal sympathy extended toward England in her hour of trouble is, in fact, the leading theme, and The Standard remarks: "There is no enemy of England too bitter, and no professing condemner of thrones and crowns too fanatical to admit the virtues and services to mankind of Queen Victoria."

"In the United States, as we are entitled to expect," says The Times, "the sorrow which overshadows the mother country has silenced ungenerous criticism. The personality of the queen is understood and honored by Americans, and we can hardly desire any higher tribute to her admirable qualities, both as sovereign and woman, than those quoted by our New York correspondent."

The colonial office has received dispatches from the governments of the Australian and South African colonies expressing their anxiety and distress at the queen's illness.

Cannot Go to Mother's Bedside

Berlin Jan. 22.—The Norde Deutsche Allgemeine Zeitung makes the following announcement: Dowager Empress Frederick, because still seriously ill, is to her very great sorrow, prevented from going to Osborne to meet her exalted mother." The effect of the bad news regarding Queen Victoria upon her eldest daughter has been very unfavorable.

Germany's Feeling

Berlin, Jan. 22.—Most of the German newspapers express sincere concern as to Queen Victoria, and praise Emperor William for going to Osborne. The Agrarian and Pan-German journals however, take a different tone. The Deutsche Tages Zeitung, the leading Agrarian organ, concludes an abusive article in this style: "The rising of English power is now followed by a decline. That she has seen the beginning of such a decline has given Queen Victoria a death-stroke. She saw the commencement of the decay of that whose splendid development she had witnessed during a long life. This is the tragic finale of her prolonged reign. The most important question for Great Britain now is whether the new king will be able to find his way out of South Africa again."

Italy Expresses Sympathy

New Haven, Jan. 22.—The Yale promenade guests last night attended the annual Glee and Banjo club concert, and also several class and society germans. The promenade concert was, as usual, attended with a deal of horse play by the freshmen, who, from the gallery, covered the ladies in the parquet with streamers and tokens in paper. Confetti and streamers in variegated colors were sent fluttering throughout the house, dummies of grotesque appearance and about everything that could be carried into the house secretly was sent over the railing. Several students were dispossessed of live crabs and lobsters, fishing tackle, fishing poles and sofa pillows, from which it was intended to empty the feathers.

TWO SALOONS WRECKED

Mrs. Nation Proceeds to Carry Out "Destined" Mission

REVOLVER AT HER HEAD

Had a Cooling Effect In One Instance—Arrested After Having Caused Between $1500 and $2000 Damage—Has a Lively Battle With Sheriff

Wichita, Kan., Jan. 22.—Two wrecked saloons are the result of 10 minutes' work by Mrs. Carrie Nation, who came back to Wichita yesterday after her recent incarceration in jail under a small-pox quarantine. Mrs. Nation was assisted by Mrs. Evans, Mrs. Wilhoit and Mrs. Muntz, all of the local W. C. T. U. organization.

With hatchets concealed under their cloaks they entered the saloon of James Burns on Douglass avenue and did not leave a complete piece of glassware or a working slot machine in the place. All showcases, plate glass windows and doors were broken.

Next they ran into John Herring's saloon and had broken everything in the front of the room when he appeared with a revolver, placed it at Mrs. Nation's head, and said the he would blow her brains out if she did not desist. She yielded, and with her companions ran to the Carey hotel bar, where she made her first attack, three weeks ago. There three policemen met her. She struck at Detective Sutton with a poker, but he shoved her aside. A youth struck the officer in the face, and, in turn, was knocked down.

The police then overpowered Mrs. Nation and her friends, and took them, followed by 2000 people, to the city prison. Chief of Police Cudbon discharged the prisoners after they reached the jail. The women made him a promise not to wreck any more saloons before noon today.

After leaving the city building, Mrs. Nation began a street lecture to the immediate crowd around the building, saying that she expected to begin saloon wrecking again at noon today, when her truce with the chief of police expires. Shaking her fist at the crowd she said: "Men of Wichita, this is the right arm of God, and I am destined to wreck every saloon in your city."

The women procured a wagon and rode through the streets singing "Nearer, My God, to Thee," and other hymns. They halted in front of the saloons they had wrecked and held prayer meetings. The damage done by the three women is estimated at between $1500 and $2000.

David Nation, the husband of Mrs. Nation, was in this city, but took no part in the wrecking of the saloons, nor did he go to the city jail when his wife was arrested.

Mrs. Nation caused a new sensation last night. She was at the Union station, in the act of buying a ticket to a neighboring town, when the sheriff pulled at her sleeve, saying: "You are my prisoner, madam."

Mrs. Nation turned and gave the sheriff a violent slap across the face. She followed this up by taking hold of his ears and wringing them viciously.

The station was full of women, who began screaming, and tremendous excitement followed, as the sheriff, who is a very small man, struggled with his powerful antagonist. A policeman came to his rescue and with the aid of by-standers they succeeded in carrying the woman to a cab, which was driven to the county jail.

There she insisted on being placed in the private room for women, but Sheriff Simons put her in a cell, where she began to pray and sing hymns.

Late last night Mrs. Wilhoit and Mrs. Evans were arrested at their homes and taken to the county jail. Mrs. Muntz could not be found. It is stated that a complaint of insanity will be lodged against Mrs. Nation.

Heavy Damage by Storm

Kingston, Jam., Jan. 22.—Terrible weather has prevailed on the north side of the island. A violent norther has been causing destruction of banana plantations on every side. In some of the parishes hundreds of acres of fruit have been ruined. The seas are running mountains high, and have demolished the wharves. There have been many casualties among the small craft.

More Anarchists Rounded Up

New York, Jan. 22.—Four more men have been arrested in Yonkers in connection with the stabbing of Elias Masuras, a Syrian, who was stabbed in an altercation with men who he alleges are members of an anarchist society. Masuras still sticks to the story originally told by him, in which he asserted that he is the victim of an anarchist plot.

Lovesick Swain Kills Himself

Philadelphia, Jan. 22.—Clara Nicholas, aged 26, a waitress, was shot and wounded last evening by Ralph Helms, a kitchen helper, aged 23, who afterward committed suicide by shooting. Helms was enamored of the girl, who recently has discouraged his attentions. The woman's condition is not serious.

Good Afternoon.

The appointments of Mayor Hall, as far as heads of department are concerned, are with one exception, the same as last year. The work of these officials during the past year has been most satisfactory and no change was warranted or looked for. The one exception is that of Chief of Police, Mr. Ripley being thrown down. It can not be said that the removal of Chief Ripley and the appointing of ex-Chief Hayden gives general satisfaction, because it does not, and as a political move it is general considered [a bad one. Chief Ripley has done as well in that office during the past year as any previous officials, and it is fair to presume had he been reappointed he would have done better this year. What makes the removal more a matter of comment, was that when he was appointed a year ago, it was not at his own solicitation and it was not without considerable urging that he consented to accept.

To sum the whole matter up, Henry H. Faxon can be said to be at the bottom of his removal. Mr. Faxon has been opposed to Mr. Ripley all the year, and, in fact, it may be honestly said that there has been no chief of police that has ever pleased him, and it is doubtful if there ever was a man created that would please him. Year after year he has in letters to the press attacked the police as he did last year. He not only attacked Chief Ripley but was not over and above complimentary to Mayor Hall, and this causes many to wonder why Mayor Hall has seen fit to bow to him in this matter.

Mr. Hayden is a Republican, although at some municipal elections he has worked for the Democratic candidates, and while chief in the past has had a very good record. He is not wholly satisfactory to Mr. Faxon, but had his endorsement.

As for the Assessors, the gentlemen selected are all well fitted for the position. All have had experiences under the new system and better results may be expected this year.

There is not that rivalry for positions on the committees of the Quincy City Council that there is in other cities, and but little interest in appointments. President Bryant has called to the chairmanships, however, Councilmen of experience, but only one served in the same capacity in 1900,—Councilman Freeman who is again at the head of the Finance committee.

One thing is very noticeable at the start, and that is that the Wollaston ward has not only the president, but also three of the eight chairmanships. One reason of this perhaps is the fact that Ward Five makes but few changes in its Councilmen, and reelected members always get better places.

Then it is noticeable that Ward One, the business centre of the city, has not one chairmanship. Councilman Faxon, however, is a member of two important committees, those of Finance and Streets Councilman Sherman on the Committee on Sewers and Drains and Water Supply and Councilman Bass on Public Buildings and Grounds. Again, on four of the eight committees Ward One has no member.

Ward Two has one chairmanship, and an important one — Streets. Ward Three has two, Ward Four, one, and Ward Six, one.

The Democrats cannot complain, as one of the three—Councilman Callahan—is chairman of the important Committee on Fire Department and Police, and also on the Finance Committee Councilman Elcock is on Streets and also on Sewers, and Councilman Hughes, the new member, on both Fire Department and Police, and Health.

Christ Church.

The sermon and music at the Episcopal church, Sunday, were an inspiration to all who heard them. The weather was too bittterly cold for many to be present but Christ church has a reputation for a temperaure of eighty and more and this was none too high. The rector, Mr. Strong, preached most eloquently and persuasively from the text "This beginning of miracles did Jesus in Cana of Galilee." Those who heard and were helped by it hope that others can hear it soon. The little chorister who sang "Come Unto Me," from the Messiah also did his part and helped to make the entire service a comfort and benediction.

New Lightship on Trial Trip with City Officials as Guests.

The builders trial trip of the new lightship built by the Fore River Engine Co. is being held today. The vessel left her anchorage off the company's works at Quincy Point at 10.30 this morning. On board besides several government officials and members of the Fore River Co., were Commissioner Knowlton and other City officials. The trip today was to Marblehead and back and was principally to take her into rough water to see how she would behave, and to give her engines a deep sea trial.

The electric lighting plant of the lightship was tested Monday evening and worked to perfection.

Next week she will steam to New York where she will take on supplies and will then sail to Norfolk, Virginia, where she will be turned over to the government on Feb. 14.

The official trial trip will be from Tompkinsville to Norfolk on the way down.

Sights of Washington.

Readers of the Ledger are almost sure to hear from Mr. John Evans when he takes a long journey. He writes from Washington under date of Jan. 20, as follows:

Last Friday afternoon a sudden loneliness came over me, my better half had been away in Washington for a month, I immediately got ready and started for the same place, on reaching New York I took the B. & O. railroad through New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Deleware and Maryland to the Capitol.

Our train went through some of the finest land in America, if not in the world, hundreds of miles without a stone as big as a hen's egg.

I have already visited the great Congressional library, and it is worth the trip, if there was nothing else to attract one. The dome is made of pure gold leaf. I have also seen the Capital building, the Treasury, the Washington Monument, the Pension department, and the Soldiers' Home.

This morning Mr. Curtis and I went over the Potomac, to Arlington cemetery where over 16,000 of the Union soldier lay until bugle of last days shall call them to meet their great general.

On pain's eternal camping ground,
Their silent tents are spread
And Glory guards with solemn round
The bivouac of the dead.

When I came in sight of that famous river I couldn't help thinking, in fact I could almost see our brave boys in blue lining its banks eager for the fray for months. And all the North anxiously waiting, only to hear the unwelcome news, "All quiet on the Potomac." When visiting the old Lee mansion, I could see that gallant but mistaken man leaving the service of his dear country, to accept the position of commander in chief of the Confederates. Tomorrow I am going to attend Congress and will be glad to give you some account of the proceedings.

MR. RUSSELL DEAD.

One of Woilastons Oldest Business Men.

Mr. Frank Russell of Wollaston passed away Monday morning at 6 o'clock after a lingering illness of nineteen weeks. A year ago last September Mr. Russell underwent an operation from which he never wholly recovered. During his protracted illness, Mrs. Russell nursed her husband with loving care, yielding her place to a trained nurse only when her health was suffering from the strain. The funeral services will be held at Mr. Russell's home, Marion street, Wednesday, at 12 o'clock.

Born at Woodstock, N. H., forty-seven years ago Mr. Russell when a young man came to Wollaston in the early days of the place and worked for his uncle Joseph who had a grocery store under the Wollaston hotel. Soon Mr. Russell with Mr. Boynton bought the store and continued the business under the firm name of Boynton & Russell, which has continued for twenty-one years.

In 1884 Mr. Russell married Miss Elizabeth Chandler of Wollaston. Four years latter with his brother-in-law, Mr. Boynton, he built the house on Marion street, where the two families now live.

Always quiet and unassuming Mr. Russell made many friends. Everyone who knew him respected him for his pleasant manner.

A thorough business man he had nothing to do with politics preferring to devote his whole time to his business and his family. He was a member of John Hancock lodge of Odd Fellows. Mr. Russell is survived by his mother, 81 years of age, and elder brother and his widow.

MR. RUSSELL DEAD.

One of Woilastons Oldest Business Men.

Mr. Frank Russell of Wollaston passed away Monday morning at 6 o'clock after a lingering illness of nineteen weeks. A year ago last September Mr. Russell underwent an operation from which he never wholly recovered. During his protracted illness, Mrs. Russell nursed her husband with loving care, yielding her place to a trained nurse only when her health was suffering from the strain. The funeral services will be held at Mr. Russell's home, Marion street, Wednesday, at 12 o'clock.

Born at Woodstock, N. QUEEN IS DEAD.

[Special to the Quincy Ledger.]

Telephone news reached us at 2 10 that the Queen had passed away.

SKETCH OF THE LATE QUEEN.

It was on May 24, 1819, that a girl child, who was to rule millions of people in widely separated portions of the habitable globe, was born in dingy old Kensington palace. She was the only daughter of the Duke and Duchess of Kent, granddaughter of George III, then king of England, and niece of the then Prince of Wales, afterward King William III. In due time she was christened Victoria, and from the beginning her education and training were of the most careful, for, while it would have been a wild fancy indeed that had predicted such a career as she was actually destined to fill, there being at that time several lives between her and the throne, her father and mother, her grandmother, the dowager Duchess of Coburg, also grandmother of the Prince Albert who was to be prince consort of England's queen, and indeed George IV of England himself, regarded her as very likely to be the sovereign of England before her death. Prince Albert, when he courted Victoria years afterward, said to her that he had been told from childhood that one day he was to marry the queen of England, and she was to be the queen.

The Duke of Kent, who was the fourth of seven dissolute sons born to King George III, died when Victoria was yet an infant, leaving behind him an enormous indebtedness. This was due not only to his extravagant way of living, but also to the fact that his royal father adopted the utmost parsimony in dealing with him. At one time the duke was sent abroad with an allowance of but £2 a week, and on another occasion all his traveling expenses were put into the hands of the captain on whose ship he sailed. It was this state of affairs that caused the widowed duchess to live with great simplicity—a mode of life indeed that doubtless had a great deal to do with the sterling character of Victoria when she ascended the throne.

To wise hands was intrusted the care of the royal infant. Healthful outdoor exercise, plain and wholesome food and the utmost regularity and punctuality were the order of the day. The idea that not only her own time, but that of others as well, was valuable was fostered in Victoria's mind. The greatest care was taken to guard against vanity and love of display or power, and it was not until she was 13 years of age that she was informed of her possible future. It is told of her by the Baroness Lehzen that on receiving this information, "the princess, having lifted the forefinger of her right hand while she spoke, gave me the little hand, saying: 'I will be good. I understand now why you have urged me so much to learn even Latin. I understand all better now. I will be good.'"

Her Accession to the Throne.

Victoria came of age on May 24, 1837, and on June 20, less than a month later, she was declared queen of England, William III having just died. It was in the middle of the night that the young girl was notified that she had become queen of Great Britain and sovereign of an empire so vast that on it the sun never sets. The messengers who conveyed to her the news of her accession to the throne were the archbishop of Canterbury, the lord chamberlain and Sir Henry Halford. They experienced a good deal of difficulty in obtaining admission, as the entire palace at Kensington, where the young princess resided, was wrapped in deep slumber. Having at length made their way to the apartment adjoining her bedroom, they caused her to be summoned. A few seconds later she appeared, attired in a loose white dressing gown and shawl, her long hair falling over her shoulders and her bare feet in slippers.

QUEEN VICTORIA WHEN A GIRL.

On being informed of her new dignity she burst into tears, and then, addressing herself to the archbishop, exclaimed, "I beg your grace to pray for me." The whole party, consisting of the little queen, the prelate, the lord chamberlain and the late king's physician, Sir Henry Halford, then knelt, and there, in the middle of the night, offered up prayer to heaven that she might be strengthened from above and guided to the blessing of her people.

That was how Queen Victoria commenced her long and prosperous reign, and now it may well be said without fear of contradiction that her prayer offered up on the night of her accession has been fulfilled and that her reign has proved a blessing to her people.

Victoria was from the first idolized by the English people. Her youth appealed to their sympathies, and her good sense to their respect. She became a sort of national pet, yet withal she was admired for her wisdom, her rectitude and her firmness. Greville speaks with somewhat of regret of the last mentioned characteristic, evidently holding that the ordinary impulsiveness and perhaps even the mistakes of youth would have been more charming. The glories and splendors that attended her coronation—are they not all set down in the chronicles of the day? The ceremonies occurred on June 28, 1838. Never had England's metropolis been so crowded. Places along the line of the royal procession brought a high premium. By dark on the preceeding day the people began to gather.

At daybreak of the 28th the popular enthusiasm had reached a high pitch. The procession outdid anything of the kind that had before been witnessed in London. Besides the troops, which were ordered out in full force, there were twelve royal carriages, each containing two ladies and two gentlemen, and each drawn by six prancing horses. Then came the queen's state coach, drawn by eight cream colored horses and attended by a yeoman at each wheel and a footman at each door. The coronation itself was held in the vast building always used for the imposing ceremonies of English royalty—Westminster abbey. Victoria's train of royal crimson velvet and ermine was borne by eight young ladies of noble birth. Cannons boomed, trumpets sounded, and men and women cheered outside the building, and from every part of the sacred edifice were heard enthusiastic cries of "God save the queen!" Hats and handkerchiefs were waved aloft, peers and peeresses put on their coronets, and bishops donned their caps. The guests included other sovereigns, and they yielded to no one in the enthusiasm of the moment.

The "enthronement" was a singular portion of the ceremony. The young sovereign was lifted bodily into the royal seat, being surrounded by archbishops, bishops and peers. His grace of Canterbury knelt and did homage for himself and other spiritual lords, and all kissed the queen's hand. Her uncles, the Dukes of Sussex and Cambridge, removed their coronets and did homage with set and elaborate speech. They touched the crown upon her head, kissed her left cheek and then retired. The peers also touched her crown, but kissed her hands.

A Marriage For Love.

Queens enjoy a privilege which is withheld, save in leap year, from women occupying a less august position in the social scale—namely, that of themselves making the offer of marriage, instead of waiting to receive the proposal from their suitors. And it was therefore Queen Victoria who a year after her coronation at Westminster abbey, on June 28, 1838, invited her cousin, Prince Albert of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha, to share his life with her. It is only stating the truth to say of this marriage, however, that it was one that had been agreed upon for many years, providing Victoria herself approved of the young man. For a time she is recorded as having been not well pleased with him, but there is no doubt that she fell in love with him before the union was proposed by her. The nuptials took place on the 10th of February, 1840, at the Chapel Royal, St. James palace. The wedding breakfast was given at Bucking ham palace, and the honeymoon, which only lasted three days, was spent at Windsor castle.

The marriage proved an exceptionally happy one. Prince Albert turned out to be an absolutely ideal husband, being a man of singularly stainless and irreproachable character. Queen Victoria's domestic bliss was absolutely unclouded as long as her husband lived, and she was guilty of no exaggeration when she declared that the only sorrow which he had ever caused her was when he died.

People in this country will remember him as a warm friend of the United States. His amicable feelings with regard to America were manifested on numerous occasions, never more so perhaps than at the time when, with the shadow of death already encompassing him, he brought all his powerful influence into play against the cabinet of the day to prevent the transmission of an ultimatum to the Washington government on the subject of the Trent controversy. It has since been recognized on both sides of the Atlantic that had the dispatch drawn up by the Russell-Palmerston administration been sent war between the United States and Great Britain would have inevitably resulted therefrom. That it was withheld and a message of far more friendly and conciliatory tenor, drafted by the prince consort, substituted in its stead is entirely due to the enlightened and sagacious husband of Queen Victoria, who died deeply lamented both by his family and by the whole English people on Dec. 14, 1861.

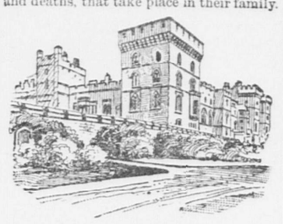
Only in one respect was it perhaps well that he died just at that time, for had he lived to see his eldest son, the Prince of Wales, attain his majority an awkward and unpleasant question of precedence would have arisen which could not but have become a source of pain and mortification to the royal family. The father would have been forced to yield the pas to the son, who would have been forced to take the precedence over the prince consort everywhere. Americans who have visited the British house of lords will remember that on either side of the throne there is a chair of state. The one on the right is very magnificent, being decorated with the three feathers of the heir apparent.

It is the stool occupied by the Prince of Wales at the opening of parliament by the queen. The stool on the left, a far meaner looking object of furniture, is the seat formerly occupied by the prince consort, and had the latter survived his wife he would have become the subject of his own son.

Persistent Grief.

From the time of her husband's death the queen was scarcely ever seen in public until the year 1872, when she proceeded in state, together with the entire royal family, to St. Paul's cathedral to join in a national thanksgiving service for the recovery of the Prince of Wales from the dangerous illness which had brought him so very near death's door the year before. The queen and the Prince and Princess of Wales passed from Buckingham palace to St. Paul's along streets literally alive with people. Footways, shop windows and the very roofs were teeming with shouting, hurrahing and enthusiastic crowds, and the popular display of loyalty was beyond all description.

In the cathedral the prince sat between his mother and his wife, the vast fane thronged to the utmost with good subjects of the queen, who were anxious to show how entirely they sympathized with her joys as well as with her sorrows. It was a remarkable scene, especially to foreigners, since it furnished evidence of the existence of that kind of family feeling that prevails between the English royal house and the people at large. It is due to the existence of this sentiment that the queen and her children go to the trouble of themselves notifying the citizens of London through the lord mayor and the remainder of her people through the home secretary of all domestic events, such as births, marriages and deaths, that take place in their family.



WINDSOR CASTLE.

The people appreciate this and take pains to show the extent to which they participate in the joys and sorrows of their reigning house. Thus on the deaths of the queen's youngest son, Leopold, duke of Albany, in 1884; of her daughter Alice, grand duchess of Hesse, in 1878, and of her grandson, the Duke of Clarence, in January, 1892, many a cabman made a point of wearing a bit of crape around his hat and a crape bow on his whip, while the servants and shopgirls wore black ribbon as a token of mourning.

Queen Victoria's Jubilee.

On June 20, 1887, the queen once more made a state progress through her great capital to attend a special service at Westminster abbey in honor of the semicentennial anniversary of her accession to the throne. Every reigning house in the world sent either members of their families or great dignitaries to represent them at the ceremony, and while kings and queens chatted gayly together in the chancel of the abbey while awaiting the coming of Queen Victoria, her majesty—no longer the bonny, fresh and healthy cheeked English girl of 1837, but a venerable looking, white haired old lady—was driving up Piccadilly, her carriage escorted by the most brilliant troop of princes, archdukes and grand dukes that have ever been gathered together for such a purpose.

Most notable in the procession was the queen's favorite son-in-law, the prince imperial of Germany, who a little later succeeded his father as Emperor Frederick, and it was observed that when at the abbey the various princes and princesses present came forward to do homage to the queen as she sat in the chancel on her throne the good old lady embraced "Unser Fritz" with especial warmth and affection, as if filled with a presentiment of his impending death, which took place after a reign of only 90 days.

Seven times during her reign was Queen Victoria's life attempted, but only on one occasion, in May, 1850, did her majesty receive any actual injury, and that of a mere transitory character. Her assailant on that occasion was a dismissed officer of hussars, and he was seized before he had time to accomplish more than strike her a sharp blow in the face with a stick. The man was sentenced to seven years' transportation. The first attempt to assassinate her was made in June, 1840, by a man named Oxford, who fired two pistol shots at her while she was driving up Constitution hill with her husband. The would be murderer was detained several years in prison and at last accounts was earning his livelihood by house painting out in Australia.

Victoria had nine children—Victoria, dowager empress of Germany; Albert Edward, prince of Wales; Alice, grand duchess of Hesse; Alfred, duke of Edinburgh; Princess Helena, Princess Louise; Arthur, duke of Connaught; Leopold, duke of Albany, and Princess Beatrice. All have had large families save the Princess Louise, who married Lord Lorne.

EVENTS OF HER REIGN.

How History Was Made During Victoria's Occupancy of the British Throne.

Although Victoria's reign was essentially one of peace, it was in no sense an uneventful one. Here is a brief summary of the more important events directly affecting the British government:

1837-8—Rebellion in Canada.
1839-42—Afghan war.
1840—War with China.
1845—Repeal of the corn laws.
1847—Famine in Ireland.
1848—Chartist agitation. Small rebellion in Ireland.
1853-5—Crimean war.
1857-8—Great sepoy rebellion.
1859—Direct government of India taken.
1861—Expedition against Mexico.
1865—Fenian troubles.
1867—Reform bill passed.
1868—Expedition to Abyssinia.
1871—Disestablishment of the Irish church. Alabama claims settled.
1873—Growth of Home Rule league in Ireland.
1875—Suez canal purchased by England.
1878—Russia checked in Russo-Turkish war. Cyprus acquired from Turkey.
1880—Beginning of the Irish agitation of the present.
1881-2—Trouble and fighting in Zululand.
1884—New Guinea annexed.
1887-8—Troubles in Africa.

During all these years Victoria's throne stood firm, thanks probably quite as much to her own good sense as to the constitutional form of the English government. But during this period the governments of the world underwent more changes than perhaps was the case during the reign of any monarch of the modern era excepting that of George III, who was on England's throne during the French revolution, and the reign of Louis XIV a century and a half earlier. Here is a brief resume of the chief wars and political changes outside the British empire during Victoria's reign:

1848—Louis Philippe overthrown. Second French republic established, with Napoleon III at its head.
1852—Napoleon III, by treachery, overthrew second French republic and established the second empire.
1859—Unification of Italy begun. War of France and Sardinia against Austria.
1861-5—Civil war in America.
1866—War of Prussia against Austria.
1867—Union of Austria and Hungary.
1868—Isabella, Bourbon queen, driven from the Spanish throne. Provisional government established.
1869—Spanish regency under Marshal Serrano established.
1870—Franco-Prussian war begun. Downfall of second empire of France and re-establishment of third republic. Temporal power of the pope abolished and unification of Italy completed. Amadeo, son of the king of Italy, made king of Spain.
1871—Close of the Franco-Prussian war. German empire established.
1873—Amadeo abdicated Spanish throne. Republic formed.
1875—House of Bourbon restored in Spain. Alphonso XII taking the throne.
1877—War against Turkey by Balkan states and Russia.
1885—Bulgaria seized eastern Roumelia.
1891—Brazilian revolution. Empire overthrown and republic established.

RECEPTION AT COLONIAL HALL.

The Y. M. C. A. Tender a Farewell to Secretary and Mrs. William F. Hoehn.

A farewell reception was tendered by the Quincy Young Men's Christian Association in Colonial hall, Monday evening, to the retiring general secretary, Mr. William F. Hoehn, and Mrs. Hoehn. Beautiful large palms from the greenhouses of William Patterson were placed upon the platform and almost hid Purdy's orchestra which discoursed popular and up-to-date music during the evening.

The reception was from eight to ten o'clock, the receiving party standing directly in front of the platform. Mr. and Mrs. Hoehn were assisted in receiving by Mr. and Mrs. William F. Cummings, Mr. Cummings being the treasurer of the Association, and Mrs. Cummings a member of the Ladies' Auxiliary.

The guests were presented by the committee of the association who acted as ushers.

Light refreshments of fancy cakes and cocoa were served by a committee of the Ladies' Auxiliary—Mrs. A. G. Coffin, Mrs. G. C. Hatch, Mrs. C. W. Guy and Miss Thomas, who were assisted by Miss Parker, Miss Taber and Miss Macfarlane. At the close of reception, impromptu speeches and presentatious were in order, and previous to this time, Mrs. Hoehn had been presented with a large bunch of choice roses, and Secretary Hoehn with a beautiful bouquet of pinks by the Y. M. C. A. committee. Treasurer Cummings first introduced Mr. George H. Brown of the board of directors, who in well chosen words presented Secretary Hoehn with a carbon photograph of the painting of "Christ before the Doctors," by Hoffmann. Mr. A. D. Albee, also of the board of directors, followed and presented Mrs. Hoehn with a gem of a clock. Secretary Hoehn spoke in acceptance of the gifts.

Other speakers were Secretary Goddard of Derby, Conn., Association, and Rev. E. N. Hardy of Bethany Congregational church.

The committee of the Y. M. C. A. on the reception were: Messrs. Frank F. Prescott, Melville P. Hayward, Lyman B. Peters, Theodore Hermanson and Arthur White.

PAPER BY MR. WILDE

Read at Monday Evening Club — Music of Excellence.

The Atlantic Monday Evening Club held an interesting meeting Jan. 21.

A paper on "How may we foster the spirit of local service in a place like Atlantic, so near a great city?" was given by Mr. Robert H. Wilde, containing many valuable suggestions.

Rev. Mr. Floody of Boston addressed the Club on "Personal power."

Mrs. Child of Boston sang "Sweetest flower that blows" by Hawley, "My Rose" by Loud, "Could I" by Tosti, and by special request, "Annie Laurie."

Mr. Jethro Warner, who during the summer took the part or Jack Rackstraw in "Pinafore," sang a tenor solo "Dreams" by Strelezskie and responded to an encore.

Mr. Sturtevant of Somerville played piano solos, prelude from "The Sunken Bell" by Lachaume, and "Romanze" by Schumann, and with Miss Hunting, the piano duets, Mendelssohn's overture "Ruy Blas" and his "Songs without words," parts 12 and 20.

All of the music was heartily enjoyed and the performers kindly responded to encores.

There was a large attendance. In the discussion following the reading of Mr. Wilde's paper, the lack of ventilation in the Atlantic school-house and the over crowding of children in the various rooms were touched upon, and expression was given to the importance of the activity of the public spirit of the citizens of Atlantic in correcting the ill-conditions at present existing.

The Literary committee were: Mrs. C. A. Neily and Mr. Herbert D. Gearwar; the Music committee, Mrs. E. C. Bellows and Mr. Charles A. Hall, and the Introduction committee, Mrs. William G. Gassett and Mr. Walter P. Hill. The committee on sale of calendars were Mrs. Ellis Smith and Mrs. W. H. Warren.

—Dividends paid in American minera industries this year amount to $114,000,000, or 5 per cent. on $2,000,000,000. Copper furnished 62 per cent. of the showing, but Missouri's zinc and lead are having a boom.

A REMEDY FOR THE GRIPPE.

A remedy recommended for patients afflicted with the Grippe is KEMP'S BALSAM, which is especially adapted for the throat and lungs. Don't wait for the first symptoms of the disease! get a bottle today and keep it for use the moment it is needed. If neglected the grippe has a tendency to bring on pneumonia. KEMP'S BALSAM prevents this by keeping the cough loose and the lungs free from inflammation. All druggists sell KEMP'S BALSAM at 25c. and 50c.

JINGLES AND JESTS.

A Legend of the Ice Rink.

'Twas a giddy young crowd on the rink that night,
And the hall was a beauteous splash of light,
And so Nick dropped in on the strict Q. T.
As he said to himself: "Just the place for me!
I will join the throng, and I'll flitter about,
And there's never a chance that they find me out.
At all these young people I'll have a good look,
And I'll enter 'em up in my visitor's book!
I really must take in some more of these sights;
This will surely be one of my busiest nights!"

So Nick got himself fixed with a new pair of skates
And started at once cutting big threes and eights,
And a nice little girl who was dressed like a charm
Couldn't bear to say "No" when he offered his arm,
And things were proceeding remarkably slick
For the very choice programme of Wily Old Nick,
When his skate all at once struck a kink in the ice,
And Nicholas dropped on his back in a trice,
And quicker than you could Jack Robinson say
Old Nick gave his show most completely away,
For the ice all around him steamed, fizzled and hissed
Till Old Nick was completely enveloped in mist,
For the place he had come from was pretty hot stuff,
And he hadn't had time to get cooled off enough.

And the next time that Nick goes prospecting at rinks
He'll train up beforehand on cooling ice drinks.

They Didn't Know What to Do.

The Rational Argument was especially of the Deadly Parallel.

"You are extremely superficial!" sneered the Rational Argument.

"Certainly, I don't claim to be a parallelopipedon!" retorted the Deadly Parallel humorously.

But inasmuch as this pleasantry supposed a knowledge of geometrical forms, laughter was not general throughout political circles.—Detroit Journal.

His Limit.

"I'm getting along," said Mr. Cumrox. "I'm progressing slowly, but surely."

"In what?"

"Culture. I've been traveling around with Mrs. C. and the girls until I'm getting right refined. But there's one thing I don't think I'll achieve. I don't believe I'll ever be able to go into an antique store and tell the difference between bric-a-brac and junk."—Washington Star.

Second Thoughts.

On second thoughts, fair Rosalind,
You now regret that you declined
My ardent suit and scorned my plea
With that unmerciful decree
Who for your love in vain had pined.

Long obdurate, no longer me
You look on so disdainfully;
Some pity in your breast you find
On second thoughts.

Alas, had you but thus turned kind
Ere those wounds healed you left behind,
Ere from your toils I struggled free
When fairer Maud I chanced to see,
But now—I, too, have changed my mind
On second thoughts.
—Punch.

Fishers of Men.

Now, as for me, I took no serious view of matrimony.

"Marry him by all means!" I exclaimed merrily. "For a cod, you know!"

My sister shivered. She was a far more earnest, thoughtful girl than I.

"He is too obviously a lobster for that!" she answered sadly.

Of course I did not much mind, one way or the other.—Detroit Journal.

REPUBLICANS IN LINE

On the Vote Confirming the Nomination of Harlan

A LETTER WRITTEN IN 1877

Brought to the Surface by Pettigrew, and Warm Colloquy Ensues Between Chandler and Hawley — But Little Business Transacted In Open Session

Washington, Jan. 22.—The nomination of James S. Harlan to be attorney general of Porto Rico was confirmed in executive session yesterday. The final vote was reached after a discussion of more than two hours' duration, and when announced stood 43 to 21 in favor of confirmation. All the Republicans cast their votes in the affirmative, and two or three Democrats voted with them.

The session was characterized by a spirited colloquy between Senators Chandler and Hawley, in which bitter personal language was used. The controversy between the two grew out of a letter written by Senator Chandler in 1877, and which was read by Senator Pettigrew, concerning the controversy over the Hayes-Tilden election, in which reference was made to the part taken by Senator Hawley and Justice Harlan (neither then occupying his present place), in the settlement of the Louisiana controversy of that time.

In that letter Mr. Chandler stated that a commission, of which those two men were members, had been sent to Louisiana by President Hayes to destroy the Packard state government. This having been accomplished, Mr. Chandler said the president then undertook to "recognize" the members of the commission, giving Mr. Harlan the appointment of an associate justice and offering General Hawley the place of director of the Paris exposition, which the latter had declined, Mr. Chandler said, because of the inadequacy of the salary.

When this point in the article was reached, Mr. Hawley interrupted in a somewhat excited manner, to denounce the statement as false, which he did in very emphatic and plain language. Mr. Chandler replied in like manner, saying that the article had been prepared by him 23 years ago; that it had never been contradicted, and that he still stood by it. He added that the whole subject was ancient history, and announced his intention to vote for Mr. Harlan's confirmation.

Senators Spooner, Mason and Lindsay made brief speeches. Mr. Mason spoke of Mr. Harlan's qualifications as a lawyer and said that he did not think anything less of Justice Harlan because of his attachment for his family.

Mr. Spooner said there appeared to be no opposition except that of Senator Pettigrew. Referring to Senator Spooner's remarks, Mr. Pettigrew quoted extracts from editorials in a number of newspapers in reprobation of Mr. Harlan's nomination. He said he had no purpose to delay a vote and when he concluded the ballot was taken.

No business of special importance was transacted by the senate yesterday in open session. An executive session of more than two hours' duration was held, and 66 pages of the legislative, executive and judicial appropriation bill were completed before adjournment.

The house, after devoting some time to District of Columbia business, passed a number of bills under suspension of the rules. They were to provide a home for aged and infirm colored people; to establish a branch soldiers' home at Johnson City, Tenn., and to increase the salary of the commissioner of education of Porto Rico. A bill to give citizens of foreign countries the right to sue in the court of claims for indemnity for alleged injuries was disastrously beaten.

Marshal Has Charge of Neely

Washington, Jan. 22.—The state department has issued a warrant for the surrender to the Cuban authorities of C. F. W. Neely. This warrant will be placed in the hands of United States Marshal Henkel of the southern district of New York, who is now the custodian of Neely, and he will see that Neely is safely delivered to the judicial authorities at Havana.

Trial Must Be Again Postponed

Washington, Jan. 22.—The torpedo boat Bailey has come to grief again. While lying at Newport, about to undertake her trial trip, the intense cold froze the water in her boilers, bursting a number of the tubes. The boat has been sent back to New York for repairs and the trial board has been ordered home.

Colonel Harrison at the White House

Washington, Jan. 22.—Among the visitors at the White House yesterday was Colonel Russell Harrison, son of the former president, whose exit from the army has been widely commented upon. He called to pay his respects to Secretary Cortelyou and his old friends in the executive mansion.

Wisconsin Won't Be "Hoodooed"

Washington, Jan. 22.—The battleship Wisconsin will not be commissioned on Friday. Secretary Long yesterday gave an order for the ship to be put in commission on Monday, Feb. 4.

Weary of Existence

Providence, Jan. 22.—Alfred E. Dadd, a baker, killed himself by hanging yesterday. No cause is known for his act. Joseph Brooks attempted to end his life yesterday by drinking a solution of morphine. Despondency due to ill health, he claimed, was the cause. He will recover.

LOOKED LIKE PAT CROWE

Suspicious Stranger Aboard Michigan May Have Been Much-Wanted Man

Boston, Jan. 22.—When the steamer Michigan, which arrived yesterday from Liverpool, last sailed from this port, on Dec. 22, she carried a suspicious stranger, who, although well dressed, shipped at the last moment as a cattle tender. He gave the name of Robert Lambert. The police were notified that this man, who looked like Pat Crowe of Omaha, was on the steamer, but too late to intercept him. A cablegram was sent to Liverpool, and after the Michagan reached Liverpool word came back that the officers had found no one who answered Crowe's appearance. The officers and crew of the steamer yesterday were shown Crowe's picture, and many of them were certain that the man Lambert was Crowe. The bunkmate of Lambert is certain that the latter and Crowe were identical. Lambert acted queerly toward the end of the trip, giving away the good clothes he wore on coming aboard. He told the deck officer at Liverpool that he wished to get ashore quietly, as he was afraid friends would see him. He seemed to have plenty of money, and in conversation told much about the west in an impersonal way.

WILL DO HIS BEST

Senator Hoar Expresses Gratitude For His Re-election by the Legislature

Boston, Jan. 22.—The principal feature of yesterday's session of the legislature was the reading in each chamber of a letter from Senator Hoar, extending to the members his personal thanks for the honor they did him in choosing him as one of the commonwealth's representatives in the national senate.

Senator Hoar's letter to the house said: "I can only promise to do my best to establish in national legislation the great principles on which Massachusetts has acted from the beginning, and which have given glory to her whole history. I know how feeble and imperfect will be the best I can do. I can accomplish little alone. The humblest instrumentality may accomplish much with the support of the people of the commonwealth and of Him who has been with the people of the commonwealth from the beginning."

To the senate Senator Hoar said: "I cannot express in words my sense of the debt I owe to our noble and beloved state. All I can do is to resolve to do my best, however imperfectly, to represent the great principles to which she has been faithful from the beginning, and of the result of which she is the noblest example in human history."

Strikers and Sheriff's Posse In Conflict

Earlington, Ky., Jan. 22.—Union miners, 150 strong, started on a march from Boxton to Carbondale mines, to stop the non-union men at work there. On the way a sheriff's posse of five men attempted to stop them and a shot was fired by the marchers. A fusillade followed, the miners retreating. One of their number was killed and another died of his wounds.

Room For Great Improvement

New York, Jan. 22.—President Lewis of the state board of health made an examination of the state prison at Sing Sing yesterday. He said the buildings were out of date, the cells were too small; no sunlight ever entered most of them, and the whole prison was full of sewer gas and unhealthy.

Killed Himself In Bed

Woonsocket, R. I., Jan. 22.—John Davis sent a 32-calibre bullet through his heart yesterday, because of despondency, as a result of an incurable malady. He was forced to give up a position he had held for 35 years. He concealed a rifle in the bedclothes and pressed the trigger with his toes.

A Startling Assertion

Brussels, Jan. 22.—According to The Petit Bleu, bubonic plague is raging among the British troops in Cape Colony, and many deaths that are attributed to enteric fever and dysentery are really due to plague.

Not Worried Over Venezuela

Berlin, Jan. 22.—The German foreign office shows no interest whatever in the reports regarding the situation in Venezuela, and considers the newspaper accounts of the difficulty exaggerated.

A GALLANT RESCUE

Life Savers Take Captain and Ten Men From a Wrecked Schooner

Vineyard Haven, Mass., Jan. 22.—Tug Storm King returned last evening from Nashawena island, and reported that the schooner George P. Davenport was fast breaking up by the heavy sea. Her decks had been washed out, and wreckage is strewn along the shore of the island.

The tug brings the additional news of the great bravery of the men of the crew of the Cuttyhunk life saving station in rescuing the crew of the schooner in their surf boat. The men were finally landed at Cuttyhunk island after four hours' of hard and steady pulling against the fierce southwest gale and terrible sea which threatened each moment to swamp the surfboat with all hands. The mate of the schooner, who refused to leave the vessel until she began to break up, was taken off by means of the breeches-buoy. The captain and entire crew of 10 men were brought here on the Storm King last night.

Little Boiler Does Big Damage

Lawrence, Mass., Jan. 22.—A water boiler exploded in the bakery of J. F. Marin last night, and damaged the building to the amount of $1000. The bakery is on the ground floor of a four story tenement, and there were several narrow escapes among the people living in the house. The force of the explosion blew out a portion of the brick partition walls, destroyed nearly every pane of glass in the building, ripped great sheets of plastering and tore down brick piers. Flying bricks struck adjacent houses and made big holes in the woodwork. The tank which exploded was a small copper affair.

One Wife Too Many

Lowell, Mass., Jan. 22.—Henry Tatro, aged about 45, was arrested here Saturday on a warrant sworn out by his wife, charging non-support of herself and children. At the time of his arrest another wife, who was Carrie S Hunter, and whom he married over a year ago, was visiting in Providence When she returned last night she was told that the man she had married had a wife and eight children, and that he had been sentenced to four months in jail. She was almost prostrateed at the news of his arrest.

Belgian Hare Has Come to Stay

Boston, Jan. 22.—The report of the Massachusetts commissioners on inland fisheries and game devotes considerable space to the Belgian hare. The report says: "The Belgian hare has come to stay, for it is excellent food, is easily raised, and constitutes a fine farm product. It is the intention of the commission to stock the state with these rabbits. They are as hardy as our own native wild rabbits, and far more prolific."

Queer Prank of Nature

Littleton, N. H., Jan. 22.—At 10 o'clock Sunday morning, after a brief cold snap, the thermometer fell rapidly in this vicinity, until it reached 40 below zero. During Sunday night the cold snap was broken, and with an equal rapidity the mercury rose until at noon yesterday it registered 40 above zero, a change of 80 degrees in less than 24 hours. A warm drizzling rain has set in, playing havoc with the snow and ice.

City Fathers Under Suspicion

Lawrence, Mass., Jan. 22.—District Officer Hammond last night left summons with several members of the city government and some of the policemen recently appointed to appear before the grand jury at Salem. Rumors connecting two members of the board of aldermen with receipts of money from the new appointees on the police force have been in circulation, and the grand jury is to probe these reports.

Alleged Robbers In Custody

Lynn, Mass., Jan. 22.—Charles Cassault, 18 years old, and David Lisk, 20, are under arrest, charged with an attempt to rob W. G. Brown. Brown caught the men in his room. Both men have served time in the Concord reformatory. They did not secure anything in Brown's room, although Brown had $700 in a trunk there.

Crew Badly Frostbitten

Chatham, Mass., Jan. 22.—The four-masted schooner Electa Bailey is ashore off Harding's beach. Captain Eldredge and the crew of the Chatham life saving station went to the assistance of the crew, and took them off. The men were all badly frostbitten. It is believed that the vessel will go to pieces.

Mill May Have to Shut Down

Norwich, Conn., Jan. 22.—Fifty spinners employed by the Slater Mill company went out on a strike yesterday, and, unless they return at once, it is said the mill will be compelled to shut down, throwing 500 hands out of employment. The cause of the strike is a 12 percent cut in wages.

Whirled to Death

Dover, N. H., Jan. 22.—Joseph Anderson, employed by the Cocheco Manufacturing company, was caught by a revolving shaft and dashed against the ceiling, both legs being broken in several places and his skull crushed. He lived only 20 minutes after the accident.

Family Has Strayed Away

Boston, Jan. 22.—Alder Coopersmith of Worcester is searching for Mrs. Coopersmith and her seven children, who arrived in Boston Saturday from Roumania. They were passed by the immigrant inspectors, but they have not been located.

Centerboard Project Abandoned

Boston, Jan. 22.—The Hanley centreboard yacht as a competitor in the trial races of cup defenders will not be built. The reason given is that the men who intended to be sponsors for the boat were divided as to the matter of material.

A child three years of age died of drunkenness the other day in New York City. The parents said they had given the child whisky to strengthen him. In their absence he found a bottle of whisky and drank from it, until he fell over in a drunken stupor, from which the physician could not arouse him. That is only one case in several cases of baby drunkards recently noted. The important fact is that alcoholic stimulants quickly develop the alcoholic habit in children. This fact is just as true when the alcohol is disguised as a medicine, a "sarsaparilla" or other "compound." So many medicines contain alcohol, to the same extent that it is contained in beer or whisky, that parents should be cautious what medicines they give their children.

There is absolutely no alcohol, whisky or intoxicant in any form in Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, neither does it contain opium or any other narcotic. It is a blood-making and body-building medicine. It does not make flabby flesh but good, firm flesh and muscle. It is pleasant to the taste.

"My four year old daughter had suffered from indigestion and bowel trouble from birth," writes Mrs. Lizzie Aten, of Baldmount, Lackawanna Co., Pa. "The treatment given her by home doctors afforded but temporary relief. Last February she was taken with severe pain in the bowels, followed by violent vomiting. She experienced difficulty in passing urine, which, when cool, deposited a milky sediment. I became alarmed from her symptoms and wrote to the World's Dispensary Medical Association of Buffalo, N. Y., receiving in reply a letter, advising the use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, together with a special medicine which they sent. This line of treatment I followed for about two months, at the end of which time my child was enjoying good health, and she has had no severe attack of indigestion since."

Free. Dr. Pierce's Medical Adviser, 1008 pages, in paper covers, is sent free on receipt of 21 one-cent stamps to defray expense of mailing only. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

DEATH OF GREAT BRITIAN'S RULER.

Queen Victoria Passes Away on Anniversary of Her Father's Death.

The End Was Peaceful, Surrounded by Almost Every Descendant of Her Line.

Gloom in London and Sympathy Expressed by the Other Governments of the World.

London, Jan. 23.—The death of Queen Victoria at 6:30 yesterday afternoon at Osborne House has plunged the nation into mourning. The passing away of the sovereign has caused a shock throughout the entire country.

The greatest event in the memory of this generation, the most stupendous change in existing conditions that could possibly be imagined, has taken place quietly, almost gently, upon the anniversary of the death of Queen Victoria's father, the Duke of Kent.

The end of this career, never equalled by any woman in the world's history, came in a simply furnished room in Osborne House. This most respected of women lay in a great four-posted bed, and made a shrunken atom, whose aged face and figure were a cruel mockery of the fair girl, who, in 1837, began to rule over England.

Around her were gathered almost every descendant of her line. Well within view of the dying eyes there hung a portrait of the prince consort. It was he who designed the room and every part of the castle. In scarcely audible tones the white-haired bishop of Winchester prayed beside her. With bowed heads the ruler of the German empire, and the man who is now King of England, the woman who has succeeded to the title of queen, the princes and princesses, and those of less than royal designation listened to the bishop's ceaseless prayer.

Six o'clock passed. The bishop continued his intercession. The women of this royal family sobbed faintly and the men shuffled uneasily.

At exactly 6:30, Sir James Reid held up his hand, and the people in the room know that England had lost her queen. The bishop pronounced the benediction.

The queen passed away quite peacefully. She suffered no pain. Those who were now mourners went to their rooms. A few minutes later the inevitable element of materialism stepped into that pathetic chapter of international history, for the court ladies went busily to work ordering their mourning from London.

The wheels of the world were jarred when the announcement came, but in this place at Osborne everything pursued the usual course. Down in the kitchen they were cooking a huge dinner for an assemblage the like of which has seldom been known in England, and the dinner preparations proceeded just as if nothing had happened.

The body of Queen Victoria will probably be taken to Windsor Saturday. The coffin arrived last night from London.

The Prince of Wales was very much affected when the doctors at last informed him that his mother had breathed her last. Emperor William, himself deeply affected, did his best to administer to the comfort of his stricken uncle, whose new dignity he was the first to acknowledge.

From all parts of the world there are still pouring into Cowes messages of condolence. They come from crowned heads, millionaires, tradesmen and paupers, and are variously addressed to the Prince of Wales and the King of England.

The record of the last days of the reign of Victoria is not easy to tell. The representative of The Associated Press was the only correspondent admitted to Osborne House and his interview with Sir Arthur Bigge, private secretary to the late queen, was the only official statement that had been given out.

For several weeks the queen had been failing. On Monday week she summoned Lord Roberts and asked him some very searching questions regarding the war in South Africa. On Tuesday she went for a drive, but was visibly affected. On Wednesday she suffered a paralytic strike, accompanied by intense physical weakness. It was her first illness in all her 81 years, and she would not admit it. Then her condition grew so serious that, against her wishes, the family were summoned. When they arrived her reason had practically succumbed to paralysis and weakness.

The events of the last few days, described in the bulletins, are too fresh to need repetition. At the lodge gates the watchers waited nervously. Suddenly along the drive from the house came a horseman who cried: "The queen is dead," as he dashed through the crowd.

Then down the hillside rushed a myriad of messengers, passing the fateful bulletin from one to another. Soon the surrounding country knew that a king ruled over Great Britain.

Gloom In London

London, Jan. 23.—Silence, gloom and darkness characterized London last night, and this depression of the public mind is likely to continue for many days to come.

Americans who have passed through great national calamities may recall the crepe-draped buildings and the national hush, but they can ill-conceive since the death of Lincoln any such expression of gloom as has already fallen on the United Kingdom.

Early in the evening, from St. Paul's Westminster Abbey and other churches bells were solemnly tolling or ringing muffled bells. In some places the shops were already exhibiting signs of mourning.

All the morning papers appear in heavy mourning borders, with editorials eulogistic of the dead queen and recalling the leading events and characteristics of her reign. Very few political references as to the future are made.

The Times publishes a two-column article under the caption "Loyal Appreciation of the New King," in which it says: "If anything can in some measure console the nation for the irreparable loss it has sustained, it is the well-founded conviction that the queen has left behind her a worthy successor, who may be trusted to walk in her footsteps."

Shortly before midnight an official announcement was issued calling parliament to assemble at 4 o'clock this afternoon, to enable members of the house of lords and house of commons to take oath of allegiance to King Edward VII.

The privy council will meet in London today, and the proclamation of the king will occur thereafter at all places required by custom. The king will come to London to preside over the council.

The News In Paris

Paris, Jan. 23.—The news of the death of Queen Victoria was known in Paris at 8 o'clock last evening through special editions of the evening papers Great sympathy was expressed on all sides. The chambers announced that the next session would be adjourned as a sign of mourning.

Condolence From Italy

Rome, Jan. 23.—A most painful impression was produced by the receipt of the news of Queen Victoria's death King Victor Emmanuel, Queen Helen the pope and members of the government immediately telegraphed condolence.

ARE YOU PLUMP
or thin? red cheeks or sallow life in your step or feel your weight? are you comfortable or hoping to be so next spring or summer or fall?
One is health; the other is not-quite health.
This condition of not-quite health can be turned into health with Scott's emulsion of cod-liver oil.
It is a pity to get in the habit of thinking of health as a thing to be hoped for; why not go for it now!
There is only one way to make strength: by food. You want appetite first, then food. The emulsion will give you food-rest, to master your food with.
We'll send you a little to try, if you like.

REGRET AND SYMPATHY

Congress Takes Action Upon the Death of Queen Victoria

MESSAGE TO THE KING

From President McKinley, Expressing the Sorrow of Americans — Half Masting of National Ensign For the First Time on Death of a Monarch

Washington, Jan. 23.—The house yesterday adopted a resolution expressing profound regret and sympathy for the English people on account of the death of Queen Victoria. The president was requested to communicate the expression to the British government, and as a further mark of respect to the memory of the queen, the house immediately adjourned.

The action of the house was particularly impressive in that the resolution was adopted without a word of dissent or debate.

The announcement of the death of Queen Victoria conveyed unofficially to the senate was recognized by that body in the adoption of an appropriate resolution which was ordered to be engrossed and forwarded to the prime minister of Great Britain.

Four days of anxiety had, in a large measure, prepared official Washington for the news which was flashed across the cable of the death of the Queen of England. So it happened that all things that could could be decently done in anticipation of the sad end had been disposed of, and all was in readiness for the execution of the formalities indispensable to such events.

While the cabinet was in session during the noon hour, the president and his advisers were in receipt of all news which came from Osborne House. When the end came, later in the afternoon, it found appropriate measures of condolence framed and orders ready for the carrying out of the usual formalities. The half-masting of the national ensign was an unusual tribute to the memory of the deceased sovereign. It is said that this has been done rarely on the occasion of the funeral of some great world's ruler, but never before in the case of the death of a monarch.

The actual dispatch of the messages from the president to the new King of England, and from Secretary Hay to Ambassador Choate was delayed only long enough to receive the physicians' statement announcing the demise of the queen, and they were sent forward at once and copies were furnished the press.

The rapidity with which the news spread was remarkable, and within a short time the members of the diplomatic body here began to appear at the British embassy bearing cards of condolence.

President McKinley has sent the following message of condolence to King Edward VII:

"I have received with profound sorrow the lamentable tidings of the death of her majesty the queen. Allow me, sir, to offer my sympathy, and that of the American people, in your personal bereavement and in the loss Great Britain has suffered in the death of its venerable and illustrious sovereign, whose noble life and beneficent influences have promoted the peace and won the affection of the world."

Cardinal Gibbons Grieved

Baltimore, Jan. 23.—Cardinal Gibbons, upon being informed of the death of the queen, plainly showed that the intelligence caused him profound sorrow and regret. "The death of Queen Victoria, he said, "will send a thrill of sorrow throughout the world. The domestic virtues of the woman whose long and eventful reign will be ever memorable in the annals of England and her character will command the love of her subjects and the admiration of the civilized world."

Victoria Like Washington

New York, Jan. 23.—Bishop Potter of the Protestant Episcopal diocese of New York laid emphasis on the fact that Victoria was like Washington because it was the nobility of her character, rather than any conspicuous gifts of intellect, that has won for her such universal esteem. They had been the most successful rulers of their respective nations, and yet neither had possessed any such shining talents as those with which Napoleon dazzled the world.

White Settlers In Danger

Muskogee, I. T., Jan. 23.—United States Marshal Bennett has requested that federal troops be sent to his assistance in an endeavor to suppress warring Creeks. The whites are arming for self-protection. The Creeks are said to be lead by Crazy Snake, from whom the band takes its name.

Kruger Has Left The Hague

Utrecht, Jan. 23.—Mr. Kruger arrived here at noon yesterday. He was received by a committee at the railway station, and was warmly cheered. As he drove to his hotel a choir sang patriotic songs. Mr. Kruger thanked the crowd outside and the people sang the Transvaal national hymn.

Held For German Officials

New York, Jan. 23.—Robert Roth was arrested in Wechawken yesterday on a charge of forgery, which he is said to have committed in Germany. Roth came to this country on Dec. 15.

Good Afternoon.

Although Queen Victoria died at 6.30 P. M. Tuesday (Great Britain time) the Quincy Ledger was not premature in reporting her death before 2.30 P. M. the same day. It was only one of the times when the Ledger was up-to-date.

The election of a Wollaston man as president of the Republican City Committee for 1901, is probably only the initial proceeding for the nomination of a Wollaston man next fall for Mayor. Ward Five has abundant material, but whether it will be Bryant, De Normandie, Pinkham or Freeman is an open question.

The introduction of the order relating to the Warren avenue bridge thus early in the year renders the passing of the bill doubly sure. Some ten years ago a petition was prepared by a prominent Wollaston man who tried to secure the bridge. At last the time has come when Wollaston must have the bridge. Let us hope the people can use it by next summer.

Very few residents of Quincy can recall when there was a change on the throne of Great Britain even though they be 70 or 80 years of age. Many may now live to see several changes, life is so uncertain. All had respect and reverence for Queen Victoria and wished her long life and it was her privilege to live and rule beyond the three score years and ten. Now that the mantle has fallen on Edward VII, more familiary known as the Prince of Wales, he will probably rise to the occasion, and perform the duties as a statesman. We doubt if his lot will be happier in the future than in the past.

Drift of Opinion.

☞ France proposes a law to prohibit newspaper reports of duels. This is on the theory that men will not care to avenge their insulted honor unless they can read about it in the newspapers. Very likely the theory is a good one.—New Bedford Standard.

☞ The winter will be regarded with delight by street superintendents who want to make a record of running their departments cheaply. The absence of snow has benefitted them and has added to the dividends of the street car companies.—Brockton Enterprise.

☞ It is perfectly certain that, despite the disrepute which surrounds the calling of a usurer, men like the late Sam Lewis of London are a good deal better than most of their clients. Lewis, for example, loaned money to titled nincompoops who were not his equals in intelligence, in modesty or in character. In a way he was a financier of great ability. His bequests to charity show that he had generous impulses. Could as much be said of the aristocratic spendthrifts and dead beats who borrowed money from him?—Chicago Chronicle.

☞ "The use of the title, "Hon." was never more common than it is today. There is no law for the use of the title, "Hon." in this country, and any character that custom may have given it in the past has been so abused as to make it ridiculous and useless. The title belongs distinctively to England, and as one of the rights of the reigning sovereign, and why Americans should ape it passes beyond comprehension. The title of "Hon." in the United States is simply twaddle and todying. It has no place in the ethics of the United States. It should go. Plain "Mr." is good enough for any American citizen.—Brockton Times.

☞ The Portland Express speaks of the increasing importance of the board of trade of that city. How would it do for a committee of Haverhill business men to take a trip to Portland and discover the formula of the organization in existence there? Somehow or other the importance of boards of trade in Haverhill has been most notable at their beginnings and thereafter has exhibited a remarkable decreasing tendency.—Haverhill Gazette.

☞ Our people are soon to be brought face to face with the problem of railway ownership or control. The attitude of a majority of them toward it will be determined by the action of a few capitalists owning or controlling the railway groups. The Populists and several small political parties have for some years in their platforms called for government ownership of all the lines. This consolidation movement may induce the Democratic party to take the same position. At all events, the question is one about which there will be much argument in the near future. The masters of the American railway industry should be wise enough to be content with the profits derived from the economies of consolidation; if they shall abuse their power by increasing rates and shall discriminate unjustly in charges, government ownership will speedily become a live issue in politics.—The Independent.

THE TRIAL TRIP.

Lightship No. 72 Stands Rough Water Better Than Guests.

For five hours yesterday, says the Herald, the Fore River Engine Company of Quincy demonstrated that it could turn out a fine lightship. It was during the builders' trial trip of the new lightship 72, designated for the Diamond shoal, off Cape Hatteras.

The new boat left the company's works at Quincy Point at 11 o'clock A. M. and steamed down the harbor and out into Massachusetts bay and into as rough a sea as is generally met with below in a northeast wind.

The lighting apparatus was started as soon as she got out into the channel, and was kept in operation until her return to her berth at the works at 4.30 o'clock.

She attained a speed of between eight and nine knots in the rough sea, and her electric lighting plant worked perfectly.

The officials of the company and Lighthouse Constructor Killalea were the recipients of many compliments on the satisfactory showing made by the boat.

Capt. J. H. Gray, Pilot Mark Wight and Chief Engineer G. H. Varney had charge of the boat.

Those on board were: President Thomas A. Watson, Manager F. O. Wellington, Superintendents of Construction Charles B. Edwards and Frank W. Grogan of the Fore River Engine Company, Superintendent of Construction James Killalea of the lighthouse board, J.W. Lynch of the metropolitan water board, Chief Engineer Laing of the Prince George, Chief Engineer J. H. Moore, of the lighthouse tender Mayflower, F. A. Barbey of the Krupp steel works of Germany, C. H. Carter of the Cambria Steel Company, Former Representative John B. Whalen of Weymouth, Commissioner Charles F. Knowlton of Quincy, Charles A. Howland, Charles A. Howland, Jr., Frank F. Crane and Ex Commodore Henry M. Faxon.

It is said the guests had the pleasure of feeding the fishes.

A NEW PRESIDENT

Mr. Jameson at Head of Republican Committee.

Close Vote But It Was Made Unanimous.

The Treasurer Able to Report All Bills Paid and a Balance.

The annual meeting of the Republican City Committee of 1901 was held Tuesday evening at the rooms of the Granite Manufacturers' Association. A meeting of the committee of 1900 was also held half an hour previous. At the former meeting, Treasurer Jameson made his report, in which it appeared that the total receipts of the year were $1,358.57, and the expenditures $1,354.99, leaving a balance of $3.58 and no outstanding debts. The report was accepted.

PRESIDENT JAMESON.

The meeting of the 1901 committee was then called to order by John McKnight, the secretary. The roll call showed twenty-five present and all wards but Ward Six represented.

Councilman W. T. Spargo nominated John P. Bigelow for chairman, and Councilman E. F. De Normandie nominated Edward E. Jameson.

Messrs. E. W. Newcomb, T. H. Burke and E. F. DeNormandie were appointed a committee on ballots.

The result of the vote for chairman was as follows:

Whole number of votes	25
Necessary for choice	13
Edward E. Jameson had	13
John P. Bigelow had	12

Mr. Jameson was declared elected.

Upon motion of Mr. Spargo the choice was made unanimous.

Mr. Jameson in accepting the office said he was surprised that his name had been used, as he had not been a candidate. He considered it an honor and would do his best to perform the duties of the office.

Other officers elected were:
Secretary, John McKnight.
Vice President, John R. Graham.
Treasurer, Isaac M. Holt.
Finance Committee, Eugene H. Sprague, Archibald F. Macleod and Eugene C. Hultman.

Mr. McKnight thanked the committee for the unanimous election. He hoped his efforts in the future would be appreciated as in the past. His relations with the committee had always been most cordial and he hoped they would continue so

Mr. Graham, accepted the honor conferred upon him, and would try to faithfully perform the duties of the office.

Mr. Holt thanked the committee for his election and he would endeavor to attend to his duty.

The rules of the committee of 1900 were adopted as the rules of the committee of 1901.

Chairman Jameson took the floor and moved that in the call for the next meeting, notice be given that action would be taken on the following by-laws.

"No member of the Republican ward or city committee shall assist in the election of any candidate for office other than the regular Republican nominee."

Adjourned.

Edward E. Jameson, the new chairman of the Republican City Committee has been a resident of Wollaston since 1891, and has always been identified with the Republican party and one of its most earnest workers, and always let it be said to his credit, for the party nominee. He served as Republican Councilman from Ward Five in the Councils of 1898 and 1899 and during these years his voice was often heard in debate. He always desired the fullest information upon all matters before voting and asked many questions to bring out that information. He has been a member of the Ward Five Republican committee for several years and in 1900 served as treasurer of the City Committee.

He was born in Lexington, Feb. 25, 1866, and was educated in the public schools of Waltham. For several years he was in business with his father a manufacturer of mineral waters. Later he entered the employ of the Campbell Printing Press Co. of New York, traveling for five years in Canada, New York, New Jersey, Delaware, Maryland, and Virginia, afterwards having charge of that company's offices in St. Louis and Boston. In 1893 he entered the employ of the Whitlock Machine Co., and is now manager of that company's New England business. He is also a stockholder and director of the company. He is a Mason, Knights Templar, Odd Fellow, Red Men and a member of the Royal Arcanum.

The Ward Five Republican Committee has organized with E. E. Jameson as chairman and Eugene F. DeNormandie as secretary and treasurer.

The Ward Four Republican Committee has organized with Tobias H. Burke as chairman and Nathan Ames as secretary and treasurer.

The Ward One Republican Committee has organized with Isaac M. Holt as chairman and William T. Isaac as secretary and treasurer.

EVANS IN CONGRESS.

But Finds More of Interest in the Washington Monument.

Washington, Jan. 21.

Editors of the Daily Ledger:

This has been a fine day. No need of an overcoat or rubbers. This morning I went with my daugher, Mrs. Curtis, as my guide, to the Washington monument which is over 555 feet high. I walked to about half its height 290 feet. On my way up I found hundreds of tablets or stones with inscriptions in the wall, contributed by the states and cities of our country and many from foreign lands. When I reached 170 feet I saw a Quincy granite tablet representing Charlestown and the Bunker Hill monument cut and polished; others from Salem, Roxbury and New Bedford, Mass.

Coming to 240 feet I noticed a tablet of a very dark polished granite, which I admired on account of the place it represented. It has this inscription on it, "Fy ngwlad, Fy laith, Fy nghenedl, Wales, Cymro ano byth." If you want to know what that means, ask any Welshman.

At 280 feet there is another grand tablet of Quincy granite representing the Boston first regiment of artillery.

I went from the monument to the Engraving building where all our paper money, stamps of all kinds, Government bonds, etc., are made. It was interesting to watch how money is made from the blank paper to the finished negotiable bill.

I went to Congress today, but there wasn't anything of interest, as they only discussed in regard to the district of Columbia. There was not one Republican from Massachusetts on the floor, and only one Democrat.

Sewer Board in No Hurry to Give Up Duties.

Mayor Hall Said to Have Modified Letter.

Willing to Hand Over the Sections Already Completed.

In an interview with Mr. Shenkelberger, Secretary of the Board, it was learned that at the meeting of the Board of Sewerage Commissioners held Tuesday evening, to consider the request of the Mayor for the transfer of the Sewer department to the Commissioner of Public Works, it appeared to be the unanimous opinion of the board that the sewerage system had not been substantially completed, as stipulated in the legislative act establishing the board, and that the Mayor should not have called for the transfer of the department at this time. The commissioners were also of the opinion that it would not be for the best interests of the city to comply with the Mayor's request.

Before any action had been taken on the matter a communication was received from the Mayor, to the effect that inasmuch as he understood that there was some hesitancy about complying with his request of 28 December, he would modify the same and now asked for the transfer to the Commissioner of Public Works only of the sewers already completed. This being strictly within his rights under the act, the board will accede to and will take further action at its next meeting.

Mayor Hall when seen this morning in regard to the transfer of the Sewer department to the Commissioner of Public Works, said he had heard nothing from the meeting of Tuesday evening. When asked if he had modified his original request he was astonished and replied that he had nothing to say.

The Mayor in his appointments this week made no nomination for Sewer Commissioner to succeed Frederick L. Jones, whose term expires Monday, Feb. 4. There can be no "hold-over" on a continuous board, as the remainder of the board, a majority, have already been appointed and qualified, as provided in the next to the last paragraph of Section 34 of the City charter. With Mr. Jones off the board, it might be more difficult than at present to get a majority vote (in this case an unanimous vote) either in favor or against transfer.

E. Chauncy Bumpus.

Quincy people were shocked and surprised this morning to hear of the death Tuesday night at the Boston City Hospital of E. Chauncy Bumpus, son of Everett C. Bumpus of Goffe street, caused from heart trouble following an attack of the grip. Mr. Bumpus attended the Greenleaf school, Adams Academy, and was graduated from Harvard in 1898, and last year from the law school. Since being admitted to the Massachusetts bar he has practiced law in his father's office and had every prospect of making a most successful lawyer.

Although blind, Mr. Bumpus enjoyed himself, in attending church, parties and theatre. Many hardly thought it possible he could not see, he got around so well.

His father, brothers and sister have the sympathy of their many Quincy relatives and friends. Mrs. Bumpus, Miss Christine Bumpus and the younger boys are at present in Europe.

A REMEDY FOR THE GRIPPE.

A remedy recommended for patients afflicted with the Grippe is KEMP'S BALSAM, which is especially adapted for the throat and lungs. Don't wait for the first symptoms of the disease! get a bottle today and keep it for use the moment it is needed. If neglected the grippe has a tendency to bring on pneumonia. KEMP'S BALSAM prevents this by keeping the cough loose and the lungs free from inflammation. All druggists sell KEMP'S BALSAM at 25c. and 50c.

CHICAGO'S SALT EPIDEMIC.

Physicians Afraid That Widespread Scurvy Will Result.

Physicians throughout Chicago are complaining that an "epidemic of salt" has broken loose, says the New York Tribune. They say these days when they are called to attend a patient about the first thing they hear is, "Doctor, don't you think an injection of salt would cure me?" This is attributed to the recent agitation of the merits of salt solution as given publicity through the scientific discoveries recently made by Professor Jacques Loeb of the University of Chicago and Dr. W. Byron Coakley, a North Side physician. Dr. Elmer E. Prescott of the West Side recently expressed the opinion that so prevalent had become the idea that salt would cure any ailment that if the public was not put on its guard the whole city would be suffering from scurvy inside of six months. Dr. Prescott said:

"The public must understand that the normal saline solution is not to be used in chronic cases, but only in emergency work. There is no factor in the surgeon's operating list so important as the sterilized salt solution. There is not a surgeon today and there has hardly been one for years but has had his salt solution ever at his side. I would as soon do a major operation without my artery forceps or ligatures for tying an artery as to start a surgical case without my salt ready for an emergency. I was called some days ago to attend a woman suffering from scurvy. She had been complaining for several years from a nervous trouble, had become depressed and despondent, when some time ago she read of the discovery of the elixir of life in the common table salt or chloride of sodium. She immediately began putting salt into her drinking water, eating salted meats and using it in every conceivable way in the hope that the alleged discovery would prove a panacea to her ills. She began to get weak rapidly, her limbs became very tender to the touch, and finally the hemorrhagic stage of the disease made its appearance under the skin and in the connective tissues of the body, having very much the appearance of the black and blue spots following an injury. If the public is not put upon its guard, it will not be six months before half the town will be suffering from malnutrition anæmia, scurvy and the other allied symptoms of blood impoverishment."

SOLAR MOTOR IN OPERATION

Sun's Heat Concentrated on Boiler by 1,788 Mirrors.

A device for the utilization of the sun's heat in creating power has just been put into operation at South Pasadena, near Los Angeles, which, it is believed, will result in almost incalculable value to the industries of southern California, says the St. Louis Globe-Democrat. The device comprises a funnel shaped reflector 33½ feet in diameter at the top and 15 feet at the bottom and containing on its surface 1,788 mirrors. This reflector is set on two fixed supports in such manner that it may follow the movement of the sun and is kept in focus by clockwork. The adjustment of the mirrors is such that the sun's rays are concentrated on a boiler tubular in form 13½ feet in length, with a capacity of 100 gallons of water and eight feet additional for steam space. The concentration of light and heat is capable of raising the temperature to several thousand degrees, but the boiler is prevented from being superheated by the water within it, which is brought to 350 or 400 degrees. The engine is fed and the supply of water in the boiler is maintained automatically, and the only attention necessary to operate the machine is to adjust the mirror to focus and set in operation in the morning. This motor is pumping from a large underground tank at the rate of 1,400 gallons a minute.

The solar motor is expected to operate at all seasons of the year and in all climes, the only condition necessary being sunshine. In experiments made at Denver last year the best results were obtained when the pond from which the water was taken was frozen over. A number of men, managers of irrigation enterprises and others from different parts of the west, have come to Los Angeles to study the device. It is believed it will be of great value, especially in this region, where fuel is costly and sunshine plentiful.

STONE AGE RELICS.

Some Interesting Discoveries Made In Germany.

A large number of neolithic flint implements have recently been found in the neighborhood of Unterisling, near Ratisbon, and according to Professor Steinmetz they are of such great historical importance that they will probably serve to upset existing theories. Another very interesting discovery was made not long ago in Alsace, where an immense ax head more than a foot long and four inches broad was found, says the London Standard. It is apparently composed of light gray and clear green jade and was discovered in the vicinity of Drusenheim.

The most remarkable thing about it is that in the middle of one of the broad sides of the ax head is the representation of a human form skillfully chased and still clearly visible. The figure is 15 centimeters long and 7 broad, and the lines are from one-half to one centimeter deep. The face is large and long, with clearly perceptible eyes, nose, mouth and chin, but without ears or hair. The arms and hands are extended, as if in prayer. There are parallel lines crossed by others similar to those on the neolithic burial urns found near the left bank of the Rhine, now preserved at Worms. The figure now discovered is believed to be meant to represent some Phallic deity from Egypt or Phœnicia.

PHONETIC EXPERIMENTS

Interesting Researches at Yale In Science of Speech.

PROF. SCRIPTURE'S DEDUCTIONS.

The "Personal Equation" In Speech Discovered by an Intricate Machine Set Up In the University's Psychological Laboratory—Record of a New Yorker Differs From Yankee Talk.

Professor E. W. Scripture, as the result of three years' experiments at the Yale psychological laboratory in New Haven, has made discoveries which promise to change in many respects the present theories with reference to the human voice and its culture, says the New York Evening Sun. Professor Scripture's deductions are:

First.—The mouth does not act as a resonator for the overtones of the vocal cords.

Second.—In English verse, time, pitch and intensity are elements of the rhythm. English verse contains not only stress, but has also the element of time, like classic verse.

The first discovery will cause a change of theories and practice in the teaching of vocal music. The second will effect a change in the study of Anglo-Saxon and perhaps in the construction of English verse of the future.

The experiments are the first of this kind in America. They include not only experiments in speech sounds, as material for language, but also in the changes resulting from different mental conditions, such as fatigue, emotion and the like, as well as the study of rhythm in relation to music. The preliminary work on the elementary sounds of language led to so many novelties and showed so clearly the need of revising many common ideas of the nature of speech that the original problem was postponed until the most valuable fact in regard to spoken sounds could be collected by means of speech measurements made from the gramophone.

"Who killed cock robin?" is the verse that Professor Scripture hit upon for most of his experiments. One after another he has induced persons from diverse parts of the country and with numerous eccentricities of speech to put the question to his machines. The gramophone records were connected, when reproducing the sounds, with a sensitive needle, which made a record of the vibrations upon a long strip of smoked paper. The gramophones were run at a uniform speed of 70 revolutions a minute.

By a system of measurements devised at the laboratory Professor Scripture has found it possible to determine invariably the "personal equation" in the recitation of any speaker. William F. Hooley of New York, speaking with the normal American accent for New York and vicinity, put the interrogative stanza to the professor's machine, and it was found that there was a marked difference between the effect of his recitation on the vibrating needle and that of a representative Connecticut Yankee. The Boston man and the Chicago man, the down easter and the man from way down south, each have distinctive differences in their way of asking "Who killed cock robin?" which Professor Scripture has reduced to record by his machine.

The theory that the spoken vowels do not differ essentially from those which are sung has been held for centuries. The theory is that the difference between sung and spoken articulation lies exclusively in the fact that the pitch, intensity and duration of the syllables, or, more accurately, the vowels, are governed in song by melody and rhythm and in speech by the laws of emphasis, according to meaning and arrangement. According to this theory, there could be no difference between song and speech in a single vowel.

The recent experiments at Yale have completely overthrown this view. They show that the voice tones of spoken vowels are seldom of constant pitch. Some are constant in pitch, some fluctuate, while some rise and fall in various simple or complicated ways. There is a typical tone for the whole discourse which occurs in a majority of the vowels, while the others have quite different tones. Many of the vowels are fairly constant, but many others vary. It is indeed just these changes and fluctuations in pitch and also in intensity that enable the voice to express the character of thought.

When words are sung, they lose most of their character. Speech is capable of expressing by its modulations the various emotions and conditions of the individual, but the singer has few resources at his command. The mouth, under the influence of the vocal cords, superimposes another tone than the one sung. The superimposed tone is seldom or never an overtone of the vocal cords. The old theory asserted that the mouth acts as a resonator and strengthens the overtones of the vocal cords.

Since the publication of his deductions of experimental phonetics, Professor Scripture has been challenged to debates and has been violently contradicted by teachers of the voice. He has just instituted a new series of experiments to establish to an even greater degree of accuracy his deductions.

A Boy Orator.

Santa Monica, Cal., boasts of a boy orator in the person of Harold Stanford Kiggens, the seven year old son of J. T. Kiggins, attorney at law of that place. When Jack Cooke, the boy preacher, was in Santa Monica, Harold recited at one of his meetings, and many then expressed the opinion that he was a greater wonder than Jack. One evening later he made a speech at the big Anti-Saloon meeting in the Methodist church at Santa Monica that will not soon be forgotten by those who were fortunate enough to hear him. The boy's ability as a speaker does not seem to be the result of training. He appears to comprehend and feel every word he utters, and oratory comes naturally. His father and mother are both good speakers, his mother being one of the best platform talkers among the club women of California. His mother says that she and her husband do not consider the boy a wonder in any sense of the word. She says he is a perfectly normal wide-awake American boy.—American Boy.

APPLIED FOR LODGING

John McLain Was Sheltered In the Home of a Sheriff

IS PLACED UNDER ARREST

Admits That He Worked For Mosher, Who Was Murdered at Gorham, but Denies Complicity In the Crime—Did Not Know That He Was Wanted

Skowhegan, Me., Jan. 23.—A man who says that his name is John McLain, and whose identity tallies almost completely with that of the John McLain, said to be wanted for complicity in the Mosher murder at Gorham on the night of Jan. 11, is held by Sheriff Pennell for the Portland officers.

The man called at the house of Sheriff Pennell Monday night and asked for lodging. The sheriff was away from home at the time, so Mrs. Pennell gave the stranger a lodging in the basement of the residence. Yesterday Sheriff Pennell was struck by the resemblance of the man to the one wanted for the murder of Mosher. The stranger said his name is John McLain, that he knew Mosher, and had worked for him in haying time several years ago. He also said that he had been at the Mosher place during the past summer but not at work there. The scars on the face and the clothing said to have been worn by the McLain wanted are all here, but there is one mark of identification lacking, that of the tatted marks said to have been on McLain's hand.

The man held here said that he heard of the murder and that a white man an a negro had been mixed up in the case, but he had not heard that he was wanted by the authorities or that he was even suspected in the case.

He stated to Sheriff Pennell and County Attorney Gower last evening that he was sure that he was at Rumford Centre on the night that the crime was committed. He answers questions readily enough at times, and again was somewhat reticent about his whereabouts since the night of the murder. He told the sheriff that he had been all through Franklin county, and had worked his way down to Madison, from which place he came here Monday. Sheriff Pennell visited Madison yesterday and found that McLain had passed Sunday at that place.

The prisoner says that his name is John McLain; that he was born in Moncton, N. B., 45 years ago, and has been in the United States 18 years.

Officers on Wrong Track

Portland, Me., Jan. 23.—The authorities here are willing to acknowledge that if McLain can prove that he was at Rumford Centre on the night the murder was committed at Gorham, as he says he was, that they have been on the wrong track, and that they will be at a loss to track the white man who was the negro's confederate in the killing of Clifford Mosher. With John McLain eliminated from this case, there will not be a ghost of a chance of ever catching the real murderer. McLain's story is generally believed here to be true.

SIBUTU AND COGAYAN

Added to Our Possessions In the East at the Cost of $100,000

Washington, Jan. 23.—The senate yesterday in executive session ratified the treaty with Spain for the acquisition of the islands of Sibutu and Cogayan of the Philippine group, at a cost of $100,000. There was no vote to spare, a two-thirds vote being needed, and the voting standing 38 to 19. In the debate preceding the ratification a number of senators manifested a disposition to oppose the further acquisition of Oriental territory.

Senators Lodge and Chandler spoke in behalf of the treaty, and Senators Bacon, Money and Pettigrew in opposition. Senator Lodge said that the treaty was made necessary by the failure to include the islands of Sibutu and Cagayon in the original negotiations by which we acquired the Philippines, and that it was necessary to acquire them to prevent Germany from getting possession of them. The opposition senators replied that the land was worthless to the United States, and added that as there are no harbors on the coast of any of them there could be no object in any other country taking them. They also charged that as the islands are in the Sulu group their population is polygamous, and also that slavery exists on the islands.

Before the announcement of the death of the queen, the house passed the bills to send to the court of claims the claims of Cramp & Sons, amounting to something over $1,300,000, for alleged damage due the company on account of the failure of the government to promptly furnish armor plate and other material used in the construction of the New York, Columbia, Massachusetts and Indiana. Cincinnati Loses Opera House

Cincinnati, Jan. 23.—The Grand Opera House was burned last night, nothing but the walls being left standing. At the time the fire was discovered below the stage the house was packed, and the performance was in progress. All got out of the building safely. E. H. Southern's company was playing an engagement at the theatre. The loss will be about $300,000.

Transport Out of Her Course

Washington, Jan. 23.—The transport McClellan left Manzanillo on the 18th instant for Gibarara, evidently having been forced out of her course by a storm. According to information received at the war department the vessel was seen off Gibarara Monday morning, making signals, and afterwards stood out at sea. No apprehension is felt as to her safety.

Another Expedition Talked Of

Tientsin, Jan. 23.—It is reported in German circles that, unless the peace negotiations are satisfactorily considered early next month, a strong international expedition will be organized to bring Emperor Kwang-Su and Prince Tuan to Pekin.

Shipwrecked Seamen Landed

New York, Jan. 23.—Steamer Antilla, from Nassau, brought seven shipwrecked seamen, the crew of the American schooner James G. Beecher, which was wrecked on Little Bahama Dec. 23, and became a total loss.

HIS PROMISE

New King Will Walk In Mother's Footsteps

Acklowledgment of Allegiance by Privy Council

Public Announcement of Access to the Throne

London, Jan. 24.—An extraordinary issue of The Gazette this morning appears with black borders and announces the death of Queen Victoria, adding:

"The event has caused one universal feeling of regret and sorrow to her late majesty's faithful subjects, to whom she was endeared by the deep interest in their welfare, which she invariably manifested, as well as by many signal virtues which marked and adorned her character."

KING EDWARD VII.

The public proclamation of King Edward VII's accession to the throne was read this morning.

When the king arrived at St. James palace yesterday a great gathering of privy councillors had taken up positions in the throne room—cabinet ministers, peers, commoners, bishops, judges, the lord mayor, etc., including the Duke of York, the Duke of Connaught and lesser members of the royal family. A host of the most prominent personages in the land were there to receive the king's formal oath, binding him to govern the kingdom according to its laws and customs, and hear him assume the title of King Edward VII of Great Britain and Ireland and Emperor of India.

The lord chancellor, Lord Salisbury, administered the oath to the king and afterwards to the various members of the council. Commencing with the lords in council they took their respective oaths of allegiance, and they then passed in turn before his majesty, as at a levee, except that each paused and kissed hands before passing out of the chamber.

The king wore a military uniform. His brief speech was delivered with great earnestness and was extemporaneous. He said:

"Your Royal Highnesses, My Lords and Gentlemen: This is the most painful occasion on which I shall ever be called upon to address you. My first and melancholy duty is to announce to you the death of my beloved mother, the queen, and I know how deeply you and the whole nation, and, I think I may say, the whole world, sympathizes with me in the irreparable loss we have all sustained.

"I need hardly say that my constant endeavor will be always to walk in her footsteps. In undertaking the heavy load now devolved upon me, I am fully determined to be a constitutional sovereign in the strictest sense of the word, and, so long as there is breath in my body, to work for the good and amelioration of my people.

"I have resolved to be known by the name of Edward, which has been borne by six of my ancestors. In doing so I do not undervalue the name of Albert, which I inherit from my ever-to-be-lamented, great and wise father, who, by universal consent is, I think deservedly, known by the name of 'Albert the Good,' and I desire that his name should stand alone.

"In conclusion, I trust to parliament and the nation to support me in the arduous duties which now devolve upon me by inheritance, and to which I am determined to devote my whole strength during the remainder of my life."

The proclamation of the accession of his majesty was signed by the princes present, the archbishop of Canterbury, the lord chancellor, the lord mayor and the other representatives of the city of London. At 4:30 p. m. the artillery began firing salutes in St. James' park to signal King Edward's accession to the throne.

The house of lords and the house of commons assembled at 4 o'clock and took the oath of allegiance to the new sovereign.

The morning papers record with the greatest satisfaction that the king has taken the title of King Edward VII. They are filled from end to end with descriptions of yesterday's ceremonies and accounts of the reception of the news of the death and the accession throughout the United Kingdom and in all parts of the world. King Edward's first speech is also applauded.

King Edward returned to Osborne immediately after the proclamation ceremony today.

The opening of the new reign will involve many changes in social England. All royal functions will be suspended during the next six months, and there will be no London season. Ultimately, London will be a gayer capital than ever before, for the king, after his coronation, is expected to live at Buckingham palace and conduct court functions with unwonted splendor.

The Duke of York will not necessarily become the Prince of Wales now that his father has ascended the throne. The principality was granted by Edward to his son, afterward Edward II, and his heirs, kings of England. Consequently, when the Prince of Wales succeeds to the throne his princely title merges in his sovereignty. The new sovereign's eldest son is still the Duke of York, but he becomes also the Duke of Cornwall, this title descending to him from his father. It is generally assumed that the king will immediately confer his principality upon him, as it is within his royal prerogative to do so.

Death Due to Senile Decay

Cowes, Isle of Wight, Jan. 24.—At 11 o'clock this morning the members of the royal family gathered around the body of the late queen, which lies in a simple coffin in the Chapelle Ardente, festooned with red and white hangings. The bishop of Winchester read a portion of the service for the dead.

The coffin rests upon a specially erected platform, draped with royal purple, the feet lying to the east. The head faces the simple altar. Over the features is a thin veil.

For a few hours after the conclusion of this service the public was admitted to the room and allowed to view the remains of the dead sovereign. The body will rest there until Sunday, and it is possible that no removal will occur for 10 days.

The correspondent of the Associated Press learns that the cause of the queen's death, as officially given, was "senile decay." The doctors have adopted this expression as most suitable and truthful. They attribute the paralysis which attacked her as secondary to the general weakness of her condition, nor is it considered advisable, for reasons of state, to intimate that her intellect was dimmed by this particular form of the disease.

Nothing has been decided at Osborne House regarding the funeral arrangements or the removal of the body, and nothing will be until the arrival of the king. The palace is painfully quiet. There have been no arrivals or departures since the king left. It is reported that Emperor William will remain in the Isle of Wight until the removal of the body, even if this should be postponed for a fortnight.

The Queen's Millions

London, Jan. 24.—The queen's private wealth yielded an income of about $1,000,000 yearly, exclusive of $1,725,000 annually from parliament. Her private income, as gathered from easily available sources, was from the Dutchy of Lancaster, upwards of $250,000; from 37,372 acres in the queen's other estates, $125,000; from London realty, supposedly, $50,000; in consols and other securities, between 15 and 20 millions. She inherited nearly all the prince consort's estate of $3,000,000, 40 years ago, and $2,500,000, in 1852, from John C. Neild, the son of a rich jeweler. The queen was a clear-headed business woman, and had the best financial advice. In 1881 she bought property for $300,000, the market value of which is now reckoned to be $850,000. She had estates in several German principalities, and inherited a beautiful villa at Baden from Princess Hohenlohe. The queen's laces are worth an enormous sum. These and her private jewels, gold plate and pictures, etc., are estimated to value more than $5,000,000.

Strike Ends at Crescent Shipyards

New York, Jan. 24.—The strike at the Crescent shipyards of Lewis Nixon at Elizabethport, N. J., has ended in what is practically a victory for the strikers. The men demanded that the non-union ship carpenters should either join the union or be dismissed.

MRS. NATION'S CRUSADE

Giving Cold Shivers to Kansas Saloon Keepers

HATCHET AGAIN AT WORK

Latest Performance at Enterprise, Where All the Glassware In an Establishment Is Wrecked—Abilene Is Now Preparing For a Visitation

Enterprise, Kan., Jan. 24.—An early train brought Mrs. Carrie Nation here yesterday, and she began her crusade by demolishing a saloon and delivering a street lecture. Early in the morning a temperance meeting was held, attended by many women.

Mrs. Nation then, armed with a hatchet, started for the business part of the town, accompanied by several other leaders in the W. C. T. U. They went to Schilling's place, where Mrs. Nation smashed the glass out of the door frames and went in. She then smashed a big mirror, chopped gashes in the bar and broke all the glasses and bottles on the shelves. Then she went to the refrigerator and took out cases of beer, which she dropped on the floor, breaking each bottle left solid after the fall.

This she kept up until Marshal Benham entered and ordered her out. She complied, and, calling her companions, gave the marshal a tongue lashing in the presence of the crowd.

She then went to the other saloon, but it was barricaded and offered no plate glass for her to attack. The marshal refused to allow her to chop down the doors, and she finally went home.

She said she had only begun her work and expects to clean out many more places. It is reported that she will move on Abilene today, and the saloon keepers are preparing for her coming.

Last night, as Mrs. Nation was lecturing on the streets of Enterprise, Mrs. Schilling, the wife of the saloon keeper whose place of business was demolished, met Mrs. Nation and saying: "I've got you now," struck her twice in the face. A slight gash was cut over the eye, and it bled profusely.

Mrs. Nation went to a neighboring house and had her eye bandaged and continued her lecture on the street. The crowd was too noisy, and she adjourned to a church near by, where she made a long address.

Scouts on the Lookout

Abilene, Kan., Jan. 24.—The news that Mrs. Nation was within six miles on her saloon-smashing crusade and had demolished one at Enterprise caused a state of panic at the Abilene dispensaries. One of the saloons has prepared a heavy oak barricade, to be used when the scouts announce the approach of Mrs. Nation. There is no doubt that she will be here today.

Alvord's New Occupation

Sing Sing, Jan. 24.—C. L. Alvord, Jr., came out of his quarantine quarters in prison yesterday. An expert convict worker gave him his first lesson in the art of making mats. The bulky exbank teller soon applied himself to the work, and evidently intended to make the best of the situation. The rough material used in the manufacture of mats had its effect on Alvord's soft hands, and he seemed glad when his first day's work of hard labor for the state was finished. He received for his supper a tin pail of tea and a piece of gingerbread.

Strike Impending at Havana

Havana, Jan. 24.—The Havana draymen threaten to go on strike, owing to the adoption of an ordinance limiting a load to 2000 pounds, and compelling them to use wider tires. They complain also of unnecessary police restrictions with regard to the use of certain streets. There is a possibility that the owners of all vehicles will join in the movement.

Bad Creek In Custody

Muskogee, I. T., Jan. 24.—John Coffee, one of the Creek band which has been terrorizing peaceable Indians, was arrested yesterday by Marshal Bennett. It is feared that his friends will attempt to rescue him, and the feeling of insecurity has been intensified. Dick King, a full-blood Creek, has been killed because of his refusal to join the marauders.

Nothing New In Trunk Mystery

New York, Jan. 24.—Michael Barceline and Tony Gaborine, who were arrested on suspicion of having in their possession a watch believed to be the property of Meyer Weisbard, whose dead body was found in a trunk, were discharged from custody yesterday. There is nothing new in the trunk murder mystery.

Good Afternoon.

The pedestrian needed sand to walk in safety today.

The death of a good woman, whether she wore the crown of royalty or the crown of love, touches all mankind. The world weeps with England in memory of Victoria, the good queen.

The fact that Chairman Jones of the Sewer Board cannot hold over until a successor is appointed, may hasten an agreement on the transfer of the system before the term of Mr. Jones expires, Feb. 4.

The action of the City Council in electing a new member on the Board of Managers of the Woodward Fund, shows that some changes are desired along the lines of the recent report of the committee on investigation.

There are several other men who feel quite as badly over this poor country as Mr. Cleveland does, but they will not mingle their tears with his. He always does his weeping on a pedestal too high to be reached by other men.

It was news to many Quincy people that there are tablets of Quincy granite in the Washington monument at the capital, but Mr. Evans knows Quincy granite when he sees it. The City of Presidents should have a tablet of its own in this monument which is annually visited by thousands.

Chairman Freeman of the Finance Committee of the City Council seems determined that his measure relative to the purchase of supplies for the city shall not be killed without a fight. It was passed by the Council of 1900 but vetoed after the Council adjourned sine die. His new amendment is worded somewhat differently.

The change in our commerce with the world in the short period of ten years is the most remarkable ever experienced by any country. According to official figures, our imports increased less than 1 per cent. during that period, having been $823,397,726 in 1890, and $829,052,116 in 1900, while during the same period our exports increased 72.4 per cent., having been $857,502,548 in 1890 and $1,478,050,854 in 1900.

Drift of Opinion.

☞ If the West Point cadets stop hazing now, why could not they do so before? And if there was no hazing before, how can a practice be stopped which did not exsist?—Manchester Union.

☞ Love your children and they will love you in spite of all your shortcomings; keep faith with them and they will keep faith with you; treat them courteously and they will be courteous; maintain high ideals and they will follow them; make them the centre of your life and they will make you the centre of their lives.—Caroline Leslie Field in the February Ladies' Home Journal.

Unity Club Program.

The subject for the meeting of the Wollaston Unity club Friday evening of this week will be "Education," and Mr. Charles E. Finch will have charge of the program.

Miss Fannie Johnson will speak of "Physical Culture."

Miss Annie Kennedy, of "Nature Study," and Mr. C. F. Merrick, of "Manual Training."

Miss Mary V. Hastings will sing.

OVER 100 COUPLES.

In the Grand March at St. John's Coffee Party.

The third annual coffee party of the Sunday School of St. John's church was held Wednesday evening at Music hall. The affair was the largest party ever held by the school, fully five hundred being present. So great was the crush that the dancing was carried on with difficulty during the early part of the evening.

In addition to those present from Quincy, there was also many from West Quincy, Wollaston, Atlantic and Braintree. Rev. Francis A. Friguglietti, Rev. Julian E. Johnstone the director of the Sunday School, Rev. John P. Cuffe, Rev. John J. Casey and Rev. Patrick A. Hayes were among those present.

The stage was prettily decorated; along the front was a greenery of potted plants, while a number of electric lights and large banquet lamps with colored shades harmonized the effect. Behind this bower of green was the orchestra, which gave a concert until 8.30 when the grand march was started.

The grand march was led by Floor Director Timothy J. Carey and Miss Nellie Griffin. The floor was in charge of Mr. Carey, assisted by a corps of seventy-five aids. The march was participated in by nearly 100 couples and was of nearly an hour's duration.

At midnight a supper was served in the annex by the teachers of the Sunday School.

Boynton Railway.

A hearing was given at the State House, Wednesday, on the petition of E. Moody Boynton for extension of the time in which to build the Boston, Quincy & Fall River bicycle railway. Mr. Boynton appeared and asked for an extension of two years and thought that within that time the 52 miles of railway already located would be built.

To the chairman of the committee on street railways Mr. Boynton said that the only reason the road had not been built was because he had not been able to raise the money. He had sufficient money subscribed to build about one-half of the first section of 20 miles. He declined, however, to give to the committee in public the exact amount raised or the names of the subscribers.

He was willing to give this information privately.

J. H. Benton, Jr., of the New York New Haven & Hartford railroad, spoke in opposition.

Funeral of Mr. Russell.

The funeral services of Mr. Frank Henry Russell were held at his home, Marion street, Wollaston, Wednesday, at 12 o'clock. The services were conducted by Rev. Edward A. Chase of the Congregational church, who spoke feelingly of the upright character and sterling integrity of his deceased neighbor. The floral tributes were many and beautiful. The rooms were filled with friends who had known Mr. Russell for many years. The clerks of his store were present in a body, also many members of the John Hancock lodge, of which Mr. Russell was a member. The pall-bearers were Messrs. Brown, West, Macfarland and Backus. The interment was at Evergreen Cemetery, Brighton.

Granite Cutter Killed.

A dispatch of Wednesday from Barre to the Globe says: Frank Granger, a middle-aged granite cutter, was instantly killed at Burke Bros.' stone shed, late this afternoon, by a block of granite tipping over on him. It was a large capstone which was standing on end.

Granger was bent over, placing some blocks on which to rest the stone. A companion, noticing that the stone was about to fall, shouted to Granger, but too late, and the latter was caught across the body between the stone and the blocking and was crushed to death. He leaves a widow and four small children.

A REMEDY FOR THE GRIPPE.

A remedy recommended for patients afflicted with the Grippe is KEMP'S BALSAM, which is especially adapted for the throat and lungs. Don't wait for the first symptoms of the disease! get a bottle today and keep it for use the moment it is needed. If neglected the grippe has a tendency to bring on pneumonia. KEMP'S BALSAM prevents this by keeping the cough loose and the lungs free from inflammation. All druggists sell KEMP'S BALSAM at 25c. and 50c.

THE COUNTY LEAGUE.

Merrymount Wins at Bowling and Billiards.

The Merrymount club entertained the Commonwealth teams in the Norfolk County League Wednesday evening, and had things pretty much their own way. At bowling they won three games and led on good totals by 72 points.

At billiards DeNormandie found a worthy rival in Linton, but succeeded in downing him, while Dewson had an easy thing.

At pool it was close and each club had a winner and loser, and the Commonwealth won on totals by 2 points.

At whist both the visiting teams won, one by 4 points and one by 2 points.

A RUMMAGE SALE.

One Man Who Is Well Aware When He Has Enough.

"There," exclaimed the big north side resident as he threw himself into his favorite chair, "we're home, and we're going to stay right here! No more skirmishing from pillar to post by me or mine. I've had a bountiful sufficiency and am not a bit like the man who does not know when he has had enough. All this traveling for health or pleasure is sentimentality and doesn't pay 10 cents on the dollar."

"Must have reached that conclusion on your last trip," volunteered the practical neighbor who had dropped in. "You used to be awful keen for getting away from the city and enjoying relaxation, as you put it."

"Ever attend a rummage sale?" with apparent irrelevancy. "No? Well, I'll tell you. It's a church institution. They ask everybody to donate things. There's no limit. Anything from lace handkerchiefs to stone crushers. Then they go out and collect these things, fix up a sort of a department store, and a lot of pretty, persuasive women buttonhole the visitors inveigled in and make them buy.

"I've been down to my old home, you know, and they had a rummage sale. It opened the night I was to leave, so I went down with my wife and little daughter, prepared to go from there to the train. There was no checkroom, so we stored our traps and calamities in different booths. I bought liberally, for a fellow likes to make a good showing when among the people with whom he grew up.

"When it came time to leave, what do you think? They had sold my overcoat and hat, my wife's cloak and fur collar, the little girl's jacket and all the smaller bundles. I made a gallant attempt to laugh it off, with a hope that they would make good for the loot, but not a cent; not an attempt to recover the plunder. They thought it a good joke. I remained over and stocked up, but from this on I'm staying right here at home."—Detroit Free Press.

No Gratitude to Waste.

"Take my seat, madam."

She took it.

About ten minutes later she remarked:

"Thank you, sir. I would have said it sooner, but the last man I thanked for giving me his seat in a crowded car had only got up because he wanted to get off the car, and I felt that he had won my gratitude under false pretenses. I made up my mind I wasn't going to let it happen again."

"Don't mention it, ma'am," responded the man clinging to the strap. "I merely got up because I was tired of sitting."

And nothing more was said until the conductor hoarsely bawled out:

"Division street!"—Chicago Tribune.

NOTE OF WARNING.

Henry H. Faxon Sounds It in Behalf of Youth.

Henry H. Faxon already has a task for the new Chief of Police, to watch the pool rooms. Mr. Faxon in a note of warning in behalf of the youth of our city, says:

Editors of the Ledger:

Having received many complaints concerning the evil effects of the Billiard, Pool Rooms and Bowling Alleys in Quincy, I have recently made personal visits to these places and find that the conditions existing today are substantially the same as described in a circular I once issued There are eighteen such licenses now granted in this city, and, if the law was strictly enforced against these resorts, many would be compelled to close their doors. I do not condemn the playing of billiards and pool for amusement, but the public environments of these games are not conducive to the morals of our young men. Henry H. Faxon.

At a meeting of the Quincy Point Cribbage Club held Monday evening an addition was made to the membership, and arrangements made for a cribbage and pool tournament. The present champions are W. F. Cain and J. C. Gillespie, they have held their post of honor for nearly a year.

The funeral services of the late Mrs. Ann Everson were held Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock from her late residence on Cottage street and attended by many relatives and friends. Rev. M. C. Ward of the Universalist church was the officiating clergyman. The interment was at Mt. Wollaston.

Did the Reporter Tumble?

The man who runs the sand wagon at Wollaston should be reminded that Hancock street is in the Ward and extends nearly to the High school.

There have been a number of times this winter when it was necessary to sand the sidewalks, but not once ha an ounce of sand been sprinkled over the smooth ice that covers the sidewalks near the Ward one line. On the Ward One side the sidewalks are sanded as far as Butler road but pedestrians who venture beyond have to go on the catch as catch can principle with the chances ten to one that the sidewalk will fly up and catch you on the back of the head.

A large number of school children use these sidewalks every day and would appreciate the sand. This morning, for instance, and for that matter all day, it was as much as ones life was worth to get along without falling. Just send that wagon along so that people can see how it looks.

ICE HARVESTING.

Crowds Attracted Daily to See Work---Improvements Made.

The housing of ice is always an interesting operation, and the announcement that such work is in progress is enough to send a crowd of the curious to watch the fun, though they may have seen the same thing time and time again, there is always the novelty of newness about it that attracts.

The Meadow Brook Ice Co. commenced work housing their crop Tuesday and its pond near the old pumping station at South Quincy has been the mecca toward which a crowd has wandered each day.

Their ice this year is not as thick as they would like, but the uncertainty of the weather made it seem wise to cut what they have. Their ice measures from nine to ten inches in thickness and is so clear as to be almost transparent.

The pond is first marked off into 44 inch squares by a horse and plow. Then a gang with saws go over it, and saw it out into strips containing anywhere from fifteen to twenty cakes of the above size each of which weighs from 600 to 700 pounds. These strips are then floated, like a raft toward the house and guided into a run. A man with a long handled chisel stands here and as the strips pass him he breaks them into cakes. They are then passed along and guided onto an endless chain elevator which carries them to the run leading to the house.

As the ice reaches the run desired it drops gently onto an eliptical spring and starts down the incline by its own weight. This eliptical spring is a new idea, used for the first time this year, and is a good one. Heretofore the cakes, when leaving the elevator dropped heavily into the run, and the result was that many of the cakes were broken. The spring prevents this, and a large saving results.

From the main runs are branches leading into the several houses, and as the huge cakes come along they are guided into first one and then the other of the houses and packed away. By this process three houses are being filled at the same time.

Wednesday when the writer visited the pond the cakes were being sent into the houses at the rate of eight a minute. It is impossible, however, to keep this speed up but Mr. Patch, who was present personally superintending the job, said he was putting in from 1,000 to 1,500 tons a day.

At that rate six days will be required to fill the houses.

The ice is of excellent quality and it looks as though this necessary summer luxury would be more plentiful than last year.

It takes quite a gang of men and boys and there was employed Wednesday in the vicinity of seventy-five. One would naturally think it was a cold job but it is not. They have to hustle and find it plenty warm enough on the runs and in the houses to lay aside coats.

A Tribute.

The Journal in its C. A. P. column has the following kind words for Chauncey Bumpus of Quincy:

"The death of Everett C. Bumpus, Jr., comes as a shock not only to Quincy, and to the men at Harvard who knew him personally, but to a great number of men who for the past seven years had seen him about the yard, the Law School, and Memorial—a familiar and courageous figure. In spite of his total blindness, he went through the college and the Law School, and was this fall admitted to the Bar. Though he never saw the page of a book, he mastered its contents; and though he never saw the yard he loved so well, he walked its paths often alone, unguided, and was always cheerful and cheery.

"And to his friends, who knew him as Chauncey, who have sat in his room while he played his piano with the keen touch of the blind, who have shared in his ambition to win for himself legal standing in spite of his great handicap, his loss comes with peculiar pathos. But this fall admitted to the Bar, and starting his career in his father's office with all prospect of success after his hard, heroic fight—to be thus untimely thwarted and the reward snatched away by the Great Jester is one of life's mysteries."

ON THE POTOMAC.

Mr. John Evans is Taking It All In at Washington.

Washington, D. C., January 22d.

Editors of the Daily Ledger:

Today I took the steamer down the historic Potomac. We passed the home of Robert E. Lee, the United States arsenal, famous as a spot where Messrs. Surratt, Payne, Atzerodt, and Herold were executed for the part they took in the assassination of Lincoln, also the Potomac Park containing more than 1,000 acres reclaimed from the channel of the Potomac by the United States government. We also went by Alexandria the first capitol of Virginia; the Marshall house, where Col. Ellsworth was shot by that rebel Jackson, on their first raid from Arlington Heights. Also passed Fort Foote, Fort Washington and Fort Hunt, with their modern fortification. Then the United States fish commission, which distributes annually several million of shad in American waters. I was very much interested when we reached Mt. Vernon, the home of Washington, which is kept just the same as it was when "the Father of His Country" lived there. I will tell you all about it in my next letter. John Evans.

Fish and Game.

Deputies Charles N. Hunt and Otis Thayer of Quincy make the following annual report to the Commissioners on Inland Fisheries and Game:

"As heretofore, our work with two exceptions has been together. We can not say that the condition of fish, with the exception of smelts, is any better. There was a good run of smelts in the spring, and there have been good atches this fall. Game is doing well, and the sportsmen have had good shooting. We have been handicapped in our work on the water front for the want of a launch, and we would recommend a suitable one under the direction of the commission."

Last Night's Alarm.

The alarm from Box 37 at 8.25 Wednesday evening was for a slight fire in one of the new stores of Sutherland's block on Franklin street. The store is to be occupied by a Hebrew firm who were getting things in readiness to open. The store was lighted by a hanging lamp. The hook holding the lamp broke and it fell to the floor with a crash. Officer Nicol who was near swept the burning lamp into the street. The alarm was needless.

Owing to illness and various other causes, only about two hundred attended the parish supper of First church, Wednesday evening. The committee had spread a bounteous supper of cold meats, escalloped oysters, rolls, cake and coffee. After dinner remarks were made by Miss Randall, Rev. E. C. Butler and Rev. A. A. Ellsworth.

HEDIN ON CENTRAL ASIA.

Noted Explorer Tells of His Journey Last Summer.

Dr. Sven Hedin in a letter to the king of Sweden describes his journey last summer as the most successful part of the expedition, says the London Standard. He says:

"We left Tumen on July 20 to explore the unknown regions to the north of Tibet, covering the distance there and back to headquarters, 1,559 kilometers both ways, within 93 days through quite unknown regions. The route was mapped on 173 sheets. The caravan on leaving consisted of 6 followers, 7 camels, 12 horses, 16 sheep and a mule. An Afghan shikari died after 13 days' illness, and his body was carried by us through the desert. Three camels, nine horses and the mule died on the way from hard work. We were on a plateau 5,000 meters high almost the whole time. The caravan passed through the Arka-Tagh, the loftiest group of mountains in the world, consisting of four parallel chains. We reached the neighborhood of the sources of the Yang-tse-Kiang, when we were forced to return.

"Our scientific results are very important and may be divided into topographical inquiries, cartographical surveys, astronomical observations, meteorological measurements made three times a day and geological, hydrographical and other observations. Many hitherto quite unknown districts of Tibet have been successfully explored by the expedition. There are no such dangers to be encountered as in an enemy's country, but many others which completely prostrate men and animals. One of the worst enemies is the western gale, always accompanied by snow and hail, and we suffered a great deal from it. The cold on the plateau, which is as high as 17 Eiffel towers, is four degrees below zero F. It is impossible to warm oneself by walking quickly or to breathe, and one has the feeling that one must fall down. The country abounds in wild animals, especially antelopes, bears, wild sheep and goats, but no human beings were met during 84 days. Only an old inscription on a rock showed that Mongols had lived there in former times."

In conclusion Dr. Sven Hedin hoped that he would be able to make a four weeks' trip to the mountains near Temirlik, south of Lob Nor, in the beginning of November. He would then visit the Lob desert. In March he hopes to reach the small town of Barkhalik, west of Abdal, where half his caravan is to remain under the care of Cossacks.

AETHERIC SIGNALING.

Proposition to Connect the Farallone Islands With San Francisco.

The embassador of the United States at London has forwarded to the commissioner of navigation the proposition of a Britisher to connect by a mysterious telegraph the Farallone islands, 32 miles from the mainland at San Francisco, with the shore, says the Washington Star. The writer in his letter says:

"Possibly it might be difficult to place the Farallone islands in telegraphic communication with the shore, but I have the honor to inform your excellency that experiments have now been made with a system of aetheric signaling, devised by myself, which have proved eminently satisfactory.

"It is believed that this system of aetheric signaling will be found very advantageous in establishing communication with outlying places, where, on account of the run of tide or other obstacles, it is difficult to maintain cable connection, and we would be willing to enter into an arrangement with the government of the United States to connect the Farallone islands with the mainland by our system of aetheric signaling should the government so think fit.

"It is also understood that telegraphic communication was maintained for some time by the government of the United States with the Tatoosh islands, at the entrance to the strait of Juan de Fuca, but that this has had to be abandoned on account of the difficulties encountered, and we would be willing to enter into a similar arrangement to connect this island with the mainland by our system of aetheric signaling."

Emperor's Feeling When Peking Fell.

After the fall of Peking the emperor of China issued the following proclamation, according to The North China Herald: "The pictures of my ancestors have been burned. I shall refuse to hear any music for a month, schools shall shut down and affairs of state may go to thunder; the question with me is my ancestors. New pictures must be made, many sacrifices offered and great attention given."

THE ELEVATOR BOY.

HE TRIES TO BE A BROTHER TO HIS SISTER EVA.

Incidentally Brings Upon Himself Not Only Her Vengeance, but the Wrath of One of the Most Dignified Men In the Skyscraper.

[Copyright, 1900, by C. B. Lewis.]

The first I knew about Miss Murdock, the stenographer and typewriter, moving into our skyscraper was when she sent for me to call at room 23. I found her to be a woman of 40, and I couldn't say that she was a dream of loveliness. She was tall and thin and scrawny, and her hair would have been gray if she hadn't bleached it. She put on a sweet smile as she greeted me, and of course I smiled back.

"Sammis," she began, "I have sent for you to say that I am all alone—all alone in this big world."

"Yes'm."

"Which is a sad thing for a young girl, you know. I like the frank, honest look of your face, and I hear good reports of you, and I have sent for you to ask if you wouldn't be my little brother. I once had a brother about your age, and I thought the world of him, but he died in my arms. Shall we be brother and sister, Sammis?"

I told her I was willing. I think that every elevator boy who has the interest of his employer at heart is always willing to be a son or brother to any lonely hearted tenant.

"You are so good!" she said as she kissed me on the ear and then stood off and tried to blush and look coy. "I shall call you Brother Sammis, and you can call me Sister Eva, and we will both have more to live for. Brother Sammis, do you think your sister a bad looking girlie?"

"You are a dream!" I replied.

"And how old would you say I was?"

"About 20."

"Ah, you young rogue, you must not flatter me. I am almost 23. And how's my walk, Sammis?"

She rose up and wriggled and tiptoed back and forth and smiled and simpered, and I told her it was the gait of a 16-year-old maiden. She kissed me on the other ear for that, and then she told me in sisterly confidence that if any one sent her bouquets or invited her out to lunch I mustn't say anything about it. If any one asked her age, I was to put it at 23, and I was to be very, very discreet in case of little notes or theater tickets. Sister Eva and I had a thorough understanding before I left, but I can't say that I was highly delighted to have found her. She didn't offer me a cent extra to help pay off that mortgage on the widow's home, and it seemed as if all the benefits were to go her way. A week passed, and no one inquired her age, sent her bouquets or invited her to lunch. She sent for me to know the reason why, and I felt obliged to lie to her. It is no harm for a boy to lie to his sister. I told her that Mr. Jumper, on the floor above, was casting sheep's eyes at her; that Mr. Johnson, on the floor below, had praised her walk; that the gentleman in room 48 said that her face had reminded him of a Grecian goddess, and the cotton buyer in room 54 was dying to ask her out to lunch. She kissed me on the forehead and patted my shoulder and blushed, and the family conference broke up in great good feeling.

Now and then "Sister Eva" had a caller who wanted some work done, but the days passed, and the bouquets didn't shower down. I kept lying to her in a brotherly way, as it seemed my duty to do, but there came a day when I saw that something must be done or there would be a family row. I bought her a big bouquet and wrote the name of Mr. Saunders on a card and handed it in to her. Mr. Saunders was the gas engine man on the same floor. He was 60 years old, as dignified as a knot on a log, and few men dared to speak to him. "Sister Eva" was delighted. When I told her that an invitation to lunch would speedily follow, she blushed and simpered and looked so coy and shy that I was really proud of her. I hoped to get out of it with the bouquet, but she kept asking me every day if Mr. Saunders had said anything more, and I was finally driven to say that he would call very soon and ask her to honor him with her company to lunch. I was wondering how many more lies I would have to tell to get out of the scrape when a sudden climax came. At noon one day Mr. Saunders called at her room with some work he wanted done at once. She had her Sunday clothes on, and as he entered she simpered and tiptoed around and put on her hat and said she felt so honored. He wasn't over two minutes destroying that poor girl's illusion. What he said or how he said it I don't know. I saw him go in, and, knowing that all was lost, I hid under the stairs. I heard him talking about light headed women and she answering back about fool headed men, and three minutes later I was a discovered elevator boy. "Sister Eva" hauled me out of my hiding place, and the way she did thump me around left me an almost helpless wreck. She hauled me into her room by the hair of the head and said I was no brother. She boxed my head from side to side and said the family had been disgraced. She led me about by the ear and cast me out into the cold world without a sister, and three hours later she had moved out of the room and disappeared. I hoped that was the end of it, but it wasn't. Next day Mr. Saunders called me up to his room, and, after giving me a shake which loosened my teeth, he said:

"Boy, you play another trick like that on me, and I won't leave a whole bone in your body!"

SAMMIS, the Elevator Boy.

NEW HOUSES FOR SALE.

Just to remind you that I have another lot of houses nearly completed, I will list these three bargains;

Many were disappointed on the last lot so be on hand early if you would be in it.

Remember these houses are built by competent workmen, by the day, of the best material, and are personally superintended by the owner, are but four minutes to station, electrics pass, and everything is most desirable as a residential section. All houses are connected with sewer and cellars are perfectly dry.

JOB PRINTING

PATRIOT OFFICE

Children's Corner.

To know the right thing to do and the proper thing to say, says the Delineator one must consider what will please other people. One need never be insincere. There are many pleasant things which can be sincerely and truthfully said. Perfect politeness may be a rare thing, but every one may try to improve in this matter.

It has been wisely said that we should try not only to have good manner but better manners. A polite person takes the trouble to make cordial greeting, to bow pleasantly, to listen when another is talking, does not interrupt or appear eager to monopolize the conversation, does not relate long stories or tell disagreeable news, has good manners in a street car or shop, as well as in a drawing room.

Recently some one noticed a young girl coming into a room at an afternoon reception, just as an older woman was leaving. Instead of stepping back and allowing the older woman to pass, the girl pressed forward so that the departing guest was fairly hurled back into the room and had to wait to go out until the newcomer pushed her way past her. If the young girl had been trained to yield to older people and had stepped back, as a matter of course, a pleasant impression would have been made instead of a very unpleasant one.

A BAD SIGN.

One Occasion When Jones Felt a Little Superstitious.

"I have never been superstitious," said Jones, as he smiled to himself. "As a matter of fact, I have poked a good deal of fun at those who were candid enough to admit that they had their pet superstitions, but I shall do so no more, for I am not sure that there isn't something in it after all.

"Now, when it comes to superstition my wife is about as bad as they make them. Every little incident that happens during the day is fraught with dire significance. My folks, who live in a town not far from here, had invited us to spend a couple of weeks with them, and I had been looking forward to the event with a good deal of anticipation, a feeling that Mrs. Jones shared with me. Just as we were about to leave the house for the railway station she chanced to look out of a window, gave a scream and fell back on a sofa with a face as white as a sheet.

"'What is the matter?' I cried in alarm.

"'Oh, John,' she sobbed, 'I saw a black cat with one white foot go across the road. That means bad luck! We shall have to give up the trip to your folks.'

"'Nonsense!' said I.

"'I shall not move a foot,' said she in a voice that told me that there would be no use trying to argue with her. 'The train is sure to be wrecked or some other dreadful thing happen!'

"I knew that that settled it, and if I had chanced to meet the black cat with the white foot that day I would have paid my respects to him, superstition or no superstition.

"Well, the next day a distant cousin of mine, to say nothing of his wife and seven children, descended upon us without warning and announced that they were going to pay us a real nice long visit.

"I have come around to my wife's way of thinking. There is something in this black cat with a white foot business after all, but where she made a mistake was in thinking that she could ward it off by remaining at home."—Detroit Free Press.

Unique.

"There is one point to which I wish to call your attention," said the owner of a fine old colonial place to a prospective purchaser.

"What is that?"

"This estate is, I believe, absolutely unique in this particular among estates with buildings as old as this one."

"And what is this unique feature?"

"It was never occupied by Washington as headquarters."—Detroit Free Press.

Golden Silence.

Mamma—You're very fond of your dolly, aren't you, dear?

Little Ethel—Yes. She's nicer than anybody else I know.

Mamma—Oh, no. She's not nicer than your mamma.

The Kind You Have Always Bought

KEPT THEIR PROMISES

Chinese Deliver Agreement to Foreign Envoys

A DISAGREEMENT LIKELY

As to Strict Adherence to Terms of the Document—Ching Points Out That the Question of Indemnity Has Two Sides Worth Considering

Pekin, Jan. 24.—The anxiety of the foreign envoys, who had begun to fear that, in spite of the promises made, something might occur to prevent delivery of the agreement, has been relieved by the formal delivery of the document by the Chinese plenipotentiaries.

There is a general feeling of satisfaction among the foreigners and soldiers. Most of the latter look anxiously forward to leaving China this year. Although no orders have been received, the Australians expect to be the first British troops to go, presumably as soon as the river opens, which is usually during the first week of March.

Prince Ching visited the Russian minister, M. De Giers, remaining with him two hours. It is supposed that the interview had to do with the agreement. It is well understood here that M. De Giers has all along had more influence with Prince Ching and Li Hung Chang than all the other ministers combined, and he has invariably known sooner than the others what the Chinese plenipotentiaries were about to do.

Judging from various opinions, there is little likelihood that the foreign envoys will reach an agreement at the meeting to be held as to sending a favorable reply to the question of the Chinese plenipotentiaries. A majority are in favor of carrying out to the strict letter the terms of the agreement.

Friends of Emperor Kwang Su have informed M. De Giers that the emperor desires to return as speedily as possible to the capital, and will do so as soon as he is assured that the foreign troops will leave. His majesty would like to start for Pekin immediately after Feb. 20, when the Chinese new year begins. The journey will probably take six weeks.

Prince Ching says he considers the Chinese requests reasonable, and feels sure that the United States will agree to them, as well as most of the other nations.

"The question of indemnity," says Prince Ching, "has two sides. Some of the allies have conducted warfare in a fashion unparalleled in the history of civilization. Chinese merchants and private citizens assert that valuables have been looted amounting to immense sums, and it would not be fair to fail to take these largely into consideration when the question of indemnities is discussed.

"Tientsin, Pekin and all the cities and towns between have been absolutely stripped, while priceless treasures belonging to private individuals have been confiscated, irrespective of all idea of modern warfare. I feel confident that the good feeling of the allies will make a due allowance, and I look forward to getting a satisfactory reply to the questions we have asked when we meet the foreign envoys. We will then consider the other points."

Dutch Have Faith In De Wet

Cape Town, Jan. 24.—General Kitchener is disposing great forces semi-circularly, to circumvent the Boers. The columns move simultaneously, in touch with each other. The greatest danger of the situation is the possibility of General De Wet's appearance in Cape Colony. It is believed that none of the Dutch would resist his personal call to arms. They think the fame of Napoleon and Wellington pales in the presence of his military genius.

Philippine Soldiers' Grievance

Washington, Jan. 24.—Complaints are reaching the war department from the officers and men in the Philippines over the delays in the payment of their salaries. Owing to the small number of pay officers in the present organization and the large extent of territory in the Philippines over which the army is dispersed, the pay department has not been able to pay off troops oftener than once in two months.

RUN DOWN AT LAST

"Girl With Cold Hands" For Whom Hub Police Have Been Looking

Boston, Jan. 24.—Sadie Jones, a very light mulatto, pretty and stylishly dressed, is under arrest charged with the larceny of $150 from A. D. Benway, and the police believe her to be the "girl with the cold hands," against whom there have been numerous complaints of larceny within the past few weeks.

The method adopted by this girl was to accost late pedestrians, engage in conversation, and upon the plea that her hands were cold obtain permission to warm them under her victim's coat. When her hands were withdrawn a pocketbook or a roll of money usually came with them, the loss not being discovered until after she had departed. Benway met the girl on Springfield street last night, and, after a short conversation with her, discovered his pocketbook to be missing, and charged her with the theft. She denied the accusation and started to go away, when Benway found his pocketbook lying on the ground, but $150 was missing. The girl ran, but was caught by a policeman, who found the missing money on her person. Sadie is 28 years old.

OPPOSED BY VEST

Missouri Senator Thinks the Shipping Bill Part of Protective System

Washington, Jan. 24.—Consideration of the shipping bill was resumed yesterday by the senate. At the instance of Mr. Frye it was made the unfinished business of the senate, thus restoring it to its privileged position. Mr. Vest of Missouri took the floor immediately, and in a forceful speech, lasting nearly three hours, opposed the bill. He advocated free ships and vigorously attacked the navigation laws of the United States, holding that they were responsible for the descadence of the merchant marine of America.

"Everything in the country is under a trust," said the Missouri senator, "from the cradle to the grave. This bill will pass the senate. It is a part of the protective system sacred to the Republican party, especially in New England. Drunk with victory, the Republican party will now stop at nothing."

Early in the session, Mr. Rawlins (Dem., Utah) participated in a lively colloquy, by charging that a deal had been entered into between the Republican members of the Utah legislature and certain railroad interests and the officials of the Mormon church to secure the election of Thomas L. Kearns to the senate from that state.

The house passed the District of Columbia appropriation bill and entered upon consideration of the naval appropriation bill. There was some discussion of the extent to which the navy was to be increased ultimately, in the course of which Mr. Wheeler (Dem., Ky.) and a member of the committee, declared himself in favor of a navy large enough to meet "all comers," and some criticism by Mr. Richardson, the minority leader, of the rapid growth of naval expenditures. Several provisions of the bill were knocked out on points of order, including that to give warrant officers the commutation for quarters allowed second lieutenants of the marine corps. A point of order was sustained against an amendment to increase the number of chaplains in the navy from 24 to 34.

MONTREAL'S BIG FIRE

Loss of Over $2,500,000 Worth of Property In Business District

Montreal, Jan. 24.—One of the most disastrous fires from which this city has ever suffered began at 8 o'clock last night and the progress of the flames was not checked until this morning. The fire destroyed property valued at between $2,500,000 and $3,000,000.

Included in the property burned is the Board of Trade building, which cost over $500,000, with over 100 tenants and half a dozen large firms, and two scores of smaller concerns. The weather was cold and the firemen were greatly hampered in this respect. Outside the Board of Trade building there was not a modern structure among those burned.

The narrow streets, antiquated buildings and the inflammable nature of the stocks they contained made a combination of material against which the department was powerless. The fire practically burned until it came to open space, which gave the firemen an opportunity for effective work.

Numerous crowds of people jammed the narrow streets, greatly impeding the work of the firemen. The police could not control them. Women fainted, their clothes were torn and a few were slightly injured in rushes for safety.

Difficulties Culminate In Disaster

St. John's, Jan. 24.—The efforts to operate the railway system across Newfoundland this winter have been attended with great difficulties, owing to the snowdrifts. Yesterday an express train was derailed, two locomotives were wrecked, the engineer of one was killed, a fireman is likely to die and several other persons were injured. Traffic on the line has been suspended.

Young Mothers

Stand in special need of help while the baby is being nursed. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription not only strengthens the woman for motherhood and makes the birth hour practically painless, but it increases the nutritive secretions on which the child is fed. It soothes the nerves, encourages the appetite and rapidly restores the mother to robust health. There is no alcohol in "Favorite Prescription," neither opium, cocaine, nor any other narcotic.

"I wish to let you know the great benefit my wife derived through taking your 'Favorite Prescription,'" writes Mr. Robert Harden, of Brandon, Manitoba, Box 236. "It was a case of childbirth. We had heard so much of it that my wife decided to try it. I may say my wife is thirty-three and this was her first child.) She commenced to take 'Favorite Prescription' five months before her child was born. We have a fine, healthy girl and we believe that this was mainly owing to the 'Favorite Prescription' taken faithfully according to directions. We shall certainly recommend it wherever we can."

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets put the bowels in a healthy condition.

HAZING AT WEST POINT

Declared to Be Nothing Short of Absolute Torture

OBJECT OF "CALLING OUT"

Was to Cut Up Faces of Lower Class Men — Victims Hung on Bars and Given Sweat Baths Until They Went Into Convulsions From Exhaustion

Washington, Jan. 25.—The committee which is investigating the hazing at West Point academy had before it yesterday the last witness who will be called on to testify. He was F. N. Cunningham, formerly a cadet at West Point and teutmate of Cadet MacArthur, who was severely hazed according to the testimony adduced at West Point. Cunningham described the hazing of MacArthur in July, 1898. He said MacArthur reeled into the tent after being hazed, and went into convulsions. He was writhing and moaning so that witness covered him with a blanket to prevent his moans from being heard by the officer of the day. MacArthur's inquisitors, after the hazing, he said, were very much exercised over what they had done, and were anxious to see him restored. The convulsions, Cunningham stated, continued for several minutes at a time. MacArthur, the next morning, was urged to go on sick report, but declined to do so.

Witness said that Cadets Hill, Haskell and Kensel suffered from hazing. Hill "qualified on peach pie," and afterward suffered from convulsions, requiring medical assistance. Surgeon Banister was called. Haskell suffered the same night as MacArthur, and witness heard Haskell had convulsions. Medical assistance was not called, but Haskell was worked over for some time. Kensel went into convulsions. The witness heard that a cadet had choked Kensel to prevent his uttering cries. Mr. Driggs brought out that Cadet Howes also had been hazed into hysterics.

The witness was handed a list of cadets, and specified a number reputed to be severe hazers.

Commenting on a statement by General Ludlow that "college hazing and West Point hazing" were the same, the witness said: "I refute that statement. I went through college before I went to West Point, and I know there is nothing in the colleges like the hazing at West Point." He described hazing as nothing short of torture, exquisite torture.

He gave a graphic account of the agony suffered in certain forms of hazing, which fairly sent a shudder through the listeners. Men were hung on bars, their feet up, so that when they dropped from exhaustion the knees struck on the wooden floor several feet below. The fainting man was again hoisted up and again repeatedly dropped from exhaustion, striking on his knees. He gave in detail the horrors of the sweatbath, and related the sufferings of MacArthur from this form of torture.

Cunningham said the object of "calling out" was to place a trained upper class man against an untrained lower class man. The result was inevitable. In conducting a fight the purpose was to cut up the face of the lower class man before knocking him out. An upper class man had said to the witness that a certain fight was not correct, because the lower class man's face was not cut up sufficiently. He was told also of a lower class man being in the hospital for a week after a fight, and then his face was said to be a "sight to see."

The witness said that cadets from foreign countries, admitted by act of congress, were "bullied and bothered" in the same way. He mentioned Cadet Iglesias, related to President Iglesias of Costa Rica, as an instance, and also a Venezuelan cadet.

When the witness said he had not narrated the facts through indignation, Mr. Wagner said: "Then you are to be congratulated on maintaining a serenity of mind while narrating facts which cannot fail to arouse the indignation of any one who hears them."

Cunningham's testimony appeared to produce a deep impression, and at its conclusion the committee went into secret session. The hearings are now closed, and the committee will give its attention to the report.

Possible Key to Trunk Mystery

New York, Jan. 25.—The housekeeper of a house on James street has reported that a woman who had lived with her had disappeared. This woman, the housekeeper said, was a customer of Meyer Weisbard, whose body was found in a trunk, and had had frequent quarrels with him. The apron found on Weisbard's body, the housekeeper asserted, was exactly the same as that worn by this woman.

Printers Ratify Compromise

Boston, Jan. 25.—At a meeting of the book and job printers last night the compromise with the employers was ratified. The new agreement is that wages shall be not less than $16 a week for the first year, and $16.50 for the next two years. Piece work for women and men shall be 25 cents per 1000.

M'LAIN IS RELEASED

Edward Graffam Is Now Suspected of Being Implicated In Mosher Murder

Portland, Me., Jan. 25.—Three residents of Scribner's Mills have positively identified John McLain as the man whom they had seen at Scribner's Mills on the evening of Jan. 12, the time of the murder of Clifford Mosher. McLain was released today.

Portland, Me., Jan. 25.—Edward W. Graffam, who was found in Hopedale, Mass., yesterday by Deputy Sheriff Plummer, was brought to Portland last night. He is suspected of having been implicated in the murder of Clifford Mosher at Gorham, Jan. 12. He formerly lived near the Mosher place, and at one time worked for Mrs. Mosher for over a year, and during that time lived in the house. Last night, at the jail office, he was confronted with the negro Hands. What took place is not known. The authorities refuse to make any statement about what ensued, but feel confident that they have the right man.

His clothing, so the officers say, corresponds well with the description of the man who accompanied the negro Hands to Gorham on that Saturday night when Clifford Mosher was killed.

Veteran Fireman Meets Death

Providence, Jan. 25.—Captain Hiram D. Butts of hose company 13, aged 76, was killed last night in a runaway of a pair of raw fire horses. The horses sprang to their places at an alarm, and the captain mounted the wagon. The doors in front of the horses were thrown open before the driver had taken his seat, and the horses ran out, throwing Butts to the sidewalk. He died of hemorrhage of the brain three hours afterwards. Captain Butts had been 35 years in the department.

Public Opinion the Judge

New Haven, Jan. 25.—The academic faculty of Yale yesterday considered the matter of the burlesque of the Patterson murder trial, which it was alleged a party of seniors participated in, and passed a resolution "that the wrong done was of a kind which can be best dealt with by college public opinion, and is, in fact, being thus dealt with." There will be no further discipline by the authorities of the college, and the incident is considered closed.

Sisters Perhaps Fatally Hurt

Bridgeport, Conn., Jan. 25.—Two sisters, a brother and a niece of Miss Margaret Lyons were being driven to church yesterday to attend her wedding when the breaking of a bolt in the hack started a runaway, and the vehicle was demolished by striking a post. Both sisters were so severely injured that it is feared they will die. The brother suffered a fracture of the arm and was cut about the head. The niece was less seriously hurt.

No Illegal Sale of Liquor

Boston, Jan. 25.—Wednesday afternoon and about all of yesterday Judge Burke listened to the case in which Proprietor Crosby of the Hotel Tuileries and two of his employes were charged with the illegal sale of liquor. The defense was that the liquor sold belonged to one of the guests. The liquors subsequently seized were alleged to have been for use in cooking. The case ended by the discharge of the defendants.

Ship Liverpool Is Missing

Philadelphia, Jan. 25.—British ship Liverpool sailed from this port on Aug. 23 last for Hiogo, Japan. A day or two ago a premium of 20 guineas was paid on her insurance. The Liverpool is practically a new vessel. Her cargo consisted of oil in casks. She was last spoken on Oct. 31.

Vanderbilt Heiress Named

New York, Jan. 25.—The Vanderbilt heiress, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William K. Vanderbilt, born Nov. 23, was christened Muriel Vanderbilt yesterday afternoon, in the private chapel of Archbishop Corrigan's residence.

NOT HEREDITARY

In the main, consumption is not hereditary; it is infectious. People are too afraid of heredity; better not think of the subject at all. Infection occurs continually.

Low vital force is hereditary; which gives consumption its chance. And infection plants it.

Between the two, the crop is a big one: about one-sixth of the human race, so far as is known.

We suppose it needn't be 5 per cent, if people would take fair care and Scott's emulsion of cod-liver oil.

The care saves life in all ways; the emulsion is specially aimed at the lungs, beside its general food-effect.

We'll send you a little to try, if you like.

Grand Funeral Pageant Will Be Witnessed In London

MOURNING FOR FULL YEAR

After That Will Come Coronation of the King—Duke of York Will Henceforth Be Known as the Duke of Cornwall—Private Funeral Service at Osborne

London, Jan. 25.—The fact that the court goes into mourning for a year and the further fact that the public is enjoined to go into the "deepest" mourning, lend to the supposition that the coronation of King Edward VII will not occur until 1902.

The instruction that the Duke of York is to be named in the prayer book "Duke of Cornwall" seems to throw light upon the much-debated question of the heir apparent's title. It was supposed that the title "Prince of Wales," which belongs only to a son born of the king would be conferred upon the Duke of York by royal patent, but it seems that this will not be done, and that the Duke of York will henceforth be known as the Duke of Cornwall.

King Edward VII has been proclaimed in many cities and towns of the United Kingdom, the usual procedure being that the mayor, attended by the other members of the corporation, has publicly read the proclamation.

In Dublin uniformed heralds proclaimed Edward VII. An immense assemblage attended the proclamation.

It is understood that the progress of the body of Queen Victoria through London on Feb. 2 will be an imposing military pageant, and that members of the house of lords and commons will be invited to follow the procession. At the same time there seems to be some apprehension lest a change of decision should omit the London portion of the program.

The Daily Telegraph editorially claims for London a right to share in the obsequies, and declares that nothing but the deceased's own wishes should prevent this.

The funeral has been delayed in order to enable all the foreign representatives to arrive at Windsor in time. It is announced that Grand Duke Sergius and the Grand Duchess will come from Russia, to be present at the ceremony.

Private Service at Cowes

Cowes, Jan. 25.—So hampered have been the arrangements at Osborne that the body of Queen Victoria remained in the bedroom where she died until this morning. The elaborate decorations necessary in turning the dining room in Osborne House into a chapelle ardente occupied so much time that although the royal household waited hour after hour for the first private service, it was found impossible to hold this yesterday.

The solemn function was performed this morning by the bishop of Winchester in the presence of King Edward, Emperor William and almost every other member of the royal family.

The coffin was brought to Osborne last evening. The coffined body was transferred this morning to the dining room. The dais is wreathed with the royal standard, and on each side are great candles. Madonnas by famous painters hang from the draped walls. In one corner magnificent wreaths from all parts of the world crush their blossoms one against the other. Among these the most beautiful are from Emperor William and Empress Augusta Victoria.

There will be no lying in state. However, there is good reason to believe that many persons will be afforded the privilege of seeing their dead queen as she lies in the gorgeously transformed dining room where she will remain until Feb. 1. In the hope that this may be the case, people are already pouring into Cowes. If they are disappointed in this respect.

Yesterday King Edward replied to thousands of messages he has received. To those from rulers and great personages he replied in person. To those from minor dignitaries he commended his equerry to return thanks. A particularly grateful message went to President McKinley.

The new queen moved ceaselessly around yesterday seeing that everything should be done in good order. It was chiefly due to Queen Alexandra's desire to carefully design the minutest detail of the death chapel that the first funeral service was not held yesterday.

Why Boers Are Near the Coast

Cape Town, Jan. 25.—It is believed that the presence of invading Boers in proximity to the western coast is due to preconcerted plans with European filibusterers to land a large consignment of arms and ammunition. Many traitors have succeeded in enlisting in the local forces and there have been numerous arrests.

Spent Long Time on Island

Halifax, Jan. 25.—Schooner St. Bernard, from St. Pierre for Louisburg in ballast, was wrecked on Seal island last Wednesday week, and the crew had to remain on the island until yesterday when they were brought to Yarmouth by a steamer.

Four Years For Assault

Machias, Me., Jan. 25.—Four years at hard labor in state prison was the sentence imposed on William H. Mason, convicted of assault with a revolver on Jennie W. Griffin.

Good Afternoon.

There are too many tramps and suspicious peddlers and agents about town for the good of the city. They are not only a nuisance but they terrorize the women at home. The laws should reach these fellows somehow.

Heating an entire city by hot water, and 78 degrees below zero on the Yukon are contiguous items in a Boston newspaper today. The people of Yukon are probably willing the experiment should be tried to heat their city.

There is timely warning in Henry H. Faxon's latest letter relative to pool rooms. No young man can afford to hang around such places all the time or every evening, and he would be better off if he kept away entirely.

Sixty-three years a queen and never guilty of an unpopular public act or an unwomanly private act, is the proud record of Victoria. It stands alone and will stand alone in the royal annals of the world. Victorias are not born in every century.

Postmaster General Smith is a strong advocate of the Ship subsidy bill, because his official duties have shown him that foreign governments are far more liberal than ours in making their postal service contributory to the upbuilding of a merchant marine.

Drift of Opinion.

☞ War against mosquitoes has been declared by the health authorities of Cuba. The services of the mosquito fleet which is now enroute around the Horn to the Philippines, will not be needed.—Haverhill Gazette.

☞ For the uses of the state, in addition to all other things, the church must awaken public spirit and the desire to render public service. In the mind of the good citizen the public good always takes rank before private advantage.—Christian Register.

☞ The Railroad Commission does not think the time is ripe for a general revision of the street railway law, but do think that there should be specific changes in the statutes to meet certain defects which it points out. And while about it, the Legislature would do well to knock the absurd contradiction out of it for appearance's sake if nothing more.—Lynn Item.

Golden Cross Installation.

The officers of Granite Commandery W. O. G. C., were installed on Wednesday evening at Faxon hall by Dept. Supreme Commander S. B. Harvey, Dept. Supreme Past Commander, Lady Harvey, and Department Grand Herald Albert P. Blinn, of Boston, as follows:

AN EVENTFUL DAY FOR MR. KENILEY

The Board of Health of City Prefer Charges

Against Him as Inspector of Plumbing.

A Hearing to be Given by Board on Monday Evening.

The bomb that it has been expected the Board of Health would explode in the camp of the Inspector of Plumbing came Thursday when J. J. Keniley was handed an envelope. Upon opening the same he found it to contain a series of charges, eight in number, which the Board of Health had preferred against him.

The charges extend over a period of three years, and allege that he has violated the plumbing laws and has passed work not properly plumbed.

Some weeks ago, as already noted, the Board of Health held a meeting and voted unanimously to request Mr. Keniley to resign. The following day the vote was communicated to him and requested to resign before 9 o'clock the following Saturday morning.

Inspector Keniley put this communication in his pocket and refused to comply with the request, and the morning of the day on which he was supposed to step out, found him at his desk as usual. At that time he said he was under the civil service, and not only should he refuse to resign but he should resist all attempts to put him out.

Since that time things have been quiet as far as Keniley is concerned, and the Board of Health were also to all appearances inactive. It seems however, that they were not.

When the Mayor's appointments were announced Monday night, it was noticed that those of the Board of Health were not among them. This was commented upon, and it was apparent that trouble for the inspector was not far off.

Wednesday evening the Board of Health held a meeting. It was short, but long enough seemingly to draw up the charges which were served upon Mr. Keniley on Thursday. Accompanying the charges was a note that he would be given a hearing next Monday evening.

Inspector Keniley says that he will not be bounced without a fight and he has engaged ex-City Solicitor J. W. McAnarney to defend him.

He Surprises Two Burglars and Captures One.

Were in His Brother's Plumbing Shop.

The Arrested Man is Held for the Grand Jury.

There was an exciting time for a few minutes in City Square Thursday evening over the capture, red handed, of a burglar by Jeremiah J. Keniley, the Inspector of Plumbing and for a time rumors of all kinds were floating about. The fellow arrested who gave his name and age as Thomas Hennessey, aged 28 years, and his residence as Philadelphia, was landed in the police station under the charge of breaking and entering and larceny.

It was about 8 o'clock, and a deathlike stillness prevailed. Suddenly, there resounded through the air the shrill cry of "Help! Police!" The cries came from the rear of the Whicher block on Temple street, and in an instant a crowd surged through the alleyway leading to the rear of the building. Word was sent to City Hall, and Officers Nicol and Ferguson responded.

Upon reaching the rear of J. E. Kenily & Co.'s plumbing shop they found Inspector Keniley having a tussle with a fellow to whom he was evidently administering a severe punishment. Sergeant Harry Matthews of Co. K was the first to render assistance and he and Keniley had the fellow well in hand when the officers arrived and took charge.

Inspector Keniley's story of the affair is, that a few minutes before he went into the alleyway leading to the rear of his brother's plumbing shop on Temple street. As he reached the rear of the store he noticed the back door swing to. This surprised him, but he supposed some of the men were in the shop although he thought it queer he did not see any light in the building.

He started to investigate and went to the rear of the building again. As he reached the rear of the store the second time he saw two men just leaving the store. He immediately accosted them, and asked what they were doing. One of them replied "nothing," and the two started to walk off. It is quite light in the rear yard and noticing that they were strangers and that their pockets were buldging out, Mr. Keniley walked up to them and placing his hands on Hennessey's pocket said, "What have you got here." At this the other fellow drew off and struck Mr. Keniley a blow on the head.

Mr. Keniley then grabbed Hennessey and shouted for help. At his cries the other fellow ran across the yards to Washington street and disappeared. Mr. Keniley hung onto Hennessey and was pounding him in good shape when the crowd arrived, and the arrest was made.

At the police station Hennessey said his home was in Philadelphia and that he stole rather than beg. He also claimed that they got into the building by the back door and that the other fellow picked the lock. He said he had picked up the other fellow that day and that he said he was of Weymouth.

Hennessey was arraigned in court and was held for the grand jury.

This morning some of the lead stolen from Keniley's shop was found on the Nancy Brackett estate on Hancock street, and on the Howland estate on Adams street. This would seem to indicate that the second fellow after reaching Washington street turned and went toward East Milton and as he went along relieved himself of anything that would connect him with the affair.

MILTON.

The Selectmen gave a hearing Monday evening on the building of a boulevard from the corner of Canton avenue and Brook road at Mattapan, through private estate to East Milton. The cost of the proposed boulevard is estimated at $20,000. It will be brought before the voters at the annual March meeting.

Flints in Trouble.

The following clipping is from the Schuyler (Iowa) Quill, under date of Jan. 15, and is of local interest because of the recent exhibitions by The Flints in this city.

Relatives of Mrs. Carrie Flanders of Ottumwa who was sent to the hospital for the insane at Mount Pleasant, have instituted suit against the board of commissioners of the insane to secure her release. Mrs. Flanders attended exhibitions given by Prof. Flint, the hypnotist, and was placed, it is stated under his influence. After awakening from the spell she grew to believe that the influence had not been entirely removed, which resulted in her mind becoming unbalanced. Mrs. Flanders' health has failed and her relatives seek her release.

CENSUS OF PORTO RICO.

Comprehensive Review of the Island's Present State.

POPULATION NEARLY A MILLION.

Social and Economic Conditions, Strategic Value and Productive Capacity as They Exist Under United States Ownership—Percentages of Illiterates and Persons of Mixed Blood.

As soon as the census of Porto Rico was completed last year the total population of the island was announced, together with one or two other leading features of the work. The war department is now preparing to distribute copies of the full report in regard to this census made by Lieutenant Colonel J. P. Sanger of the inspector general's department. The report is in the shape of a well bound volume of over 400 pages and contains between its covers more reliable information in regard to Porto Rico than has ever before been given in such intelligent form to the American people, says the Washington Star.

The figures of population as given out some time ago were approximately correct, the total being 953,243. This figure shows a decided increase over that of the last census, which was taken in 1887. In fact, from the earliest census, taken in 1765, the population has steadily increased from about 45,000 a century and a half ago to nearly a million at the present time. Considering that the island is only about 36 miles wide and 100 miles long, it is densely populated. About 62 per cent of the people are white, the other 38 per cent being of colored or mixed blood. The percentage of mixed blood in the colored population of Porto Rico is very much greater than in Cuba, for, while 52 per cent of the colored Cubans are full blooded negroes, 83 per cent of the colored Porto Ricans are of mixed blood, many of them nearly white.

A very large percentage of the population of Porto Rico is of the agricultural class, for only about 75,000 people live in the three cities on the island. The percentage of illiteracy is very high. Eighty-four per cent of the people—which is but one in six of the males and females over 10 years of age—can neither read nor write. This is a higher percentage of illiteracy than prevails in any one of the United States, or, in fact, in any other country from which statistics are obtainable, except Guatemala. Much of this lack of schooling is apparently due to a residence in the country, for in the three large cities over 50 per cent of the people can read and write.

The strategic importance of Porto Rico was recognized at an early day, for attempts were made by England, Holland and France to wrest it from the control of Spain, though without success. The attacking parties did considerable damage in their assaults upon the city of San Juan, but owing to the excellent natural defenses and aided by yellow fever the natives were able to drive off the invaders.

The Indian population of Porto Rico at the date of its colonization by Spain is said to have numbered a half million souls. These Indians were copper colored and very similar in character to the Indians of southern Mexico. They had little industry or enterprise and the Spaniards gradually exterminated them, reducing many to slavery. In 1543 it was reported to the king of Spain by the bishop of San Juan that there were but 60 native Indians on the island. The recent census taken by the United States did not discover a single Indian of the aboriginal type, though close observers report many people in the interior of unmistakable Indian descent.

The negro blood in Porto Rico comes, as in other West India islands, through the importation of slaves, which commenced nearly 400 years ago and continued until 1872, when slavery was abolished. This black labor was of great consequence to the island in the cultivation of sugar cane, and when the slaves were freed the condition was made that they should work a certain number of years at a stated salary to prevent any disaster to large employers of labor. There are a few Chinese in Porto Rico, none ever having been brought in under the coolie system as in other West India islands. In Porto Rico their presence is entirely voluntary.

Cuba and Porto Rico have a smaller percentage of colored people in the population than any other West Indian island, Cuba having 33 per cent and Porto Rico 38. In the other West Indies the percentage of negroes runs from 61 in the Bermudas to 98 in Jamaica. Each of the American coast states, except North Carolina, has a smaller proportion of whites than Porto Rico or Cuba. There are 201,071 males of voting age in Porto Rico, and over 96 per cent of these are native born. About 3 per cent of the population is Spanish, these people being concentrated in the commercial centers, where they are engaged in business.

The conjugal condition in this island is very similar to that in Cuba, for less than 17 per cent of the adults are married. Seventy per cent of the adults are single. About 9 per cent live together by mutual consent, and more than 4 per cent are widows and widowers. The proportion of the island population engaged in breadwinning is only about one-third, while in Cuba the proportion is about two-fifths. Of people 65 years of age and over more than one-half are still working for a living in these two West India islands. It is also to be noted that a large number of children below the age of 9 figure among breadwinners.

The average death rate in Porto Rico during the past 11 years has been about 30 per cent and the average birth rate about 35. There are no gains to the population by immigration and such a small gain from births that the population is now nearly stationary and will probably be more so in the future unless American enterprise results in a greater development of agricultural area.

Most of the area of Porto Rico is held as farms, and more than one-fifth of the entire island is under cultivation. The forest areas are small and almost entirely confined to the highest mountains. Few remains of the primeval forests are to be found, timber being very scarce, and most of that used in building is imported. The industries of trade, transportation and manufactures are of almost trifling importance. Seventy-six per cent of the entire surface of the island is included within the 40,000 or less farms, with not less than 21 per cent of the entire area under the plow.

These figures are in strong contrast with those for Cuba, for on the latter island only 30 per cent of the area is included in farms and only 3 per cent of the area is under cultivation. The conditions in Porto Rico more nearly approach those prevailing in the United States, where 16 per cent of the area is under cultivation. Yet, considering the density of the rural population of Porto Rico, which is far beyond that of any portion of the United States, the proportion of cultivated land is small. The average size of a farm in Porto Rico is 45 acres, of which about 12 acres are cultivated. In the United States the average farm contains 137 acres, of which 78 acres are improved. In Cuba the average farm has an area of 142 acres, of which only 13 acres are under cultivation.

Seventy-one per cent of all the farms in Porto Rico are owned by the whites, and 22 per cent are owned by colored people, making a total of 93 per cent of all the farms of Porto Rico cultivated by their owners. Five per cent were rented by whites and 2 per cent by colored. This proportion of owned farms is unusually large. In the United States only 72 per cent of the farms are cultivated by their owners, and but few individual states can show as high a percentage of occupancy by owners as can Porto Rico.

The relative importance of the crops raised in Porto Rico is shown by the area devoted to each crop. Coffee occupies 41 per cent, sugar cane 15 per cent, bananas 14 per cent, and the balance is divided among sweet potatoes, Indian corn, malangas, rice, cocoanuts and tobacco. Coffee is by far the most important crop, and tobacco, which is one of the leading products of Cuba, is of but trifling importance in Porto Rico.

The work of the war department in the taking of the census of Porto Rico has been remarkably thorough and gives at a glance a true reflection of the conditions which prevail on that island. In this work Colonel Sanger, aided by the statistical experts, Professors Gannett and Wilcox, has been guided by the desire to present not only a numerical compilation, but a sociological estimate of these people lately taken under the jurisdiction of the United States, and he has succeeded in making both the Cuban and Porto Rican census reports absolutely necessary to the library of any one desiring a reliable reference in regard to matters therein treated.

RURAL FREE DELIVERY.

Canada Sends an Expert to Study American System.

Canada is very much interested in the United States rural free delivery system. A representative of the postmaster general of Canada is now in Washington making a minute study of the service for the purpose of reporting to his home government. This gentleman is Mr. Charles Ross, assistant postmaster at Toronto.

The other day Mr. Ross was introduced to Postmaster General Charles Emory Smith, who extended him the courtesies of the department. He was taken in charge by A. W. Machen, superintendent of free delivery, who astounded the Canadian with an exhibition of the manner in which the rural free delivery system is managed. Mr. Ross was extravagant in his praise of the sytem which Mr. Machen has inaugurated whereby every detail of the service is at an instant's command by the officials of the department.

Mr. Ross, accompanied by an expert detailed from the department, has gone to Carroll county, Md., where he will spend a short time in a thorough examination of the practical working of the rural free delivery system.

Mr. Ross declares that the fame of the United States rural postal service has spread to Canada and excited the greatest interest there. The Liberal party, which is an advocate of progressive movements, stands ready to inaugurate the service there if the postmaster general of the Dominion thinks well of it.—Philadelphia Press.

Crete's New Coins.

According to a report from Athens the new Cretan coins will soon be put into circulation. They bear the head of Prince George and include gold pieces of 20 and 10 francs, silver pieces of 5, 2, 1 and half francs, small change in nickel of 20, 10 and 5 centimes and in copper of 2 and 1 centimes, says the New York Tribune. Hitherto on the island Greek, Italian and French silver money has chiefly been in circulation, Turkish money having disappeared.

"THE REHEARSAL."

A Musical Sketch Which Delighted People at Atlantic.

Under the auspices of the Ladies' Benevolent society of the Atlantic Memorial church the musical sketch "The Rehearsal" was given at the church on Wednesday evening by four young ladies from Malden, Miss Ida Butler, formerly with the "Bostonians," a soprano; Miss Ethelwyn Pease, violinist, Miss Gertrude Gifford of the "Boston Woman's Symphony orchestra," harpist, and Miss Mary Shaw, pianist.

Miss Shaw represented a very near-sighted musician, manager of a small concert company,

Miss Pease, a prim young lady violinist, slightly deaf, fond of books; Miss Gifford, a sweet little harpist, and Miss Butler, Polly Willis, a discharged singer.

Miss Butler sang "In Picardie" "A May Morning," "Parting," by Rogers, "Se Saran Rose" by Arditi, in a quartette with Misses Pease, Gifford and Shaw "Ave Maria by Gound and in a trio with Misses Pease and Gifford "Answer" by Robyn.

Miss Pease played on the violin "Legende" by Wieniawski "Mazur" by Mlynarski, "Serenade" by Pierne beside a duet "Berceuse" by Oberthur with Miss Gifford and in the trio and quartette.

Miss Gifford gave for her harp selections, "LeCoucou" by Godefroid, "Weihnichtlided" by Scheucher, "Chanson San's Paroles" by Dubez and took part in the duet, trio and quartette.

Miss Shaw who got off a sick bed to meet her engagement, and feared she would be unable to carry through her part, played Rubinstein's 5 me "Barcarolle" very skilfully and effectively, and accompanied with great success.

There was a very good attendance and the audience was appreciative and responsive.

Miss Butler showed a high range of voice reaching high C and even high D and in the trio and quartette especially giving indications of the power of tone and harmonious blending of her voice.

Miss Pease's as well as Miss Gifford's performance was much enjoyed and both artists received the applause of the audience.

The company may be congratulated on the success they scored at Atlantic and the pleasant impression they made.

Runaway Girl.

Special Officer Stewart found a young girl walking on the railroad tracks between Quincy and Quincy Adams Thursday night, and brought her to the police station. After close questioning by Chief Ripley, the girl said her name was Annie McAuley, aged 13 years. She said she was taken from the Marcella Street home three years ago by a family named Lennon, who lived on Bigelow street, Rockland, Mass. She said that she left the Lennon house at 11 o'clock that morning as the family did not treat her right, and that she had been walking ever since.

She claimed to have a smaller brother and sister in the home when she left them; also a grandmother named Mrs. Annie McAuley, who lived at 1 Lenox street, Boston. She was taken to the Quincy farm for the night.

This morning Mrs. Lennon of Rockland came to Quincy to take the girl back. She said she was a good girl but rather hard to manage. The authorities at the Marcella Street home, who were also notified, telephoned the police to hold he girl until after they had made an investigation.

The officers of each society are requested to wear regalia or badges, and such will be seated together. The Rev. Dr. James Todd, Rev W. W. Dornan and Mayor Hall will address the meeting.

SAW LOTS OF MONEY.

John Evans Visits the White House and the Treasury.

Washington, D. C.,
January 23d.

Editors of the Daily Ledger:

This has been a fine day, something the same as we enjoy in Quincy in the month of May. I rode in the open cars to the White House and Treasury Building. I was sorry I could not see President McKinley, but he does not feel well since the grip. I enjoyed myself just the same in looking over his home. If I were to tell you half the things which interested me there, it would fill the Ledger.

Never mind, let us go across the street to the Treasury, where the coin is kept, that secures our notes. Among other places, the guide took us to the vaults, where there are stored $867,097,268.21 2-3 of coin—total weight, 5,000 tons—made up as follows:

$152,649,000.00 standard silver dollars.

$6,080,000.00 gold coin.

$1,012,000.00 fractional, $912,000; minor coin $100,000.

$4,731,248.16 national bank notes for redemption.

$796,596.97 mixed money, received daily for redemption.

$10,000, 00.00 mixed money for daily use.

$432,456,423.08 3-8 bonds held as security for N. B circulation.

$260,000,000.00 held as reserve to replace worn out money.

The dimension of silver vault is 89 feet long, 51 feet wide and 12 feet high. It takes 30 days to make notes. $1,500,000 new notes are issued every day, and the same amount of old worn out and mutilated ones are destroyed in a large machine they call, mascurator. The pulp is sold to a firm in Philadelphia for $40 per ton. When Treasurer Roberts was appointed, I am told, he insisted on having all that money counted and it took sixty men eight months to do the work. They found it $900.000 short, but that was traced afterwards. John Evans.

A LITTLE BIG WASTE.

DISTINGUISH between economy and wisdom. Sitting at home to save shoe-leather is economy, but it is scarcely wisdom. In the same way, doing without Ivory Soap is economy but it isn't wise; your risks are greater than all possible saving. Every cheap soap contains free alkali. Now, free alkali will eat its way through the new oil cloth on the kitchen floor Imagine then what it will do in a single Monday's washing! Is such economy wise?

An American Reporter.

They have a reporter on one of the Williamsburg papers who may not be much on style, but for placid, nervy "get there" he is a jewel. A little while ago he was assigned to a political meeting and asked to give a good report of it. Now, it happened that the festivities were conducted entirely in Polish, a language of which the young man knows nothing. This fact, however, did not faze him a bit. He made his way through the hall, pushed up to the platform and sat down with the secretary. For several minutes he industriously took notes and finally the secretary, turning to him, pumped out a volley of Polish.

"I am not in it, dear boy," retorted the young man as he turned again to listen to the speaker.

The secretary looked surprised. Finally he went out and brought in a man who asked in English:

"Are you a Polish reporter?"

"No," was the reply. "I am an American one."

"Do you understand our language?"

"I never heard it before," retorted the scribbler, "but I think I have picked up enough since I have been here to give a rattling good story."

And he did.—New York Press.

Children's Corner.

A St. Valentine's Game.

Here is a delightful game and one that can be arranged for at a moment's notice, says the American Queen. Take a large sheet and fasten it to a door, first securely basting on it a large red flannel heart. In the center of the heart a small circle is sewn.

Any number of children may participate in the game, each being provided with an arrow made of cardboard with a pin placed in it, and each arrow bearing a number.

The game is to see which child, when blindfolded, will succeed in pinning the arrow nearest to the spot of white. Prizes, heart shaped by preference, should be given for the best three efforts. The prizes add tremendously to the enjoyment of the children.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucuos surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address.

THE NEW REVENUE BILL

Makes a Reduction of Nearly $40,000,000 In Taxes

APPROPRIATIONS FOR NAVY

Will Soon Reach $310,000,000, and Cannon Thinks It About Time to Stop—Says We Could Not Get Rid of the Philippines Even If We Desired To

Washington, Jan. 25.—The senate committee on finance yesterday concluded its consideration of the war revenue reduction bill, and reported it to the senate. The committee reports a complete substitute for the bill as it passed the house. Senator Aldrich made a statement explaining the changes, which are as follows:

"Stamp taxes repealed: Promissory notes, mortgages, bills of lading for export, powers of attorney, protest, charter party, certificates of all kinds, leases, warehouse receipts, telegraphic dispatches, telephone messages, passage tickets costing less than $30, express receipts, freight receipts, bonds, except bonds of indemnity, legacies to religious, charitable, literary or educational institutions.

"Special taxes repealed: Commercial brokers.

"Taxes reduced: Conveyances, insurance, bankers' capital, proprietary medicines, cigars, tobacco, beer."

The statement says: "Having always in view the revenue requirements of the government, the purpose of the committee has been to repeal such of the taxes imposed by the war revenue act of 1898 as are most annoying and burdensome to taxpayers, to retain such as should be kept as a permanent part of our revenue system, or at least retained until all war taxes can be repealed, and to reduce all others as fairly and equitably as possible by some general plan of reduction. Pursuing this general plan it has been possible to reduce the taxes affected approximately one-half.

"Taking the estimates of the treasury department as a basis, the reduction of revenue effected by the bill will be nearly $40,000,000, a reduction less than was produced by the bill as it passed the house of representatives."

The house continued consideration of the naval appropriation bill and practically completed it before adjournment. The provision for the increase of the navy was made the occasion of an interesting debate upon the length to which the building up of the navy was to go, and drew from Mr. Cannon, chairman of the appropriations committee, a statement to the effect that when ships now authorized and to be authorized have been completed, $310,000,000 would have been spent upon the new navy, and that in his opinion the time to stop will then have arrived.

Mr. Cannon said he did not think congress had appropriated too much for the navy, but he wanted the house to proceed with a full knowledge of what had been done. He did not think that the United States needed the largest navy in the world. We would not be called upon to fight England. Her American possessions along our northern border constituted a bond of peace. But we need a strong navy. We have the Philippines and we are going to keep them. We could not get rid of them if we desired to. But we do not want a larger navy than is needed. After we have enacted this bill, he said, we will have gone as far as we should go, and should stop.

The resolution of Mr. Pettigrew of South Dakota concerning the reported deportation of A. Mabini of the Philippines to Guam was adopted yesterday by the senate.

During the consideration of the appropriation for Indian schools, Mr. Butler said he had visited such schools and observed that there were present taking advantage of the benefits children who were not Indians. Mr. Thurston answered that no children are received unless they are regarded as Indians by the tribes. Mr. Butler insisted that many of the children who were attending Indian schools were white, and that the abuse of the Indian school appropriation was flagrant and notorious.

Mr. Pettigrew made a vigorous attack upon the Dawes Indian commission, asserting that there was no more corrupt or extravagant body in the service of the United States than that commission.

Mr. Jones (Ark.) maintained that the criticism by Mr. Pettigrew of the Dawes commission was not well founded in any respect. The work, Mr. Jones said, was being done economically and thoroughly.

Ten More For Guam Colony

Washington, Jan. 25.—A cablegram received from Admiral Remey announces the departure of the hospital ship Solace from Manila for Guam, with 10 Filipino political prisoners, deported to that island by order of General MacArthur. They are charged with having agitated and abetted the movements in the Philippines.

Conditions Probably Improving

Washington, Jan. 25.—A brief cablegram from Commander Sargent of the gunboat Scorpion announces that his vessel has sailed from Laguira for Curacao, to take on a supply of coal. He makes no reference to the existence of any trouble at Laguira, hence it is inferred that conditions in Venezuela are quieter.

Attempt to Be Made to Fix Cable

Duxbury, Mass., Jan. 25.—An attempt is to be made soon to repair the Anglo-American cable, which has its terminus here and is broken somewhere between St. Pierre, Mq., and this port. This section has been out of use for eight months. The cable was laid in 1869.

DOSE OF SOAPSUDS

Had Desired Effect Upon a Criminal Who Tried to Commit "Suicide"

Boston, Jan. 25.—Delia McLean, one of the defendants in a badger game, was so overcome with the adverse finding of the jury that she attempted to commit suicide. She tried to swallow three quinine pills and an equal number of Dover powders, after reaching the detention room. She succeeded in getting a single quinine pill down before a court officer reached her, but that was all.

The pills and powders would have done little harm, except to have caused nausea. Officer McDonough was forcing the woman to spit out the pill in her mouth when Lawyer D. Coakley, her counsel, came into the room. He was indignant at the officer's attempt to choke the woman, but the officer told him what had happened, and someone else speaking of morphine, Mr. Coakley ran to the court room, and, breaking in on the proceedings, called for a doctor to treat a woman who had taken morphine pills. Groans were heard from the woman, as the court room door was ajar, and there were dramatic moments for the court, as a man who responded made Mrs. McLean drink soapsuds, which purged her throughly. The heroic measures taken and the agonizing howls of the woman, who fought against the soapsuds beverage, tended to keep the adjacent court room in a stir. Mrs. McLean was pronounced all right in a short time, and sent over to Charles street jail, where the physician said that Mrs. McLean evidently only bluffed at suicide, as all the drugs she had would have proved harmless. The woman and William Drinkall had been found guilty in a so-called badger game. They will be sentenced later.

THE INDIAN UPRISING

Appears to Be Assuming Dangerous Proportions—Immediate Aid Needed

South McAlester, I. T., Jan. 25.—Scouts sent out from this city report that the disaffected Choctaws have a number of Creek Snakes among them and they have been quietly organizing and arming for some time. They call themselves the Choctaw Snakes. They include all those Indians who are opposed to allotment, and the conflict is between them and the treaty Indians. While non-citizens are not in danger, it is stated that the Snakes have planned to destroy all the railroads in their nation.

Wichita, Kan., Jan. 25.—A telegram received here last night says that Governor Barnes has asked Colonel Hoffman to come to Guthrie, to be ready to take charge of the militia that may be ordered to towns bordering on the Indian Territory. Correspondence with the various border towns shows that the Creek and Choctaw uprisings are very serious. The military company at Shawnee has been ordered to be ready for duty at a moment's notice.

Muskogee, I. T., Jan. 25.—Marshal Bennett has just received a telegram from Bristow announcing that 600 armed Creeks are preparing to attack the town, and pleading for protection. The Indians are dividing up into bands of 100.

"DANGEROUS INCENDIARY"

The Title Applied to a Manila Editor Who Is to Be Deported

Manila, Jan. 25.—General MacArthur has ordered the deportation to the United States of George T. Rice, editor of The Daily Bulletin, a marine journal. The order characterizes him as "a dangerous incendiary and a menace to the military situation." Rice's offense was the publication of allegations that Lieutenant Commander Braunersreuther, captain of the port, had charged excessive pilotage and moorage fees, a percentage of which he had kept for himself.

The report of Major Mills, inspector general, who investigated the allegations, completely exonerated the captain of the port, and indicted the editor and the merchants who had given him the information, and who had been misled by figuring the rate upon the net instead of the gross tonnage, the latter being specified under the Spanish law.

Rice was summoned to the office of the governor general's military secretary, and was called upon to promise that he would publish no more such articles. He declined to give such a pledge, but insisted that the article was truthful and assumed a defiant attitude when threatened with deportation.

The deportation order was then issued, and Rice is now awaiting the departure of the Pennsylvania. When seen in jail yesterday he reiterated his statement that the charges were true.

Rice came originally from Red Wing, Minn., and was formerly a member of the Minnesota volunteers.

THE PRINCIPALS ARRESTED

Mrs. Shilling and Mrs. Nation Led Opposing Armies In a Street Fight

Enterprise, Kan., Jan. 25.—A street fight occurred here yesterday between women, led on one side by Mrs. Carrie Nation, the saloon wrecker, and on the other by Mrs. John Schilling, wife of the manager of the saloon wrecked Wednesday. Mrs. Shilling was backed by female friends.

As a result of the fight Mrs. Nation swore out warrants against Mrs. Shilling and her husband and Mrs. William Bittner, charging them with assault, and Mayor Hoffman swore out a warrant against Mrs. Nation, charging her with disturbing the peace. All were arrested, taken before Judge Holt and released on bond.

Judge Holt bound all concerned over for trial. Mrs. Nation returned to the home of Mr. Hoffman to doctor her wounds, and, as she declared, to "prepare for tomorrow."

Much excitement prevailed over the affair, and business was practically suspended yesterday.

The Social Realm.

The villager, born humbly and bred hard,
Content his wealth and poverty his guard,
In action simply just, in conscience clear,
By guilt untainted, undisturbed by fear,
His means but scanty, and his wants but few,
Labor his business, and his pleasure too,
Enjoys more comforts in a single hour
Than ages give the wretch condemn'd to power.
—Churchill.

A PRISON BIRD.

Keniley's Burglar Proves to be a Dangerous Character.

Thomas Hennssey, the burglar caught red handed by J. J. Keniley Thursday night, turns out to have been a very important capture. The fellow is likely to receive a sentence of 25 years under the habitual criminal act. He was taken to police headquarters in Boston yesterday, where he was recognized as Anthony Lee, an old State prison bird with a score or more aliases and a long record.

The name Thomas Hennessey, which the burglar gave is the same that he used in Boston in 1879 on the occasion of his first arrest there for larceny. He is also a prison breaker, having forced his way out of the Massachusetts state prison in May of 1885, while under a sentence of eight years for burglaries committed in Salem and vicinity.

For these crimes he was sentenced in February of 1884 in the Essex County Court in Salem. He was recaptured a month after breaking out and given three additional years in the state prison making in all a period of imprisonment of 11 years. On that occasion he gave the name of James Riley.

In 1880 he was arrested in Boston for breaking and entering, convicted on July 14 and sentenced to three years in the house of correction.

In 1890 Lee was released from the penitentiary upon the completion of his 11 years' sentence. His term was shortened by good behavior.

Upon gaining his liberty he left Massachusetts, but he returned in a few months and again launched out in burglarious operations.

From here he went to Western Massachusetts, where he was caught looting a house belonging to a selectman. For this crime he was sent back to the state prison on a three years' stretch.

In 1896 he was again taken into custody for burglary in Boston. He made a desperate effort to prove an alibi, but the jurors decided that he was guilty, and he was given a sentence of three years in the house of correction.

It is believed that the break into Keniley's shop was not the main object of the burglars' visit to Quincy, and that if one had not been captured a more serious break might have taken place before morning. By many it is thought that the main object of breaking into Keniley's was to secure tools with which to do other jobs. It also seems possible that after Hennessey had been locked up the inspector should have landed the second man.

If instead of driving wildly about town the police of Boston and Milton had been notified the fellow would have been captured. Both of these places have police signal boxes and as a good description was had of the fellow it would have been good police work to have telephoned these places. As it afterward turned out the fellow went through Adams street and probably escaped through Milton or Wollaston and Atlantic.

Home Science Reception.

There is no more attractive occasion than a dance with the lights and inspiriting dance music—the pretty gowns, bright faces, and animated movements of the dancers. In addition to enjoyment derived from such pleasure, those attending the Home Science reception and ball next Friday will have the satisfation of feeling that they are assisting in an enterprise worthy of encouragement from more than a social point of view. Wisely conducted, as an annual occurrence it is hoped to make it of real value to Quincy, not only as a brilliant social function, but as promoting among Quincy people the spirit of co-operation, friendliness and courtesy which is the surest foundation of an vigorous and efficient civic life—while as contributing to the financial support of the good work of the Home Science Association it is significant of Quincy's growing interest in the larger educational and philanthropic issues which are today the concern of all enlightened and progressive communities.

Q. H. S. Reunion.

The seventh annual reunion of the Alumni Association of the Quincy High school was held last evening at High School hall. From 7.45 to 8.15 there was a reception, which was followed by dancing until 12 o'clock. The receiving party were Miss Mabel E. Adams, president of the Alumni association; Mr. Charles F. Harper, head master of the High school, and Superintendent and Mrs. Frank E. Parlin. A corps of pretty young ladies acted as ushers and also served frappe during the evening. The affair was largely attended and was a success in every way. The association will hold a banquet about April 1 at a Boston hotel.

THE CHARGES.

Those Against Inspector Keniley Not the Old Ones.

The charges as preferred by the Board of Health against J. J. Keniley, the inspector of plumbing, are as follows:

"First—That said inspector has wrongfully permitted and allowed in the house of Peter Morton, situated on Bennington street, in said Quincy, a Y branch without a brass screw clean out in a direct line with sewer or cesspool.

"Second—That said inpectors at the Quincy Adams station, N. Y., N. H. & H. R. R. did wrongfully allow and permit the installation of a drain pipe without a running trap.

"Third—That in said station in Quincy Adams said inspector did not require to be installeed a back vent in the water closet, in accordance with the ordinances of the city.

"Fourth—That said inspector in the house now or lately occupied by F. W. Masters, Robertson street, in said Quincy, did wrongfully allow and permit a soil pipe to be installed within the distance of a window prohibited by the ordinance of said city.

"Fifth—That said inspector did in the house of S. B. Wiley, Jr., Highland avenue, Wollaston, permit the laying of a light soil pipe below the cellar bottom in violation of the ordinance of the city.

"Sixth—That said inspector did not report to the board of health the unsatisfactory condition of the plumbing work situated in a building supposed to be owned by the Bay State building company, corner of Chubbuck and Washington streets, in said Quincy, said inspector having made a first inspecion of said premises, said failure to so report to the board being in violation of the ordinance of the city.

"Seventh—Also Music hall block, in banquet hall on second floor, water running into brook instead of cesspool.

"Eighth—That it has been brought to the attention of the board many times within the last year that certain plumers within the city are discriminated against in the matter of inspection of plumbing work. The present inspector is believed to be so closely interested with a plumbing concern in the said city of Quincy as to prevent a fair competition between the plumbers of the city in procuring work. That the board has been subjected to great annoyance and expense, to need less and unnecessary labor, inconvenience and stress of mind in investigating complaints against the inspector by the citizens."

THE UNITY CLUB

Listen to Papers on Modern Aspect of Education.

The program at the Wollaston Unity club last evening was given up to the consideration of modern aspect of education.

Mr. Charles E. Finch, the leader in charge, introduced Miss Kennedy, who read a paper describing the objects of "Nature Study" in the schools. The child learns observaiton of the wonderful things in nature, thereby laying the foundation on which he builds up a scientific as well as appreciative knowledge of nature.

Miss Marry V. Hastings sang Bullard's, "I love my lady's eyes," with sweetness and force.

Miss Fanny Johnson related a dream showing what wonders can be accomplished through "Physical Culture." Daily exercise benefits everyone, young and old, and the day is coming, the speaker said, when the gymnasium will be a necessity in every school.

Mrs. C. W. Smith and Mrs. Moulton played a duet with spirit.

Mr. Chalres F. Merrick spoke forcibly of the value of studies that give boys "power to do." "Manual Training" is one of many methods to attain this end. There is no "cure all," he said, each study has its value, but the end is not knowledge. The question today is what can you do, not what do you know. Manual training should promote in a boy self-reliance, honesty and precision.

Miss Hastings sang again, responding to a hearty encore.

Mr. Lull, superintendent of Newport schools, spoke a few words.

The secretary reported an attendance of 79 and a paid up membership of 140.

An unpublished letter of Columbus addressed to two officers of the king of Arragon, in 1493, was read at the last session of the academy of Moral and Political Science in Paris.

As speaking tubes are found not to work on the English warships owing to the rattling of the machinery, the admirality has determined to try telephones.

OPEN THE DOOR.

Open the door, let in the air;
The winds are sweet, and the flowers are fair.
Joy is abroad in the world today;
If our door is wide, it may come this way.
Open the door!

Open the door, let in the sun;
He hath a smile for every one;
He hath made of the raindrops gold and gems,
He may change our tears to diadems;
Open the door!

Open the door of the soul; let in Strong, pure thoughts which shall banish sin.
They will grow and bloom with a grace divine,
And their fruit shall be sweeter than that of the vine.
Open the door!

Open the door of the heart; let in Sympathy sweet for stranger and kin.
It will make the halls of the heart so fair
That angels may enter unaware.
Open the door!

MY WIFE'S FUR CAPE.

BY EMMA W. WISE.

The man with the red mustache nodded in friendly manner to the meek looking passenger on the front platform.

"There is a strong affinity between that man and myself," he said. "I suppose it was the circumstances under which we became acquainted that united us in ties of brotherly love. We were both sufferers in the same cause and consequently were in a position to sympathize with each other. The cause of our trouble was a fur cape. Four years ago this winter my wife took a notion that she wanted a cape of Persian lamb. She wasn't as reasonable in financial matters then as she now is, and when I intimated that I couldn't afford that luxury she pouted and showed a disposition to be generally ugly.

"'I haven't had anything new for a good while,' she said. 'I've skimped along and saved and worried and pinched all summer, and I don't think it looks right to act stingy with me now. I worried through last winter, too, with next to nothing, and I really think I deserve the cape.'

"That was her parting shot as I left the breakfast table, and all the morning it rankled in a vital spot. I could not be oblivious to the fact that the dear woman had indeed got through the last year with a limited wardrobe, and I made up my mind to strain a point and see if I couldn't make the rifle in regard to the coveted cape. I went up town that afternoon fully determined that if I could get a good garment at a reasonable figure I would buy it at once, even though the purchase might entail the sacrifice of a number of little luxuries I had counted on laying in for my own use in the near future. Finally I came to a window in which a number of apparently superfine fur wraps were on exhibition. The store was a pawnshop, but on the impulse of the moment I stepped in and asked the proprietor if he had any capes in Persian lamb.

"'I haf,' said he—'I haf von of de ferry vinest cabes in dis down, und I am giving him avay dirt cheab.'

"The fellow ransacked around in an inner room for a few minutes and at length returned with a garment which even my uncritical eye could tell at a glance was the real thing.

"'I vas aboud to send id to de auction shop,' he said. 'If id is a cabe you vant, you haf yoost in time come. This cabe is magneeficent—length, 27 inches; sweep, 126 inches. Id vas broughd in here by a man who bromised to redeem id ride avay soon, bud now more as a year haf passed, und he not show up, so I shall sell de cabe. How much you dink id vorth?'

"'How much do you think?' I asked.

"'Vell,' said he, 'id is easy vorth $200, but I sell id cheab. I let you haf de cabe for $50 cash.'

"I examined the garment carefully. The fur, as far as I could see, was in excellent condition. The lining was without flaw, and there were a tone and style to the cut that would, I felt sure, bring joy to the heart of my fastidious wife. With all the cape's merits, I was not ready to swear that the $200 valuation was correct, but I was positive that it was worth $50, and I rashly closed the bargain then and there. I carried the cape down to my office myself. I had there a large paper box bearing the address of a reliable furrier, and in this I packed the wrap and gave it to a messenger boy, with instructions to be sure to deliver the package at my house before 6 o'clock. That evening when I got home my wife was fairly effervescing with happiness and affection.

"'It was so lovely of you, Donald!' she said. 'Are you really sure you could afford it? After you were gone this morning I felt awfully ashamed of myself for having been so cross. I know you always do the very best you can by me. I hope, dear, that you didn't skimp yourself in any way in order to buy this lovely wrap. Are you sure it was wise to buy it at Sellers'? They are so high priced. How much did you pay for this, Donald, dear?

"My wife's unstinted praise of my generosity fed my vanity and made me desirous to maintain a high standard in her estimation, and I said coolly, 'Two hundred dollars.'

"For two months after the advent of the Persian lamb cape into our household we were superlatively happy. But all the while clouds were gathering on the domestic horizon unperceived by me, and one day the storm burst. We were dining in a popular restaurant when the deluge came. The woman who sat at the small table at our right pulled out the stopper and precipitated the catastrophe. She watched my wife closely as she removed her fur cape and spread it out on the back of her chair. She said nothing until we had finished our soup, then she leaned forward and tapped my wife's elbow softly.

"'Pardon me, madam,' she said, 'but will you kindly tell me where you got that cape?'

"She spoke in a whisper, but my wife and I heard, and the woman's companion—that man out there on the platform—also heard. The poor fellow looked as if he would literally shrivel up with mortification. 'Caroline,' he admonished, 'for heaven's sake, keep your temper. Don't make a scene.'

"'I'm not making a scene,' retorted the woman; 'I'm simply asking this lady where she got her wrap. Surely she has no objection to answering a harmless question like that.'

"My wife's face was very white, which with her is a sign of anger, but she answered coolly: 'Certainly not. I don't think it any of your business; but, if you must know, I bought it, or, rather, my husband bought it at Sellers'. He paid,' she added proudly, '$200 for it.'

"The little man sank back with a sigh of relief, but the woman dashed on another coat of war paint. 'I don't wish to appear rude,' she said, 'but I feel compelled to tell you that that cape was never bought in that store. It is mine. It was stolen from my house'—

"My wife flashed me a frightened, questioning glance. 'Donald,' she gasped.

"'Never,' I said fervently.

"'More than a year ago,' proceeded the woman.

"'Oh,' ejaculated my wife, 'that's different! I've had the garment only two months. You can't blame us.'

"Now that I had been exonerated of the theft I felt bold enough to put in an oar of my own. 'Madam,' said I, 'since you seem so positive that this cape once belonged to you, perhaps you won't mind explaining your means of identification.'

"'I can identify it,' she said, 'by the handkerchief pocket. Do you see these tiny buttons stitched around the top? Well, they are arranged in the form of the letters "C. D." Those are my initials. They stand for Caroline Drake. That is my name. Now are you satisfied? I'll warrant you wouldn't find another pocket in town trimmed like that. It was my own idea and strictly original.'

"My wife looked at the buttons indifferently. 'I see nothing convincing about that,' she said. 'We'll all go down to Sellers' tomorrow and settle the matter there.'

"Again my heart palpitated. I knew Sellers, and I was also well aware that that cape would never bear investigation at their hands. In order to prevent still more painful complications I did what I should have done in the first place. I told how I came by the cape. As I finished my tale of transgression and late repentance I looked across the table appealingly, but my wife turned her back squarely upon me and addressed her remarks to the woman.

"'Madam,' she said, 'take your old cape. Pray, take it at once. I wouldn't wear it again if it were the last wrap on earth. I'd go home in my bare shoulders first. To think that my husband, who has always pretended to be so fond of me and for whom I have borne so much, should insult me by giving me a cape that he had picked up in a pawnshop cuts me to the heart. I am grieved beyond expression. His conduct is really incredible, and I don't think I shall ever get over it.'

"Mrs. Drake sighed softly. 'It was a shameful way to treat you,' she said. 'I'm very sorry, but men are all alike.'

"'Quite true,' assented my wife amiably, 'and now, since my husband had the nerve to buy this cape in a pawnshop, I shouldn't be at all surprised to learn that your husband sold it there.'

"I looked around at Drake, who seemed for a moment on the point of vanishing under the table. He braced up, however, and spoke out with a bravery second to none but my own. 'I did,' he said firmly. 'Now that we are all in for it I may as well own up. It was the time I had to pay that bill of Hammond's. Callie, don't you remember? I thought I could redeem the thing in a little while and you would never know it had been taken out of the house, but a cold snap came along ahead of time, and you discovered your loss. I didn't dare confess then. I talked you into thinking burglars had swiped it.'

"'You thought you had talked me into that belief,' retorted Mrs. Drake. 'I never really thought so. I thought all the time your mother had stolen it. That's the reason I never made any effort to find it. I felt sure the detectives would trace it to her if I pushed the matter, and out of consideration for your feelings I let the thing drop. And this is the reward I get for my self sacrifice.'

"It was my wife's turn to offer consolation. 'Men are all alike,' she said.

"I looked at Drake, and Drake looked at me. 'They are,' we said in unison.

"Mrs. Drake took the fur cape home with her and I had to go up to our house and bring down my wife's old jacket before she would budge out of the restaurant. Practically speaking, that ended the acquaintance between us and the Drakes. Still, Drake and I meet around town occasionally, just as we did this evening, and we always pass the time of day. As I said, we understand each other, and the current of our mutual sympathy is very strong."—New York Herald.

Natural Causes.

"As I understand it," remarked the stranger, as the procession disappeared over the hill, "the coroner's jury returned a verdict of death from natural causes."

"Yes," replied Rattlesnake Pete, "you see, he was naturally slow, and so was slower with his gun than the other fellow, which made it very easy to get a quick verdict."—Colorado Springs Gazette.

GOLD IN ABUNDANCE.

AN INVENTION THAT PROMISES TO DOUBLE THE OUTPUT.

Difficult Problem of Separating Magnetite From Gold Solved—Simple, of Small Size and Inexpensive—May Be Operated by Hand or Motor.

A machine that bids fair to double the gold output of the world, revolutionizing methods of separating gold from crushed quartz, and particularly from river, beach and placer sands, has recently been constructed in Washington, and such confidence is entertained in its practical value that hundreds of thousands of dollars have already been invested in it, says the New York Herald.

For instance, in one single mine, where the output has hitherto not quite paid expenses, the profits will be several million dollars annually. Mine owners out in that part of the country are wild about it, and a belief is entertained that it will convert at least 500 nonpaying western properties of the kind into richly profitable deposits.

The invention has been newly patented by Professor Elmer Gates, and its whole secret lies in removing from the gold bearing sand the magnetic iron, known as "magnetite," which such stuff always contains, as a preliminary to separating the gold. Under ordinary circumstances the sand, poured, with water, through a long trough called a "sluice box," is separated by gravity from the gold, the latter sinking to the bottom of the trough by reason of its greater weight and then being caught in crosswise slots, from which it is afterward removed. The chief difficulty in the process is due to the magnetite, which, being nearly as heavy as the gold, collects in the slots, or riffles, and chokes them up.

If the magnetite were absent, a much larger percentage of the gold contained in the sand could be got out of it; hence for many years the problem of getting rid of this objectionable substance has exercised the minds of inventors. Various machines have been devised for the purpose, but none of them has taken out all the magnetite, and not one of them has been able to handle wet sand. It costs too much money to dry sand, and this has been the financial difficulty. The obstacle is overcome, however, by the new machine, which not only removes every particle of the magnetite from the sand, but works wet sand under water. It handles moist or soaking wet sand as easily as dry.

Perhaps the most striking points about the machine at first glance are its extreme simplicity and its small size relatively to the work it accomplishes. It may be stood conveniently on a small table and easily operated by hand with a crank. Ordinarily, however, an electric motor furnishes the trifling power required. The apparatus consists of a copper drum about as big as a good sized toy drum, inside of which is a powerful electromagnet. The core of the magnet consists of a bunch of iron plates with fluted edges on the pole face of one end, likewise within the drum, but which approach their fluted edges close to the inside of the copper periphery of the latter.

What is seen from the outside is simply the drum which conceals the magnet and corrugated pole face plates and a sort of hopper above into which the sand is poured. Small as the machine is, it is capable of handling in this way 110 tons of sand in a day, sifting out every particle of magnetite from that quantity of raw material.

As the sand is poured into the hopper it falls through it and against the side of the revolving drum. The drum, thanks to the magnet inside of it, draws every particle of the magnet iron out of the sand and holds it tightly against the outside of the revolving copper drum, while the sand—that is to say, the siliceous particles and dirt—drops straight down into a receptacle beneath the table. The particles of iron while magnetically held against the drum are moved downward by it over the wavy lines of force of fluted magnet face and vigorously shaken to and fro so as to detach all foreign matter. It picks the attracted sand into thousands of pieces and shakes out the nonmagnetic sand. This is one of the prime features of the machine.

It will be understood that the siliceous sand is not attracted by the magnet, and on that account falls vertically, whereas the particles of iron, which look like iron filings, stick fast to the drum in rapidly oscillating bunches until they drop off by their own weight into another receptacle. As a result, all the iron (magnetite) is in one box and the sand and other nonmagnetic stuff, among which is the gold, in another box.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Topic For the Week Beginning Jan. 27—Comment by Rev. S. H. Doyle.

Topic.—Missions, Resolutions.—Rom. i, 14-16.

Paul was the greatest missionary of the apostolic church. In resolution as well as in action he ever stands as the ideal missionary. His attitude toward the unsaved, his readiness to preach the gospel to them and his reasons for being so anxious to do so are clearly set forth in his splendid words to the Romans: "I am a debtor both to the Greeks and to the barbarians; both to the wise and unwise. So as much as in me is I am ready to preach the gospel to you that are at Rome also, for I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ, for it is the power of God to every one who believeth, to the Jew first and also to the Greek."

1. Paul's indebtedness to the unsaved. "I am a debtor to the Greeks and to the barbarians; both to the wise and unwise." Why was Paul indebted to all classes? It was not because of anything they had done for him. The Greeks had done nothing to put him under obligation to them. No more had the barbarians, the wise or the unwise. Paul's debt has been well called the "debt of strength." They needed the gospel. He had the gospel and the opportunity and ability to give it to them. Therefore he was under obligation to do so—the obligation of strength. Strength is always under obligation to weakness. The physically strong owe a debt to the physically weak. The financially strong owe a debt to the financially weak. Much more does spiritual strength owe a debt to spiritual weakness. Weakness always appeals to strength. Those that have are morally indebted to those who have not. We have the gospel today. The world needs it. To the extent of our ability to supply this need to the world we are under obligation to do so.

2. Paul's readiness to preach the gospel to the unsaved. "So, as much as in me is, I am ready to preach the gospel to you that are at Rome also." Paul not only recognized his indebtedness to the Romans, but he was ready to pay it. "I am ready." Readiness was a characteristic of the great apostle's life. He was ready to go to Rome to preach the gospel, ready to go to Jerusalem to face persecution, danger and death, and when martyrdom loomed up before him he was "ready to be offered up." We owe the same debt to heathendom that Paul owed. Are we ready to pay it? Are we ready to deny ourselves, to sacrifice ourselves if need be, that the heathen may be saved? We should be. At the call of God we should be ready to give time, money, prayer or self for the Christianization of the world. God calls. What is your answer? May it always be, "I am ready," "Here am I, send me."

3. Paul's reason for readiness. He was ready to preach the gospel at Rome because he was not ashamed of the gospel, and he was not ashamed of the gospel because it was the power of God unto salvation to every one who believed. The gospel is still the power of God unto salvation. Therefore it actually saves men. Therefore it is able to save all men who will believe in it, and for these reasons we should be ready and should resolve to do all in our power to send the gospel to all men—"Greeks and barbarians, wise and unwise."

THE PRAYER MEETING.

Have a "Bible reading" upon the subject of foreign missions.

BIBLE READINGS.

Isa. vi, 1-8; lii, 7; Jonah iii, 1-10; Nah. i, 15; Math. xxviii, 19, 20; Acts i, 1-8; xiii, 1-3; Rom. x, 14, 15; I Cor. ix, 16.

Thorough Consideration of the Character of Our Prayers.

If you had a friend to whom you never went but to ask for something and if your visits to your friend were made not once, but twice, or even oftener, every day, what do you suppose your friend would think of you? What, indeed, in such a case, ought you to think of yourself? Nothing, surely, that would be very flattering to your self respect. And yet there are multitudes who never go to God except for favors, who never approach Him but as beggars and suppliants. Their prayers are better than no prayers, for the infinite mercy is unwearied by our sordidness and weakness. But how incalculably much is lost by failure to recogniz prayer as the opportunity for communion, as of sons with the loving Father, for absorption, during however brief a space, into the divine nature, whence to emerge with spirits chastened, purified, unburdened! Joy in the mere prayer of mendicancy we shall not know, but there is joy unspeakable in the prayer of fellowship.—Examiner.

Bibles For the Heathen.

Over 5,000,000 copies of the Bible were sold by the British and Foreign Bible society last year. This is an increase of 1,000,000 over the sales of the year before, says a London newspaper. Sixty thousand "parts" of the Testament were printed and bound for the use of the troops in South Africa. But for this number the sale of Bibles in England has remained for two years at 2,000,000 copies. The missionaries are responsible for the additional million in the output. The heathen has more Bibles than ever before. Most of the books were printed in China and in Chinese characters. Many were printed in Hindoostanee. If the present rate of increase is kept up and each Bible represents a converted heathen, the world may be all Christian about two centuries hence.

NEVER TO BE OPENED

Lid Is Finally Placed Upon the Queen Victoria's Coffin

A MOST PATHETIC SCENE

As Relatives Looked Upon Sovereign's Features For Last Time — Emperor William Wept More Bitterly Than the Women--Queen's Will Not Yet Opened

Cowes, Jan. 26.—The royal family yesterday took their last loving look at the features of the dead queen. The shell was brought into the bedroom, where were waiting King Edward, Emperor William, the Duke of Connaught, Sir James Reid and the royal ladies. The latter having retired, Sir James Reid, assisted by three servants, and in the presence of the king, the emperor and the duke, removed the body from the bed to the coffin.

In death it was lovlier than in the closing days of life. Not a trace of the ravages of the disease was visible. The servants having retired, Queen Alexandra, the princesses and the children were recalled, and with lingering steps and stifled sobs they passed slowly before this white robed and peaceful figure. At the foot, never moving, stood the king, and when the mourning crowd had passed there remained only the son and grandson of the dead. Emperor William wept even more bitterly than the royal ladies. Finally he also retired, and the king was left alone.

Sir James Reid, beckoning to the servants with the coffin lid, asked the king's instructions. For a few seconds the king stood speechless, stricken with emotion at the last farewell. Then he said: "Close it finally. It must not be opened again."

Thus the remains of England's greatest ruler were forever closed from human view. Reverently the coffin was borne to the dining room. Officers and men from the royal yacht took their stand around the coffin, over which the king, queen and kaiser laid the robes of a Knight of the Garter, placing at the head a diamond crown. Beneath lay the royal ensign, while hanging above was the union jack.

At the altar was the rector of Whippingham, who read a portion of the funeral service in the presence of the royal family. Emperor William covered his face with his hands and the grief of Princess Beatrice was pitiful. After the benediction each placed a wreath upon the coffin, and then all retired.

The correspondent of the Associated Press is informed that the queen's will has not been opened, and that, according to present arrangements, it will not be opened until after the funeral, its details being unknown to the royal family.

There is no truth in the statement that King Edward and Emperor William knelt by the bedside of the queen and swore to preserve peace.

A significant feature of all the deathbed scenes has been their absolute naturalness and the absence of false or dramatic elements.

According to a rumor circulating at Osborne, King Edward desires himself to be styled his imperial majesty, in order to emphasize the fact that he is emperor as well as king.

Today the local volunteers and the forces in the vicinity passed through the chapelle ardente. After these passed the correspondents of the leading papers of the world.

A very remarkable feature of all the proceedings is the intense martial air which pervades them. The naval parade off Spithead is to be the greatest, if possible, the world ever saw, and the military arrangements at Windsor will eclipse anything of the kind ever attempted.

Last night grenadiers mounted their silent guard over the coffin, with guns reversed and arms crossed and heads bent. The silence was unbroken, save by an occasional shuffle from the soldiers in changing their uneasy position.

It is virtually settled that there will be an imposing funeral procession through London, headed by the king, Emperor William and Lord Roberts. The route will be nearly the same as that of Lord Robert's triumphal entry, but reversed.

It is said that the Duke and Duchess of Cornwall and York will proceed to Australia as originally arranged, the king being unwilling to allow private sorrow to interfere with an undertaking of such imperial significance.

Cardinal Vaughan's Tribute

London, Jan. 26.—Cardinal Vaughan, in the course of a very sympathetic letter, to be read in the Catholic churches in London, says that Queen Victoria was "an object of the greatest reverence on the part of all Catholics, from the pope downward. We fully and acutely share in the national sorrow," continues the cardinal, "and trust and pray that the noble traditions established by the mother may be carried on and perfected by the son. The attachment of Catholics to the throne and the dynasty are beyond suspicion."

DEADLOCK STILL ON

Lawrence Common Council Cannot Agree Upon a President

Lawrence, Mass., Jan. 26.—The common council of this city ballotted all night for a president. Up to 2 o'clock 250 ballots were taken, making 750 since the deadlock began. The council went into session at 8 o'clock, and the monotonous balloting was varied by a recess at 11:50 for lunch, interspersed with addresses by Republican members of the council, who pleaded for a compromise. Councilman Bartley, the Democratic candidate for president, replied, saying that he was in the hands of the Democratic members, but there was no response from that side. The prospects are good for an all-day session.

THE INDIAN "UPRISING"

Has Not Developed Anything Serious as Yet

SOLDIERS ARE IN READINESS

To Suppress Any Hostile Demonstrations—No Uneasiness Between Whites and Choctaw Nation — Fears That Outlaws May Make Trouble

Guthrie, Jan. 26.—Governor Barnes has ordered two militia companies at Chandler and Shawnee to be in readiness to start at any moment for the Indian Territory line. Three thousand rounds of ammunition were provided for each company. Governor Barnes received many messages yesterday from citizens of Stroud and Chandler, situated near the Creek Nation, asking that military be sent at once to protect life and property by patroling the line. There is apparently little fear of the Indians, but there is danger that the outlaws who infest the Creek county will raid banks and stores in Oklahoma, under the guise of Indians. Governor Barnes will not send the troops unless the situation becomes more threatening than at present.

Dixon Met No Indians

Omaha, Jan. 26.—General Lee last night received a telegraphic report from Lieutenant Dixon, commanding the troop of cavalry sent to the scene of the Creek Indian trouble. He stated that he has not yet made a full investigation, but has learned enough to warrant his saying that the reports of the uprising have been greatly exaggerated. Thus far he has encountered no Indians, and from civilians he learns there has been no violence on the part of the Indians, and he anticipates none. The report from Lieutenant Dixon comes from Henrietta.

Choctaws' Enthusiasm Dampened

South McAlester, I. T., Jan. 26.—Several deputies came in yesterday and reported the Indians quiet. One said their plans had been given away by somebody, and they were going to make new ones. The arrival of the troops in the territory and the prompt measures taken by the government in the northern districts to suppress the Snakes have been reported to the Choctaw faction, and have had the effect of dampening enthusiasm. Besides the Choctaws have no active leader, and the organization is not as perfect as in the Creek nation. Governor Duke at Fort Smith sends instructions to the sheriffs to arrest trouble makers. No uneasiness is felt among the whites in the Choctaw nation. The marshal has a number of scouts out trying to catch the leaders. If successful, they will be arrested, and that will likely end the Choctaw insurrection.

Creek Towns Have Pickets Out

Muskogee, I. T., Jan. 26.—Marshal Bennett, in an interview last night, stated that while the situation is still alarming he thinks it is now in hand. United States Judge Gill has ordered Commissioner Sanson to proceed with Marshal Bennet and deputies and join the troops now at Henrietta, and try all light horsemen on a charge of treason and commit them to jail. Over 50 writs have been issued for the arrest of light horsemen and leaders. The Snake band had a council at Hickory town yesterday, which is still in session. Outside towns are armed, prepared for any emergency. Several towns in the Creek nation have pickets out.

Settlers Flocking to Towns

St. Louis, Jan. 26.—A. B. Donaldson, who has extensive mining interests in South McAlester, I. T., and who arrived here yesterday direct from the scene of the threatened Indian trouble, said: "The thing most to be feared is the introduction of liquor among the hostiles. If the leaders can get their sympathizers drunk, wholesale massacre of the whites will follow. Many persons recognize this, and the settlers are flocking to the towns. The Indians are holding dances and are working themselves up to a state of excitement."

Checotah In No Danger of Attack

Checotah, I. T., Jan. 26.—H. G. Turner of Brush Hill, where the Snake band of Indians are supposed to be in camp, was in Checotah yesterday, and says there is no truth in the report from Eufalfa of an Indian uprising. The Indians, he says, who are supposed to be indulging in the war dance, are at work. It is true that a few Indians are attempting to enforce some of their old laws, wherein members of their own tribes are concerned. Checotah is in no danger of attack.

Once Threatened to Cane Eagan

Asheville, N. C., Jan. 26.—Colonel Andrew McGonnigle, U. S. A., retired, died here last night. Colonel McGonnigle was a distinguished officer during the Civil war. He was court-martialed in 1875 on the charge of conduct unbecoming an officer, and for cursing and threatening to cane Captain Eagan, who was afterwards made commissary general.

Application For Receiver Denied

Trenton, Jan. 26.—Judge Kirpatrick yesterday, in the United States supreme court, denied the application for the appointment of a receiver for the Cuban Land and Steamship company. The judge said he would not assume fraud on the part of the officers of the company.

HEAVY LOSSES BY FIRE

Damage of $550,000 Wrought at Chicago—Other Conflagrations

Chicago, Jan. 26.—Fire of a mysterious origin destroyed the big wholesale glassware and crockery store of Pitkin & Brooks, corner of Lake and State streets, this morning, causing a loss of $550,000 and injuring several firemen. The latter were hurt by falling glassware or were scorched by flames which suddenly burst from the windows.

The fire was first discovered in the rear part of the second story, and evidently had been burning slowly some time. Adjacent buildings, though seriously threatened, were saved. In front of the Pitkin & Brooks building is the Union Elevated Loop railway, which was damaged somewhat by the intense heat. The firm of Pitkin & Brooks is one of the oldest in Chicago.

A Blaze at Danvers

Danvers, Mass., Jan. 26.—Fire this morning caused a loss of $3000 to a building owned by the Catholic Total Abstinence society, and to the stock of Luther A. Guppy, carpenter, the occupant of part of the building. The cause of the fire is unknown.

Another Big Fire at Montreal

Montreal, Jan. 26.—D. A. McPherson and Hodgson Bros., dealers in butter and cheese, were burned out yesterday. About 25,000 boxes of cheese were destroyed. McPherson's loss is about $250,000; Hodgsons' loss, about $10,000.

Bullet Through His Heart

New York, Jan. 26.—George Dressel was shot through the heart and instantly killed last night in a shooting gallery on the Bowery. Dressel painted the targets, etc. Walter J. Kelly was the acting manager of the place. A customer had asked for a rifle to shoot at one of the imaginary birds, and Kelly picked up the weapon and turned to hand it to the patron. The rifle exploded, and Dressel dropped to the floor and expired. Kelly is held on the charge of murder.

End of Hoisting Engineers' Union

Indianapolis, Jan. 26.—The delegates to the national convention of the United Mine Workers of America declined yesterday to enter into an agreement with the National Brotherhood of Hoisting Engineers. This action, in all probability, sounds the death knell of the National Brotherhood of Hoisting Engineers, as it is not believed the union is strong enough to withstand the opposition developed at the convention.

Fell From Bumpers

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., Jan. 26.—William F. Kelly, a patient in the Hudson river state hospital, 28 years old, escaped from the institution and boarded a freight train, riding on the bumpers between two cars. At Fishkill Kelly was knocked from his perch, and the train passed over him. He was carried to the Fishkill hospital, where he begged for a revolver to end his suffering. He died at midnight.

The Champion Figure Skater

New York, Jan. 26.—For the fourth time in his career as a skater, A. G. Keane of the N. Y. A. C. won the figure skating championship of the United States and Canada, held in this city last night. There were 19 events, embracing all forms of fancy and difficult figure skating. In all but two of the events Keane showed superiority. In the exceptional cases he divided the honors.

Judgment In Favor of Alger

Nashville, Jan. 26.—A decree has been entered in the United States circuit court in the case of Russell A. Alger vs T. R. Anderson and others, upon a mandate from the United States court of appeals for the sixth district, whereby General Alger is given a personal judgment for $201,014. The litigation grew out of the purchase of several tracts of coal and mineral lands.

Lascelle Convicted of Forgery

New York, Jan. 26.—James Lascelle, 63 years old, a man without a name, pleaded guilty to forgery in the second degree yesterday before Judge Cowing, and was remanded for sentence. Lascelle was formerly cashier in the Keystone bank of Philadelphia, which failed. He and Charles H. Gardner were arrested last week on a charge of putting out spurious notes.

Dynamite Used on Troops' Train

Pretoria, Jan. 26.—A train, with Lord Kitchener and a body of troops, proceeded toward Middleburg on Wednesday, an armored pilot engine preceding. It was derailed by dynamite near Balmoral. The Boers opened fire and the British replied heavily. Ultimately the Boers were driven off. The British sustained no casualties.

Steamer Wreckage Identified

Vancouver, B. C., Jan. 26.—There is now no doubt that the wreckage found along the west coast of Vancouver, near the mouth of the Columbia river, is from the salmon steamer Ardnamurchan. It is now believed that the entire crew perished.

Ten Years None Too Long

New York, Jan. 26.—Abraham Magid, a tailor, was sentenced to prison for 10 years yesterday by Judge Foster for assault on Rachel Mutchnick, 17 years old. Magid, after ruining the girl, placed her in a disorderly house.

Mrs. Nation's Assailants Fined

Abilene, Kan., Jan. 26.—All of Mrs. Nation's assailants at Enterprise were tried yesterday, found guilty and fined $1 each. The saloons reopened and did a big business.

Good Afternoon.

Any system of dividing the corporation tax levied by the State more equally should be encouraged by the taxpayers at large. Now the rich man is favored and the poor towns have to struggle. The bill of Representative Luce of Somerville, therefore has considerable merit and we are pleased to give it publicity. It reads:

"Section 1. That portion of tax collected by the treasurer of the Commonwealth from steam railroad corporations and which, under the provision of sections fifty-seven and fifty-eight of chapter thirteen of the public Statutes has heretofore been credited and paid to the several cities and towns in which shareholders of such corporations reside, shall, after this act takes effect, be retained by the treasurer of the Commowealth and shall be used for the general purposes of the Commonwealth in the same manner as other revenues of the Commonwealth, not specifically appropriated are used.

"Section 2. This act shall take effect upon its passage."

Referring to this proposed legislation, Representative Luce recently said:

"Something more than a million dollars of steam road tax is now distributed annually. The State tax paid by cities and towns is a million and a half. Therefore the retention of the tax by the State would cut off two-thirds of the present State tax. Localities having an unusual number of railroad stockholders, such as the tax-dodging villages, would lose by the measure, cities and towns having few stockholders would make a net gain. But the matter of local gain or loss is not the chief thing. It is rather justice and propriety of using railroad revenue to pay expenses the railroads entail. The State with its cities and towns is now spending an average of $600,000 a year in abolishing grade crossings. But a fraction of the work has been done. More than 2,000 grade crossings yet remain. The elevation of the Fitchburg tracks in Somerville will cost $1,500,000 or thereabouts, of which the city will pay $150,000 and the State $375,000 Why should the tax on the roadbed thus raised not be taken by the State to meet this and like expenses? Railroads are exempted from local taxation on their right of way, a strip five rods wide. It is estimated that this deprives Somerville of two million dollars' worth of taxable property, on which the tax would be more than $30,000 a year. The average passenger train is worth from $12,000 to $15,000, and the tax on it is not far from $200 a year. Why should the revenue from it not be used for paying the civic expense it entails? We have to furnish fire and police protection, sewer, water and all the other municipal privileges. Why should the revenue go to a place like Nahant, that has not an inch of track within it borders?"

Although it is the opinion of many that Quincy is over-churched (in edifices not in religion,) the number of churches continue to multiply faster than the population, and it is not surprising that many of them have to expend most of their energies in making the financial ends meet. The latest edifice of the Finnish Evangelical Mission, is, we believe, the 27th church in Quincy, and their are other religious societies which meet in public halls, making about 30 religious societies for a population of 24,000, or one for every 800 population. That our Finland citizens are able to build such a finely appointed church as the one described to-day is somewhat surprising, but all wish the society success.

It makes a difference who prefers charges—the Board of Health or some one outside. If the board is determined that Inspector Keniley shall get out there is no question but what they will be successful in the movement.

Drift of Opinion.

☞A Connecticut newspaper has spoken of Providence and Newport as "the two principal towns" of Rhode Island, whereat some of the Roode Island newspapers arise to say that other towns are bigger than Newport and therefore "more principal," so to speak. But to all such pretensions there can be but one reply—so long as Newport can enchant the country with its swell weddings, Pawtucket and Woonsocket may as well not exist for purposes of fame.—New Bedford Standard.

☞We must fight Americanism with its own methods; the battle must be fought with their weapons, and wherever possible their weapons must be bettered and improved by us. Or, to speak with other and more practical words, Germany—Europe —must adopt improved methods in every department of industry, must use more and more effective machinery. Manufacturers, as well as merchants, must go to America send thither their assistants and workingmen, not merely to superficially observe the methods there employed, but to study them thoroughly, to adopt them, and wherever possible to improve upon them, just as the Americans have done, and are still doing, in Europe.—Hamburger Fremdenblatt.

☞We have it on the authority of a writer in the Home Journal that "the chaperone requirement is an insult alike to the man and the woman in the case;" that placing a young couple under surveillance "is an intimation that the man is not sufficiently honorable and the woman sufficiently discreet and well-bred to be trusted." The writer in the Home Journal looks at the chaperone from the wrong point of view. It is not her office to watch over the young couple. Her presence simply says to the public that it need not be suspicious. It is not the fear of indiscretion on the part of the young people that keeps the chaperone in existence so much as dread that suspicion might be directed against them; and the public is responsible for this. —New Bedford Standard.

☞The experiment of Brookline, if it be permitted by the general court, will be watched with much interest. The good people of that community are dreadfully afraid of the iniquities that are supposed to be a necessary accompaniment of a municipal form of government, but have nevertheless realized that they have outgrown their clothes as a town. To continue longer under present conditions is impossible and to become a full-fledged city is undesirable in their view. As a sort of happy medium they have proposed to the general court legislation which will permit 700 voters to transact the ordinary business of the town, with the provision that if at any time 100 citizens shall object to the action of this concentrated town meeting the question at issue shall be submitted to a full vote of the town. There is to be no wealth or blue blood qualification for the voting privilege in this seven hundred arrangement, and the limit was thus arbitrarily fixed because of the size of the town hall, it being understood that the man who gets into the hall has the right to vote until the 700 limit is reached. The plan is a novel one, and for a place which has a population of 19,935 looks somewhat ridiculous. The rush for a place in Brookline's seven hundred will be something worth seeing some of these days if the scheme goes into effect.—Haverhill Gazette.

He Has Comfortable Quarters.

Edmund Belcher, of Holbrook, was brought into court ten days ago, upon a complaint charging him with neglecting to provide proper shelter for his stock. The barn in which the animals were kept had no doors and no glass in the windows. When the case was first called he was given ten days to make repairs and fix the place so that it would be comfortable. The ten days were up this morning and as he had done nothing to improve the condition of affairs he was sent to jail for thirty days. He has comfortable quarters, but how about the animals?

POET OF SCOTLAND

Quincy Scotchmen Sing His Fraises.

The 142d Anniversary of Robert Burns.

Addresses, Entertainments, Banquet and Dance.

The 142d anniversary of the birth of Robert Burns, the poet of Scotland, was celebrated by the Scotch people of Quincy in Music hall last night. The event was under the auspices of the Loyal Ladies and Clan McGregor No. 5.

The hall was filled to its full capacity and a long program of song, etc. was given before dancing was commenced.

A grand chorus under the direction of Mr. Charles Stewart sang selections from Burns songs, and included such favorites as, "There was a lad was born in Kyle," "Ye Banks and Braes," etc.

Miss Bessie Todd delighted the audience by singing The auld Scotch songs, "The blue bells of Scotland," etc.

The Rev. Dr. Todd gave an address on the poet. He classed him as one of the finest singers the world has produced. The theme was, "Reasons for the fame of Burns." The first was, wealth of his genius. Toil, culture nor wealth cannot produce genius; it must be born in the man. It was born in Burns, and he rose from the lowly cot to the pinnacle of fame.

Adversity was given as a reason. Had it not been for the adverse fate of Burns, we could not have got some of the finest genius that were struck from his muse.

A third reason for his fame is found in his inspired fervor and tender pathos. Dr. Todd questioned if ever the muse lived in a breast that thrilled as Burns did. The things and creatures he sang of, became more interesting to those who read his works.

Wit and humor formed the fourth reason for Burns' fame. Scotchmen may not see a joke very readily, but they can't be said to be witless. Many of Burns' best songs bubble over with wit and humor. He was human in the highest degree. Mankind he loved, but the lasses were of special interest to him. He sang: "What signifies the life o' man if it were na' for the lasses 'o'. His was a genius to make people happy, and much of Scotch character is moulded from his peerless words. His name is world wide, and Scotland has much to be proud of in her illustrious son.

A comic sketch entitled, "Our Geordie;" or "The Horrid Barbarian" was acted in a very creditable manner by a number of the members of the two orders. The sketch was illustrative of married life under pecuniary difficulties, a rich uncle and aunt finally came to the rescue and all was well.

Supper was served at 10.30 o'clock, and in addition to a variety of toothsome viands, Scotchmen had their tastes indulged with such native dainties as "Haggis" (King o' a' the puddin' race).

When the grand march, which proceeded the dancing was announced, the eagerness to participate was evidenced by the fact that all who wished could not join, the floor not being large enough. Loyal Lady Mrs. A.C. Smith and Chief of Clan Robert Findlay led. After them came many lightsome feet, which stopped not till four o'clock. Robinson's orchestra supplied the music.

The floor directors were Mr. John Troup and Mrs. Mary A. Smith. A number of aids gave needed assistance. Mr. Alex Emslie was chairman of committee and Mrs. Agnes Donald secretary.

Winter Improvements.

There are a great many new houses building in this city this winter, houses that are large and ornamental to the city. Presidents hill has been a favorite place and is becoming well covered with beautiful homes. Mr. Clarence Burgin's house is finished and good headway is being made on Mr. George E. Pfaffmann's The houses are very different in style of architecture, but both are imposing and attractive.

Whitney road also attracts the builder and Mr. Emery L. Crane's large colonial house is making good headway and will be ready for occupancy in the spring. Next beyond is the cellar ready for Mr. Nathan Ames' new house. Other sections of Quincy are also active this winter, South Quincy, the Point, Wollaston and Atlantic having many houses under way.

Spear street grows more and more attractive, leading off Coddington boulevard, with the library on one corner and the Morton mansion on the other. One of the old places on the street has just been remodelled into a most attractive modern eight room cottage for renting and thus the old gives way to the new and Quincy is gradually growing prettier.

POOL AND BILLIARD ROOMS.

Henry H. Faxon Republishes His Famous Circulars of 1885 and 1886.

Says Environments Are Not Conducive to Morals of Our Young Men.

Having received many complaints concerning the evil effects of the Billiard, Pool Rooms and Bowling Alleys in Quincy, I have recently made personal visits to these places and find that the conditions existing to-day are substantially the same as they were in 1885, and which are described in article attached hereto. There are eighteen such licenses now granted in this city, and, if the law was strictly enforced against these resorts, many would be compelled to close their doors. I do not condemn the playing of billiards and pool for amusement, but the public environments of these games are not conducive to the morals of our young men.

HENRY H. FAXON.

Quincy, January 26, 1901.

Billiard-Tables and Bowling-Alleys.

PUBLIC STATUTES, CHAP. 102.

SECT. 111. The mayor and aldermen of any city except Boston, and in Boston, the police commissioners, and the selectmen of any town, may grant a license to any person to keep a billiard, pool, or sippio table, or a bowling-alley for hire, gain, or reward, upon such terms and conditions as they may deem proper, to be used for amusement merely, but not for the purpose of gaming for money or other property, subject to the provisions of sections one hundred and twenty-four to one hundred and twenty-seven inclusive, and may revoke the same at pleasure.

SECT. 112. Whoever without such license keeps or suffers to be kept in a house, building, yard, or dependency thereof, by him actually occupied or owned, a table for the purpose of playing at billiards, pool, or sippio, or a bowling-alley for the purpose of playing at bowls, for hire, gain, or reward, or for hire, gain, or reward suffers any person to resort to the same for such purpose, shall forfeit for every such offence a sum not exceeding one hundred dollars.

SECT. 113. The keeper of a billiard, pool, or sippio room or table, or bowling-alley, who admits a minor thereto without the written consent of his parent or guardian, shall forfeit ten dollars for the first, and twenty dollars for each subsequent offence.

SECT. 114. The provisions of section thirty-nine shall apply to the erection, occupancy, or use of buildings for bowling-alleys in any city or town.

ADVICE TO PARENTS WHO GIVE THEIR SONS WRITTEN PERMITS TO LOAF IN BILLIARD SALOONS.

INDIGNANT CAMBRIDGE MOTHERS.

For sometime past complaints have been made against pool-room keepers for allowing school boys and minors of the age of 15 to frequent their establishments and use their tables. Mothers allege that their children neglect school and occasionally commit petty thefts by reason of this growing evil. Sergeant Brady, of Station 2, was detailed in the case and verified the complaints.

It is alleged that the boys are, in the language of the bar-room, allowed to "play for drinks." There are several other places like those above mentioned against which a general crusade will be made by the police unless stopped at once.—Evening Record, January 15, 1886.

WEBSTER'S DEFINITION.

As there are proprietors of Billiard-rooms who have pleaded ignorance of what constitutes the game of Billiards and table, I herewith give them Webster's definition:

"A game played on a rectangular table, covered with a cloth, with small ivory balls which the players aim to drive into hazard-nets or pockets at the sides and corners of the tables, by impelling one ball against another with maces, or cues, according to certain rules of the game."

BILLIARD SALOONS.

Of Abraham Lincoln and Billiard-saloons the President of Wabash College gives this in The Congregationalist:

"I am tempted to indulge in another reminiscence, which I had from Col. Welby, an able lawyer of Bloomington, Ill. He says that in starting on their circuit one time, Mr. Lincoln and himself agreed that every night where it was possible, they would play billiards. They kept the agreement, but, of course, had to resort to billiard-saloons, which had 'the bar' for the sale of intoxicating liquors. They did not drink, nor did they mix much with the people they found in these places, but when they had finished the circuit, Mr. Lincoln said: 'What we have seen of these billiard-saloons and their associations convinces me that they are not safe places for young men to visit!'" There is nothing truer anywhere than this.—National Advocate, July 1885.

QUINCY BILLIARD AND POOL ROOMS.

During my term of office as policeman, some of the chief difficulties which I have encountered in the enforcement of the law, have been billiard and pool rooms. It is in such resorts that the young men, (the principal patrons) are taught their first lessons in gambling, lying, stealing, cheating, and drunkenness; also to shake dice for the drinks, cigars, etc. The cases which I have brought before the courts, have been the means of revealing to me the rascalities of some of the proprietors, who, in order to clear themselves, have tried to influence the government witnesses to lie. In several instances sons of perdition visited parents who were witnesses, and, in order to defeat justice and serve their own ends, have urged them to testify that they had given their boys permits to visit these saloons. The men who keep such haunts of vice are not satisfied with ruining the young man, but urge the parents to perjure themselves, and thus assist in destroying their own homes. The judge of our district court well expressed my sentiments when he said that "Billiard-rooms are the nurseries of crime." Tricks of all kinds are resorted to by the keepers of these iniquitous dens, and when they are brought into court, some dirty, unscrupulous lawyer, who is employed to defend them, sneaks behind, and prostitutes his profession by insulting every government witness who is inclined to tell the truth. In a visit to one of these saloons I found thirty-one persons present, most of whom were young men, engaged in playing pool, smoking, drinking, and loafing about. What hopes can parents have of their children if they are educated in such dens of vice, where all kinds of crime are engendered and future deviltry is planned? Once in awhile parents are found who are so lost to all sense of decency, that permission is given a minor child to visit such places. Shame on such parents!

HENRY H. FAXON.

QUINCY, May 7, 1885.

Extract from No. 13, of a Series of Letters written by the late Judge Crosby, of Lowell.

A "sippio" or other table is usually found where drinks are played for, giving business to the tapster, but followed by fighting in the end, over false playing or question of paying the bill, and being interrupted by the police, the fight requires judicial investigation.

Fellow citizens, put down the grog shops and you will put up sobriety, prosperity, peace and respectability in like ratio. We shall need a police thereafter only to watch for fires and thieves, and to catch runaway horses. Men will leave club rooms for their own domestic circles, truant children will be in schools, vagabonds will disappear, and the poor will have money to let. We shall have quiet streets, and our courts and lanes will be swept and garnished.

It is said thirteen is an unlucky number, but I hope it will not prove so in this instance, as it is also the baker's dozen, and my effort covers the furnishing of bread to the million. I now bid you adieu for the present, and hope I have not pleaded with you in vain. We insure our buildings against fire; let us now apply at the polls for policies of insurance against rum, and let us look well to the character of the directors.

It is pleasing to note once more the popularity of Francis L. Pratt, the city messenger of Cambridge, and a native of Quincy. For almost twenty-six years he has filled the office in Cambridge, and in a city like Cambridge it is an important position. Last evening Sheriff Fairbairn entertained the city officials, but the main object was to present Mr. Pratt with a loving cup valued at $150. The contents were more valuable than the cup, for the cup contained $700 in gold. It was a generous and free will offering of his many friends. Mr. Pratt is a brother of Mrs. H. OUR 27th CHURCH.

The New Finnish Evangelical Mission Edifice.

Cost About $6,700 --- Seats About 500.

Well Adapted to Uses of Growing Society.

The new Finnish Evangelical Mission church which will be dedicated next Wednesday, Jan. 30, is situated on the west side of Buckley street about half way up the hill from Copeland street. W. R. Lofgren who has quite a reputation as a church builder was the architect and the builder.

It is of the classical style of architecture, and of an imposing appearance. The main church is thirty feet wide fifty feet deep, with an eight foot addition in the rear in which are located the platform, choir loft and pastor's study. In the centre front there is a tower, 14 by 14 feet and 78 feet high.

The main entrance is on Buckley street, and is through the first floor of the tower. A short flight of stone steps leads from the street to the entrance porch, which is arched and has ten inch columns on either side and a fancy cap. This porch or vestibule is 14 by 14 feet, and from it large double doors lead to the basement, and stairways on either side lead to the main auditorium above.

The basement which will be used by the Sunday School and for evening meetings, is 30 by 40 feet, and has a seating capacity of 200. In the rear of this room is a furnace room in which is located the heating and ventilating apparatus, and a kitchen 12 by 12 feet, which has the necessary plumbing, sink and toilet room, etc. A stairway also leads from this room to the pastor's study above.

The basement is lighted by cathedral glass windows, the walls are sheathed with North Carolina pine and the ceiling is plastered with adamand.

Over the entrance vestibule and reached by two stairways is a landing 6 by 10 feet, and from it a double door leads to the main auditorium. A broad aisle runs down the centre with opera chair seats on either side.

At the front of this room is panel front platform, three feet high, running back thirteen feet, with a short stairway on either side. In front of this is an altar rail. At the right of this platform is the choir loft arched over, and on the left is a door leading to the pastor's study. In the centre is the pulpit which is also arched, and with columns on either side.

From the upper landing two stairways also lead to the gallery, which is twelve feet wide and extends across the front.

The main auditorium, which as stated above is furnished with opera chairs, has a seating capacity of 400 and the gallery 100. The auditorium is sheathed up four feet and the stairways are also sheathed. The floors are of matched hard pine and the interior finish is of North Carolina pine.

The height of the basement is eleven feet, and of the auditorium 22 feet. The windows are of cathedral glass. It will be lighted by electricity.

The cost of the church above the land is about $6,700. The basement was completed last December, and has been in use for some weeks. The dedication of the church as announced will be on Wednesday, Jan. 30.

Indian Relics.

A rude, stone sledge hammer, used by the Indians who frequented the locality where the implement was found, has been presented to the Quincy Historical society by Mr. Lewis Bass. It was dug up at the Morrison Mills, in Braintree, where pestles, used in pounding corn, and similar relics of the Indian race have heretofore been found. This indicates that at that place, on the banks of the Monatiquot river, the Indians had their camping and fishing grounds. The late Samuel A. Bates, the venerable and esteemed local historian of the town of Braintree, in a communication written not long before his death, gave it as his well settled opinion based on antiquarian research, that the site of the Morrison mills was also the locality here the first iron works in the United States were established; thus antidating those of the "Iron Works" district.

NEW HOUSES FOR SALE.

Just to remind you that I have another lot of houses nearly completed, I will list these three bargains:

Many were disappointed on the last lot so be on hand early if you would be in it.

First—A six room Single House, bath and set tubs, with hot and cold water, papered to suit purchaser, large lot. $2100. $300 down; balance at low rate of interest. Just the place for some street railway employee.

Also, one of eight rooms and bath, Independence avenue; all modern improvements, bounds on two streets, can sell for $500 less than real value. This house is of the popular size to suit any business man, and is very roomy and convenient. I don't like to have other builders know how I am cutting prices, but $3,000 buys this one, look at it and compare with others you see building.

Another, and a money maker for some one with only an ounce of pluck. This is a two-family House, 5 rooms and bath each, and 60 foot lot, $3,000. Pay in $500 on this and I will guarantee you a twenty-five per cent. investment for one year; who would dare invest in a twenty-five per cent. GUARANTEED investment.

Remember these houses are built by competent workmen, by the day, of the best material, and are personally superintended by the owner, are but four minutes to station, electrics pass, and everything is most desirable as a residential section. All houses are connected with sewer and cellars are perfectly dry.

Come and look them over and select one that suits you. Can be seen any day.

Voted For State Flower.

The children of Mississippi have had an important part in the selection of the flower to be used as state emblem. The question was asked in all the public schools, about 25,000 children in all voting. The beautiful blossom of the magnolia tree received more than half the votes, the cotton bloom coming next, and 42 flowers in all being voted for. School days in the far south are very pleasant for the children, and this little consideration shown to the future citizens of the state is going to make them much more interested personally in everything pertaining to its welfare.

OUR MERCHANT MARINE

Depew Strongly Advocates the Granting of Subsidies

WORK FOR 200,000 MEN

And Aid to Many Branches of Business Indirectly Connected With Shipbuilding—House Adopts Conference Report on Army Reorganization Bill

Washington, Jan. 26.—A forceful address in support of the shipping bill was made by Senator Depew yesterday. The address was in the nature of an appeal for the upbuilding of the American merchant marine by the granting of subsidies, as provided for in the pending measure. He urged that the American flag be restored at the masthead of the freight carrying ships of the United States, and elicited cordial applause from senators on the floor and from the crowds in the galleries.

Copyright, 1900, by A. Dupont.

SENATOR CHAUNCEY M. DEPEW.

Mr. Depew began with a survey of the country's first century of development, pointing out the immense material progress that had been made in agriculture and manufacture, how our exports had grown to $1,500,000,000 annually in excess of our imports, and how the internal lines of communication had been developed into the most comprehensive in the world. But he insisted that the development of the country had been one-sided. While prepared to feed and clothe one-half of the world outside of the United States, we had developed our transportation system only to our own coast line and had allowed our merchant marine to remain undeveloped, so that there was actually a greater tonnage of American vessels built in this country for the foreign trade in 1807 than in 1900.

Looking to the remedy for the present stagnation in the American merchant marine, Mr. Depew said the cry of "free ships" was not to be considered as a remedy, for it left out of the question the development of an American ship-building industry. The plan of discriminating duties, he said, was also impracticable. No nation would submit to discriminating duties without retaliating against us, and no nation like ours, which is more of a seller than a buyer, can afford to provoke such retaliation, and thus stimulate production in Russia, India, Egypt and Asia against our cotton and our corn. The speaker's conclusion was that there remained only the subsidy as a practical solution of the problem.

The building up of the American shipping industry would mean the direct employment of 200,000 men in shipbuilding operations beside the immense indirect aid that it would give to all lines of iron and steel production in this country. As to the adequacy of the present measure to meet the requirements of the case, Mr. Depew said it was to his mind as fair a solution of the problem as could be devised at present.

"It is estimated," said Mr. Depew, "that there is paid by American producers to foreign shipowners in freigh charges at least $175,000,000 a year. Four percent of this would give us an American merchant marine and the expenditure of much the larger part of this money in our country."

In conclusion, he said: "With the construction of the Nicaragua canal, which will be completed within the next few years, the necessity for an auxiliary fleet and a merchant marine becomes still greater. Whether we look at this question as a matter of national defense in time of war, or consider it as one of the factors in the solution of our industrial problems as they arise from time to time, or sum up the possibilities for the American farm and factory and mine in the wants present and potential of the millions in the Orient, the beneficent influence of this measure becomes more real."

Bills were passed providing for the establishment of ports of delivery at Fall River, Mass., and at New Bedford, Mass.

The house adopted the conference report on the army reorganization bill. The contest over it was brief. Mr. Hull, chairman of the military committee, preventing prolonged debate. The debate was chiefly notable for a sharp exchange between Mr. Richardson and Mr. Hay (Dem., W. Va.), who reproached the Democratic leader for not making a fight for a temporary army when the bill was originally before the house.

The naval appropriation bill was finally passed, and also 77 private pension bills.

WEEKLY TRADE REVIEW

Enormous Dealings In All Lines, With the Single Exception of Wool

New York, Jan. 26.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s weekly report of trade says: Rarely has there been more business in staples and in manufactured goods at practically unchanged prices than during the period since Nov. 1. This week seems to have marked the climax of enormous dealings at figures which have become familiar. The heavy trade in pig iron at better prices, the larger distribution of dry goods at a firmer range of quotations and the rush to secure prompt delivery of boots and shoes, all indicate that business may have escaped one of those weary readjustments of prices which have often proved so trying in recent years. Jobbing trade in the interior is good, and collections continue excellent.

After a week of quiet, partly due to uncertainty regarding competition among leading interests, the iron and steel industry has taken another long stride forward.

It is difficult to find encouraging features in the wool situation. Not only is there an utter absence of speculative operations, but purchases by manufacturers are restricted to requirements for orders on hand. Dullness in woolen goods is the difficulty, and, while the manufacture is depressed, there is little encouragement for the raw material.

Staple products have moved within narrow limits, little attention being given to widely varying estimates from Argentina, or reports of damage in the northwest through insufficient snow.

No Concessions Yet Awhile

Pekin, Jan. 26.—Owing to Queen Victoria's death, there has been a temporary cessation of the negotiations. The various nations fired minute guns in honor of her majesty. The request of Prince Ching and Li Hung Chang for the transfer of the forbidden city to the Chinese in order that preparations may be made for the emperor's return have been referred by the generals to the ministers, who have replied that they see no reason to alter the previous determination that the Chinese must show deeds proving their desire to comply with the demands of the joint note before any concessions could be granted.

Extra Session Not Improbable

Washington, Jan. 26.—A brief recommendation in a message of the president sent to the senate yesterday, urging immediate legislation in the interest of the Filipinos, caused general surprise among senators, and occasioned speculation upon the probability of an extra session of congress immediately after March 4. Senators unite in saying that no Philippine legislation is possible during the remaining five weeks of the present session.

Working on Hazing Report

Washington, Jan. 26.—The congressional committee investigating the Booz hazing case held an executive session yesterday and began skeletonizing its report. These executive sessions will be continued for the next few days in order to complete the report, which is expected to be ready to present to the house in about 10 days.

Explosion and Loss of Life

Walkerville, Ont., Jan. 26.—Two men were killed and eight injured by an explosion of chlorate of potash during a fire in the warehouse of the Walkerville Match company. The explosion, which completely destroyed the building, was heard for a mile and a half. The property loss was $55,000.

Negroes Don't Make Good Operatives

Charleston, Jan. 26.—The owners of the Vesta cotton mill of this city have decided to abandon the property and to move the textile machinery to a new mill at Gainesville, Ga. The admission is made that the experiment of negro labor for cotton mills is a failure, and this is known after a fair test.

Slot Machines Must Go

Phillipsburg, N. J., Jan. 26.—Judge Shipman at Belvidere yesterday threw consternation into the ranks of the saloon keepers of this town when he sentenced those indicted for keeping slot-machines in their places of business. Fifteen of them were fined $500 each.

Death of General Fairchild

Rochester, Jan. 26.—General Harrison S. Fairchild, a veteran of the Civil war, aged 80, died here yesterday. He commanded a brigade in Burnside's Ninth army corps, and for a gallant charge at Antietam bridge was made brigadier general.

The Minden's Crew Landed

Liverpool, Jan. 26.—Captain Torgersen of the Norwegian bark Minden and 16 seamen of the crew of that vessel were landed here yesterday by the steamer Francisca, from Pensacola. The Minden was abandoned on Jan. 15.

Death of Noted Composer

Rome, Jan. 26.—A special to The Patria announces that Verdi, the composer, is dead.

"Don't Speak

To the motorman," is a sign to be seen on the front platform of many cars. It requires all his thought, all his energy and all his strength to pilot his car through crowded streets. The strain tells on him, and some when he gets "rattled" and has an accident. The surest way to sustain the physical strength and nervous force required by the motorman or railroad man is to keep the stomach in a condition of sound health. When the stomach becomes "weak," food is imperfectly digested and the body is deprived of its necessary nourishment. The nerves are "unstrung" and the body is weakened.

The timely use of Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery when the stomach is "weak" will reestablish the body in vigorous health. It cures diseases of the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition, nourishes the nerves and purifies the blood.

"I suffered for four years with pain in my stomach so that at times I couldn't work nor eat," writes Mr. Frank Smith, of Granite, Chaffee Co., Colo. "I wrote to you about my sickness and was told to use your medicine, which I did with good results. I only used four bottles of your 'Golden Medical Discovery,' and must say that I am entirely cured, and feel like a new man, and I can highly recommend your medicine to any sufferer."

Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser, in paper covers, is sent free on receipt of 21 one-cent stamps to pay expense of mailing only. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

WOMAN'S WORLD.

A WOMAN WHO HELPED HUSBAND KILL BOXERS.

The Social Element In Clubs—Hazing at a Girls' College—Novelties In Slippers—A Charitable Woman. Woman's Sense of Humor.

Few women have a history like that of Mrs. August F. Chamot.

Her husband was a silk merchant in Peking. They were there during the whole of the siege. When they were driven to their hotel Mrs. Chamot took her place beside her husband and used her gun with telling effect. They claim that they killed 580 Boxers and perhaps more. Her shots were unerring, and her husband never missed a human target.

When they captured several Boxers they bunched and killed them.

Mr. and Mrs. Chamot reached San Francisco a short time ago, and after a rest proceeded on their way to New York, intending to sail from there a few days later. Their history has preceded them, and they have invitations to present themselves at the several courts of Europe and also to appear at the Vatican. Pope Leo has already conferred upon Mr. Chamot the badge of the Order of Gregorius, while to Mrs. Chamot he gave his portrait in enamel. Mr. Chamot is a native of Switzerland, as you might guess from the name. His wife is a California girl. She was Lizzie McCarthy.

Mrs. Chamot will receive as she journeys over Europe decorations from nearly every capital. No American woman has ever had as many honors bestowed upon her as Mrs. Chamot will have after she has been presented to the courts of Europe.

The Social Element In Clubs.

Commenting on the many recent instances among women's clubs of extending the courtesies of meetings to men, a well known clubman spoke of the strong social element in most women's clubs, certainly at all of those at which he had had an opportunity of attending a meeting, as against the conservatism in that respect in men's clubs. "The members of a woman's club," he continued, "know each other well and each other's families and surroundings. Two men, on the contrary, can meet daily at their common club for months, and even years, and unless they happen to be members of the same social circle neither may know even if the other is a Benedict or a bachelor." He approved, too, and appreciated the fact that the clubwomen often receive their men friends on one of their family days, when no company manners are put on and the club is taken as found. This, too, it may be added, is quite different from the procedure on the part of his sex, and it would be most interesting if some of the men's clubs would reciprocate this hospitality in kind. "Ladies' day" at men's clubs is a most tiresome and flavorless affair. The material part of their club life—the house and its belongings—is there, but there is never the faintest hint of the club atmosphere, that mysterious element whose attractiveness has been the theme of many a dissertation, commendatory and otherwise. At one of the recent "ladies'" days at the Authors' club a member asked some of the guests if they would not like a genuine "club" evening, with pipes and stories, instead of the conventional reception, and every woman consulted indorsed the proposition with an eagerness that should have proved its genuine quality, but the "club" evening is still delayed. The distrust existing between men's and women's clubs rises in large part from the fact that neither organization quite understands the other—a condition that would be changed perhaps if each had a more accurate knowledge of the working methods of the other.—New York Post.

Hazing at a Girls' College.

"Talk about hazing with tabasco sauce and gymnastics, it isn't in the same class with the test through which the students at a New England college for women put a masculine visitor," said the man with bashful tendencies. "I was near the college and concluded to kill two birds with one stone by viewing the building and calling on a friend, a student there, at the same time. I presented myself at the hall where my friend lived and sent up my card. An intellectual looking girl who, I guess, was a student, ushered me into a parlor and left me.

"I found myself in a corner of the room with a door at my right and another farther along at my left. I had just time to glance around when a young woman came in at the right and passed me by with an intent look which just escaped being a stare. She didn't stop, but disappeared through the door at the left. Another followed and another, and finally they came in a regular procession. I didn't believe that so many persons could be housed in a building twice the size of that hall, and I am sure most of the young women passed twice. As each went by she gave a glance which took in all of me from the part of my hair to the style of my shoes.

"By and by, when everybody that could be alarmed had inspected me often enough, my friend came down. I learned that I had been suffering from one of the college customs. She had not received my card until my inspection was about ended. I thought one inspection of me would satisfy them, and I called again to undergo the same ordeal. Now I have other acquaintances there and as soon as one appears in the line I stop her and make her talk to me until my friend comes. The tete-a-tete doesn't stop the procession, but it relieves the embarrassment."—New York Sun.

Novelties In Slippers.

Women have not the same latitude in choosing evening slippers as they have in stockings, for the reason that a colored slipper is inclined to increase the size of the feet, no matter how neatly fitted, whereas a colored stocking makes but very little difference, as the world only catches a suggestion of color when the gown is raised, says the Philadelphia Inquirer.

Black is at all times satisfactory. It is not only the most economical, but the most elegant. One cannot violate the laws of good taste in a greater degree than to wear a soiled pair of light colored slippers. Black glaze, suede, satin, velvet and patent leather are the most fashionable materials used by the smartest makers.

As for garniture, there is no limit. An exquisite pair was shown the other day with a beautiful design of hand painted lilies of the valley, another in violets. They are elaborately beaded and studded. Cloths of gold and silver are also employed. A favorite style, and one which is rich and effective, is of black velvet with rosette of satin fastened in the center with buckle of French brilliants.

Black slippers are also worn with the colors of the gown taking the same tone in rosette or bow, as turquoise blue or cerise. Buckles are extensively worn, the oval and circular leading the race. By using a perfectly plain black slipper of patent leather, velvet or satin, and then adjusting your ornament, you will find quite a saving, as the rosette and buckles count up in a surprising manner when bought complete.

A Charitable Woman.

Mrs. Seraphina Pisko, for the past eight years president of the Jewish Charities association of Denver, has resigned her position to devote herself to raising funds for the National Hospital For Consumptives in that city. She is traveling in the interest of this work, and the rabbis of various cities allow her to occupy their pulpits on Friday evenings to present the subject. Mrs. Pisko has just visited New Orleans. The Picayune says: "She is a very beautiful and interesting woman, and her good heart speaks from her eyes." She says Denver was overrun with consumptives, many of them absolutely destitute. They had managed to get as far as Denver, when their means failed and they were left dependent on charity. The Jewish community raised $40,000 and built a hospital, which was opened about a year ago with 60 patients. Now it is desired to extend the accommodations to 150. Consumptives are admitted without distinction of creed, and the hospital has patients from all parts of the country. It receives only those who are actually destitute. It is situated in the most beautiful part of Denver, on the crest of a hill overlooking the city park. All the surroundings are bright, cheerful and inspiring.

Woman's Sense of Humor.

Perhaps I could not cite a better example that women have been given the sense of humor than by pointing to Mme. Bernhardt. She is full of it. She sees the lightest fling. There is no bit too subtle for her to seize. And then how she enjoys it! Her sense of the ridiculous is most keen. She portrays life's tragedies, but not one of its comedies escapes her. Her smile, her laughter—they are ever ready to break out. They cannot be suppressed. She feels the mirthfulness of the world, and that makes her only more keenly alive to its sorrows.

It is only another example of woman's unselfishness that she has been willing to let us think that we men have a monopoly, as you say in this country, on humor. She did not dispute it. She did not claim any of our laurels, for woman does not try to be funny. She leaves that to man. When we ask, "What have you written that was true humor?" "Very little," she acknowledges. She can smile and be magnanimous in this, for she knows that she has inspired and enjoyed the humor of the world. She can well afford to rest content.—C. Coquelin in Harper's Bazar.

Gave Her a Gorgeous Doll.

A curious birthday present given by a young Roumanian nobleman to his bride was a gorgeous doll, made for the enamored young husband in Paris, where the young couple are spending the honeymoon. The doll was clad in cloth of gold, the train embroidered with irises, stems upward, which formed a thick border around the hem. The petticoat, on which opened the train of gold, was covered with a trellis of magnificent pearls. Round her neck was a chaplet of three rows of rubies; on her head an aigret formed by sparkling diamonds, quivering like so many dewdrops, and pins with heads of many colored precious gems, spangled her garments here and there. It seems that at the time of their marriage the nobleman was not able to present his lovely bride with gifts worthy of her beauty, but recently a benevolent uncle of his was obliging enough to die and leave him a fortune. The extravagant lover at once spent half of it in this jeweled doll.

The Matrix Fad.

The woman of the new century is hung with baubles, and it is the matrix stones with which she mostly bedecks herself, turquoise and opal matrices having the preference.

The turquoise is formed in beetles, set in gold for pins and brooches, while sometimes the body is formed of a stone and the wings of gold. The opal matrix is set with a surrounding of diamonds.

The hair brooch placed below the comb, with diamond settings as big as an ordinary buckle, finds favor alike with the Parisians and with the Americans. Sometimes these are of stones set with gold, sometimes only gold, and some of the long handsome pins add materially to the effect of the hairdressing with the large hats.

We used to be content with a spray of diamonds in the hair; now four distinct pieces are necessary to complete a fashionable headdress—a chignon comb, a couple of side combs and this back one.

Japanese Superstitions.

Convention is a strangely powerful force. It operates in amusing ways sometimes. In Japan, it seems, it has always been held that a woman who ascended a high mountain would be torn in pieces by the spirits who guard summits, and the Japanese women accordingly, perhaps not altogether believing the threat, have yet allowed it to prevent them from making the prohibited ascent. But now two young Japanese girls have ascended the great volcanic mountain that appears so often in the Jap pictures, Fujiyama, and no convulsion of nature has occurred. There was an equally heroic act performed by the first Christian queen of Hawaii. There the tradition was that a woman must not approach a certain lake and must also never be seen to eat. The queen publicly visited the lake and ate a picnic meal on the shores. Of course there also the defied convention did not immediately avenge the audacity.

Evolution of the Clubwoman.

The evolution of the clubwoman is one of the most striking and interesting phenomena of the nineteenth century. Where will she stand in the year 2001, at the beginning of the twenty-first century?

If you step to think that 35 years ago there were no women's clubs and you are interested enough in the subject to investigate the place they now hold in the eyes of the world, you will be amazed at the progress she has already made.

Do not understand me to say that the clubwoman will continue to evolve in the near future with the same rapidity as she has in the last decade. Her evolution, I think, will be in cycles. She sprang into existence Minervalike, but it took 30 years to bring her prominently before the world, and she has reached a plane where she will remain stationary for a time.—Mrs. William Tod Helmuth.

One Woman's Achievement.

Mrs. Marietta Harmon of Syracuse has secured the highest rating ever given by the New York state board of pharmacy in an examination for a license as a registered pharmacist. Her paper was almost perfect. Mrs. Harmon is a teacher in one of the public schools of Syracuse and the proprietor of a drug store on Almond street. The store was left to her when her husband died, three years ago. She tried to sell the business, but the offers she received were so low that she decided not to make the sacrifice. Instead she hired a licensed clerk and set out to run the business with his assistance. Every spare moment out of school has been spent in the store and in the study of pharmacy. The result of her hard work is seen in the good showing she made in her recent examination and in the success of her business.

Etched Lettering.

The most beautiful of the new mourning handkerchiefs show the owner's initials merely etched in tiny black letters on a filmy white ground. Very coquettish widows' handkerchiefs are white with a hemstitched black border on which small white clover leaves appear, or more attractive still are the white handkerchiefs with the initials in the corner wreathed in violets. The tiny white spot in a vast square of densely black linen is no longer recommended to a woman as the proper type of mouchoir, no matter how fresh and deep her woe. These were effective perhaps, but never practical, and the approved simple mourning handkerchief has but the narrowest hemstitched edge of black.

Brooches of flowers wrought from tinted gold are among the prettiest of jewels. Clusters of fuchsias, cyclamen, hyacinths and violets are made in their natural colors, but without the use of enamel. By a new process the gold itself receives the color and is wrought into the desired form.

Mrs. Sarah Davis of Finmere, near Buckingham, England, is said to be the oldest schoolteacher in the world in active service. She regularly teaches the pupils of the national school in that village. Her age is 84, and she has taught the same school for more than 50 years.

When Peter the Great took a census of Russia, he did not count the women. In this country the government not only counts the women, but carries its inquiries so far as to find out how many of them are married, how many single and how many widows.

Das Berliner Thierasyl.

Der deutsche Thierschutzverein hat in Berlin ein Thierasyl geschaffen, das aus dem sogenannten Thierdepot im Innern der Stadt und dem eigentlichen Asyl auf einem Grundstück im äußersten Norden Berlins besteht.

Der Verein macht es sich zur Hauptaufgabe, jedweder Thierquälerei entgegenzutreten. Speziell für Hunde hat er den Zweck, verlaufenen, herrenlosen und überzähligen Thieren eine Zufluchtsstätte zu gewähren und sie eventuell durch Verkauf oder Verschenken in geordnete Verhältnisse zu bringen.

Der Verein, dessen Vorsitzender General a. D. Köring ist, zählt gegenwärtig 6800 Mitglieder. Seitdem im Jahre 1889 der Thierschutzverein die Verpflichtung übernommen hat, die Beaufsichtigung der Hunde auf allen öffentlichen Wegen in und um Berlin durch eigene Beamte auszuführen, ist natürlich die Behandlung der Thiere beim Fangen und besonders hinterher die denkbar mildeste. Die Fänger, denen, wie den anderen Beamten des Vereins, polizeiliche Machtbefugniß zugestanden ist, dürfen keine Drahtschlingen mehr benutzen, welche beim Zusammenziehen dem Thiere in schmerzhafter Weise die Luft entziehen, sondern nur Hanfschlingen. Auch haben die Beamten jede Art von Auflauf thunlichst zu vermeiden. Deswegen unterlassen sie gewöhnlich Jagden auf Thiere, die sich ihnen durch die Flucht entziehen.

Die Hundefänger gehen immer zu zweien; ein Schild an der Mütze mit der Aufschrift „Deutscher Thierschutzverein" kennzeichnet sie. Für die Vororte führen sie meist einen aus Käfigen bestehenden Wagen, der neuerdings von Eseln gezogen wird, mit sich. Die eingefangenen Hunde werden in dem Wagen sogleich untergebracht und in das Berliner Thierdepot abgeliefert.

Hier herrscht große Sauberkeit, und alle Maßregeln und Einrichtungen zeugen von der Absicht, den eingefangenen Thieren die Gefangenschaft zu erleichtern.

Gleich wenn wir in den hellerleuchteten und gut ventilirten Hauptraum eintreten, fällt uns eine große zinnerne Badewanne mit nebenan befindlichem Ofen auf; sie dient dazu, Hunde, die dessen bedürftig sind, besonders verwundete, zu baden. Die Käfige sind meist oben offen; nur die ganz kleinen Hunde sind in Drahtkästen über einander untergebracht, ganz große Hunde finden nebenan im Freien Unterkunft. Die Hunde erhalten sämmtlich eine Nummer; diese stimmt mit einer Journalnotiz überein, in welcher genau angegeben ist, wann und warum der Hund gefangen wurde, wo und durch welche Beamten.

Viele der Thiere werden von ihren Herren nicht mehr abgeholt, weil sie die Steuer nicht mehr werth sind. Wer sich eines unbequemen Hundes entledigen will, braucht nur den Thierschutzverein zu benachrichtigen, der das Thier dann abholen läßt.

Die eingefangenen Hunde bleiben im Depot nur fünf Tage. Am fünften Tage nach ihrer Einlieferung werden sie nach dem Hundeasyl des Vereins geschafft, wo sie größere Freiheit haben. Im Asyl werden die Hunde noch anderthalb Wochen gehalten, alsdann sind sie dem Verein verfallen, der sie thunlichst verkauft oder ganz minderwerthige Exemplare verschenkt. Schließlich bleibt natürlich nichts übrig, als die Zurückgebliebenen zu vergiften, was in schmerzloser Weise geschieht.

Es befinden sich im Asyl auch eingelieferte Katzen. Dieselben sind, durch Krankheit oder Hunger ermattet, aufgegriffen worden. Sie werden hier kurirt und gepflegt, um alsdann ebenfalls verschenkt oder getödtet zu werden.

Desgleichen beherbergen sowohl das Thierasyl als auch das Depot eine Anzahl Esel. Diese hat der Verein im Jahre 1899 aus Italien in Berlin eingeführt, um den Besitzern von Hundekarren einen Ersatz für die Ziehhunde zu verschaffen. Die Letzteren wünscht der Verein gänzlich abgeschafft zu sehen, er erblickt in der Verwendung des Hundes zum Wagenziehen eine Thierquälerei, eine Ansicht, die er damit begründet, daß der Hund kein Hufthier, sondern ein Pfotenthier ist; nur jene aber sind von Natur aus zum Ziehen geeignet. Gegenwärtig sind über 600 Esel im Berliner Straßenverkehr.

Rother Unhold. John Tiger, ein am Arkansas River in der Nähe von Eufala, J.-T., hausender Indianer, kam jüngst mit seiner „Squaw" nach Eufala, betrank sich daselbst und bedrohte im Rausch einen gewissen Roper mit dem Tode. Roper machte sich aus dem Staube, aber der betrunkene Indianer fing jetzt in seiner Wuth auf alle ihm begegnenden Personen sofort zu feuern an. Jesse Beck und Dave Porter, ein Neffe des Häuptlings Porter, sowie ein gewisser Johnson, welcher mit seiner Familie in einem Ueberlandwagen auf dem Wege nach Missouri war, wurden dabei von dem rothen Unhold erschossen. Der 18jährige Rud. Taylor wurde von ihm durch einen Schuß lebensgefährlich verletzt. Der Mörder sprang endlich auf ein Pferd und suchte zu entrinnen. Man verfolgte ihn. Drei Meilen dauerte die Verfolgung, dann sprang Tiger von seinem Pferde, trat hinter einen Baum und eröffnete auf seine Verfolger Feuer. Schließlich wurde er vom Hilfsmarschall Johnson in den Arm geschossen und dann dingfest gemacht.

Philergian's Receptiou.

The Philergians celebrated their second annual gentlemen's night reception last evening at Cochao hall, Braintree, in a delightful manner.

The ushers were Mrs. H. L. Dearing, Mrs. Eugene Dyer, Mrs. George Wheeler and Miss Marjorie White.

Mrs. T. R. Newell, Mrs. Alva Morrison, Mrs. George E. Williams and Mrs. Russell Lane received in one corner of the room surrounded by a pretty grouping of plants

This feature of the evening over, Mrs. Newell, the president, graceefully welcomed all guests, spoke of the necessity of a gentlemen's night to stimulate activity in the club and then told of some of the work accomplished by the members, of its name, the significance of it and how it was received by different people. The entire speech was pertinent and womanly.

Miss Jessie Arnold rendered several vocal selections in an artistic manner. Miss Marion Arnold accompanied her on the piano.

The address of the evening was by Prof. William G. Ward of Boston, who spoke on "The Training of the Future Citizen." Living in a flourishing town like Braintree one hardly realizes the great need of better citizenship. With the vast army of foreigners brought to our shores this question is becoming vital. We have free schools, a great many orphan asylums and other charitable institutions, but are we getting the best results from them? The inmates are warmed and fed but this very fact makes them dependent and unfit to ever sustain themselves much less help to govern the nation.

The speaker told of the practical work of Mr. George in New York, who a few years ago took one hundred and fifty of New York's most hopeless boys out into the country establishing a colony with himself as president. The boys were taught industry, asked to make their own laws and enforce them. Today one hundred and fifteen boys have been graduated and in every case made admirable citizens.

Some such responsibility as is felt by Mr. George's boys needs to be impressed upon all the youth of the land.

Tees, cake and coffee were served after the lecture and a social hour spent.

The next meeting of the Philergians will be held Tuesday, Feb. 5, with Mrs. George H. Lane, Vine street.

Worked the Royal Purple.

The fact that Manet encampment of Odd Fellows were to work the Royal Purple degree was the occasion last night for a large visitation of encampment members, representing Shalom, Massasoit, Ellison and Mt. Washington encampments of Boston, and Wompatuck of Weymouth. Louis A. Cook, the Norfolk County clerk of courts, a Past Grand Master, was among the visitors. The degree was xemplified on two candidates, and a urkey supper followed.

—Sunday, Jan. 27, is Young People's Christian Union Day at the Universalist church, and at the afternoon service at 2.30 some members of the Y. P. C. U. will speak briefly on the significance of the words composing the name of the Union, as follows:

"The Young," Mrs. Mary A. Jones.

"The People's," Miss Susan R. Gates.

"The Christian," Miss Hattie H. Lincoln.

"The Union," Miss Annie Hayward.

BRAINTREE.

The 20th Century greeting of Plymouth Rock Lodge, No. 43, Knights of Pythias of Whitman, to Monatiquot Lodge, No. 83, of Braintree on Jan. 21st, will not soon be forgotten by Monatiquot Lodge, it being the first visit of the season, also the first one received from Plymouth Rock Lodge.

The Penniman School Association held another of its popular entertainments, in the school building last Wednesday evening.

Another of those popular entertainments in the Pine Tree Club course under the management of Mr. C. E. Kimball of Boston was held in the Town hall, Wednesday evening. There was a good sized and appreciative audience to greet the Copley Square Trio of Boston, composed of Miss Blanche Sears, violin, mandolin, and piano; Miss Marion Whitaker, bells, and xylophone; Miss M. Isola Sears, soprano, guitar, and piano. The trio gave a varied and interesting program; each number showing how skilfully one person may play several different instruments. The numbers for violin and piano by the Misses Sears were finely rendered and warmly received. The xylophone and bells played by Miss Whitaker were highly appreciated and drew great applause.

Now is the time to again consider the question of converting the old Middle street schoolhouse into suitable quarters for the housing of the much-needed hose carriage and its appurtenances.

The Braintree club's bowling team went to East Weymouth Wednesday evening and defeated the Wesagussett club's quartette in a very close game.

The dance held in Red Men's hall last evening was attended by forty couples and was under the auspices of the Braintree fife and drum. James Cuff, assisted by Thurlow Torrey and Elmer Holbrook, were in charge of the floor. Music was furnished by H. T. Binney on the piano. The matrons were, Mrs. L. W. Thayer, Mrs. W. A. Torrey and Mrs. William Cuff.

POPULATION 3,000

List of All Such Cities in United States.

With Census Figures for 1880 and 1890.

Quincy With 23,899 Ranks High In the List.

was noted in the Ledger last week that Quincy ranked No. 171 in population in the United States. There are about 1700 cities and towns today with a population of 3000 and, as promised, the Ledger begins today to publish the list.

Quincy people are often led to think that places at a distance are larger than the City of Presidents, but they should not underestimate their own city. Remembering the population of Quincy is 23,899 or in round numbers 24,000, just glance through the list and note how few are larger by the 1900 census.

Alabama has but 3 larger.
Arizona none.
Arkansas but 1.
California only 4.
Colorado 2.
Connecticut 6.
Deleware but 1.
District of Columbia 1.
Florida only 1.
Georgia but 3.
Idaho none.
Illinois but 8.

The figures of 1880 and 1890 are also given, and the growth in ten and twenty years will also be of interest. The population of Quincy was as follows:

	Population.	Gain.
In 1880,	10,570	3,128
In 1890,	16,711	6,141
In 1900,	23,899	7,188

A few cities have grown faster but only the boom cities. In ten years Quincy moved up from No. 198 to No. 171.

Albert Edward has become Edward VII., and there was very little commotion about it. He stepped into his mother's place without opposition from anyone, and with the cordial good will of the people. All the talk about the abolition of the monarchy which has been rile for years, came to nothing.

Colonial Theatre.

Messrs. Klaw & Erlanger, the great firm of play producers, are confident that in their production of Gen. Lew Wallace's famous religious romance, "Ben Hur" they have a spectacle never surpassed upon the stage. Such massing of colors, such grouping of crowds, such exquisite light effects, such a succession of fascinations to the eye have never been shown before in one entertainment. Some of the scenes could furnish sufficient material for a whole show and that not of an ordinary character. The management has been generous to the point of recklessness in its liberal dealing with the public, yet is reaping its reward in patronage of a quality and volume intensely gratifying to those who risked so much that they might not only score a business triumph, materially aid the cultured classes who have the elevation of the stage so much at heart, but also supply a play full of popular interest. All New England, it would seem, intends to witness this great play at the magnificent new Colonial Theatre.

Castle Square Theatre.

The management of the Castle Square Theatre announce as the attraction at this popular play house the coming week Tom Taylor's drama "The Ticket-of-Leave Man," which interested and delighted audiences throughout England and America for many years after its original London production nearly forty years ago. The play has been revised, re-arranged and modernized for the coming Castle Square production by Director J. R. Pitman, and some very effective stage settings have been built and painted for it. The leading characters have been assigned as follows: Robert Brierly, John Craig; James Dalton, Edmund Breese; Hawkshaw, Charles Mackay; Melter Moss, John T. Craven; Green Jones, Lindsay Morison; Mr. Gibson, J. L. Seeley; Sam Willoughby, Hope Ross; May Edwards, Lillian Lawrence; Emily St. Evermond, Leonora Gnito; Mrs. Willoughby, Kate Ryan. The distribution of boxes of chocolate bonbons will be continued at the Monday matinees until further notice.

Keith's Theatre.

The entertainment to be furnished patrons of Keith's Boston house for the week commencing Monday, Jan. 28, gives promise of proving satisfactory to the most captious. The list of performers includes some of the best known and most popular artists in the profession, among them McIntyre and Heath, blackface commedians, who will be seen in a new sketch; Charles T. Aldrich, comedy juggler and burlesque magician; the Three Figarays, novelty acrobats, who have never been seen here before; the Harmony Four, in a vocal and comedy sketch; McPhee and Hill, expert horizontal bar performers; Doherty sisters, singers and dancers; E. A. Conturier, cornet soloist, late leader of Gilmore's band, and Reno and Richards, accentric acrobatic comedians. The underlined feature for the following week is Techow's troupe of trained cats, said to be a perfectly marvelous animal act.

AS A BIRTHDAY GIFT

Kaiser Is Made a Field Marshal of British Army.

BRITISH PEOPLE PLEASED

At Exchange of Courtesies Between German Ruler and King Edward — Queen's Memory Honored In British Churches—Plans For Naval Display

London, Jan. 28.—All over England memorial services were held yesterday in honor of the late queen. Especially impressive were the services at Cowes, but the solemnity was somewhat relieved later in the day by the few exercises in observance of Emperor William's birthday.

EMPEROR WILLIAM.

In honor of the day he was made a field marshal of the British army, and the sword of office was presented to him by the Duke of Connaught.

In the presence of the whole households of King Edward and the dead queen, as well as a number of British and German naval officers, the emperor expressed great delight at the appointment. Yesterday he celebrated his birthday at Osborne, and received congratulations from the members of the German embassy in London.

The kaiser donned the uniform of a British admiral to receive visitors to the Hohenzollern, who might call to tender congratulations. Among those who came were King Edward, in the uniform of an admiral, the Duke of Connaught, Prince Christian and other royal personages, Rord Roberts and Mr. Broderick, all in full uniform.

The emperor received the king at the gangway. The yacht was rolling heavily, owing to the gale, so that the queen and the royal ladies were prevented from accompanying the king. After tea had been served, the royal party returned to Osborne House, Emperor William and the crown prince immediately returning the visit and dining with the king.

In addition to the sword of a field-marshal, King Edward presented to Emperor William, already a Knight of the Garter, the insignia of the order in diamonds. The fact that this gift was ordered by the late queen, with the intention of presenting it on the kaiser's birthday, gave a pathetic interest to the presentation.

At St. Paul's cathedral in London there was an unusual scene. Before 9 o'clock in the morning an enormous crowd, wholly attired in black, streamed from all directions to the vast edifice, and by 10 o'clock it was packed. Thousands, unable to obtain admission, stood vainly waiting on the steps and around listening to the low organ strains and muffled peal. The service began at 10:30. Rev. Frederick Temple, primate and archbishop of Canterbury, preached a most touching sermon.

There were similar scenes at Westminster Abbey, where all the services throughout the day were attended by enormous congregations. The large assemblage in the chapel royal at St. James palace included a host of titled people, many members of the cabinet and other distinguished persons.

All the Roman Catholic and foreign churches in London held a special service. The members of the French embassy attended the French church, and very elaborate services were held at the chapel of the Russian embassy.

The venerable Archdeacon Sinclair, canon of St. Paul's cathedral, preached a commemorative discourse at Canterbury cathedral.

Special sermons were preached in St. George's chapel at Windsor. Everywhere cathedrals and churches were draped and hung with mourning emblems. Telegrams from the colonies and from all the principal cities abroad where British subjects reside, report memorial services.

All the morning papers comment with keen satisfaction upon the exchange of courtesies between King Edward and Emperor William, pointing out that all this will bind more firmly the Anglo-German friendship. "History is being made with lightning speed in these days," says The Daily Telegraph, "days crowded with majestic and epoch-making incidents, which can never cease to impress the imagination of the world and perhaps to effect its fortunes. Throughout this rapid process of transforming events it is still the German emperor's sojourn among us which most impresses the nation. There is not a single Briton but cherishes the hope and the confidence that the close and moving contact into which Emperor William and the British people have been brought will result in the absolute removal of a great misunderstanding."

The preparations are being completed for a monster pageant in London on the day of the funeral and the most imposing naval display in the history of the world at Spithead, off the Isle of Wight.

THE FOSBURGH MURDER

Victim's Brother, Charged With the Crime, Is Released on Bail

Pittsfield, Mass., Jan. 28.—Robert S. Fosburg, who was arrested Saturday upon the charge of manslaughter in causing the death of his sister, was released on $12,000 bail today, it being furnished by the Stanley Electric Manufacturing company, for which company the firm of R. L. Fosburg & Co., of which the prisoner is a member, has the contract for building a plant. The efforts to secure several prominent citizens to furnish the bonds was not as successful as had been anticipated, and the idea of drawing $12,000 on account from the Stanley company and applying it to the prisoner's release was finally adopted.

The police will not give out the evidence upon which the prisoner is held, and the fact that the arrest of Fosburg was made upon a bench warrant, based upon the finding of the grand jury, relieves the chief of police from the responsibility for that action.

It develops that at the coroner's inquest held into the death of Miss Fosburg, which has never been closed so far as it known, Miss Bertha Sheldon of Providence, who was at the house on the night of the murder, failed to put in an appearance. The murder is supposed to have occurred about 1 a. m., and about 9 o'clock that same morning Miss Sheldon left for her home. Since then every effort has failed to bring her here to testify at the inquest, as she refused to obey the summons, and she could not be forced to come from another state to testify against her wish.

Providence, Jan. 28.—Miss Bertha Sheldon says that she knows nothing regarding the tragedy which would make her evidence of value at an inquest or before a court, and that this is the reason for her failure to comply with the demands of a writ of summons for her to appear at the inquest at Pittsfield. Mr. Sheldon says he will not permit his daughter to go to Pittsfield to testify.

Further Mining Troubles Feared

Wilkesbarre, Pa., Jan. 28.—The anthracite coal operators and miners of this section are much stirred up by the reports sent out from Indianapolis that the United Mine Workers have decided to invite the operators of the anthracite region to meet their miners in conference and decide upon a new wage scale, which would call for an advance of 10 percent over the wages paid at present. A demand for further increases in wages would be almost sure to bring a lockout.

"Bargain Sale" Interrupted

Paris, Jan. 28.—Recently Le Petit Sou, a Socialist journal, announced that it was prepared to sell guns to its subscribers at a very moderate cost, being persuaded that an armed nation was indispensable to the welfare of the republic and the country. The government, finally deciding that a depot of arms was not safe in the hands of those who are willing to attempt a coup d'etat, seized the entire lot.

What Hawaiian Annexation Cost

Washington, Jan. 28.—Secretary Gage has sent to the house a full statement of the indebtedness incurred by the annexation of Hawaii, with a request for appropriations to cancel the indebtedness, aggregating $3,447,535.

MOTHER AND CHILD

Let the mother take Scott's emulsion of cod-liver oil for the two; it is almost never superfluous.

One can eat for two; but nourishing two is a different thing; it implies a degree of interior strength not often found in woman of either extreme.

Luxurious people are not very strong by habit, and overworked people are weak from exhaustion in some of their functions. Between the two is the happy mean; but how many women have plenty of life for two?

The emulsion is almost never superfluons.

We'll send you a little to try if you like.

PHILIPPINE QUESTION

May Lead to a Call For an Extra Session of Congress

EARLY ACTION IS URGED

Looking Toward Recognition of Civil Rights of Filipinos and Government For Them Other Than Military In Form — This Week In Congress

Washington, Jan. 28.—That senators regard seriously the prospect of an extra session of congress, in view of the president's urgent recommendation of legislation concerning the Philippine islands, is evidenced by the activity of those who desire to avoid an extra session. The speculation concerning the probability of a called session is rendered more definite by the fact that senators known to be generally well informed concerning the president's plans have joined in the discussion of the outlook.

Careful inquiry has developed the fact that the president has canvassed the subject with a few senators. He does not appear to have indicated any fixed determination of issuing a call, but rather to have consulted them as to the advisability of such a proceeding. In all such instances he seems to have had the necessity of Philippine legislation in view, and senators generally express the opinion that in case a meeting is called the Philippine question will receive the lion's share of attention.

The urgency of the administration on this point is due to the importunity of the Taft commission, the members of which appear to have supplemented their official recommendations for early action with private letters, not only to the president, but to members of the cabinet and senators as well. They insist upon the necessity of early recognition of the civil rights of the Filipinos and of a government for them other than military in form.

Senators who have concerned themselves with these matters have canvassed the senate somewhat as to the possibility of getting legislation before March 4 in the line of that contemplated by the Spooner bill, but they have received little encouragement.

The senators who oppose the ship subsidy bill are especially opposed to an extraordinary session. Upon the whole, the most that can be said is that both the executive and the congress are discussing the wisdom of an extra session, and that no conclusion has been reached on the point.

A variety of subjects, including appropriation bills, the war revenue reduction bill, the ship subsidy bill, and to some extent, the Philippine question, will claim the attention of the senate this week. Mr. Towne will speak on the problems involved in the government of the Philippines. It does not appear probable that the Minnesota senator's speech will call out other speeches immediately upon this subject, but straggling references to the subject are not improbable at any time during the remainder of the session.

Senator Aldrich has given notice that he will ask the senate to take up the war revenue bill early in the week. The understanding is that he will press that question to the exclusion of all other bills, except appropriation bills. Being a revenue measure, it will take precedence of other questions under the senate rules.

The week in the house is likely to be monopolized by appropriation bills. Seven of the 14 general appropriation bills have already passed the house. Whatever time remains will be occupied with the bill to promote the efficiency of the revenue cutter service, which has been made a continuing special order, not, however, to interfere with appropriation bills.

Hertz to Be Extradited

Washington, Jan. 28.—The state department has delivered the papers to secure the extradition of Sigmund Hertz, a confidential clerk, charged with a heavy embezzlement in New York. Hertz is now under detention at London.

Verdi's Last Request

Milan, Jan. 28.—Although preceded by a struggle for life that lasted two days, Verdi's death, when it came, was peaceful. When he passed away he was surrounded by relatives and friends. The announcement of the death created great emotion among all classes. In his will Verdi asks that the funeral may be "very modest. The chanting of two priests, two candles and a cross will suffice," he wrote. Many legacies were left to friends.

Scarcity of Frozen Herring

St. John's, Jan. 28.—The frozen herring fishery in Placentia bay will be a total failure. The prospects of loading the American fishing fleet have been destroyed by soft weather and a succession of rainstorms. At the present time herring bring $4 a barrel, four times the usual price. American ship owners will lose heavily.

Likely to Spread Disease

Appleton, Wis., Jan. 28.—Dr. Rodermund, the physician who, to support his theory that the disease is non-contagious, deliberately exposed himself to the smallpox contagion in this city, broke quarantine Saturday evening, eluded four officers and drove 40 miles to Waupaca and boarded a train for Chicago.

Drift of Opinion.

☞A hundred years ago a woman and all her possessions, including her shirt-waists, practically belonged to her husband. To-day a man may not under any circumstances open his wife's letters without her permission, while she also has her legal rights and controls her own property, a contemporary remarks. And not infrequently controls her liege lord as well, might have been further added in noting the evolution.—Lynn Item.

☞The wife of the late Vice-President Hobart has been inviting Paterson mill girls to her home, to show them, [illegible] society women, but as an effort to give at least a new sensation to the not overpaid workers it is worthy of commendation.—Brockton Enterprise.

☞It looks as though the Congressional committee that has been investigating the system of hazing in vogue at West Point would accomplish good results. It has clearly shown that hazing was common and that it was often attended with features that were brutal and disgraceful. The cadet corps has acted wisely in resolving to abolish hazing. Congress is likely to enact legislation that will make hazing risky business for those cadets who may be inclined to indulge in that pastime.—Gardner Journal.

☞The source of corrupt municipal government will never be permanently removed until rich men and managers of great commercial and financial interests find a way to resist blackmail. They now—nearly all—contribute to campaign funds, many to the funds of the bosses of both parties, and not a few pay money to prevent legislation that is proposed on purpose to secure blackmail. There will be municipal misrule—organized oppression, in fact—until the fundamental cause of it is removed. If a vigilance committee, in addition to closing dives and stopping the petty levy made on unfortunate women and the keepers of gambling houses, could stop the great source of supply of corruption, we should have a new day in municipal rule. What if men who control great interests and manage great corporations were to agree, and publish their agreement, that they will never contribute out of their trust funds to any campaign committee and would never pay peace money? The powers that prey would then die of starvation. There is no complete reform short of such radical action.—The World's Work for February.

The Boer does just as little work as will keep himself and family alive, and most of that he gets done by Kaffir servanes who, in the more out-of-the-way districts, at any rate are practically slaves.

VICTORIAN MEMORIAL SERVICES.

Quincy Ladies, Quincy's Mayor and Also the Clergy Pay Tributes to Queen Victoria.

Never has there been a larger audience at the Water Street Presbyterian church than Sunday evening, at the service in memory of Queen Victoria. Every seat in the large church was occupied. Seats were placed in the aisles, and extra chairs were placed on the platform. Aside from these the entrance hall was filled with people who were obliged to stand. In fact every available space was occupied. There were but a few decorations and they were confined to a large portrait of the Queen, which was draped with the American and British flags.

The service opened with the Doxology, followed by the Lord's prayer and the reading of the scriptures by Dr. Todd.

Mayor Hall was then introduced to speak of the Queen as a ruler. He said in part: We are here to join in paying tribute to one who has been among the leaders; one who has passed away. The whole Christian world stood with bowed heads when the news came that Queen was dead. The America flag is drooped in sadness, which was emblematic of the American people. It represents that broad element of patriotism. It can in consistency be lowered in our country for that wise ruler.

It was difficult to separate the public and private life of Victoria. The dignity she manifested at 18 years of age, when crowned, filled the hearts of all with admiration and esteem. Assuming the chair of state, chair large enough for six queens, she by the spirit of dignity seemed to fill it. She was most methodical in all the affairs of state. She insisted that every document should explicitly state what was wanted. By this system she was able to divide the day and accomplish a vast amount of work with the least amount of fatigue. In the course of a year 56,000 documents came to her, nearly 230 every day. Each received her careful consideration. Every state paper was criticised carefully. It has been said a monarch is like a figurehead of a ship. But if the figurehead can walk the deck in sunshine and storm, and give directions, she is certainly more than a figurehead. So it can be said she has been a mother to the people of her kingdom and all can join in that song God save the Queen."

Miss Bessie Todd sang a solo "The Holy City," to the delight of all.

Rev. Dr. Todd, the pastor, spoke briefly of the Queen, as wife and mother. In the minds of all she has been living an illustrious life. It is as a womanly queen more than as a queenly woman that she has been the benefactor of the world. She was not only a queen, she was a womanly queen, a loyal wife and mother. The wife and mother was never lost in that royal home. It was a home where virtue held sway. As a young queen she said to her spiritual adviser, "Pray for me, that I may be good." A young life began as she begun heri, can never end in smoke. She taught all her daughters the important duties of domestic life; insisted that all her sons should have a profession by which they might support themselves if necessary. Such homes as these make nations strong. She redeemed the throne from shame. She exerted a wide influence in aristocratic home life, and amid all her trials she never lost the full sense of the tremendous responsibilities of her office.

Rev. W. W. Dornan was the last speaker and he also spoke of the Queen as a woman. In her, humanity has lost a woman. She broke the whole traditional past and gave to the world the finest government the world has ever seen. From the day she stepped on the throne she discarded everything that would besmirch. As a woman she stood paramount. She has done more for women than all the woman clubs in the world. Other queens had the same opportunity but failed. She despised all sham. With all her cares and duties, she shines as wife and mother. The office of queen was no sinecure. Never was a bill passed that she did not thoroughly master and understand before it passed. Her family was never neglected.

Taking into consideration the temptations which her children were exposed, the wonder is that they are such a royal family as they are. They are indebted to her for what they are. She was the ideal mother, from which many might take example.

She was Queen in the truest sense and the world has learned to love her. She made England great, She feared God and loved the Bible. When England's history is written it will have no brighter chapter than that which will deal with the reign of Queen Victoria.

The gigantic Russian cross hewn in the granite rocks of the St. Gothard road in Switzerland, near the Devil's Bridge is now completed. It commemorates Suvarroff's victory over the French a century ago.

The capacity of Bethany Congregational church was tested Sunday evening, an audience of 600 to 700 attending the Victoria memorial services. It was a very interesting meeting too, with its special music and instructive papers.

The service opened with a selection by the choir, "To the Angels," the solo part being by Miss Florence Emery. The opening prayer by the pastor was followed by a solo, "The beautiful land on high," by Mr. Percy Baker of Weymouth. The pastor read the 90th Psalm and Miss Emery sang Napoleon Zardo. Prayer was offered by Rev. A. A. Ellsworth. Mr. Baker sang "The Publican" by Van de Water, and then all united heartily in the hymn, which is as popular in Great Britain as America, "Nearer My God to Thee."

Rev. E. N. Hardy, the pastor then briefly introduced the two Quincy ladies announced to read papers on Queen Victoria.

Mrs. John O. Hall, Jr., without manuscript, presented in a very interesting manner the life of the Queen as a woman. She said at the outset that Victoria was the queen of queens as she embodied all the noble traits. Mrs. Hall then spoke of her traits as maid, wife and mother. How she had accidentally discovered by herself, when twelve years of age, that she was next in succession to the throne and her remark, "I will be good." How she had travelled extensively and investigated the industries of the country. How she received the news that she had become queen, and had engaged in prayer.

Queen Victoria was a good talker and well versed, and seemed to possess all the qualities to please. She had genius to a remarkable degree, and was refined and cultured, and kept young and cheerful. Mrs. Hall spoke of her fads, her love of children, and consideration for servants; her religion, and her observance of the Sabbath as a day of rest, and closed with a beautiful quotation.

Miss Madeleine Fish spoke understandingly of Victoria as sovereign, and claimed she had wrought her people lasting good. During the first year of her reign, 1837, she personally opened parliament. She was no mere figurehead, but handled the many perplexing questions of her long reign carefully and with understanding to a remarkable degree.

Miss Fish reviewed the important events of the reign of Victoria, and the development of the country. Touched upon her religion, and then passed to the progress of England in literature during the reign.

Another beautiful solo by Miss Emery, "The sands of time are sinking" by Charles Gounod, and the benediction closed the service.

Billiard Exhibition.

The members of the Granite City club were given a rare treat Saturday night, when Fred Eames, the champion billiardist of New England, played an exhibition game. There was a very large attendance and an unusual stillness prevailed as he made short after short and rolled up point after point. Herbert M. Federhen, Jr., played against him and Herbert M. Federhen, Sr., officiated as referee. The first game was of 300 points. In this Eames three best runs were 64, 88 and 114 points and his average was 37 1-2 points. It was wonderful how he nursed the balls. Mr. Federhen had hard luck during this game and only succeeded in scoring nine points while Mr. Eames was making his 300. The second game was a balk line game of 150 points. In this game Mr. Eames best runs were 10, 23, 27, 31 and 40 and Mr. Federhen's 10 and 17. Mr. Federhen succeeded in running up 76 points while Mr. Eames made his 150 points. After this game Mr. Eames gave an exhibition of fancy shots. He showed himself an almost complete master of the balls and was able to do with them as he pleased.

At extreme end, under front steps are the vaults of the presidents, a massive stone door closing the entrance. Janitor can be found at Savings Bank building or at his home Maple place. No fee charged, but janitor may be paid for his trouble.

MINOR EXCLUDED.

Not Allowed to Play Pool or Loiter About the Places.

It is said that some of the keepers of billiard and pool rooms have became a little more cautious who they admit to their premises of late and all on account of Henry H. Faxon,

It became pretty thoroughly noised about Saturday, mainly through the Faxon articles in the Ledger, that Henry had put on his war paint, buckled on his armor, and armed with smokeless powder firearms, had declared war against all holders of billiard and pool licenses who permitted minors to frequent their places of business, or to participate in the game. Everybody, who knew anything about these places knew that the price was all that was necessary to play. Questions as to age were seldom, if ever, asked, and if questions were asked a lie on the part of the boy as to his age was winked at. They knew the boy lied, but that made no difference, it was his money they were after.

Things are different now, for with one accord the holder of such licenses took warning, and it is reported that Saturday night the law for the first time for years was lived up to. Boys whom the proprietors had reason to believe were under the required age were not permitted to play and were not permitted to loiter about the premises. It is hardly necessary to say that receipts fell off amazingly, but it was a good thing. If these places only continue to live up to the law there will be no more trouble.

New England Pop-Overs. Beat the whites and yolks of two fresh eggs separately, add the yolks to two cups of sweet milk, and stir in this two cups of flour, sifted with a teaspoonful of baking powder and one of salt; add the whites and beat briskly. Pour into the greased muffin rings which have been previously heated. Do not have them more than half full, as they puff up to almost three times the size. Bake in a hot oven and serve at once.

The strength of the common house ant is something phenomenal. Sir John Lubbock has estimated that one of these can sustain a weight 3000 times greater than its own. This is equivalent to a man holding 210 tons by his teeth

List of All Such Cities in United States.

With Census Figures for 1880 and 1890.

Quincy With 23,899 Ranks High In the List.

It was noted in the Ledger Jan. 19, that Quincy ranked No. 171 in population in the United States. There are about 1700 cities and towns today with a population of 3000 and, as promised, the Ledger commenced Jan. 26 to publish the list.

Quincy people are often led to think that places at a distance are larger than the City of Presidents, but they should not underestimate their own city. Remembering the population of Quincy is 23,899 or in round numbers 24,000, just glance through the list and note how few are larger by the 1900 census.

Alabama has but 3 larger.
Arizona none.
Arkansas but 1.
California only 4.
Colorado 2.
Connecticut 6.
Delaware but 1.
District of Columbia 1.
Florida only 1.
Georgia but 3.
Idaho none.
Illinois but 8.
Indiana only 5.
Indian territory none.
Iowa but 6.
Kansas 3.
Kentucky 4.
Louisana 2.
Only 52 in 20 States.

The figures of 1880 and 1890 are also given, and the growth in ten and twenty years will also be of interest. The population of Quincy was as follows:

	Population.	Gain.
In 1880,	10,570	3,128
In 1890,	16,711	6,141
In 1900,	23,899	7,188

A few cities have grown faster but only the boom cities. In ten years Quincy moved up from No. 198 to No. 171.

TODAY'S COURT.

Matthew Raila was arraigned for drunkenness at Braintree. Case continued until Tuesday.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address.

February Magazines.

In the editorial comment on current affairs in the February Review of Reviews, the death of Queen Victoria and the accession of King Edward, as the overshadowing events of the past month, demand first place. Excellent portraits of the lamented Queen, the new King, Queen Alexandra, and other members of the British royal family accompany the text. The editor analyzes the remarkable influence of Victoria as a sovereign, reviews her long and splendid reign, and points out the elements of strength and stability in the monarchy as it will be administered by Edward VII

The February number of the Woman's Home Companion contains several features of special merit. Chief of these in the short story by the Queen of Roumania (Carmen Sylva), "A Festival in Heaven," which will appeal to all thoughtful readers. "Dancing in the Austrian Tyrol," by Lillian Bell; "Home and Social Life of the Japanese," and "The Woman's Paper of Little Bohemia" are a few of the leading articles. The fiction is contributed by such writers as Mrs. Spofford, John Kendrick Bangs, Frank H. Spearman and Sophie Swett, whose names speak for them.

The immediate success of The World's Work—a fact unparalleled in magazine history—is due in great measure to its dominant Americanism. The February number is characteristic. An editorial interpretation of the month compressed, clear and cheerful; an illustrated article on "The Great Empire by the Lakes," by Frederic C. Howe, Esq., of Cleveland, explaining the industrial and intellectual building up of that working centre of the world; vivid sketches of Cecil Rhodes and General Kitchener written by men who personally know them; an article on "The Changing character of Immigration." (how the Italians and the Jews are taking the place of the Irish), and an account of a naturalist's adventurous climb to the summit of a Mexican volcanic peak.

Stole a Newspaper.

To help one's self to a newspaper that is left at a door for some one else is much more expensive than a yearly subscription, as a fine in the New Bedford court last week shows. A dispatch from that city says: An unusual case was prosecuted in the Police Court Friday, despite strongly asserted efforts to hush it up. It was for the theft of a copy of a local paper, valued at two cents, delivered by a carrier at the store door of a subscriber, H. B. DeWolf. Copies of the paper, day after day, disappeared, and the subscriber, a well-known business man, finally complained to the police of the annoyance. Police Sergeant Underwood was detailed to watch the paper. He saw another business man, B. A. Vance, take the paper. The Sergeant overtook Mr. Vance, who was walking away with the paper, and spoke to him. Vance said that he had only borrowed the paper to read it. The alleged theft was brought to public notice by a hearing before Judge Milliken. Mr. Vance denied any thought of theft, being amply able to buy his own paper, and further being a subscriber for a paper. After a somewhat lengthy hearing, the Court imposed a fine of $10, remarking in doing so that there were only a few cents involved, but it was the annoyance caused a subscriber of a paper by its being taken away that made the matter serious.

Mrs. Horace Eaton.

The sad news reached this city this morning of the death of Mrs. Horace Eaton at Nice, France, Jan. 9, of pneumonia. Mrs. Eaton resided for many years on Adams street, in this city where she has a large circle of relatives and friends. She was a daughter of James Baxter, who resided in the house now occupied by Mr. T. L. Sturtevant. A few years ago, she and her husband moved to Cambridge, where they have since made their home.

Orcutt and Judge Payson, representing the Newport News shipbuilding and dry dock company, for the construction of one sheathed armored cruiser to cost $3,885,000 and one unsheathed armored cruiser at $3,775,000. The vessels are to be of 14,500 tons each.

Capt. Converse, who is to command the battleship Illinois, now being built at Newport News, reports that she will be ready for her preliminary trial about Feb. 14.

The Little Wildflowers.

The little Wildflowers to sleep have gone,
"Way down in their cozy beds;
A thick brown blanket of leaves they've drawn
Right over their little heads.
For well they know cold weather's about,
The time when Jack Frost appears,
And that some night, if they don't watch out,
He'll come and bite off their ears.

They know that his partner, Mr. Snow,
Will also in time be due,
For old Mother Nature told them so,
And they know that it must be true.
So, tightly tucked in their beds, they lie
And laugh in their dreams so fair
To think that neither, in passing by,
Will be able to find them there!

The little Wildflowers are tired of play
And weary of field and sun;
The birds and the bees have gone away;
The song of the rain is done.
So now they nod on their beds of sod,
While winter winds o'er them sing,
And sleep so deep, knowing well that God
Will awaken them in the spring.

Bank Teller Has Disappeared

Chicago, Jan. 28.—Arthur R. Barnard, teller of Zion City bank, the private financial institution established by Rev. John A. Dowie four years ago, has disappeared. His father, cashier of the bank, reported his disappearance yesterday. He is of the belief that his son has been kidnapped and is held for ransom, a belief which is shared by Mr. Dowie and several members of his church. The police think it more probable that young Barnard has been held up by robbers, and possibly injured seriously, if not fatally. Still another theory of young Barnard's disappearance is based on the fact that he was shot a year ago, while resisting highwaymen. Both robbers were convicted and sent to prison. It is thought that one of these men may have regained his liberty and waylaid Barnard for revenge. Barnard's accounts at the bank are in perfect order.

Ballots Better Than Rocks

Topeka, Jan. 28.—Mrs. Carrie Nation addressed two large audiences here last night. She simply told the story of her work and how she had come to start on the crusade. "The issue in Kansas," she said," is down with the whisky trust. The best rocks to throw are votes. We women cannot vote, but you men, with your ballots, and we women with our hatchets will clean up this awful traffic." Mrs. Nation says she will not attempt to break up the saloons in Topeka single handed, but if the women of the town will aid her she will start out "joint smashing" at once.

Relieved of His Valuables

New York, Jan. 28.—Daniel McLaughlin, station agent at Simsbury, Conn., was complainant in the Harlem police court yesterday against Patrick Cryan, employed in the saloon of Thomas J. Cryan, and charged him with robbery. McLaughlin says that he was relieved of his gold watch and chain. $27 in cash, a draft for $1200 and several railroad passes. The Cryans were held under heavy bail.

SHOOT PROMISCUOUSLY

Band of Drunken Creek Indians on the Rampage.

SNAKES' LEADER CAPTURED

After a Hazardous Dash by Two Brave Men—May Result In a Speedy Quelling of the Threatened Outbreak—Disquieting News From Muskegee

Guthrie, O. T., Jan. 28.—Governor Barnes yesterday received a third request from Sheriff Tillghman of Lincoln county for two militia companies. In his request Tillghman says the people on the Creek boundary are alarmed and that a band of Creeks is roaming over the country drunk and shooting promiscuously.

Deputy Marshal Grant Johnson and Bunnie McIntosh of Eufala, two men noted for their bravery and daring in hazardous expeditions against outlaws, made a dash upon the encampment of Snake Indians near Eufala, I. T., yesterday, and captured Chitto Harjo (Crazy Snake).

After an exciting escape from the hostile Creek camp, they managed to land their prisoner at Henrietta last evening, and he is now held captive under a strong guard of soldiers, under the command of Lieutenant Dixon.

The capture of the central figure of the uprising and the show of force which the troops will make will likely put an end to the threatened outbreak.

Lieutenant Dixon and his troops will move out of Henrietta today upon the encampment of Snakes near Eufala. It is not likely that a forced march will be made, and it will be tomorrow night before the Snakes' stronghold is reached. Deprived of their leader, it is not thought probable that they will make any resistance, but will lay down their arms and yield to the inevitable.

Reports received here at the United States marshal's office say that the home of John Bartram, a ranchman living 16 miles east of Bristow, I. T., was burned by the belligerent Snake Indians Saturday night. A band of 30 Indians, all drunk, made a demonstration. Bartram ordered them away. This enraged the Indians. The band rode away, and Bartram, fearing violence, moved his family to Bristow. Later his home and all the buildings on the premises were in flames.

Mose Lyon, in charge of a party that arrived at Muskogee yesterday, says that a number of light horsemen are still riding over the country. They are heavily armed, but are not doing any damage. It is believed that the worst is over, but Marshal Bennett has his best deputies with him, and if he encounters trouble he will put up a strong fight. It is his purpose to join the soldiers at Henrietta and work with them in making arrests of the leaders of the uprising.

Indian Commissioner's Report

Washington, Jan. 28.—Indian Commissioner Jones has received the following dispatch from Agent Shoenfelt at Muskogee, I. T., regarding the Indian troubles:

"Marshal Bennett will leave Monday with a force of deputies and Indian police. Will meet troops at Henrietta. Late dispatches indicate uprising in Choctaw nation spreading. Disaffected Indians have sworn in 450 light horsemen, and are attempting to carry out their laws, and threaten to destroy property. Have just ordered a squad of police to Bristow to assist the civil authorities in maintaining order and prevent sale of whisky to the Indians where large band of Snake Indians are now camped, threatening to burn the town.

The Pope on Socialism

Rome, Jan. 28.—The pope's encylcical on socialism says that socialism only concerns itself with material wealth and social equality, whereas, Christian democracy, while seeking material amelioration, has spiritual amelioration in view. The poniff exhorts Catholics to inspire themselves with these principles, and to inculcate them. Thus will social peace again become flourishing throughout the world.

Fire In a Washington Hotel

Washington, Jan. 28.—Fire broke out early Sunday morning in a room on the first floor of Willard's hotel. All, however, managed to escape in safety.

ROW AT A DANCE

Ends In a Stabbing Affray Which Is Likely to Prove Fatal

Westfield, Mass., Jan. 28.—A street brawl, following a Saturday night dance among Russians, resulted in the stabbing of three men, one of them fatally, Sunday morning. John Pitonyak, the man most seriously hurt, has a dirk wound in his head, penetrating the brain, from which he will probably die. Matyas Olejaak is in custody as Pitonyak's assailant. Albert Elkey, Peter Kirby and Frank White fell into a brawl with the two Russians, and it seems probable that Pitonyak received the dangerous wound at the hands of his companion, who intended it for one of the others. Kirby was cut about the hands, and Elkey received several severe slashes on the breast, arm and hands. The three Americans notified the police and a physician.

Tug Crashed Into Schoonar

Vineyard Haven, Mass., Jan. 28.—Yesterday the tug O. L. Hallenback, outward bound, was steaming down the harbor at low tide, and just before reaching schooner Orizimbo her keel came so near the bottom that she would not mind her wheel. The tug sheared over toward the schooner, crashing into her port side and causing her to sink within five minutes. The Orizimbo had a cargo of 227 tons of coal. The Hallenback had her bow plates dented and bent. No lives were lost.

Worcester, Mass., Jan. 28.—William J. Kinsley, 31 years old, left his home yesterday and, going to the shore of Lake Quinsigamond, committed suicide by shooting. Illness, which he believed incurable, and consequent melancholia are believed to be the cause of his suicide.

CUBAN "SPORTING BLOOD"

Crops Out In a Modest Request For Legalization of Cock Fighting

Havana, Jan. 28.—A mounted delegation of 200 Cubans from the provinces of Havana and Pinar Del Rio waited upon Governor General Woods yesterday and extended thanks to the military government for what it had done in Cuba, and conveyed an assurance that their countrymen in the two provinces were in accord with them and would work in harmony with the United States authorities, to whose wise administration the country owed its present prosperous and peaceful condition. Each horseman carried a flag, and there was a decided preponderance of the Stars and Stripes.

The committee of the delegation explained to General Wood the obligations under which their countrymen felt themselves to be for the good order and harmony prevailing in the country districts, but they begged him to consider that, with returning prosperity, it was only natural for the Cubans to turn again to some of the diversions they had known in former days, several of which —"time honored amusements" the committee called them—were now prohibited by law.

General Wood asked if they referred to cock fighting, and they admitted that this was one of the amusements they wished to revive. He assured them that he would lay the matter before the secretaries. There seems to be a general movement in the country districts of the island to secure the legalization of cock fighting, and many petitions have lately been submitted in aid of it.

Thousands of Victims of Famine

Pekin, Jan. 28.—There has been great distress in the province of Shan-Si, owing to the famine, and thousands have died. The court has ordered rice relief to be issued in large quantities. A report that native Christians suffering from the famine were to be discriminated against and to be punished if they even begged for food caused the foreign envoys to protest against such discrimination, and the court issued an edict ordering all relief officials and Chinese soldiers to treat Christians exactly the same as others throughout the empire, under penalty of decapitation.

Sixty Submerged, Two Drowned

New York, Jan. 28.—Sixty skaters broke through the ice on a large pond back of Evergreen cemetery, Brooklyn, yesterday, and in the wild struggle for life two days, each aged 11, were drowned. The ice over the centre of the pond suddenly sank. The whole crowd was panic stricken. Men employed in a factory near by pushed long planks toward the centre of the pond. Along this footing a life line was formed. By twos and threes the skaters were taken from the water and hustled along the planks to the shore.

NEW HOUSES FOR SALE.

Just to remind you that I have another lot of houses nearly completed, I will list these three bargains:

Many were disappointed on the last lot so be on hand early if you would be in it.

First—A six room Single House, bath and set tubs, with hot and cold water, papered to suit purchaser, large lot. $2100. $300 down; balance at low rate of interest. Just the place for some street railway employee.

Also, one of eight rooms and bath, Independence avenue; all modern improvements, bounds on two streets, can sell for $500 less than real value. This house is of the popular size to suit any business man, and is very roomy and convenient. I don't like to have other builders know how I am cutting prices, but $3,000 buys this one, look at it and compare with others you see building.

Another, and a money maker for some one with only an ounce of pluck. This is a two-family House, 5 rooms and bath each, and 60 foot lot, $3,000. Pay in $500 on this and I will guarantee you a twenty five per cent. investment for one year; who would dare invest in a twenty-five per cent. GUARANTEED investment.

Remember these houses are built by competent workmen, by the day, of the best material, and are personally superintended by the owner, are but four minutes to station, electrics pass, and everything is most desirable as a residential section. All houses are connected with sewer and cellars are perfectly dry.

Come and look them over and select one that suits you. Can be seen any day.

MRS. NATION'S TONGUE

Used With Vigor In the State Capitol of Kansas

INVADES GOVERNOR'S OFFICE

Tells Him That He Is a Perjurer as Well as a Law Breaker—Executive Promises Not to Pardon Any "Joint Keepers" Who May Be Convicted

Topeka, Jan. 29.—The state capitol was visited by Mrs. Carrie Nation yesterday, and the first place she invaded was the office of Governor Stanley. For a solid hour she arraigned the chief executive of the state for his failure to close the saloons of Kansas. Then in turn she visited the offices of Attorney General Goddard, County Attorney Nichols and Sheriff Cook, and demanded of each that they close the saloons.

When Mrs. Nation entered Governor Stanley's office she accused the governor of branding her as a law breaker, and demanded to know if he had a better method than she of ridding the state of saloons.

"No, I don't think I have," he replied, and asked: "What can I do."

"If necessary, call out the militia," was Mrs. Nation's prompt reply. "You can close every saloon in Kansas if you will. You are a law breaker yourself if you do not. You took your oath of office to keep the constitution. You are not only a law breaker, but a perjurer."

She repeated the words of accusation again and again. He tried to make reply, but she gave him no chance. Finally, angered, Governor Stanley arose from his seat and said: "You cannot come here and talk this way to me. You are a woman, but I won't stand it."

"I am a mother. I am a grandmother, and I represent the mothers of the state," replied Mrs. Nation.

After some further passage of words Governor Stanley volunteered: "You get the prosecuting attorneys of the different counties to put the joint keepers in jail, and I will use my power as governor to keep them in. I will see that they are not pardoned out."

Mrs. Nation, thanking the governor, went to the office of Attorney General Goddard. She forced her way into his private office, and demanded that he remove those officials who neglected their duty in allowing the saloons to run.

With a parting injunction to do what he had sworn to do on taking his oath, Mrs. Nation went to the county attorney's office. To him she repeated her demands, and finally said she wished to swear out a warrant for the saloon keeper's wife who had attacked her Saturday night with a broomstick.

With a few words of warning, Mrs. Nation headed for the office of Sheriff Cook. The sheriff after hearing her scorching attack for a time, asked her to his private office to continue the argument alone.

The chief of police was picked out for the next onslaught, but his office was found locked, and Mrs. Nation harangued a crowd that had gathered in the street near city hall.

Factions Will Divide Honors

Lawrence, Mass., Jan. 29.—The deadlock in the common council was broken last night by a compromise. William B. Bartley, Democrat, and Charles H. Choate, Republican, agreed to divide the balance of the year in the president's chair. Bartley will serve the first half of the year, and Choate the last part. The committees will be equally divided. Nearly 800 ballots were taken at previous meetings, without electing a president.

Concerning Boston Firemen's Pay

Boston, Jan. 29.—The board of aldermen concurred with the common council in the adoption of a resolution advocating an increase of salaries in the fire department. This action was taken in the face of a letter from Fire Commissioner Russell, stating that the average salary paid to hose and ladder men in other cities was under the average of that in Boston, which is $1200.

Tenants Hustled For Life

Boston, Jan. 29.—A fire in a tenement house on Auburn street last evening caused a hasty exit of the occupants, some of whom jumped from the windows to escape the smoke and flames. Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Ferguson were seriously injured, and taken to a hospital. There were a number of thrilling escapes and daring rescues.

Dishonest Postal Clerk In Court

New York, Jan. 29.—William J. Timmerman, a clerk in a branch postoffice station in this city, was arraigned yesterday, charged with robbing the mails. The man broke down completely in court and fainted. It is said that he realized a large sum of money by his peculations. He was held for further examination in $2500 bail.

A Brush In Cape Colony

Ventersburg, Jan. 29.—Generals De Wet and Paterson, with 500 Boers, crossed the railroad between here and Halfontein Jan. 23. Twenty-five British, in ambush, killed five of the Boers.

BIGAMIST SENTENCED

Howard Will Spend More Than Two Years at Hard Labor at Sing Sing

New York, Jan. 29.—George W. Howard, formerly of Cambridge, Mass., who pleaded guilty yesterday to an indictment for bigamy in marrying Helen P. Hawkes, daughter of a prominent officeholder of Brooklyn, on Sept. 17 last, was sentenced to two years and 10 months at hard labor in Sing Sing. He was taken there last night.

A piece of the wedding cake, distributed 11 years ago, at the celebration of his marriage to Anna Kay of Cambridge, was one of the bits of evidence held against him by the district attorney. It had been preserved as a souvenir of the occasion by the wife of one of the witnesses to the ceremony. Engraved invitations to the Howard-Kay marriage and an engraved announcement to the friends of the couple of the birth of their son were among the exhibits ready for introduction against him.

After sentence was passed, Howard told the clerk that he was 38 years of age, temperate and an engineer by occupation. He was not certain whether born in Reading or Woburn, Mass. He declared himself to be an Episcopalian.

Helen Hawkes Howard will now apply to the supreme court for the annulment of her marriage to Howard. Her father was inclined to think that Howard's sentence was rather light. If well behaved while at Sing Sing he will serve a trifle over two years and two months.

Detective Waylaid and Stabbed

Chicago, Jan. 29.—Enemies of Joseph Withoff, a detective for the Evanston Anti-Saloon league, planned to murder him, and attempted to execute the crime Sunday night. Concealed near the rear door of Withoff's house three men waited for him to come out, and when he made his appearance he was seized from behind, felled to the ground and stabbed. Withoff, although he had received threatening anonymous letters had continued his duties of securing evidence against the "blind pig" keepers of Evanston. Several arrests will probably be made.

Why Murray Hall Wore Men's Clothes

Glasgow, Jan. 29.—Sir Henry Littlejohn, medical officer of Edinburgh, believes that Murray Hall, who, upon her death at New York, Jan. 17, was found to be a woman, was the same person who, in 1870, was brought to the small pox hospital dressed as a man, but was subsequently found to be a woman. She gave as a reason for her conduct that she was left an orphan, and had dressed up in the clothing of a dead brother because it was easier to get employment. She later left for the United States.

"Badger" Workers Sentenced

Boston, Jan. 29.—After denying a motion for a new trial in the "badger" case, Judge Lawson sentenced William Drinkall to the state prison for not less than eight nor more than 10 years at hard labor, and Delia McLean, his partner, to the woman's reformatory for seven years. Both were convicted of robbery in working the "badger" game on David Gordon. When sentence was pronounced Mrs. McLean fainted.

A Much-Discussed Subject

Copenhagen, Jan. 29.—It appears that only a single member out of the 15 comprising the finance committee of the folkething opposed the sale of the Danish West Indies to the United States. The objector is starting a newspaper campaign in favor of their retention, but the finance committee of the landsthing will shortly report in favor of the sale of the islands.

Case of Double Asphyxiation

Fall River, Mass., Jan. 29.—A strong smell of gas caused an investigation in the tenement occupied by Robert Calvert and his wife, and upon forcing the door the unfortunate couple were found to have expired from the fumes which escaped from an open jet. Calvert was 64 years old, and his wife 61, both being weavers in one of the local mills.

Another Contribution Wanted

Fall River, Mass., Jan. 29.—At a meeting of the directors of the Fall River textile school last evening, it was voted to ask the state legislature for an appropriation of $75,000 to build and equip a textile school. The school has already an appropriation of $25,000 from the city, and a like sum from the state.

City Officials Opposed to Transfer

New York, Jan. 29.—It is said that the United States government will not obtain possession of Blackwell's island or any part of it for a naval park and drill ground. All the city officers who have the power to make the concession are opposed to the transfer of the island to the government.

New York, Jan. 29.—A passenger train on the West Shore railroad ran into a gravel train at Weehawken yesterday. Two Italian laborers were killed. Seven persons were injured, three of them seriously. None of the passengers were hurt.

A DAY OF MOURNING

King Edward's Order Regarding Saturday's Ceremonies

THE ROUTE OF PROCESSION

To Be Extended In Order to Give Londoners Full Opportunity to Witness It—King Tells Emperor That He Hopes Friendly Relations Will Continue

London, Jan. 29.—It is officially announced that King Edward has ordered Saturday to be observed as a day of general mourning. All the banks will be closed and business suspended. Almost everything thus far is provisional and subject to the approval of the king, who came to London today to look over what has been proposed and to give his decision.

By order of the king all draperies displayed by citizens shall be of purple. The procession from St. George's chapel royal, at Windsor, to Frogmore, has been abandoned, and the coffin will remain in the chapel until the day of interment, which will probably be Monday.

Emperor William has commanded Count Von Wedel to bring six of his majesty's chargers from Berlin, and the kaiser, the crown prince and the other Germans in official attendance at the funeral, will ride in the procession. The gun carriage to be used at Cowes and Windsor and in London will be painted the color of khaki and fitted with rubber tires.

King Edward has commanded A. Forestier, the well known artist of Black and White, to draw the lying-in-state for him.

In order to give Londoners a full opportunity to witness the funeral procession, it has been decided to extend the route, which is now fixed to pass Buckingham palace, through St. James park to Piccadilly, then along Piccadilly to Hyde Park corner, through Hyde Park, emerging at the marble arch, then along Edgewater road to Paddington station.

This is double the length of the route originally intended, and will occupy fully two hours. For similar reasons the route at Windsor has been extended.

The funeral procession will leave Osborne House Friday at 2 p. m. The route to the pier will be lined with troops and the royal personages will follow the coffin on foot.

An order issued by Admiral Sir Charles Frederick Hotham shows that 38 British vessels will take part in the naval display.

According to The Daily Mail, King Edward, when presenting the insignia of the Order of the Garter to Crown Prince Frederick William, said it had been his mother's wish to confer the garter, but, that being impossible, the duty and pleasure devolved upon himself.

"His majesty then dwelt upon the friendly relations between the two royal families," says The Daily Mail, "relations which had been so clearly proved by the present visit of Emperor William, who had arrived in time to be recognized by his royal grandmother, and whose consideration and feeling had so deeply touched the nation which keenly appreciated his action.

"Then, turning to Emperor William, the king gave expression to his deep feeling for him, saying that he (the king) and the British royal family esteemed him not only in virtue of their blood relationship, but for all the great qualities of the kaiser, and in particular they valued his long sojourn of consolation in England. The king said he trusted that those friendly relations would always continue and that the two nations might in a common understanding continue to work together in the cause of peace and the civilization of the world."

Good Afternoon

That is a fine galaxy of cities and towns of a population of 3000 and upwards in the Massachusetts list today, comprising about one-twelfth of all the cities of this class in the United States, and Quincy ranks 23d in the commonwealth.

When children take as much interest in a study, as the pupils of the Coddington school do in debate, they should be encouraged. The constitution of their society appears in this issue; it was drawn up by a committee of pupils and is a model in its way.

Representative Gilpatric of Boston is getting down to business in the introduction of a bill in the Legislature providing that contracts made by representatives or agents of towns shall be void if such representative or agent accepts a bribe or commission, and that such a representative shall be punished by a fine of not less than $50, nor more than $1,000, or by imprisonment for one year.

The Legislature is considerate to Moody Boynton and will do nothing to hamper his big scheme. The street railway committee reported in the Senate on Monday a bill to extend the time for completing 20 miles of the Boston, Quincy & Fall River bicycle railway to Dec. 31, 1903, and for completing the whole road to Dec. 31, 1905. Still there is doubt of the road being built.

The law requires that cities of 20,000 population shall include manual training in their High schools curriculum and the School Committees are derilect of the duties in not taking a stand for this instruction. Educational experts say it should be introduced before the pupils reach the High school, and it is being done in progressive cities. The latest example is Somerville, where the school committee received this week a petition signed by the officers of several of the leading clubs in the city, asking for the introduction of industrial education in the grammar schools; referred to the committee on industrial education, which later in the evening presented an order, which was adopted, providing that manual training shall be introduced in the ninth grade of the grammar school for boys and domestic science for girls, and that two rooms be fitted up for these purposes in the Forster and Prospect Hill schools.

Drift of Opinion.

☞It is now asserted that pepper is a better vital elixir than salt. Somebody will claim next that the spicy pumpkin pie is a life preserver, and there may be something in it.—Milford Journal.

☞The Bradley (Me.) brand of citizenship is worthy of emulation. A fire company, numbering 50 men, was recently organized in that town, and instead of being paid a salary, each member contributes a certain sum monthly to be used for the purchase of articles for the fire department.—[illegible] Journal.

☞Representative Carey doesn't like the way he is treated in the legislature, and thereupon he plunges into a diatribe of the most severe kind against the members of the committee on rules and others who happened to cross his will. And yet he effects to wonder why his measures do not get more cordial support from his fellow members and why his words have so little effect.—Haverhill Gazette.

☞We don't profess to know the merits of this quarrel between the Venezuelan goverenment and the asphalt trust which holds a concession from the former. Very few people in this country do know, judging from the conflicting statements published by those newspapers that have been attempting to elucidate the facts which they pretend to have straight. Nevertheless, if the trust has been making itself as obnoxious to the natives there as such monopolies do, as a rule, in the United States, it isn't surprising that the Venezuelans are making a kick. —Fall River Globe.

☞Somebody, says an exchange, has explained the significance of the editorial "we." It may have a variety of meanings. For example, when you read "We expect our wife home today," "we" refers to the editor; "We are a little late in our work" includes the whole office force, even the devil and the towel; in "We are having a boom," the town is meant; "We received over 100,000 emigrants last year" embraces the nation; but "We have hog cholera in our midst" means that the man who takes our paper and does not pay for it is ill."—Tully Times.

☞We are glad to welcome the assistance of the Lynn Times in the crusade against poor spelling in the public schools. The need of a reform in this direction is a crying one, and it cannot be laid aside by any of the flimsy excuses that are put forward for such evidences of ignorance. If the pupils are no nearer right in other branches than they are in spelling, what good has their course of study done them? The new School Board ought to take this matter up in a serious spirit, and see that the remedy is applied. Some of the members think they are progressive because they are ready to take up every new thing. Here is a good opportunity to demonstrate that sort of progress, for teaching the children to spell correctly will be the newest thing in our schools.—Lynn Item.

☞City Attorney Webb of the New Haven Police court asserts that if the whip were used on wife-beaters, incorrigible boys arrested for petty thefts, and on similar criminals, there would be less of this class of offenders. We presume the bad boys are spanked at home and cuffed with the religious regularity that they used to be, and the punishment inflicted by their parents is probably as severe as it used to be in the days of the youth of City Attorney Webb and others. But the bad boys continue to be bad just the same, and spanking and even occasional horrible examples of imprisonment do not reform them. Would "legal" thrashings do any more good than the old schemes? As for the wife-beaters, we adhere to our old idea. They ought to get one year each—no less. That would cure them more effectually than flogging.—Brockton Enterprise.

Fire at Weymouth.

The East Weymouth fire department was called out at 8.30 this morning for a stubborn fire in the leather cutting factory of W. H. Pratt on Broad street. The fire was caused by the gas blowing open the furnace door, the flame setting fire to the woodwork. The fire burned up through the floor to the second story where it was stopped after a stubborn fight.

There were two men in the upper part of the building at the time, Messrs. Nathan E. Joy and Thomas B. Nichols. Their attention was attracted by the smoke, and when they reached the lower floor they found the building full of flames. Mr. Nichols left the building but Mr. Joy went into the office and was penned in by the flames. When he escaped he was badly scorched about the face.

The loss by the fire is estimated at $2,500, and is fully covered by insurance.

The Negro and the Queen.

At the Wollaston Congregational church, Sunday, two noteworthy services were held. In the morning Rev. Mr. Chase preached a strong sermon on "The old and new slavery of the Negro," making a powerful plea for the betterment of the condition of the black man. A large collection was taken for the American Missionary Association. At the vesper service Mr. Chase took for the theme of his sermon: "A Queen's legacy," paying a glowing tribute to the womanliness of the Queen. The large audience was composed of Wollaston people of all creeds.

A PASTOR CALLED.

New All Soul's Church of Braintree Call Rev. F. B. Griffin.

At a parish meeting of All Souls' church in Cochato hall, Braintree, Monday evening, nearly forty names were added to the parish.

The secretary's and treasurer's report showed that the church was in a prosperous condition.

It was voted to raise money to defray expenses in the same way as adopted when the church formed last fall. This is by yearly pledges, payable monthly, there being no contribution boxes to be passed except at Easter and Christmas concerts.

Out of five candidates to become the pastor of All Souls' church, only two received votes when an informal vote was taken. Rev. Thomas B. Illman of Wakefield received twenty-one and Rev. Frederick R. Griffin received twenty-nine. Upon the motion of Mr. G. H. Arnold, Rev. Mr. Griffin received a unanimous call.

Mr. Griffin is pastor of the Unitarian church in East Weymouth, and is still in the Harvard divinity school. He is twenty-six years of age, is the son of a clergyman, and a man of rare presence. His sermons are very interesting and his delivery is excellent.

TODAY'S COURT.

The continued case of Matthew Raila, for drunkenness at Braintree, was called, and he was fined $5.

Bargaining In the Orient.

In Smyrna, Turkey and Egypt the bargaining language is about the same. "What you give, lady?"

"I won't give anything! I don't want it! What! Do you think I would carry that back to America?"

"But you take hold of him. You feel him silk. I think you want to buy. Ver' cheap. Only four pound!"

"Four pounds!" I say in French. "Oh, you don't want to sell. You want to keep it! And at that price you will keep it!"

"Keep it!" in a shrill scream. "Not want to sell? Me? I here to sell! I sell you everything you see! I sell you the shop!" More wheedlingly, "You give me 40 francs?"

"No," in English again. "I'll give you $2."

"America! Liberty!" he cries, having cunningly established my nationality and flattering my country with oriental guile. "How much you give for him? Last price, now. Six dollars!"

We haggle over "last prices" for a quarter of an hour more, and after two cups of coffee amiably taken together and some general conversation I buy the thing for $3.—Lilian Bell in Woman's Home Companion.

The ladies of the Wollaston Congregational church will pack a barrel, Thursday, for the Calhoun Colored school. Clothing of all kinds is solicited.

Mr. and Mrs. George Schiller, who have been travelling with the "Cadet girl," are at their cottage in Squantum for a few days. They sail for London on Wednesday.

Among the bills referred to the Committee on Public Health, of which Senator Sprague is chairman, is one for the abolition of compulsory vacination. The first hearing will be given next Monday, and is likely to be well attended by petitioners.

The Wollaston station is undergoing extensive repairs. The patrons hope to see electric lights in place of the old flickering gas lights, also a new platform connecting the present platform with the steps of the bridge. It is disagreeable to step off the train into a mass of mud.

The Young Ladies' Mission Study club was pleasantly entertained Saturday evening at the home of Mrs. Edward A. Chase, Wollaston. Papers were read on the "Indians." Refreshments and social talk made the hours most enjoyable. The young ladies are much interested in the club and its work.

The "Edward Hewitson Associates" enjoyed a pleasant evening Saturday, at Mrs. Hewitson's home, Grand View avenue. Rev. Mr. Chase read several dialect stories which were much appreciated. Mr. Finch and Mr. Goodspeed also read several selections. Interesting games were played by the boys and the evening ended with the singing of college songs.

Eating Railway Iron.

Iron for the blood has evidently been prescribed for the quails of Florida; at least, these birds are eating steel rails on the tracks of the sugar belt near Runnymede. The report, which is well authenticated, does not charge the quails with actually swallowing the rails, but it does say that they pick away their particles wherever they find a rusty spot where they are loosened.

From several points in the state comes the report of holes found in steel rails, and in cases they are large enough to seriously weaken the material. Where a rusty spot starts and is picked out, it naturally holds moisture, continues to rust, to be again picked out, and so the work of destruction goes on.

Railway engineers really believe that the quails take the iron tonic because they are not well and find that it relieves their distress.

Fatal Gluttony.

A messenger employed at the railway station in Praga, Warsaw, made a bet that he would eat at one meal five fowls, a jar of sour cabbage, two melons, ten pounds of fruit, six cucumbers, with bread, and, besides, he would drink a gallon of vodki (native spirit), six bottles of beer and three siphons of soda water. A numerous company assembled to witness the feat, which was successfully accomplished, and the bet was paid. The man, however, was found dead in bed next morning.—London Standard.

List of All Such Cities in United States.

With Census Figures for 1880 and 1890.

Quincy With 23,899 Ranks High in the List.

It was noted in the Ledger Jan. 19, that Quincy ranked No. 171 in population in the United States. There are about 1700 cities and towns today with a population of 3000, and, as promised, the Ledger commenced Jan. 26 to publish the list.

Quincy people are often led to think that places at a distance are larger than the City of Presidents, but they should not underestimate their own city. Remembering the population of Quincy is 23,899 or in round numbers 24,000, just glance through the list and note how few are larger by the 1900 census.

Kansas 3.
Kentucky 4.
Louisana 2.
Maine but 1.
Maryland only 1.
But Massachusetts has 22.
Only 74 in 21 States.

No State in the Union has more cities larger than Quincy than Massachusetts, and Pennsylvania is the only State with more towns of 3,000.

The figures of 1880 and 1890 are also given, and the growth in ten and twenty years will also be of interest. The population of Quincy was as follows:

	Population.	Gain.
In 1880,	10,570	3,128
In 1890,	16,711	6,141
In 1900,	23,899	7,188

A few cities have grown faster but only the boom cities. In ten years Quincy moved up from No. 198 to No. 171.

Off for Tacoma.

Mr. and Mrs. B. J. Weeks and two children left this noon for Tacoma, Washington, where Mr. Weeks has accepted an important position as superintendent of a street railway and electric light company. Their many friends in Quincy wish them all success in their new home. Tacoma is a city of 37,714 population, and stands second in Washington. It has grown from 1,098 in 1880, and 35,858 in 1890, and has a close rival in Spokane, which increased from 350 in 1880, and 19,922 in 1890 to 36,848 in 1900. The largest city in the state is Seattle with 80,671 population. Commissioner Knowlton was formerly located at Tacoma and was married there.

Only a Serenade.

The alarm from Box 36 at 8.05 Monday night, followed in a few minutes by the recall, was unnecessary. Some of the young people in that neighborhood were serenading Mr. and Mrs. Amos Litchfield, and had built a bonfire in the street. Some easily excitable person saw the bon-fire and pulled the alarm.

NEW BUILDING.

Proposed for Norfolk County Registry at Dedham.

"The citizens of Norfolk county will hear with something of surprise," says the Herald editorially, "that a petition has been introduced into the General Court, asking for legislation to provide for the erection at Dedham of a building for the registrars of deeds, probates and for the probate court for the county. It was assumed, when the present court house was built, that provision had been made to meet the court needs of the county for a good many years to come. The building was an exceedingly expensive one, and its erection may have led to various instances of official corruption.

"But, apart from its extraordinarily large cost, it was thought that it provided ample room for what is essentially a country county, since, with the exception of Quincy, Norfolk county contains no municipality having a city government. If we are not mistaken, the lower part of the court building is now given up entirely to the class of county service which it is proposed to provide for in this new building.

"Unless there is a manifest need for an expenditure such as this—and this has not yet been made apparent—we imagine the taxpayers of Norfolk county will seriously object to any enlargement in county buildings until the recollection of their last experience in this direction has become a trifle more remote."

Of the needs of additional accommodations for the Norfolk County registry, we have no knowledge, but do say the voters have confidence in the County Commissioners, and should not expect any repetition of the court house scandal if they were authorized to proceed with the construction of another building.

Probably real estate is as active in Norfolk county as in any county in the State, and the number of transfers increase rapidly each year. To preserve so many documents safely and systematically must require considerable floor space, and a large office force. Quincy alone has over 1,000 real estate transfers per year. The probate business is also large.

If we thought the new building was urged for the purpose of supplying large and luxurious quarters for the courts, so that cases would be tried at Dedham in preference to other county seats where they more properly belong, we should be among the first to oppose an increase in the Norfolk county debt, which we hope to see wiped out completely in a few years.

We opine that there is more need in Norfolk county (there is no doubt about it as far as Quincy goes) of new schoolhouses, new City Hall, sidewalks, etc.

God Chooses America.

The sixth anniversary of the New England Chinese Mission was opened at Berkeley Temple, Boston, Monday. The welcome to the city of Boston was extended to the evening meeting by Mayor Hart, after a brief devotional service. Rev. Edward Anderson, pastor of Berkeley Temple, made the first address, and is reported by the Journal as follows: This land's influence must go out to other lands, and that the result of its entrance into them, whether China or the Phillipines, must be the sending out of all our progress to help remake them. The appearance of the 13-inch guns on our battleships meant, to him, simply the opening up of the vast civilization which 13-inch guns represent. "God chooses America as the force for extending civilization."

NEW HOUSES
FOR SALE.

Just to remind you that I have another lot of houses nearly completed, I will list these three bargains:

Many were disappointed on the last lot so be on hand early if you would be in it.

First—A six room Single House, bath and set tubs, with hot and cold water, papered to suit purchaser, large lot. $2100. $300 down; balance at low rate of interest. Just the place for some street railway employee.

Also, one of eight rooms and bath, Independence avenue; all modern improvements, bounds on two streets, can sell for $500 less than real value. This house is of the popular size to suit any business man, and is very roomy and convenient. I don't like to have other builders know how I am cutting prices, but $3,000 buys this one, look at it and compare with others you see building.

Another, and a money maker for some one with only an ounce of pluck. This is a two-family House, 5 rooms and bath each, and 60 foot lot, $3,000. Pay in $500 on this and I will guarantee you a twenty five per cent. investment for one year; who would dare invest in a twenty-five per cent. GUARANTEED investment.

Remember these houses are built by competent workmen, by the day, of the best material, and are personally superintended by the owner, are but four minutes to station, electrics pass, and everything is most desirable as a residential section. All houses are connected with sewer and cellars are perfectly dry.

Come and look them over and select one that suits you. Can be seen any day.

A large crowd of young and middle aged people assembled at the corner of Quincy and Marsh streets Monday night to serenade Amos M. Litchfield who had recently taken unto himself a bride. The crowd was armed with tin cans, horns, etc., and for a time they made considerable noise. The arrival of the fire department on a false alarm was the climax.

Many have found the place where they can obtain, at least once a year, a one dollar dinner for 35 cents. It is at Quincy Point and is called a "Turkey supper." The reason why one can save 65 cents is because it is managed by men and they don't realize that they are so generous. A man can take his wife to this banquet and save $1.30, enough to board the family for the remainder of the week. It is a first class hot turkey supper and no one should miss it tonight at 7 o'clock.

Coddington Debating Society.

The boy of grades VII and VIII of the Coddington school are very much interested in the study of civil government. They say it is a High school study and they are proud of their work, and grasp the situations readily. They wish the girls would have sewing hours oftener that they might have civil government. As an outcome of this study a debating society has been formed with these officers:

President,—Joseph Harkins.
Secretary,—Harry Histen.
Committee on Debate, — Byron Brown, Eliphalet Beale and Will Howe.

With very little help the society has drawn up the following constitution.

Article I, Name—The name of this society shall be "The Coddington Debating Society."

Article II, Object—This society has been formed: (1) to give means of acquiring the art of putting thought into words, (2) to promote the use of good English, (3) to acquire the science of taking up a subject logically.

Article III, Officers—The officers of this society shall consist of a president, secretary and a committee of three members.

Article IV, Duties of Officers — The president shall preside over all meetings. He shall open the debate by addressing the members, stating clearly the duties of the day and also the resolve. He then calls upon the first affirmative and first negative who state clearly their arguments for and against the resolution. The president then gives notice that the question is open for general debate. Then, after he thinks sufficient time has been allowed, he calls upon the second affirmative and second negative. The first affirmative then has a second chance to answer all arguments and prove his side. The president then calls for the votes for and against the resolution. If there be no majority the president may decide by casting his vote.

The duties of the secretary are to call the roll, keep an accurate record of the proceedings of each meeting and of each speaker. He must also be prepared to account for the proceedings of any previous meeting if called upon to do so.

The duties of the committee are to appoint the principals and to choose a subject upon which to debate.

Article V, Order—This society shall be governed by the president who shall be governed by the constitution and general rules for debate, and also according to parliamentary rules.

Article VII—We the undersigned do promise to obey the above constitution, and in order that the weight of debate shall not fall upon a few, pledge to speak at least once during every general debate, unless we can furnish the teacher with a sufficient excuse.

Tried to Raise the Dead.

A remarkable attempt was made in Denmark recently to bring back to life a man who had died in a hospital. The experiment was measurably successful, as resuscitation was effected several hours after the man was pronounced dead. Dr. Maag, who was in charge, was unable to maintain life, however.

The patient had died from typhoid fever, and Dr. Maag decided to try an experiment. Respiration had ceased completely and the body was cold. Direct massage of the heart was resorted to. The chest was cut open directly over the heart, and through the incision the physician passed his hand and seized the heart. He commenced a series of compressions, and in a short time the heart commenced to work of its own accord. The action of the heart gradually became stronger, but the man had not commenced to breathe. Only after the heart had been acting half an hour did the first gasp for air come.

The patient was then assisted in this for about an hour until finally he was able to breathe quite freely. At the same time his cheeks began to assume a natural color. He lay in this condition another half hour, but without regaining consciousness or appearing to feel the effects of the incision. Then there was a reaction and respiration ceased, although the heart continued to act eight hours longer. A second effort was made to induce heart action, but without result.

PROMISES NOT KEPT

Towne Says We Were In Alliance With the Filipinos

PAYS RESPECTS TO DEWEY

By Saying That the Sailor's Terminology Has Suffered—Advises Raising of Flag of International Piracy Amid Cries of "Loot and Glory"

Washington, Jan. 29.—After the disposal of routine business in the senate yesterday, Mr. Towne (Minn.) was recognized for a speech, which was to be at once his maiden effort and his valedictory. He spoke on the resolution for the immediate cessation of hostilities in the Philippines. The galleries were well filled to hear Mr. Towne, and senators also gave him close attention, while in the rear of the senate was a circle of representatives who came over from the house to hear him. Mr. Towne spoke in full and resonant tones, with more of the graces of oratory than are usually heard in the practical debates of the senate.

In opening his address, Mr. Towne referred to the petition presented to the senate a few days ago by 2006 Filipinos, for a cessation of hostilities and for the granting of independence to the people of the Philippines. He maintained that it would prove "a quickening appeal to the ancient spirit of the republic, or its rejection must dedicate the 20th century to a reaction prejudicial, if not fatal, to free institutions."

The senator declared that we were in alliance with the Filipinos, an alliance sought by ourselves, availed of us for our own advantage, and, finally, to our everlasting shame in the estimation of honorable men, repudiated by us when we found it no longer necessary and when lust of empire had so blunted our moral sensibilities that we could mount from an act of perfidy to the grand larceny of a nation.

Referring to Admiral Dewey's denial that he had ever treated the insurgents as allies, Mr. Towne said sarcastically: "I fear the honest sailor's terminology has suffered from recent contact with the nice discriminations of administration diplomacy."

Discussing the acquisition of the Philippines, Senator Towne said: "It is not easy to fix with accuracy the time when the design was formed to take forcible possession of the Philippine islands, nor to ascertain the mind in whose 'gloomy recesses' this enterprise of sacrilege and violence first gathered form and pressure.

"No man, no party, no nation can escape accountability for actions by attributing their origin to any other source than human motives and human judgment. The policy of the administration toward the Filipinos must be justified, if ever justified at all, in the forum of the reason and the conscience of mankind."

Mr Towne declared that upon the arrival of General Merritt at Manila "a distinct change of tone was observable" between the United States officials and the Filipinos, the altered attitude being so marked as to force the conclusion "that part of General Merritt's prearranged task was to maneuver out of an awkward friendliness with Aguinaldo and thus to reach a footing for the convenient development of some secret policy with which he had come fresh freighted from Washington."

Mr. Towne said of the president's proclamation that "among the roses of its soft rhetoric of love, its fair speech about our coming 'not as invaders or conquerers, but as friends,' of the 'mild sway of justice' and of 'benevolent assimilation,' the already justly awakened distrust of the Filipinos clearly beheld the unsheathed and glittering steel of despotism."

"If we are bent on slaughter," said he, "let it be in open guise. If we lust for this people's land, let us not glaze our enterprise with false and sinister pretence. Rather let us boldly raise the sombre flag of international piracy, whistle scruple down the wind and then close in upon our feeble victim to the cries of 'Loot and glory.'"

Senator Towne then argued at length in support of his contention that the Filipinos were capable of governing themselves. "There is not the slightest ground for believing that any appreciable impression has been made upon the determination of the Philippine people to resist us to the end."

"Is it not clear," the speaker inquired, "that the way of duty is equally the path of profit? Do we need to own people in order to trade with them? Is it not better to allow our customers to live, to have their good will and to leave them the means of payment, than to kill the strongest of them, to earn the hatred of the survivors and to impoverish all by resolating war?"

The major portion of the day in the house was occupied in the transaction of District of Columbia business. The bill to revise and codify the postal laws, which has been considered at intervals for 10 days, was finally passed. The most interesting feature of the day was an attempt to secure a vote upon the senate bill to appoint a commission to consider and adjudicate the claims of United States citizens against Spain arising out of the war with Spain, which this government assumed by section 7 of the treaty of Paris. The matter was settled temporarily by postponing consideration of the bill until next Monday.

Cotton Prices at Top Notch

Fall River, Mass., Jan. 29.—The stock of cotton in this city was reduced yesterday by about 5000 bales, as a result of the "squeeze" in the New York cotton market. The price offered yesterday for cotton, 12.75 cents, is the highest recorded in 18 years.

CRAZY SNAKE WON'T TALK

His Capture Will Probably Put an End to the Indian Outbreak

Henrietta, I. T., Jan. 29.—Chitto Harjo (Crazy Snake), leader of the warring Creeks, who is a United States prisoner, remains sullen, and refuses to confer with Lieutenant Dixon. It is believed, however, that the chief will sooner or later show a friendly spirit, and that the result will be a prompt ending of the insurrection.

When the chief, mounted and surrounded by four deputies, appeared at the tent of Lieutenant Dixon, he was greeted considerately. The Indian sat, stoical and proud, in his saddle.

"Tell him that the officer wishes to shake his hand as a friend," said Lieutenant Dixon to the interpreter.

Harjo grunted his response and slipped from his pony. In the meantime soldiers hurriedly prepared a tent for the chief, while others grouped themselves about him. A reporter pressed the interpreter to get him to talk, but Crazy Snake refused.

The capture of Crazy Snake is believed here to be th most important move since the outbreak. He has been the agitator and the real leader of the dissatisfied Indians, and now that he is safely in the hands of the government it is believed his followers will soon be brought to terms.

South McAlester, I. T., Jan. 29.—Daniel Bell, chief of the Choctaw Snakes, states that the Indians are not on the wapath, and will not molest white people or their property. The Indians' organization, as perfected for mutual protection, will be kept up, but not as a menace to the white people. Chief Bell claims to have authority from the president to be governed by the treaty of 1830, and none other is recognized. The Choctaw Snakes want to hold lands in common, and are opposed to allotment. No further trouble is expected.

Disastrous Collision of Freights

Parkersburg, W. Va., Jan. 29.—Five men dead and one fatally injured, two engines and 10 loaded cars wrecked is the result of the mistake of a train crew on the Baltimore and Ohio railroad. It was the old story of the engineer mistaking the first section of a passing train for the second, and thinking both had passed, he pulled his train on the main track. He escaped with slight injuries. The accident occurred in a cut on a curve on a heavy down grade, and at the end of a bridge. That any one was saved at all is almost a miracle.

New League's Circuit Completed

Chicago, Jan. 29.—The meeting of the magnates of the American Baseball league opened at noon yesterday, and with the exception of a short recess it continued until nearly midnight. Halifax, Jan. 29.—The Norwegian steamer Truma, from St. John for Tralee, put in last night for repairs. During a thick fog she attempted to enter Louisburg, C. B., for bunker coal, and struck a rock, but got away without going ashore. The captain abandoned the effort to reach Louisburg, and made for Halifax. The pumps kept the steamer free.

Paris, Jan. 29.—A duel between well-known fencing masters, a Sicilian named Baron San Majato, and a Frenchman, Professor Da Motte, occurred yesterday at the Velodrome. CARELESS COMMISSIONERS

Nichols and Sullivan Removed From Office by Mayor of Chicopee

Chicopee, Mass., Jan. 29.—License Commissioners Nichols and Sullivan have been removed from office by Mayor Loomis, the mayor having found the charges relating to two saloon licenses sustained against the two members. The charge directed against Sullivan in connection with serving as an election inspector was also sustained. The charge against the commissioners in relation to a third license was not sustained.

The trouble arose over allegations of favoritism shown to holders of certain saloon licenses over those holding hotel licenses. The charge was not made against the commissioners that they have been as a rule negligent in their duty, although it was shown, it is claimed, that the licenses were granted in a careless manner.

Fighting the Milk Trust

Westboro, Mass., Jan. 29.—The milkmen of Westboro, who have been on strike against the C. Brigham company of Boston since Jan. 1, last night accepted the proposition of the Independent Milk company of Boston, and will begin shipping milk Friday. Northboro, Upton and Westboro will furnish 350 cans daily, to be increased to 600 by April. The terms of the contracts have not been given out. The directors of the New England Milk Producers' union met yesterday and voted to organize the 7000 producers of New England, in order to make a successful attack on the Boston contractors.

The executive committee reported that its work was frequently the source of much complimentary indorsement from other state committees.

City Boys Pushed Too Hard

Boston, Jan. 29.—"The Needs of Boys" was the subject of after-dinner speaking at the Episcopal club last night. Winthrop T. Talbot, M. D., said that 80 percent of the boys in the city are distinctly abnormal. He condemned interscholastic sports and the practice of studying evenings. In many ways he showed that boys are pushed to an abnormal life, with the result that their growth is retarded.

In Navigation's Path

Boston, Jan. 29.—Captain Bond of the steamer Juniata, from Baltimore, reports that when two miles east by south from Highland light, he passed a vessel's spar, evidently the mast of a large, projecting about 10 feet out of the water, heel up, and apparently attached to a sunken wreck. It lies directly in the path of vessels bound around Cape Cod.

Injuries Won't Prove Fatal

Westfield, Mass., Jan. 29.—Matyas Olejsak, who was arrested Sunday morning for the alleged stabbing of John Pitonyak in a street fight Saturday night, pleaded not guilty yesterday, and was held in bonds of $2000. The case was continued until Feb. 25. The injured man, unless complications set in, will recover.

Highwayman's Poor Haul

Boston, Jan. 29.—Two cents was the amount obtained by a negro thief who knocked down and robbed Miss Dora Harrington on Beacon street last night. The young woman suffered no injury.

The fact that all women suffer during the birth-hour leads a great many women to accept a degree of suffering which is altogether unnecessary. Sometimes it is hours, sometimes days before the struggle is over. No medicine can absolutely eliminate pain from this time of travail, but Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription can and does make the baby's advent practically painless. It acts upon the organs of maternity, giving them strength and elasticity. It produces physical comfort and mental cheerfulness. It is an effective tonic, giving the mother abundant nutrition for her child.

"I believe I owe my life to Dr. Pierce's remedies, and have long felt it my duty to acknowledge the benefit I received from Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and 'Pleasant Pellets,'" says Mrs. Maria O. Hayzel, writing from Brookland, D. C. "Six years ago, after the birth of one of my children, I was left in a weak, rundown condition. My health seemed utterly gone. Life was a burden. I doctored with three different physicians and got no relief. I began to get worse, and to add to the complications, I suffered terribly from constipation. I chanced to see one of your advertisements and concluded to try the above remedies. I commenced to take Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and 'Pleasant Pellets,' and began to improve right away, and continued improving and gaining in strength. I cannot express the relief, it was so great. Seven months later my little daughter was born without much trouble. I feel that I would never have been able to endure my confinement only for the help due solely to Dr. Pierce's medicines. She was a fine, healthy child, and the only one I have ever been able to nurse."

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets cure constipation.

FUNERAL OF VICTORIA

Will Be Conducted According to Her Own Plans

A GRAND NAVAL DISPLAY

Will Probably Be Principal Feature of the Pageant — Detectives Preparing to Take Extra Precautions For the Protection of Royalty

London, Jan. 30.—The earl marshal, the Duke of Norfolk, was unable to see King Edward yesterday in order to obtain his majesty's final sanction for the funeral arrangements. Nothing, therefore, has been definitely settled except the program for Friday, already cabled.

"Queen Victoria's explicit directions as to her funeral were written in 1862," says Truth, "and have not been altered in any material respect. It was her wish that the ceremonial should copy that of Prince Albert's burial, so far as possible. The queen will be the first English sovereign who will not be buried at night and by torchlight."

The war office has invited colonial officers and soldiers in England to take part in the funeral procession. Minute guns will be fired from all ships in the Solent and at Cowes, commencing when the Alberta leaves Trinity pier. Each ship will cease firing immediately the end of the procession passes her.

After the procession has passed the battleship Majestic the forts and ships in Portsmouth harbor will commence firing minute guns, and will continue to do so until the Alberta is alongside. No standards will be displayed. Ensigns and union jacks will be half-masted. Admiral's flags will be fully hoisted. As the procession passes each ship, its crew will present arms and then rest on reversed arms until the procession has gone, the band meanwhile playing funeral marches.

In London active preparations are being made all along the route. Houses are being draped and seating accommodations are being provided. A committee of ladies has obtained permission to hang wreaths of evergreen along the line, one to be affixed to each lamppost, and all being three feet in diameter and of uniform pattern.

Of all the ceremonies no doubt the naval will be the finest pageant. The Alberta with the body will slowly steam along the line of battleships, extending eight miles. Facing these giants of the British navy will be smaller vessels and numerous foreign battleships. Whatever the weather may be, the spectacle of the remains of Victoria traversing a lane of warships—the guns all booming—will be unique.

The entire detective machinery of the United Kingdom and the continent has been set in motion to protect the royal personages and other notable people now gathering in London. Unwieldly as the continental secret services often appear to be, every effort is being made to unify them, in order that no injury may befall any royal personage attendant upon the obsequies of the late queen.

Sir Edward Bradford, commissioner of police of the metropolis, has devised elaborate plans to deal with the crush expected on Saturday, but to protect royal guests, precautions have been taken which are illustrated by the fact that Bradford's residence is surrounded night and day by constables in plain clothing and detectives and that no person is allowed to approach until his card has been passed in. These precautions are applied in the case of all royal personages and of the principal officers of the crown.

Scotland Yard maintains the most intimate and secret affiliations with every detective agency in the world, and its devices for tracing continental suspects are now being operated under Chief Inspector Freest.

Malatesta and other anarchists residing in London assert that there is not the slightest probability of violence, because England is "an asylum for the persecuted of the continent."

At Cowes, detectives are stationed in large numbers on both sides of the Medira river, inquiring as to the antecedents of strangers and watching all who approach the royal personages. Nothing definite is feared, but the government desires that the unmost dilligence should be exercised, especially with a view of keeping Emperor William from harm.

King Edward received Lord Salisbury and several other members of the cabinet yesterday at Marlborough House. He will hold a privy council at St. James' palace today, to sanction finally the arrangements for the funeral and will then return to Osborne.

The Duke of Cornwall and York is suffering from the German measles, and this, The Court Circular announces, is the explanation of his failure to visit Emperor William on the anniversary of his birthday, and of his absence from the ceremony of investing Crown Prince Frederick William with the insignia of the Order of the Garter.

Siberia and Greenland it is claimed, have both at some far distant period occupied a position on the earths surface that was tropical in every particular.

What Bigamist Howard's Wife Has to Say Concerning His Character

Cambridge, Mass., Jan. 30.—Mrs. George W. Howard has made the following statement with regard to her husband, who has just been sentenced for bigamy at New York. She has never given anything out yet in regard to the case, but yesterday she said:

"For the past 10 years George Howard has been a true husband to me and treated me in a noble way in every respect. I Have always had what I wanted, and he has been very good to me. One week previous to his wedding with Helen P. Hawkes he told me that he had a job to place some machinery for a firm abroad. He told me that I could stay in New York or else could come to Cambridge so as to be near my sister. I left New York on Saturday, and on the following Monday he was married. Of course he has done wrong, and others must suffer for it, but my whole sympathy is with Helen P. Hawkes, who has severe suffering to undergo."

Mrs. Howard says she will not seek a divorce, nor ask for an annulment of the marriage.

Bay State Legislature

Boston, Jan. 30.—Gas ranged up beside electricity in the house yesterday as a probable leading feature of the present legislative session, an order for an investigation of the Boston gas companies following immediately after another investigation order as to the holdings by the association known as the "Massachusetts Electric companies" of stock in the street railways of the state. The gas investigation order was entirely unexpected, it being currently reported that a truce had been declared between certain financial interests.

A Lack of Harmony

Boston, Jan. 30.—In one of the most turbulent conventions the Republican city committee has ever held, Jesse Gove was last night elected president of the committee. This result was brought about after Messrs. Swallow and Russell, who had been contesting the office, had withdrawn and endorsed Gove. Even then the committee refused to allow an election by acclamation, and forced a ballot, which showed a bare majority for Gove. The committee is composed of 243 members, but only 218 ballots were cast.

The Case of Judge Haselton

Suncook, N. H., Jan. 30.—Counsel for the bondsmen of Judge Haselton, who is supposed to have committed suicide recently, have asked for an administrator for the estate. While there is no positive proof of the suicide, many people believe he jumped from a boat, and others are equally confident that Judge Hazelton is alive.

Many People Burned Out

Great Barrington, Mass., Jan. 30.—The Berkshire block, a four-story brick and granite structure in the centre of this village, was burned yesterday, causing a loss of about $50,000 on the building and to its tenants. The building was erected in 1884, and was first used as a hotel. The block had a large number of occupants.

Jewelry Store Robbed

Hartford, Jan. 30.—While George W. Ball, jeweler and diamond merchant, was at dinner yesterday, his store, which had been left in charge of a boy, was robbed of $1000 worth of goods. Two men entered, and while one engaged the clerk's attention the other took 18 rings from the window. They escaped.

For School Children to Decide

Concord, N. H., Jan. 30.—After a sharp debate, the New Hampshire house of representatives yesterday passed a bill providing for the choice of a state flower at an annual election of schoolchildren, next June.

Fall May Result In Death

Woonsocket, R. I., Jan. 30.—Anson Holman, 34 years old, fell 35 feet from an electric light pole. He received injuries which it is feared will prove fatal.

BLOOD

We live by our blood, and on it. We thrive or starve, as our blood is rich or poor.

There is nothing else to live on or by.

When strength is full and spirits high, we are being refreshed, bone muscle and brain, in body and mind, with continual flow of rich blood.

This is health.

When weak, in low spirits, no cheer, no spring, when rest is not rest and sleep is not sleep, we are starved; our blood is poor; there is little nutriment in it.

Back of the blood, is food, to keep the blood rich. When it fails, take Scott's emulsion of cod-liver oil. It sets the whole body going again—man woman and child.

We'll send you a little to try, if you like.

DEMOCRATIC KEYNOTE

Pitched by Towne In His Address on the Philippines

CONSIDERED A GOOD ISSUE

For Use In Congressional Campaign of 1902 — President Said to Consider Extra Session Unavoidable Because of Cuban and Philippine Situations

Washington, Jan. 30.—Charles A. Towne's speech in the senate is the chief topic of the day. Even those who dissent from his opinion acknowledge the force and power with which he sustained it. Under the rules of the senate this speech can go out under the government frank for six months, and plans are already making for its extensive circulation.

But the speech may have a wide-reaching effect upon Mr. Towne's political fortunes and upon the policy of the Democratic party. It was upon the insistence of old Democratic leaders that Mr. Towne finally made the speech. His own inclinations were to give place quietly to his successor, but Mr. Clapp, who is an old personal friend, timed his arrival so as to give Mr. Towne a chance, and waited in having his credentials presented till the address was delivered.

These Democratic leaders wanted Mr. Towne to pitch the keynote of their next congressional campaign. He made no reference to free silver or other features of the Chicago and Kansas City platforms, nor is he saying anything about them elsewhere. In this respect he doubtless foreshadows Democratic policy. Its party leaders believe the Philippine trouble is not nearing an end, but that it will be a good issue in 1902.

The president's position on the extra session question was carefully defined yesterday by one of the closest political and personal confidante, who said:

"The president does not enjoy the prospect of staying in Washington into the hot weather, but he does not see just how it can be avoided if he is going to give congress its legitimate share of responsibility for the future activity of the government. The Cuban and the Philippine questions have both now reached a stage where action is imperatively demanded, and in both must the initiative be taken by congress and not by the president. In the Philippines the situation explains itself—the military power must give way to civil or we shall never get the pacification and development of the islands fairly under way. The right kind of immigrants are not coming in there while military government continues, and everything is unsettled. When the civil power and its machinery are established we look to see a great influx of the most enterprising and valuable men from America. Then the rest of the problem will solve itself, as is always the case where a country is settled up by the right people. You can see how our whites have solved the problems of the Indian country in the west, till that region, which used to be savage, now bears the full flower and fruit of civilization."

"But how about Cuba?" was asked. "What has congress now to do with Cuba?"

"The present situation in Cuba," answered the informant, with marked emphasis, "is, in the president's opinion, the creation of congress, and therefore must be left for congress to deal with. In other words, congress got us into this state of things in Cuba; now congress must get us out of it. That is the president's logic in a nutshell."

The president yesterday sent a message to congress renewing his recommendation of last session that congress make "gracious provision for indemnity to the families" of the two victims of the Tallulah, La., lynching, July 20, 1899, who were subjects of the Italian government.

Senator Frye gave notice in the senate yesterday that he intended to keep the shipping bill to the front, even as against appropriation bills, not yielding to them without the vote of the senate. It indicates a disposition on the part of the senate leaders to force to an early issue the question whether the shipping bill is going to pass at this session. Senator Turner of Washington spoke yesterday in severe arraignment of the bill. Before the session closed the committee amendments were informally agreed to.

The Indian appropriation bill was passed early in the day.

The house spent the day upon the agricultural appropriation bill. It was used as a vehicle for the introduction of several general speeches. Mr. Thayer (Mass.) discussed the ship subsidy bill, Mr. White (N. C.), the colored member who goes out of congress March 4, delivered his valedictory, and Mr. Gaines (Tenn.) discussed the limitations of the constitution in connection with our insular possessions.

Waller reports that from a space four feet square on Porcupine creek dust worth $3000 was taken out.

Drift of Opinion.

☞ We wish Connecticut law laid the lash across the backs of some classes of brutal criminals today—soundly, too, with no nonsense about it, in a fashion to make their flesh crawl forever after at the mere thought of a second dose of the same sort. But if the whippings were made a public spectacle, it would be against our strong and continuous protest.—Hartford Courant.

☞ Hero worship is not always the evidence of real worth, nor does real value in life always command the adulation that is accorded the performance of striking deeds. The world sometimes fails to discover its heroes, and while it may be said that in the record of the life of the late ex-governor no single act stand out in attractive prominence, it may be that in the many years of service in public office there were many times when he came very near to the test of heroism. The people do not honor the memory of Roger Wolcott as that of a hero, but a that of a public servant who was tried and not found wanting. The fund for his memorial may not be great in a monetary sense, but it is great in its spontaneity and in the popularity of its subscription It is great in the sense which would have been most pleasing to the man to whose name it does honor.—Haverhill Gazette

☞ The disposition to bring everything to a money value test is what makes some men think that work done for the public ought to be remunerated by so much cash. There is a good deal of this disposition, some of which is manifested in queer ways. We recall that a few years ago there was a strenuous effort for a Fourth of July celebration in this city on the ground that it would stimulate patriotism and thus be a public benefit. One of the means by which patriotism was to be stimulated was by the sight of a procession, and in order to provide a respectable stimulus it was suggested that each man who appeared in the procession should be paid a dollar. An irreverent reporter poked fun at the proposal and it collapsed. But the suggestion was an illuminant of that peculiar bent of mind which measures every public service by a standard of dollars. Such a bent of mind calculates to a cent what it is worth to be honest and carry to the owner his lost pocketbook, to be brave and save a child from drowning, to be kind and split up a little kindling wood for a sick neighbor. We have heard of men trying to reduce their rearing a family to an equivalent in cash, and other men trying to measure their obligations to their fathers and mothers by the same exalted system of measurement. Such persons would try, if they could, to buy the salvation of their immortal souls with a five dollar bill, if they couldn't buy an admission ticket at the box office of the Heavenly Kingdom for a quarter of a dollar.—New Bedford Standard.

Considerable commotion was created yesterday afternoon at Quincy Neck by a runaway horse. Just after the five o'clock whistle had blown a horse fully harnessed without team or driver started from Howard avenue going in the direction of Quincy avenue. The pedestrians wisely kept out of his way being under the impression that the horse was in a hurry to get home to supper; but the object of his haste soon became apparent for going in the same direction was a team loaded with hay which the horse followed quietly eating the hay until captured by his owner.

NOT TO VACATE.

Sewer Board to Transfer Only Completed Sections.

Claim They Are Acting Under Sewer Act.

That Complete Transfer is Not for the Interest of City.

The adjourned meeting of the Sewer Commissioners was held Tuesday evening, at which it was voted to turn over to the Commissioner of Public Works, Feb. 4, all of the sewerage system completed up to date. This includes the pumping station, and all the main and lateral sewers in Wards One, Three, Four and Five.

The act authorizing the city to establish a sewerage system provides that when the system shall have been completed it shall be turned over to the Commissioner of Public Works. The main sewer in Wards One, Three and Five and a part of Ward Four was completed over a year ago and but little work has been done in the way of extensions for several months.

It was not surprising therefore that early in the year Mayor Hall should have requested the board to turn over the system to the Commissioner of Public Works. The Sewer Commissioners, or rather a majority of them, did not take kindly to the request, and claimed that it would not be good judgment or for the best interest of the city to turn over the system in its present incomplete condition.

It is reported that Chairman Jones was in favor of complying with the request but that Messrs. Schenelberger and Badger opposed, claiming that under the act they were not authorized to turn over the whole system until it was completed. It was practically decided last week, however, to turn over the completed sections and at Tuesday night's meeting it was so voted.

Faxon's New Enemy.

Henry Faxon of Quincy will have to meet a new enemy this year at the state house in the person of Senator Fitzgerald of Ward 7, says the Boston Advertiser.

Way back in 1884 Faxon, after considerable of a battle, had chapter 150 of the acts of that year, relating to sale of liquor by druggists, amended so that any person who was or had been supported in the whole or in part by public charity at any time during one year proceeding date of druggist's license, could not obtain liquor, even on a physician's prescription.

While the phrasing of this would see to indicate a most philanthropic trend, complaint has been for some time that it has worked otherwise an injustice.

To remedy this, Sen. Fitzgerald has introduced an amendment, which makes it possible for even a person within these limitations to secure liquor, on a prescription of a physician.

Faxon will contest the change, for he has quoted the law as he had it amended again and again in his book.

From Magazines to Whist.

Miss Kate A. Raycroft of Chubbuck street entertained the Magazine club of Quincy Point Tuesday evening, but for these few hours the monthly periodicals were cast aside, and whist substituted. At the outset the guests were captivated by the artistic cards which were almost too dainty to use. Salted nuts and other delicacies also tempted the players, but nevertheless big scores were rolled up. While the result was being summarized at the close a substantial lunch was served, and then rich souvenirs were awarded. A deacon from Scituate won first prize, but that his people may not be shocked his name is withheld. Capt. Higgins was close behind and Fred H. Smith was contented with the consolation trophy. The fortunate ladies were: Mrs. Lincoln, Mrs. Mead and Mrs. Addison.

Quincy Cases at Dedham.

In the Superior Court at Dedham Tuesday a verdict was ordered for the defendant in the case of John Hannon et al., of Quincy, vs. John McGinnis of Medway, in an action of tort for alleged misrepresentation in relation to land sold in Millis in 1897.

The case on trial at adjournment was that of John R. Graham et al., trustees, vs. Hatch Storage Battery Co. of Boston. The plaintiffs claim is that the defendent entered into an agreement to equip their power plant at Quincy with a storage battery of sixty elements of seventeen plates each, to have a capacity of 700 ampere hours but had failed to perform its part of the agreement.

Glee Club.

The interest in the Wollaston Young Men's Glee Club is waxing strong each meeting. Tuesday night thirty-five voices made up the chorus under the direction of Mr. Follett. The parts are fairly well balanced but a few more second bass voices are needed. The meetings are now being held every other Tuesday evening at the Wollaston Congregational vestry. The accompanist is Mr. Arthur Sprague.

Master Builders.

An adjourned meeting of those interested in forming a Master Builders' and Traders' Association was held Tuesday evening. The meeting was largely attended and the merits of such an organization were discussed at length. POPULATION 3,000

List of All Such Cities in United States.

With Census Figures for 1880 and 1890.

Quincy With 23,899 Ranks High in the List.

It was noted in the Ledger Jan. 19, that Quincy ranked No. 171 in population in the United States. There are about 1700 cities and towns today with a population of 3000, and, as promised, the Ledger commenced Jan. 26 to publish the list.

Quincy people are often led to think that places at a distance are larger than the City of Presidents, but they should not underestimate their own city. Remembering the population of Quincy is 23,899 or in round numbers 24,000, just glance through the list and note how few are larger by the 1900 census.

Alabama has but 3 larger.
Arizona none.
Arkansas but 1.
California only 4.
Colorado 2.
Connecticut 6.
Delaware but 1.
District of Columbia 1.
Florida only 1.
Georgia but 3.
Idaho none.
Illinois but 8.
Indiana only 5.
Indian territory none.
Iowa but 6.
Kansas 3.
Kentucky 4.
Louisana 2.
Maine but 1.
Maryland only 1.
But Massachusetts has 22.
Michigan only 4.
Minnesota but 3.
Mississippi none.
Missouri only 4.
Montana but 1.

No State in the Union has more cities larger than Quincy than Massachusetts, and Pennsylvania is the only State with more towns of 3,000.

The figures of 1880 and 1890 are also given, and the growth in ten and twenty years will also be of interest. The population of Quincy was as follows:

	Population.	Gain.
In 1880,	10,570	3,128
In 1890,	16,711	6,141
In 1900,	23,899	7,188

A few cities have grown faster but only the boom cities. In ten years Quincy moved up from No. 198 to No. 171.

Guardian of Mrs. French.

The petition of Lawyer Robert M. Morse for the dismissal of Judge Bumpus as temporary guardian of Mrs. Julia B. French came up Tuesday, says the Journal, before Judge Lathrop in the Supreme Court. Mr. Morse contends that chapter 345 of the Acts of 1900 is unconstitutional in that it permits the appointment of a temporary guardian on an ex-parte hearing. On this ground he claims that the man selected by the Probate Court to look after Mrs. French and her affairs was illegally appointed.

He sought a writ of habeas corpus, and on Friday last Judge Hammond issued an order of notice, which was made returnable Tuesday. The parties assembled, and after a brief consultation Judge Lathrop decided to refer the question to the full Bench of the Supreme Court for a ruling, which will be handed down in the usual manner.

The continued hearing in the Probate Court of the petition of Wilfred French for the appointment of a permanent guardian over Mrs. French, scheduled for yesterday, was put over until Feb. 18.

Customary Compliment Omitted

Madrid, Jan. 30.—General Castelvi, a cousin of King Alphonso, military commander in the Aragon division, has been placed on the retired list. The royal decree omits the statement customary in such cases, that the regent is satisfied with his services. It is evident, therefore, that he is retired in disgrace. The incident has provoked considerable comment.

Machine Guns Used on Indians

City of Mexico, Jan. 30.—Some troops escorting laborers engaged in opening roads in the southern part of the peninsula of Yucatan were desperately attacked by 1000 rebel Indians, who were only driven off by the employment of machine guns, which were effiectively used.

Fugitives Safe In Indiana

Indianapolis, Jan. 30.—In the senate yesterday the lieutenant governor held the resolution offered by Senator Stillwell, instructing the governor to recognize a requisition for ex-Governor Taylor and Secretary of State Finley of Kentucky, should Governor Beckham present one, as being out of order.

TURKEY SUPPER.

Served by Gentlemen of Quincy Point Church.

Equals Last Year as a Grand Success.

Attended by People from All Parts of the City.

The ladies now say that the gentlemen of the Quincy Point church serve a turkey supper annually because they could not prepare any other kind, but that is a gross libel on the gentlemen, and jealousy is said to be at the root of the base innuendo. The facts are that there was a change from last year: a chicken soup being substituted for tomato soup. Then, last year, the water boiled away from the onions; but there were no such mishaps this year. Everything was cooked to a turn, as they say, and it is further said that no woman assisted in any way, manner or shape. Mr. Herbert E. Adams was the grand chef and he had as assistants and carvers: Marcus Wight, R. H. Newcomb, Webb Newcomb, Charles Sherburne, Charles Mueller, Charles H. Damon, Jr., Joseph Lapham, Rev. Edward Anderson and Dr. Bushnell.

The guests began to assemble as early as six o'clock, although seven was the appointed hour, but they enjoyed themselves socially in the church auditorium.

The menu was not as elaborate as at a Boston hotel but it made up in quantity and wholesomeness what it lacked in culinary art, and appealed more strongly to the majority, and gave better satisfaction if the truth be known. The menu:

SOUP:

A la Chicken.

Roast Turkey (hot) with Dressing and Cranberry Sauce.

VEGETABLES:

Boiled Potatoes.	Turnip
Onions.	Squash.
Celery.
Rolls.	Crackers.
Cake.	Coffee.

Hockey on the Ice.

The Quincy High School hockey team played an interesting game Tuesday with Mechanics Arts, the latter winning 3—0. It was High's first game of the season. Although weakened by the illness of some regular players the Q. H. S. boys played a plucky game. Anderson for High blocked many hard drives for goals.

FOR AMBIDEXTERITY.

Scientists Seriously Considering the Training of Both Hands.

According to the Rochester Democrat and Chronicle, scientists are now considering seriously the subject of ambidexterity, to which a novelist, Charles Reade, called attention in his characteristically emphatic fashion long ago.

Men are born into the world with two hands equally capable of being trained to full usefulness. But from the moment of birth the right hand is carefully educated, while the left hand is sedulously neglected. The right hand becomes expert and strong. The left hand is allowed to remain inexpert and weak. The right hand becomes a marvelously capable tool. The left hand remains little better than a useless appendage. The man goes through life handicapped—less of a man than nature intended him to be.

Scientists contend that this handicap is entirely artificial and needless, that there is no reason except tradition and custom why the hands should not be equally educated and equally "dexterous." Observed facts seem to bear out their contention. Every mother has noted that she must exercise care and vigilance to save her child from the awful misfortune of "left handedness," must continually check the child's natural tendency to use either hand indifferently, which probably means to pervert the child's inborn, correct instinct, which has survived centuries of race custom, to train both hands alike.

Another fact that is worth noting is that hosts of men have trained themselves easily, almost unconsciously, to be ambidextrous in some one particular—to pitch a ball, to strike a blow, to play billiards, to shave themselves, to write as expertly with the left hand as with the right. Is it not probable that a child allowed from its birth to follow its own instincts in this respect, free even from the influences of example, would naturally develop ambidexterity in all respects?

That ambidexterity is desirable there can be no question. Every one would be better off if he had two "right" hands instead of one "right" and one "left hand." That ambidexterity is attainable by every one seems exceedingly probable. Under these circumstances it seems rather senseless for a whole race to artificially handicap itself solely out of respect for a traditional custom, the reason for whose adoption has long since ceased to be operative.

Paint For Ships' Bottoms.

If there were a reliable paint to be had that would keep foreign growths off the bottom of steel ships and also prevent corrosion or pitting, there would not be any great necessity for coppering the bottoms, but those who have had experience in the working of ships, trading to the orient, for instance, know that this is still far from realization. In the writer's experience it often appeared that the anticorrosive paint did not prevent corrosion, and the antifouling coat failed to prevent fouling for any great length of time at least. Hence the necessity for coppering.

Several years ago the writer was connected with the engine department of a line of steamers trading between European ports and Manila and remembers that these vessels required docking, cleaning and coating every voyage. This was also the practice with Holt's tea ships and other fleets, and keen was the competition to secure the order for cleaning and coating these bottoms. It was no uncommon thing for a representative of a patent composition to place his article in competition with a rival paint by coating one side of the bottom, or even a portion of it, to show the superiority of its antifouling qualities. An acquaintance who was very enthusiastic over the superior merits of his composition painted the port bottom of a certain vessel, and on her return from an eastern voyage and before she entered the drydock he invited the shipowners to a summer resort near the dock and see for themselves the superior value of such an article as he sold. But when the dock was pumped out the starboard bottom was seen to be almost clean after a four months' voyage, while the port bottom, which had been coated with his composition, was thickly covered with barnacles and long green grass. This is no romance, and similar results may have been seen by many.—Joseph R. Oldham in Cassier's Magazine For January.

American Wealth.

In the last ten years the United States has increased its wealth $26,000,000,000, which makes the wealth of the nation $91,000,000,000. This gives an average per capita wealth of $1,195. This is not so great a per capita wealth as Great Britain's, for her figures are $1,300 for each inhabitant. But her aggregate wealth sinks into the background before ours, for she has only $50,000,000,000 against our $91,000,000,000. Her increase in wealth in ten years is $19,000,000,000, as against our $26,000,000,000. The increase in wealth in this country in the last ten years has been $337 for each inhabitant.—New York Press.

Failure of Lyddite.

RUSH TO KIOWA REGION.

STORIES OF HIDDEN TREASURE.

Whether Minerals In Paying Quantities Are to Be Found In the Wichitas Is Yet to Be Determined—Indian Legends of Mounts Scott and Sheridan.

Among the many attractions of the far famed Kiowa and Comanche country probably none has created such widespread interest as the Wichita mountains since it has been noised abroad that they abound in buried mineral wealth. Opportunity knocks but seldom at the poor man's door, and as this is the last of the large Indian reservations to be opened to settlement it behooves him to take time by the forelock in this instance, says Florence Crofford, the Ninnekah (I. T.) correspondent of the Kansas City Times. An unusually eager rush of homeseekers is expected, this reservation holding forth, as it does, such rare inducements in the way of climate, soil, game, fruit, pasturage, mineral resources and, best of all, streams of pure, healthful water. Its topography should be studied with zealous care by homeless intruder and intelligent Indian alike.

Perhaps there is no range of mountains in all the broad southwest so replete with romantic legends or accredited with such vast hordes of hidden treasure of gold and silver as the Wichita range. They are supposed to be outcroppings of the Rocky mountains. They take their rise near Fort Sill, the principal chain running for a distance of 60 miles northwest, when they disappear. The peculiar formation of the great masses of gigantic granite bowlders piled high in picturesque confusion upon the summit of the mountains gives to the Wichita range an individual charm that is lacking in most minor mountain chains.

Prospectors drawn thitherward by the greed of gold have tried time and again to locate mining claims in the heart of this rich region, only to be reported at the agency by lynx eyed redskins, who jealously guard the treasure buried in the mountains' silent breast. The unfortunate "sooners" are thereupon summarily escorted to the borders of the reservation by a squad of Fort Sill soldiers with strict orders to return no more. It is an undisputed fact backed by intelligent investigation that gold, silver, copper, iron, tin, asphaltum, coal and other minerals are to be found in these mountains, though whether they exist in paying quantities is yet to be determined.

An ancient Indian legend tells how years ago a band of red men, in defending their stronghold from invading palefaces, exhausted their supply of bullets and, lead being unobtainable, they molded a fresh supply of bullets from that wonderful yellow metal yielded up to them from the depths of their rocky haunts.

Mount Scott, the proud patriarch of the range, lifts his hoary head and moss begirt bowlders 1,400 feet above the level of the encircling plain and 4,000 feet above the sea level. This mountain was so named in honor of General Winfield Scott by General Sherman, who also founded the military post at Fort Sill. His satellites are many—among them Saddle mountain, which bears so striking a resemblance to the huge saddle of bygone days, even recognizable miles away, that the name is naturally suggested; Signal mountain once boasted a government signal station on its summit, hence the name; picturesque Mount Sheridan, whose wild, rugged rocks, rising sheer from the ground, cast grotesque shadows upon the rolling green valley embracing its feet, and Medicine Bluff mountain, taking its name from the creek of the same name near Fort Sill.

A very romantic Indian legend clings to this queer shaped mountain, which presents the appearance of having been cut in two from summit to base, one-half alone remaining. The Indians regard this freak of nature with deep veneration. In days of old two of their bravest young warriors sued for the hand of the same dusky damsel. She, like the Sioux chief's daughter, celebrated in song and story, set for them a well nigh hopeless wager. They were to mount on their fleet ponies, ride to Medicine Bluff, and, after "making medicine" and blindfolding both men and animals, ride at full speed to the top of the mountain. The young brave who was courageous enough to ride off the bluff was to have won the maid, but, alas! for the bronze cheeked beauty, both lovers met with cruel and instant death!

The ascent to Mount Scott reveals marvels of nature's lavish handiwork—varicolored rocks, round and oblong bowlders of dark brown hue, which on being broken display vivid streaks of red, indicating the presence of mica, quartz and feldspar, and deep gorges, down which trickle the pellucid mountain streams that later on develop into important creeks.

On reaching the crest a view of grandeur and beauty is spread out before the traveler's delighted eyes. It comprises fertile valleys, sparkling streams, rock capped mountain ranges, stretches of timber and acres upon acres of rich virgin land idly awaiting the hand of energetic farmers to wake them into "fields of living green."

The writer acknowledges her indebtedness for some of the facts and legends used in this article to a pamphlet issued at Chickasha, I. T., in 1894, by D. P. Smith.

Kipling and the Bus Owner.

After leaving Vermont Rudyard Kipling bought a place in the little English village of Rottingdean, and in his garden were some beautiful trees. One of these trees, branching over the road, threatened daily injury to the driver of the local bus. Therefore he and his conductor waged destructive war on all the vulnerable twigs within reach from the bus roof. Result: A vigorous letter of complaint from Mr. Kipling to the bus owner, who is also landlord of one of the local inns.

That evening the landlord laid the letter before the select company of the bar parlor. They advised an attitude of calm indifference. Also a Crœsus among them offered $2.50 in cash for the autograph letter. Both advice and cash were accepted.

The nuisance continuing, in due course a second and stronger letter followed the first. The landlord convened another bar parliament, and the second letter also found a buyer, this time at $5, as befitted its increased violence. And Boniface again "sat tight!" To him next day entered Mr. Kipling, briskly wrathful. "Why didn't I answer your letters, sir? Why, I was hoping you'd send me a fresh one every day. They pay a deal better than bus driving!"

New Hampshire Capital Is "Dry"

Concord, N. H., Jan. 30.—Mayor Sargent, recently inaugurated, has issued orders to saloon keepers, druggists and hotel proprietors that no more liquor must be sold contrary to law. His instructions have been obeyed, and the result is an unexampled drought in beverages that contain even a suspicion of alcohol.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucuos surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address.

FULL PENALTY OF LAW

McAlister, Death and Campbell Get Thirty Years Each

FIFTEEN YEARS FOR KERR

Murderers Issue a Statement to the Public, In Which They Say They Will Bear Punishment In Silence—Victims of "Outside Opinion"

Paterson, N. J., Jan. 30.—In court here yesterday Judge Dixon pronounced sentence upon Walter C. McAlister, William A. Death and Andrew J. Campbell, who were found guilty of murder in the second degree for the killing of Jennie Bosschieter, on Oct. 18, 1900, by the administration of chloral and subsequent assault, together with George E. Kerr, who pleaded non vult to a charge of assault.

WALTER C. M'ALISTER.

McAlister, Campbell and Death were each sentenced to 30 years' imprisonment at hard labor, and Kerr to 15 years' imprisonment at hard labor. The sentences of all the men are the full terms of imprisonment which the law provides, but in the case of Kerr a fine of $1000 might have been added.

McAlister, Death, Campbell and Kerr made a statement to the public yesterday afternoon. It is their first utterance since their arrest, and was issued on the authority of the counsel for all four men. In their statement they express resignation and promise to face the future manfully. They say they feel no resentment and have no criticism to make, but thank the newspapers of Paterson for their sense of fairness and absence of malice. The statement continues in part:

WILLIAM DEATH.

"We could say many things that would tend to abate the public indignation, but we propose to bear our punishment in silence and pray that the community will suspend final judgment until, by good conduct and proper lives, we will earn their commendation. We are content to suffer ourselves, but we keenly feel the awful sorrow brought upon our families and friends, who have stood so nobly by us through it all.

"Never at any time was there any ill-feeling between ourselves, and we never had to say things about each other in an effort to secure individual advantage.

"We feel that we have been victims, to a great extent, of the unreasoning outside opinion, which was based upon the wild and inflammatory reports printed in the metropolitan papers to satisfy a morbid taste."

In conclusion they express their gratitude to their counsel for the efforts made in their behalf.

While Judge Dixon was sentencing the prisoners, Hugh Kerr, the father of George, lay dying within a stone's throw of the court house. Mr. Kerr is dying because of the disgrace of his son George. George did not know till last night that his father was so ill. The father remains equally ignorant of the son's sentence.

ENGLAND LOSING GROUND

Much Perplexed by America's Wonderful Increase In Exports

London, Jan. 30.—The Times, in an editorial dealing with an "important and perplexing question of true significance"—the excess in value regularly exhibited by England's imports over her exports, especially looking to the fact that during the last 3½ years the United States have exported over $2,000,000,000 more merchandise, gold and silver than they imported—says:

"It is not easy, yet it is a matter of the utmost moment, to ascertain whether, as a nation, we are still saving and living within our income, or whether we are beginning to live on the accumulated savings of former times. If the latter is correct, the outlook is distinctly disquieting for the country's commercial future. Considering that some three-fourths of the American excess exports have come to this country, it is very desirable to get accurate and definite statistics as to our 'invisible exports.'"

Retires With Distinguished Record

Washington, Jan. 30.—Rear Admiral Albert Kautz, who has just been relieved from command of the Pacific station, was placed on the retired list yesterday, on account of age. He has had a long and distinguished career, of which nearly 18 years was spent at sea. During the Samoan trouble, about two years ago, Admiral Kautz was in command of the American forces in that quarter, and it was mainly through his firmness and conservativeness that serious international complications were averted.

A Controversy Settled

Washington, Jan. 30.—By a vote of 10 to 5 the house committee on judiciary yesterday adopted a resolution that Representative Richardson of Alabama should draw salary from Aug. 6, 1900, the date of his election to succeed General Wheeler. The authorities have been divided as to whether Richardson's pay should date back to the time of Wheeler's resignation or from March 4, when congress convened, or from the day of his election. The decision will serve as a precedent.

Tried to Bribe the Governor

Havana, Jan. 30.—The long-standing controversy between Contractor Dady and the military and municipal governments regarding the sewering and paving contracts was settled last night by the payment to Dady of $250,000. Cole's Friends Seeking His Pardon

Boston, Jan. 30.—The Post says that friends of ex-President Cole of the Globe bank are planning to secure his release from prison. Late developments in the Globe bank affairs, they say, tend to bear out the claims which have steadfastly been made by Cole. District Attorney Jones rather scoffed at the report. "Cole will not be pardoned," he said.

THE MOSHER INQUEST

Evidence Said to Connect Edward Graffam With Murder at Gorham

Portland, Me., Jan. 30.—Yesterday was a most important one in the Mosher murder case, for a great deal of valuable evidence was brought to light. The prosecuting officers claim to have finally located Edward Graffam in Portland on the day of the murder. This identification, it is understood, was made by Stephen W. Nason, who claims to have met and talked with Graffam and the negro just after they had left Rice's store, where Hands purchased the doughnuts, while the pair were on their way to Gorham. The officers also say they have other witnessess who will testify to having seen Graffam in Portland on Jan. 12.

Edward Kelly of Saco was brought to Portland late yesterday afternoon from Saco. A man whom the officers have no doubt was Graffam, called on Kelly the day before the murder and said he was well acquainted with Kelly's brother, Joe, who is in prison at Thomaston for larceny. On this account Edward Kelly used his visitor hospitably. When shown a number of photographs by Sheriff Pearson, Kelly immediately picked out Graffam's picture, which was among those placed before him. An overcoat which Graffam pawned in Saco on Jan. 4 was recovered by the officers yesterday.

The officers now express great confidence in the strength of the case against Graffam, and they say that they are continually securing fresh evidence.

Zimmer's Threat

Cleveland, Jan. 30.—President Zimmer of the Players' Protective association last night made the following statement: "If the National league does not grant us our request we may go over to the American league in a body. That league has given us what we want without any demands on our part, and has shown a disposition to be entirely fair with us. The National league will learn that we are not to be trifled with. The Players' association now has the sympathy of 90 percent of the players."

Effort to Prevent Prize Fight

Cincinnati, Jan. 30.—Suit was brought in the common pleas court yesterday to enjoin the proposed Jeffries-Ruhlin contest here Feb. 15. This proceeding is in the name of the state, but it is understood that the real instigators are the ministers and other elements of this city who are opposed to having the fight take place here. The petition declares the proposed prize fight to be a nuisance and a restraining order is wanted on that account rather than any of the sections of the Ohio statutes pertaining to prize fights.

THEFT OF TOWN FUNDS

Ex-Tax Collector of Hudson, Mass., Admits Wrong Doing

SHORTAGE OF ABOUT $9000

Which Was Used by Him to Tide Over Business Troubles — Community In Which He Was One of the Leading Citizens Is Greatly Surprised

Hudson, Mass., Jan. 31.—Edward T. Miles, former tax collector, was arrested last night charged with being a defaulter in the sum of $9000. The peculations are said to cover a number of years. Miles admits that he used town funds to tide over business trouble.

Miles was first elected collector in 1896, and for three years his bonds were furnished by a security company. In 1899 the company was unwilling longer to carry the risk, and it was taken by 22 of the leading men of the town, who had every confidence in his honesty at that time.

In 1900 Miles was again re-elected, but this time he was unable to obtain securities, and he resigned the office, being succeeded by Daniel J. McCarthy. At the close of 1900, the amount of uncollected taxes was nearly $11,000, but since that time he has turned into the treasury some $1000. His bondsmen have been considering the situation for some time. As the outcome a meeting was held last night, at which Miles was present, and, after the matter had been thoroughly discussed, a warrant was sworn out for his arrest, and he was taken into custody.

Chairman Apsley would say nothing except that the defalcation covered a period of several years, and that most of the loss would fall upon the security company which furnished his bonds during those years.

Miles was seen at the police station after his arrest, and when asked as to the cause of his downfall said that business troubles were at the bottom of it; that he had not been able to pay the expenses of his shoe business, and had used the town's money for that purpose. The amount taken, he thought, was about the same as stated in the warrant.

Miles has lived in Hudson nearly all his life; is about 55 years of age, and has a wife and one daughter. He is a veteran of the Civil war. He is a past master of Rono post, G. A. R., and is prominent in Masonry and other social circles. By trade he is a shoemaker, but for the past five years he has been engaged in the retail shoe business, and it was in this business that he claims to have lost the town's funds.

Many Animals Roasted to Death

Baltimore, Jan. 31.—With pitiful screams of fright and groans of pain, 75 or more animals of all descriptions confined in cages at Frank C. Bostock's "zoo," quartered in this city, were roasted to death last night. Fire, which probably originated from a badly insulated electric light wire, caused the conflagration. The fire was discovered a few minutes after the evening performance had ceased. Twenty minutes after the fire was discovered the entire building was a wreck. Mr. Bostock estimates his loss on the animals at about $400,000. The owners of the building will lose $15,000 or $20,000.

Seeks Damages For Lynching

Kansas City, Jan. 31.—The parents of Fred Alexander, the negro who was burned at the stake by the Leavenworth, Kan., mob on Jan. 15, are in this city seeking advice about suing the city and county of Leavenworth for damages and support. The father of the dead negro is a Baptist minister. He is confident, he says, that an appeal to the colored people of the United States will bring forth a popular subscription large enough to carry the case to the highest courts in the country.

Miners' Deliberations Ended

Indianapolis, Jan. 31.—The national convention of the United Mine Workers of America, which has been in session since Jan. 21, came to a close last evening. The work of absorbing the engineers, firemen, blacksmiths and other auxiliary trades was completed by the adoption of a resolution allowing members of these trades to be organized into separate unions.

Hurt Royalty's Feelings

Madrid, Jan. 31.—The retirement in disgrace by the government of General Castelvi, a cousin of King Alfonso, announced by royal recree, is due to certain statements which the general published, and which were disagreeable to the royal family. He was also suspected of being in communication with Don Carlos.

Executive Clemency For Thompson

Boston, Jan. 31.—James Thompson, once convicted of the Webster postoffice robbery, in 1895, was released from state prison yesterday afternoon, having been pardoned by Governor Crane.

Wolcott Fund Still Swelling

Boston, Jan. 31.—Treasurer Higginson of the Governor Wolcott memorial fund has acknowledged the receipt of total contributions amounting to $19,575.48.

SHAW WILL BE HANGED

Sentence Pronounced Upon Murderer of Deputy Sheriff Hoffman

Woodstock, Vt., Jan. 31.—Frank Shaw, who was sentenced at Montpelier yesterday to be hanged for the murder of Deputy Sheriff Hoffman last spring, has been confined in the jail here since his conviction, until he was taken to Montpelier Tuesday. He has been a model prisoner. He has not entirely recovered the use of his arm, which was broken by a bullet at the time of his sensational arrest at Middlebury. Upon leaving Montpelier he showed for the first time some feeling regarding his fate, and was in much less defiant attitude than at any time during his confinement, and was apparently concerned about his future.

Important Evidence Against Graffam

Portland, Me., Jan. 31.—Edward Kelley of Saco, who was brought here by Sheriff Pearson, has positively identified Edrawd Graffam as the man who called upon him in Saco Jan. 11 last. This identification establishes beyond a doubt that Graffam was in the vicinity of Gorham the day before Clifford Mosher was murdered. Further identification was made of Graffam and Hands by W. S. Dickinson, who keeps a restaurant on Commercial street. Dickinson says that on the Friday night before the murder Hands and Graffam visited his restaurant and had supper there.

A Religious Maniac

West Brookfield, Mass., Jan. 31.—George P. Gilbert, aged 21, became violent over religion Tuesday night, and his psalm singing could be heard a half mile from the home. He was prevented from escaping from the house in his nightclothes. Yesterday he was handcuffed and his feet tied, and while in this shape broke away from three men. Seven men guarded him on the trip to the state insane hospital at Worcester. Gilbert two years ago left Dwight L. Moody's school at Northfield, and since then has been a great enthusiast in religious work.

A Girl's Plucky Act

Bristol, R. I., Jan. 31.—Miss Marguerite Wardwell, 19 years old, proved herself a heroine last night in an attempt to save the lives of people who she supposed were occupants of a house she had discovered on fire. After breaking into the house and risking her own life by visiting many of the rooms, and finding the tenants were away, she left the burning structure. The house was a two-story one and was known as the Minturn house, and was upwards of 100 years old. It was owned by the town of Bristol, and the loss is about $2000.

Accidentally Poisoned

Somerville, Mass., Jan. 31.—Theresa Anderson, aged 18, had a headache last evening, and took what she supposed was a headache powder to allay her suffering. She immediately showed symptoms of poisoning, and it was found that she had accidentally taken strychnine, which had been kept on the shelf near the headache remedy. She died in a short time.

Lyttle Will Try Again

Worcester, Mass., Jan. 31.—William A. Lyttle was unanimously nominated for mayor at the Republican caucuses held last night to nominate a candidate to be voted for at the special mayoralty election Feb. 10, made necessary because by the tie between Mr. Lyttle and P. L. O'Connell, Democrat, the mayoralty candidates at the city election in December.

Best Arraigned on Four Counts

Bay State Legislature

Boston, Jan. 31.—The Massachusetts house yesterday, after a spirited debate, passed an order for an investigation of the gas situation in Boston by the joint committee on manufactures. It was generally supposed that there would be no investigation this year.

The Champion Balloters

Lawrence, Mass., Jan. 31.—In joint convention last night the deadlocked city government, after balloting 100 times for city clerk, elected the present incumbent, C. J. Corcoran, a Democrat. The struggle was on for city treasurer at 2 o'clock this morning.

Remarkable Coal Cargoes

Boston, Jan. 31.—A port record for amount of cargoes of coal was broken yesterday when the incoming fleet of tugs, barges and schooners brought in an estimated 133,800 tons. The fleet represented a valuation of upwards of $5,000,000.

Drank Ounce of Laudanum

WORLD'S GREAT ARMIES

Will All Be Represented In Military Pageant

LONDON PEOPLE DISMAYED

To Find That Food Supply Depots as Well as All Other Stores Are to Be Closed—Small Fortunes Charged For Windows Along Route of Procession

London, Jan. 31.—The funeral procession in London, as indicated by the war office orders, will be a gorgeous military pageant. Detachments from 40 regiments, with an almost equal number of distinctive uniforms, embracing all arms of the service, will make a constantly changing picture.

The uniforms of all the great armies of the world will appear, for, in addition to the brilliant entourage of the visiting kings and princely envoys, there will be the military attaches of the embassies and legations.

All the field marshals of the British army able to endure the fatigue will ride with their staffs. The naval corps will also take part in the procession, which will be two miles long.

The war office directs that Beethoven's and Chopin's funeral marches only shall be played. From the time the coffin reaches London to its departure guns will boom slowly in Hyde Park.

Londoners are just awakening to the full proportion of the obsequies and the result of days of mourning, which to numerous tradesmen and others means absolute closure, and is causing consternation. Suddenly to stop every industry in the United Kingdom and to turn the masses into the streets, with millions hoping to concentrate along the two miles of the route of the procession, is an undertaking which has begun to be fully appreciated by the police, but the public of London is dismayed to find that all the great markets, Covent Garden, Smithfield and others, where the food of the metropolis is supplied, are to be absolutely closed at the end of the week.

The railways of the United Kingdom will reduce their arrangements to the Sunday schedule. Restaurants and bars will be shut, and the crowds will have to wander in the streets. London is a world in itself, living from hand to mouth, and the closing of the accustomed avenues for the supply and distribution of food, drink and amusement from Friday to Monday will mean a loss and inconvenience that no American city could appreciate.

The heavy work of arranging the elaborate military details of the London procession will prevent the official program being issued before this evening. Some idea of the extent of the labor involved will be gained from the fact that a firm of caterers has been instructed by the war office to provide breakfast and dinner for 25,000 troops.

The military dispositions, however, have been practically settled as already cabled. It is understood that the military and naval escort will precede the coffin, that after the escort will come to the headquarters staff of the army, the foreign attaches and various military bands, and that then will come the coffin, followed by King Edward, Emperor William and King Charles of Portugal, the royal mourners, representatives of foreign states, mourning carriages with the princesses, and then the remainder of the military escort. All the troops will march with reversed arms.

The demand for seats along the route of the funeral is unprecedented. Ordinary window seats are selling for $50 each.

Within the past two or three days the prices have risen very rapidly. One tenant in St. James street has already obtained $250 for a window on the top floor. Store windows have been let for $750 and $1000. But the storekeepers mostly prefer to let single seats at $50 to $75 each. Stores and hotels in Piccadilly commanding a view of the incline from there to St. James palace are getting immense prices, balcony seats fetching $125 to $150.

The illness of the Duke of Cornwall and York causes considerable discussion in connection with his projected visit to Australia. While the preparations have not been stopped, it is understood that his malady is likely to cause a postponement of the date of the visit for perhaps two months.

Program Knocked Out

Ottawa, Jan. 31.—A great sensation has been created by the announcement that the government has withdrawn its sanction to the state memorial service, which was to have been held in Christ church cathedral, and for which elaborate arrangements were being made. The reason given for the government's action is that the holding of a state service might be regarded as a recognition of the Church of England as the state church of the dominion, and consequently would give great offense to other denominations in Canada.

Friendly Toward New King

Berlin, Jan. 31.—Apparently the German press is growing more friendly toward King Edward VII. The Kreuz Zeitung points out the new monarch's "great popularity and great knowledge of men." The Berliner Tageblatt praises his courage and the "complete fearlessness of attempts at assassination" which he has displayed, adding that he "understands the English character thoroughly and possesses remarkable tact."

Good Afternoon

The star-chamber proceedings of the Board of Health, and the numerous delays relative to Inspector Keniley, are disgusting the people at large. The press has thus far been unable to get its news first hand, and if mistakes are made or judgment passed it is the Board of Health alone who should be criticised.

Perhaps the greatest surprise in connection with the publication in the Ledger of the cities and towns with 3,000 population, is the instalment today which shows that the great Empire State of New York, with its 47,000 square miles of territory, has but sixteen cities which are larger to-day than our own city of Quincy. And four of these have less than 25,000 population, and are sure to be below us at the next National census, as their percentage of growth has been small.

One of the worst nuisances on the electric cars is the party who never goes inside the car and takes a seat where he belongs, but always rides upon the platform. This nuisance is bad enough on ordinary cars but when it comes to vestibule it is ten times worse. There are some men, and boys who never think of taking a seat in the car but take delight in filling up the platforms. When a person desires to enter or leave a car it is necessary to squeeze through the crowd. This is particularly annoying if the passenger who desires to leave or enter the car is a woman. On the cars of the Boston Elevated road, if there is room inside, passengers are requested to enter and be seated, and if a person insists upon riding upon the platform when there is room inside, he is informed that he must keep the passage way clear. If the Brockton Street Railway Co. would make a rule forbidding people riding on the rear platform, when there is room inside, they would receive a vote of thanks from every woman who patronizes the road.

Drift of Opinion.

☞Mr. Bryan says "re-organization is an internal remedy and cannot be applied externally." Yet the case is so all-overish that nothing short heroic treatment can touch the case. Has tobasco sauce been sufficiently considered?—Beverly Times.

☞A lawyer legislator has introduced a bill at our State house to prevent any one but a lawyer from practicing in the probate court. He is jealous of the country squires who have the confidence of their neighbors and do much of the business. He would cut off the right of a citizen to have his estates settled by a man in whom he has full confidence. The people who pay for the courts ought to retain some rights. —Taunton Gazette.

☞Unless George Howard succeeds in placing himself outside of Sing Sing Prison, he will not figure in any more matrimonial ventures for 34 months, minus time allowance for good behavior. A peculiar phase which the case has now taken on is, that the last wife, who so vehemently denounced and renounced him when his dual households were first revealed and her "half husband" was held fast in the clutches of the law, is now reluctant to believe his guilt. New York is furnishing some queer streaks of late.—Lynn Item.

☞The pensioning of the wives of rich presidents has for some time been tolerated, but now it seems that the principle is to be extended. The house of representatives has established a precedent for maintaining old members by placing Mr. Boutelle upon the retired navel list. The senate has just opened a way for itself by granting a $50 pension to the father of the late Senator Cushman K. Davis. In the meantime the mass of people who never had the opportunity for accumulation possessed by these men have to work and pay taxes with no assurance of pension for themselves.—Atlanta Constitution.

☞Representative McPherson, of Framingham, is entitled to the thanks of the people of the Commonwealth for frankly speaking his mind on the Boston gas situation. "I am amazed that such a rotten condition of things could so long endure. The general situation is fast going from bad to worse, to an enevitable crash, with large losses to many innocent people," said he. "The returns of some of these companies are shadowed in deception and their acts are false, misleading and, I believe, fraudulent." The foregoing is but a brief quotation from the gentleman's remarks, which were positive enough to create an awakening that should result in clarifying the situation before the session closes.—Lynn Item.

☞It is no surprise that a bill has been introduced in the legislature providing for the creation of a system of civil pensions, the present proposition being disguised by a plan to deduct from salaries of the beneficiaries-to-be a certain per cent. as a sort of sinking fund. It is the natural progress of the firemen-teachers-policemen's pension fund scheme and leads ultimately to the pensioning of anybody and everybody who has been fortunate enough to draw a fat salary from the state for a certain period of years and wants to spend the last of their life in the ease which that snap has made possible. Every pension bill has to be sugar-coated in order that the public may be induced to swallow it, but they all have their bitter portion finally.—Haverhill Gazette.

CITY BREVITIES.

A Local Budget With the News in a Nut Shell.

Why don't it snow?

Regular meeting of the City Council next Monday evening.

An adjourned meeting of the Quincy City Hospital Cooperation will be held at the First church chapel Monday evening.

Another break was added Wednesday night to the long list that have been made in City Square during the past few weeks.

Fully as much snow fell Wednesday night and this morning as during the whole winter, and yet only a few inches have fallen.

Eight tables participated in the whist tournament at the Granite City club Wednesday evening. Silver spoons were captured by C. W. Nightingale and Warren H. Rideout.

The Rev. Dr. James Todd, Thomas C. Cantlay and Charles B. Stewart attended the funeral of John Gilchrist as representatives from the First Presbyterian church of this city.

The body of Arthur C. White, who died at Watros, New Mexico, Jan. 24, arrived in Quincy Wednesday night. Funeral services will be held Friday afternoon at 2.15 from the residence of Charles E. White on Union street.

The Other Burglar.

Charles Stewart, alias Ames aliaa W. S. Howard, who was arrested at Watertown Tuesday, for breaking and entering the shop of J. E. Keniley & Co., at Quincy last week, was brought to Quincy and arraigned in court this morning.

The fellow was arrested upon a description sent out by Chief Ripley. It seems that the fellow applied to the police station at Watertown for a lodging and as he answered the description sent out he was held and the Quincy police notified. Stewart or whatever his name is has a States prison record.

Hutt—Milne.

At Glencoe place, at the residence of the bride's father Mr. James Milne Wednesday evening, Mr. Charles E. Hutt, and Miss Alice E. Milne were united in marriage by the Rev. James Todd, D.D., assisted by the Rev. Donald Stalker, Ph. D., of Calmet, Mich. The wedding was largely attended, and Mr. and Mrs. Hutt received many valuable presents. A good time was enjoyed.

A REMEDY FOR THE GRIPPE.

A remedy recommended for patients afflicted with the Grippe is KEMP'S BALSAM, which is especially adapted for the throat and lungs. Don't wait for the first symptoms of the disease! get a bottle today and keep it for use the moment it is needed. If neglected the grippe has a tendency to bring on pneumonia. KEMP'S BALSAM prevents this by keeping the cough loose and the lungs free from inflammation. All druggists sell KEMP'S BALSAM at 25c. and 50c.

ANOTHER FARCE.

Dilly-Dallying Relative to Inspector of Plumbing.

Sincerity of All Concerned Now Doubted.

A Second Adjournment Last Night Without a Hearing.

The adjourned hearing on the charges against J. J. Keniley, Inspector of Plumbing, by the Board of Health which was announced to have been held Wednesday evening did not take place.

Mr. Keniley and his counsel were present and ready to go on but the Board of Health were not ready to go on, and desired a postponement until Saturday night. Their request was of course agreed to.

Dr. Dion, secretary of the board, when interviewed about the hearing, said that the reason of the postponement was because their witnesses were not present. He thought there was no question but what the hearing would be held Saturday night.

From outside sources comes the rumor that the charges did not originate from the Board of Health, but are fathered by two or three of the heads of the city department. It is some days now since the charges were filed, and it seems a little queer that the witnesses could not have been on hand Wednesday night, and it is becoming to look more and more like a farce.

If Mr. Keniley should carry out what he has intimated; that is, commence suit for conspiracy, there may be trouble ahead. It was rumored this morning that District Attorney Harris would be present Saturday night to hear the evidence.

The social event of the winter in Braintree was the first annual ball of the Cochato club held in the new club house on Elm street Wednesday evening. POPULATION 3,000

List of All Such Cities in United States.

With Census Figures for 1880 and 1890.

Quincy With 23,899 Ranks High in the List.

It was noted in the Ledger Jan. 19, that Quincy ranked No. 171 in population in the United States. There are about 1700 cities and towns today with a population of 3000, and, as promised, the Ledger commenced Jan. 26 to publish the list.

Quincy people are often led to think that places at a distance are larger than the City of Presidents, but they should not underestimate their own city. Remembering the population of Quincy is 23,899 or in round numbers 24,000, just glance through the list and note how few are larger by the 1900 census.

Alabama has but 3 larger.
Arizona none.
Arkansas but 1.
California only 4.
Colorado 2.
Connecticut 6.
Delaware but 1.
District of Columbia 1.
Florida only 1.
Georgia but 3.
Idaho none.
Illinois but 8.
Indiana only 5.
Indian territory none.
Iowa but 6.
Kansas 3.
Kentucky 4.
Louisana 2.
Maine but 1.
Maryland only 1.
But Massachusetts has 22.
Michigan only 4.
Minnesota but 3.
Mississippi none.
Missouri only 4.
Montana but 1.
Nebraska just 3.
Nevada none of 5000.
New Hampshire a solitary 1.
New Jersey 10.
New Mexico none.
And New York but 16.

The figures of 1880 and 1890 are also given, and the growth in ten and twenty years will also be of interest. The population of Quincy was as follows:

	Population.	Gain.
In 1880,	10,570	3,128
In 1890,	16,711	6,141
In 1900,	23,899	7,188

A few cities have grown faster but only the boom cities. In ten years Quincy moved up from No. 198 to No. 171.

MANY HARD HIT.

At Minstrel Show of North Quincy Club.

Depot Master Harris the Principal Target.

Councilman Langelier Completely Disguised as Angelina.

One will not covet the lucrative position of station agent of Norfolk Downs if he must be the butt of the North Quincy minstrels, as was the fate of Mr. Harris Wednesday evening, and who is next week to be advertised at Atlantic. But they do say that some attention will be transferred to "Lyn" Gurney at the second performance. However, the favors were well distributed Wednesday evening. Every man in the circle had to stand considerable banter, and they went outside and took in J. E. Poland, E. G. Hall, John Ramsdell, George E. Perkins, Dr. Pierce, Mr. Tuck, Mr. Copeland and others.

Mr. F. H. Potter was the interlocutor, Messrs. J. B. Greene, Louis Coles the bones, H. S. Barker and Clarence Sargent the tambos, and the circle included Alexander Hill, Councilman William Gassett, Dr. Charles Monroe, H. Sprague, F. K. Browne, Percy Dunn, William Johnson, Patrolman A. W. Goodhue, and Ed. Dufault.

Part one of the program included the following numbers, but doesn't begin to tell half that was said and done, for it was interspersed with stories, jokes, etc., and some of the stories were long, so that this part of the program consumed two hours:

1.—Overture, Minstrels' Delight.
2.—Mandy Lee, Mr. Wm. Gassett.
3.—"Lam! Lam!" Mr. Jas. B. Greene.
4.—The Moonshine Man, Mr. A. L. Hill.
5.—"I aint gwine to weep no mo."
Mr. H. S. Barker and Company.
6.—Flag of the Free,
Mr. Ed Default and Company.
7.—Salvation Army Coon,
Mr. Louis Coles and Company.
8.—My Jersey Lily,
Mr. Fred Goodhue and Company.
9.—Coon Band Contest,
Mr. C. D. Sargent and Company.
10.—Finale—Soldiers in the Park. Solo by Dr. Chas. E. Monroe, assisted by full chorus and Brass Band, Bass Drum Obligato by Mr. C. D. Sargent.

There was no joke about Councilman Gassett's singing; he tried to do his prettiest and he succeeded in a marked degree. Mr. Greene put vivacity and clever work into his song and was recalled. Mr. Hill was also encored on his solo, but then it was announced that no more encores would be given.

Mr. Barker's solo was one of the hits, but had there been a prize for good singing it would have gone to Ed. Dufault. Instruments were introduced by the circle in the chorus of Mr. Cole's song. Officer Goodhue sang very sweetly, and completely captivated Chief Ripley and the audience. Evidently the ladies on his beat regard him as "one of the finest," for he received the choicest bouquet. Others were remembered with cabbages, a live rooster and other tokens of esteem.

Mr. Sargent's solo and chorus was also a feature, and the word "grand" should have been placed before "finale" for Dr. Monroe's specialty.

As the performance is to be repeated it would not do to give away the jokes. The interlocutor and circle were "got up regardless" in full dress, but the end men appeared in striking costumes. Their coats were of black and red striped satin faced with yellow satin, the claw hammers of which extended nearly to their slippers. Their vests were white, knickerbockers of black satin, hose of black lisle thread displaying beautiful calves. Of course they wore very high collars, striking ties, and wigs which completed the make up.

Part two of the program opened with a monologue entitled "A few bunches of German," by Prof. Lester W. Keiffer, who for twenty minutes sprung gags new and old.

The grand Italian opera in English, "Augustus and Angelina," was the closing attraction, and a surprise. Even the intimate friends of Councilman Langelier found it difficult to convince themselves that he was she, or that Angelina was really he. Angelina wore a decollete gown, without sleeves, and needed only long gloves and little make-up to become a society bud. Her singing was also feminine, and much admired. The make-ups of the other characters were good, but not out of the ordinary and the cast was as follows:

Angelina, Madame Louise Langelier
Augustus, Signor Alessandro Hillo.
Chawles, Dr. Karl Munn.
Bombasto, Signor Georgio Paghetti.

An audience of over 30, was crowded into the small hall, and many are going again to the second performance next week.

NEW ARMY RATION.

Ingredients Secret, but Believed to Include Beef, Wheat, Salt and Chocolate.

As the result of an exhaustive test, conducted under actual conditions of military service, an emergency ration has been obtained for the United States army superior to that used by the troops of any other nation.

This is the opinion of the board of officers designated to prepare a ration and examine others submitted and test them in comparison.

The ration which developed the greatest merit was adopted for trial by the board after the most careful consideration of the several elements comprising it. The board examined the celebrated iron ration of Germany and the emergency ration of Great Britain. The one, in the opinion of Captain Fountain, would be eaten by men only when on the verge of starvation. The other weighs more than two pounds and is consequently almost as heavy as the regular ration of the American army.

The ration of the board was tested for five days, and an equally long trial was given to two rations submitted by private persons.

The components of the ration prepared by the board have not been made public, but it is believed to contain powdered beef, parched wheat, salt and chocolate.

With a detachment of 25 men, physically fit, of Troop A, Eighth cavalry, Captains Fountain and Foster left Fort Reno early in November and for three days lived on the regular army ration. Then officers and men started on the emergency ration test. The men were required to march 20 miles each day and perform the usual routine incident upon field service. At the expiration of five days officers and men were weighed. The average loss of weight sustained was found to be about two pounds, and the men returned to their post in good physical condition.

Another detachment of 25 men of Troop A went out two days later under command of Captains Fountain and Foster. After three days' use of the regular army ration the test of the second emergency ration began. Cases of dysentery occurred. The test of the third emergency ration, under the same conditions, gave the same results.

In order that there might be no question as to the value of the first ration, detachments of 25 men from Fort Reno and 25 from Fort Sill left these two posts and arranged to meet at a point equally distant under various conditions of service. They seemed to relish it and suffered no diminution of vigor.

Greatest Iron Mine.

With a record to its credit of 1,000,000 tons of iron ore mined during the past 12 months, the Norrie mine, on the Gogebic range, may be considered the greatest iron ore producing mine in the world, says The Scientific American. This output represents about one-fifth of the annual ore supply of the Carnegie Steel company, limited.

The Norrie mine has been in operation during the past 15 years. Several years ago the Oliver Mining company, under which name the ore plants of the Carnegie interests are operated, obtained control of the Norrie mine, and since that time there have been wonderful improvements in the methods of mining and handling the ore and preparing it for lake shipment to the Carnegie docks at Conneaut. More than 3,000 tons of ore are mined and shipped each working day of the year.

The railroads which carry the product to the docks have been brought to the very mouths of the mine. The "skip" cars which convey the ore from the mine dump their contents into immense ore pockets, which in turn empty into the railroad cars waiting beneath to receive their load. When there is an oversupply of ore, the surplus is dumped on the stock pile. Mining never ceases. The aspect of the Norrie mine is very different from that of the Menominee range, where great ore pits can be seen. The Norrie is a mine in the true sense of the word, for there is no open pit, no evidence of the ceaseless activity far beneath the surface.

The mine now known as the Norrie includes workings in which were four separate mines formerly, known as North, East and West Norrie and the Pabst. Two additional mines, the Vaughn and the Aurora, are also operated by the company under the name of Norrie, but their product forms a separate account. If the output were included with that of the Norrie, the sum total would be much in excess of 1,000,000 tons per year.

Mysterious X Rays.

There are many curious things about X rays which seem to puzzle even the scientists. Signor Brigulti, who has been making experiments with them at Rome, says that the visibility of a substance to the eye is no criterion of its visibility to the X rays. The rays cannot see through glass, which is transparent to the eye, whereas aluminium, which is opaque to the eye, is transparent to the X rays. The rays can see a splinter of glass in the hand, but not a splinter of wood. Most inks are transparent to the X rays, including printers' ink, but some of them are opaque. The rays can see through a postoffice directory, but if a paper with words written on it be put in the middle of the directory the rays will reveal these words and nothing behind them.—New York Press.

Children's Corner.

Japanese Children.

The Japanese baby is a funny brown creature, with snapping black eyes and a full crop of stiff black hair—that is he would have a full crop if his mother did not shave his head, sometimes as bare as a croquet ball, but oftener into all sorts of fancy patterns. A favorite fashion is to have two little tufts at the sides and a larger one about the size of a saucer on the top of his head.

He is seldom carried in his mother's arms, as an English baby is, but as soon as he is 2 or 3 months old he commences his travels in the world "pick-a-back," on the shoulders of an older brother or sister.

Japanese children as well as the grown people all wear a loose garment called a "kimono." The kimono is so loose that the baby can be tucked in side and tied on with the sash, and thus he is carried about, peeping curiously with his bright black eyes over his sister's shoulders at the great new world. Asleep his poor little shaved head bobs helplessly round, and the glare of the sun beats on his upturned face.

His little body is entirely covered by the kimono, and the children when they are carrying their small brothers and sisters look as though they were two-headed. But they play tag and play ball just the same whether they carry the baby or not. And he seems to enjoy it too, for he hardly ever cries, and when the game is especially lively he will laugh and crow as though he understood it all.—Woman's Life.

Spanish Humor.

Some recent jokes from Madrid, giving an idea of contemporaneous Spanish humor:

"But why do you marry so poor a woman?"

"To revenge myself. I have suffered much in this world."

"Ah, I understand—an unhappy love affair."

"No. I am marrying a poor woman to make my creditors rave!"

Gedeon goes to confer with the president of the Society For the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals.

"What do you want?"

"I desire to be protected. My wife treats me like a dog."

Medical consultation:

"How do you find me, doctor?"

"Very bad. You are worn out, and it is necessary that you give up all head work."

"That would ruin me, doctor. Don't you know I'm a barber?"

Among women friends:

"Now I am sure that Ernesto wants to marry me."

"What ground have you for saying that?"

"I've noted that Ernesto begins to be unable to stand mamma."—Mexican Herald.

DECISION OF MINORITY

Upon It Will Rest the Fate of Ship Subsidy Bill

A CONTINUANCE OF FIGHT

Would Mean Its Defeat at This Session — May Decide to Leave the Matter In Republicans' Hands — How an Extra Session May Be Avoided

Washington, Jan. 31.—A conference of Democrats and their associates of the Populist and Silver Republican faith will be held today, as a result of the declaration by Mr. Frye that he intended to push the consideration of the ship subsidy bill to the exclusion of all other business, yielding only to a vote of the senate. This conference will determine the fate of the bill.

If the opponents of the bill decide to continue a stiff fight and debate the measure at great length, it will mean defeat at this session, with the short time remaining to pass the appropriation bills. The conference also will take into consideration whether the minority will desire to take the responsibility of defeating a party measure of the majority.

Some of the opponents of the bill on the Democratic side feel that if the Republicans are determined to pass the bill the minority should not go further than to state their objections fully and vote against it, and to let the Republicans take the responsibility which is theirs.

It also develops that no one wants an extra session, and that one will be avoided if there is any possible way of doing so. It is even said that the Spooner bill will be passed in order to avoid such session.

Republican leaders say that they believe an extra session can be avoided. They also say that the Democrats must decide whether they will take the responsibility of defeating the subsidy bill, and if it is demonstrated that they are willing to take that responsibility, then other necessary legislation will be pressed rapidly to avoid an extra session.

The latest authoritative comment on the extra session program is that the president's reluctance to make the downright and unequivocal announcement of his intention is due to his hope that congress may still be induced to take some action at the present session on Cuba and the Philippines.

He has an idea that possibly the Democrats would rather vote for the Spooner bill for the future government of the Philippines than get the credit before the country of forcing an extra session. The Cuban business requires more thought. It is not easy to devise a means of shifting the responsibility from the president's shoulders to those of congress, and at the same time escape immediate legislation on the subject of the Cuban constitution.

Yet this, though difficult, is not improbable. A number of leading senators assert that there is no need of haste in acting on the Cuban situation. If the leading senators go to the president, with a proposal that he forego his plan for an extra session for the whole congress on consideration that the senate, at its brief special session on March 4, shall have a suitable Cuban bill introduced and made the special order for, say, Dec. 10, it is believed that he would consent. It would be only a "gentlemen's agreement," as the railroad people call it, but it would be just as effective as any other, and would get rid of a troublesome question.

The agricultural appropriation bill was passed by the house yesterday. The "friends of the farmer" were very much in evidence during the day, and against an aggressive opposition voted into the bill an additional appropriation of $50,000 for "farmers' bulletins." There was also considerable discussion of the question of irrigation of arid lands in connection with the paragraph providing for an investigation of that subject.

Three New England Cities Affected

Washington, Jan. 31.—Representative Mercer of Nebraska, chairman of the committee on public buildings and grounds, yesterday introduced an omnibus bill increasing the limit of cost of public buildings in various parts of the country. It carries about $1,500,000. The increases include those at Fitchburg, Mass., from $100,000 to $125,000; at Norwich, Conn., from $100,000 to $110,000, and at Lawrence, Mass., from $100,000 to $135,000.

The Maine Disaster Fund

Washington, Jan. 31.—The relief fund raised by the American people to aid the families of the victims of the Maine disaster has now dwindled down to $1300. This balance is now in the hands of Captain Sigsbee, chief of the naval intelligence bureau, to whom applications for a share of the fund should be addressed.

Spain Thinks She Has Enough

Madrid, Jan. 31.—The government has made representations to the Vatican regarding the possible transfer to Spain of the French congregations, which will be ousted from France on the passage of the law of associations, now before the French chamber of deputies. Statesmen are protesting against the prospect of such an increase in the orders, which are now more numerous in Spain than in the last century.

Won't Sell Any More Votes

Crawfordville, Ind., Jan. 31.—On conviction of the crime of selling their votes at the November election, 21 men have been disfranchised by the circuit court here for periods ranging from 12 to 20 years.

MORE "JOINTS" SMASHED

Women In Kansas Town Follow the Example Set by Mrs. Nation

Anthony, Kan., Jan. 31.—Mrs. Carrie Nation was outdone here yesterday when a band of W. C. T. U. women, headed by Mrs. Sheriff of Danville, completely wrecked the fixtures in four "joints," smashing plate glass windows and mirrors right and left, and turning gallons of liquor into the gutters. The women were accompanied by their husbands and sons or brothers, who assured protection. No arrests were made, and the head of the band, it is said, has started on a tour of destruction through Harper county.

Mrs. Sheriff came to Anthony late Tuesday and worked all night procuring hatchets and other implements of destruction, and it was 2 o'clock yesterday morning before she had perfected arrangements for the raid. The women began their attack shortly after daybreak, taking the saloon keepers and the town officials by surprise. As a sequel to the raid, a number of young men and two or three small boys became reeling drunk. Two of the boys were locked up in the city jail. During the excitement they had followed the crusaders into the saloons and secured a quantity of whisky, wine and beer.

Topeka, Jan. 31.—Mrs. Carrie Nation yesterday organized a band of 46 women to follow her leadership and assist in wiping out "joints." They signed a paper which pledged them to follow Mrs. Nation wherever she may lead and do her bidding at a moment's notice. Mrs. Nation announced that they will proceed regardless of the W. C. T. U., but will give warning before resorting to violence.

Coffeyville, Kan., Jan. 31.—Every joint in Montgomery county is closed today as a result of the action of County Attorney Dana, who served notice on the keepers that they would not be permitted to run longer.

Topeka, Jan. 31.—Chief of Police Stahl announces that when Mrs. Nation raids a joint here he will arrest her so as to make a test case. He wants to ascertain if a saloon keeper has any rights under the law, and if his saloon property cannot be protected.

To Aid In Overthrow of Castro

San Juan, P. R., Jan. 31.—Senor Andrade, the former president of Venezuela, has sailed for Cuba. It is rumored that he intends meeting a filibustering expedition reported to be on its way to Venezuela by way of Cuba. There is no doubt that Andrade is interested in the efforts to overthrow President Castro, who drove him from the presidency in 1899 and caused him to seek refuge here.

Caracas, Jan. 31.—The revolutionists have been defeated near Carupan, with numerous losses. Two sons of General Acosta have been made prisoners. Mejano and Rojas have also been defeated.

Indians Have Quieted Down

Henrietta, I. T., Jan. 31.—Peace among the warring Creeks has apparently been reached, and all that remains to be done is to give Chitto Harjo, the chief Snake, who has caused all the trouble, a preliminary hearing and send him to Muskogee for trial for treason. In the meantime a few more of the leaders will be arrested. The troop of cavalry will probably remain here a few days, until the last vestige of the uprising has passed.

Ocean Dory Race Is Off

Gloucester, Mass., Jan. 31.—Nat C. Martin of Boston, who accepted the challenge of Howard Blackburn of this city for a race across the Atlantic ocean in a 30-foot dory, came here yesterday to arrange articles of agreement, but, owing to a misunderstanding of the conditions, the race was declared off. Martin thought that as many men as he liked could be carried in the dory, but Blackburn insisted that the boat should carry but one man.

Operators to Meet Miners

Columbus, O., Jan. 31.—The joint conference of the bituminous coal operators and miners will convene here this evening. It is composed of about 200 operators and 800 miners. The sentiment of the operators is practically unanimous in opposition to granting any increase in the present price of mining.

Financial Policy Criticized

London, Jan. 31.—Two native banks suspended in Bahia yesterday, says the Rio Janeiro correspondent of The Times, and the situation there is critical. The local press ascribes the difficulty to the financial policy of the government.

DISPUTE OVER A TRUNK

Culminates In a Murder In the Italian District of the Hub

Boston, Jan. 31.—One man killed, another seriously injured and a woman slightly hurt was the result of a shooting affair yesterday in the Italian district at the North End. The shooting occurred at the house at 6 Canney place, off Hanover street.

The man charged with murder and now under arrest is Raphael Faia; the dead man is Arlio Carrara, 28 years old; Giuseppe Zarrello, 27 years old, has a serious bullet wound in his back, and Luigia Cristi was struck by two bullets, but her injuries are not considered serious.

The cause of the tragedy is traced to an attempt of the murdered man to remove a trunk from the house. There seems to have been a dispute as to ownership. Faia, the man charged with the murder, was cut about the head.

Alleged Abuse by Sisters

Detroit, Jan. 31.—A special to The Tribune from Iron Mountain, Mich., says: Ellen Hogan, a novitiate in the emergency hospital, was declared sane yesterday by Probate Judge Bergeron, who ordered her release from the county jail, where she had been confined at the instance of the mother superior, who alleged that she was insane. It was charged that she had concealed $65 belonging to the hospital. A search revealed no money. Miss Hogan related a harrowing tale to the probate judge of her alleged ill treatment at the hospital, and many ugly charges were made against the members of that institution. Public sentiment appears to be with the young woman.

Millions For World's Fair Project

St. Louis, Jan. 31.—By a practically unanimous vote, the municipal assembly yesterday passed a bill providing for the issuance of $5,000,000 of bonds bearing 3 1-4 percent interest for the world's fair to be held in St. Louis to commemorate the 100th anniversary of the Louisiana purchase. The measure now goes to the mayor for his signature. This sum will supplement the $5,000,000 secured on popular subscriptions in St. Louis, and a like amount to be appropriated by congress.

Rail Road Men

In all departments of active service stand in need of the readiness of mind and promptness of action which depend on a healthy nervous system. Let a railroad man be "rattled," and every life depending on him is in danger. A great many railroad men have found in Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery a valuable tonic for the overstrained nervous system. It builds up the body, purifies the blood, nourishes the nerves, and induces a healthy appetite and refreshing sleep.

"I suffered for six years with constipation and indigestion, during which time I employed several physicians, but they could not reach my case," writes Mr. G. Popplewell, of Eureka Springs, Carroll Co., Ark. "I felt that there was no help for me; could not retain food on my stomach; had vertigo and would fall helpless to the floor. Two years ago I commenced taking Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and little 'Pellets,' and improved from the start. After taking twelve bottles of the 'Discovery' I was able to do light work, and have been improving ever since."
